New Year's Prayer

By MRS. MARTHA S. NICHOLSON, Wilmington, Calif.

DEAR LORD, BEFORE THIS YEAR WAS BORN
I GAVE IT TO THY HAND,
CONTENT TO WALK BY FAITH WHAT PATHS
I CANNOT UNDERSTAND.

WHATE'ER IS IN THE COMING DAYS OF BITTER LOSS, OR GAIN, OR VERY CROWN OF HAPPINESS,— SHOULD SORROW COME, OR PAIN,—

OR, LORD, IF ALL UNKNOWN TO ME THINE ANGEL HOVERS NEAR TO CALL ME TO THAT FARTHER SHORE
BEFORE ANOTHER YEAR,—

IT MATTERS NOT,—MY HAND IN THINE,
THY LIGHT UPON MY FACE,
THY BOUNDLESS STRENGTH WHEN I AM WEAK,
THY LOVE AND SAVING GRACE!

I ONLY ASK,—LOOSE NOT MY HAND,
GRIP FAST MY SOUL, AND BE
MY LIGHT OF LIFE UPON THE PATH,—
TILL, BLIND NO MORE,—I SEE!

OUR FRONT COVER

Several years ago, Mrs. Martha Snell Nicholson, of Wilmington, California, a close personal friend of the editor, and an attendant at the First Church in Long Beach, until she became a "shutin," sent us a beautiful New Year poem. We have already given it considerable publicity. Once again we present it on the front of our cover.

As we look forward to journeying the pathway for 1942—for a year that doubtless will prove to be the most momentous year in human history—we can, of God, our Father,

> "Only ask,—loose not my hand,
> Grip fast my soul, and be

The year 1942 has been ushered in with the thunder of guns "heard round the world." Practically every nation on the face of the earth is in the war. The few that are not in it are on the very verge, and probably will be in it ere the year 1942 has gotten very far along the pathway.

For the first time in human history it looks as though we are entering into a year that will witness an absolutely total World War. The hour is at hand that those who still believe the Bible to be the unfailing Word of God need to read and study carefully the great prophecies of our Lord in the 24th chapter of Matthew—the chapter that contains the answer of Christ to the question His disciples asked of Him as He sat upon the mountainside: "Tell us what shall be the sign of Thy coming and of the end of the age."

Anyone who can read the answer of Christ to that question, and not believe that the year 1942 may witness the coming of Christ to remove His Church from the earth and to bring in the seven cataclysmic years that shall precede His return with His saints to reign —yes, anyone who can read that chapter and not stand on tiptoe with glorious expectancy, either possesses a mentality that we cannot understand, or does not believe that the Bible is the Word of God that "cannot be broken."

EASTER COMING

Yes, it isn't too early to begin to think of Easter Sunday. It is due on April 5. The time is at hand to think of the millions who are without the Gospel in heathen lands and have no way of ever knowing the pathway to eternal life unless those who do know the Gospel, and are saved, shall recognize their ambassadorship.

If the fifth chapter of I Corinthians teaches anything, it teaches that every born again Christian is an ambassador for Christ. It was for this reason that the Apostle Paul said, "Woe to me if I preach not the Gospel."

It is beyond question that the bloodbath that the world is now receiving is the result of the Church failing to preach the Gospel. If a mere tithe of the money that the people of the United States are now spending for war had been spent to give a real virile gospel to the nations of the earth, there would be no war in this world today.

The Brethren Church, being a whole gospel church, is more and more recognizing the fact that the supreme objective resting upon the Christian Church is to give the Gospel to the nations. This is our business until Jesus comes. To it, we, of The Brethren Church will be faithful, and in that faithfulness we shall be blessed.

Pastors, begin to talk foreign missions once again to your people. It isn't too early for you to write to our office—The Foreign Missionary Society of The Brethren Church, 1925 E. Fifth St., Long Beach, Calif. —and ask for as many dime collectors, missionary barrels, or any other paraphernalia that you may want to use for gathering in a great offering. Later, all pastors will be receiving a letter from this office, together with offering envelopes etc., such as are sent out every year; but, as we have said, we are ready even now to respond to any request from any church or Society for assistance in getting ready for the greatest foreign missionary offering in the history of our beloved Church.

MISSIONARY ACTIVITIES

As this Missionary Herald goes to press Brother and Sister Robert S. Williams have been promised a passport by the State Department, whenever they can secure passage across the Atlantic. Pray that a boat may be found for them.

Brother and Sister Jobson are busily engaged in getting everything ready, and fully expect that the Lord will provide them a way back to the field in French Equatorial Africa sometime in February. Brother and Sister Jobson are still making their headquarters in Long Beach, but expect to be returning East early in the new year. Brother Jobson will be open for some calls for pre-Easter missionary messages in our churches. The Jobson children expect to remain in California where they now are in school.

The Sickels will be sailing soon for their field in Argentina. New passport regulations, due to the war, are giving Brother Sickel considerable difficulty. He has had to secure permission from the Argentine Government permitting him as an American citizen to return to Argentina. This permission is expected soon. In fact, it would have been in his hands already, had it not been for a technical error made in getting out the proper papers.

Pray for all these, that safe passage may be granted them.

THE CHRISTIAN'S SHELTER

News reaches us that the Tower of David, near the main gate of the old City of Jerusalem, is being converted into an air raid shelter. It is declared that the fortifications of the old Tower of David are so strong that only a few hundred dollars were needed to complete the work to make it one of the safest air raid shelters in the world. While, in these days, we may feel a bit more comfortable if we know that there are some strong material towers and shelters near us as we listen to the hum of motors in the air, however, what we all need is not more material towers, but stronger spiritual towers. It was a stronger "tower" than "the Tower of David that Solomon, the son of David, had in mind when he wrote: "the name of the Lord is a strong tower! the righteous runneth into it and is safe" (Prov. 18:10). God grant that every reader of this item may be nestling securely in the "strong tower" of the Lord. The devil's bombs cannot harm us there.

JEWS ALL ON ONE SIDE

Within one week the European war has developed into a world war. Never before were so many nations at war with each other as today. And the significant thing about this world war is that it is an anti-Semitic struggle. However, we know that the more agonies that are heaped upon the heads of the Jewish people in these days, the more expctant we may be of the coming of our Messiah—and theirs! It is said that not one Jewish soldier can be found among the Axis forces. The Fascists and Nazis will not permit Jews to enter their armies. Therefore, all the Jewish soldiers of the world are on the side of the democracies.

The Axis nations boast that no Jews are in their armies. All this reminds us of a story: Once upon a time a Gentile prodded a Jew in the ribs and said to him, "Thank God there are no Jews in our village!" Whereupon the Jew exclaimed, "Vell, dot's vy it iss a village!" Seriously, is it a none-too-hopeful sign for the Axis powers that there are no Jews in their armies!

THE BLACK HORSE RIDES

The Apostle John's vision on the Isle of Patmos, concerning the four horsemen, is perhaps one of the best known passages in our Bible. The second of these four riders rode the horse "that was red, and power was given to him that sat thereon to take peace from the earth, and that they should kill one another: and there was given unto him a great sword" (Rev. 6:4). We will not dogmatically say that Adolf Hitler is the rider on this red horse; but one thing we do know, that God would need no other person to completely fulfill this prophecy. Adolf Hitler is in possession of "a great sword"—the greatest war machine that this world has ever known—and with it, he has verily taken "peace from the earth that they should kill one another."

Following this red horse, we are told that John "beheld, and lo a black horse!" This black horse represents famine. Famine ever follows in the wake of war; and even so it is happening today. Just several hours ago, as we write, over the radio we were told that 600 people are dying every day in Greece—starved to death; and on our desk, as we write, is a letter from the "Institution for the Chinese Blind," 156 Fifth Avenue, New York. One paragraph therein reads: "A recent letter from Foochow Prov. tells of thousands dying of starvation: 'You may see bodies at any time now on the streets, in the gutters, or near the trash cans where people have gone in search of scraps of food and have died in the attempt'."

These are only two items of news among many coming to us, telling us that the spectre of famine is terrorizing many parts of our world today. Surely the Lord is not going to permit His precious bride, Whom He purchased with His own blood, to suffer the results of sin in this old world much longer. Everywhere the bride is praying: "Come, come quickly, Lord Jesus, come!" Answer that prayer He will!

JAPAN AN "OCCUPIED TERRITORY"?

According to Nofrontier News, the Nazi paper, Das Reich, published comparative production statistics for different nations; and the Nazis place Italy in their list of "occupied territories." We wonder how Mussolini likes that; but, probably, like it or not, Mussolini has to swallow it just now. This item should make interesting reading for Japan. A radio news item this past week tells us that a Nazi chieftain is in Italy already, directing the air service of Japan. After all, this war is more against Hitler and his Nazi henchmen than it is against the Japanese.

PAGANISM VS. CHRISTIANITY

Sometime ago Dr. Luther Wesley Smith, a Baptist official of Philadelphia, spoke to a convention of his church in Memphis, Tenn. He told the delegates that he feared that the United States would turn pagan unless the churches began to get better results from their efforts. Pointing to the rapid progress that the isms are making at home and abroad, Dr. Smith declared that Communism alone has gained more followers in 18 years than Christianity has won in 18 centuries.

On the face of it, that may prove to be very discouraging. However, those who have watched the growth of things in this old world and use their heads are not altogether discouraged.

Recently a tender little granddaughter came into the home of your missionary editor. She spent her first several weeks there. Often did we look upon that little form so utterly helpless, realizing that it would be weeks and months and years before those little feet would hold up even that tiny body, or those tiny lips would speak intelligently. Many years there will be before that tiny babe will grow sufficiently strong and wise to care for herself independently of the assistance of her father and mother.

Again we meditated the other day upon the contrast, when out upon a farm we saw a calf jumping about and skipping in glee, less than 24 hours after it was born; and honestly, the look on the face of that calf was just about as intelligent as the look upon the face of its mother. Within a few short weeks that calf will probably disappear as veal from the tables of American cafes! Who would want to be a calf?

As we write this editorial we are sitting in the home of a sister in Indiana, looking out of a window across a field. In that field there are cockleburs which, if the farmer is to be believed, are an absolute nuisance and a pest. They grow there almost overnight. But looking over the heads of the pests we see in the distance a forest of noble oaks. They didn't grow overnight. They stand there in their beauty and majesty and strength, and will continue to stand thus as the years pass, unless the hand of man should decide to lay them low in the forest in order that they may be exalted to some lofty place on the walls of palatial buildings.

Communism, Fascism and Nazism are foul growths that are like unto cockleburs, smartweed, nettles, dog fennel, and all other pests that afflict the face of the earth. However, every student of history knows that such are ephemeral. Christianity, after nearly 20 centuries of time, having lifted up its head and having kept it there through tempest and through thunderbolt, still stands in all of its beauty and majesty, lifting its cooling branches out over a fevered world. Christianity did not grow overnight.

An African Christian Boy Stands the Test

By ESTELLA MYERS, F. Equa. Africa

Just the other day, a lad, Jacob Sena, who is teaching in his own village, came to see us. He said he was meeting with a great deal of opposition in his village by the boys of his age who had attended the bush school (shoumaili, i.e., devil worship). Because he had refused to go with them to this school, they now are putting what they call medicine around and in his house. It is called medicine, because it is things that have been taken to the idol with food, requesting the idols to cause his death. They said anyone sleeping in his house would die.

Knowing how superstitious these people are, one appreciates the faith of this young boy when he entered his house and saw it decorated with these charms, and just prayed to God to keep him. He knows that these things cannot kill him; but he is sorry for the hatred that these boys have for him and because they seek to kill him.

We talked to him to encourage his heart and told him to try and win the boys by teaching them how to read. If he lets the boys know he is not afraid of the things, though taken to the idols, he will win them for the Lord. We praise God that Jacob will not give up but continue to tell the story of love to his own people. Pray for him that he may win the boys to the Jesus that they now refuse to follow.

The natives are taught from childhood to fear the idols; and any thing taken to them; thus one must be very brave to pay no attention to this fetish. Jacob loves the true God and does not intend that the customs and worship of his forefathers bother him. We praise God that he has worked in the heart of a boy who was in our junior Bible School here last year. So that he is determined to stay by the Lord's work in spite of opposition.

THE CENSUS-TAKER IN OUR KENTUCKY MOUNTAINS

While our Kentucky mission is not under the Foreign Board, yet the editor is just as interested in the Kentucky mission and all other missions as in our foreign work. THE FIELD IS ONE. Our command compels us to begin our work at "Jerusalem" and to continue our interest in it until we have reached the uttermost parts of the earth.

Recently we received a news letter from the Caney Creek Community Center of Pippapass, giving us the experience of a census-taker in that community, not so far from our own Kentucky mission in old Breathitt County.

Before giving you the conversation between the census-taker and old "Mosey" (Moses), just picture yourself far back in those mountains where old "Mosey" placidly packs away on his home made banjo, lilting out folks songs that have been handed down to him only by word of mouth. Old "Mosey" lives in one of those communities where they drink, they shoot, and they kill from ambush. However, had they been given a chance, many of them might have been brilliant college graduates, efficient consecrated men, and American citizens of the finest type. Yes, had Christ been made known to him sooner, old "Mosey" might have arisen from "down in the bottom," as did another—even our greatest and most beloved American, who journeyed all the way from a Kentucky cabin to the White House.

But now, for the authentic conversation, which gives us a glimpse into the souls of men who have a right to know Christ our Savior, but due to the lethargy of the Church, know Him not!

The census-taker dragged the gnarled tree-trunk nearer the fire-in-the-grate (for light, not heat) in the cabin of Moses: Moses, the last of his kin.

"Name, please"?

"Mosey, I reckon."

"Mosey WHAT"?

"Hit haint certain, stranger. I might-of been a Watkins. And then again, I mighten. Ma, she's been dead a right smart spell. I never thought to ax her. I knowed no difference twixt her second man and her first man. He never made no distinct-shon nuther. But he's dead, too: right smart."

"Where were you born"?

"D
N
in the Bottom."

"What Bottom"?

"Why, this yere Bottom. Thar shore haint nothing lowern hit. Here was I borned. Here in this yere cabin, I have riz. Here I 'spect to die. I'm lonesome-like, all by myself. My kin has died off; or traipsed out to foreign creeks—yon-side."

"When were you born"?

"Tater-hoeing time. Ma, she remembered hit; cause she lost most of her tater crop that year seeing as she couldn't hoe 'em out quick enough."

THINK IT OVER

"The unpardonable sin is refusing to accept the Pardon God offers us."

Shall I Give for Relief?

By DR. LESLIE B. MOSS, Executive Director, Committee on Foreign Relief Appeals in the Churches, Foreign Missions Conference of North America

More than half of mankind has been caught up into the vortex of war. We are like a tub full of water being drawn down a drain. More and more the swirling current pulls us all in. We may resist and cry out against the insensate folly of our course, but we seem helpless to stop the downward motion.

It is doubtful if anyone even faintly foresaw the awfulness of what is now upon us. The last war fathered revolution in Russia, in Italy, in Germany. These revolutions have fathered another war more dreadful than the last. We know full well that taking up the implements of the enemy to try to suppress him leads us into the same abyss of revolution with him. We thought we had won the last war. We who were the victors now get ready to resist the dragon grown stronger than ever.

Moreover we discover afresh that there are spiritual forces let loose which may wreak their own particular havoc in our world affairs. No matter how dismayed we may be at the size of the military machinery that has been developed, the more astounding and dreadful fact that faces us is the disintegration of ideas about moral conduct that used to afford us a sense of security. Confidence is gone. Calculated lying creates a morass under our spiritual feet. The walls of ancient strength lie in ruins about our world. We have a sense of nakedness under the whip of world events.

The ways of democracy have seemed to the undemocratic to be unjust. The shibboleths of peace and prosperity have been hollow and meaningless. The meaning awaited a convinced purpose for righteousness. But all the thousand furies of hate and greed and trickery and fraud have robbed them of their splendor. Who has there been to smooth away the iniquities of the past? The struggle passes from the individual to the national scale. The labor controversies become the outcry of the nations that "have not," against those whose place in the sun has been maintained no matter what the cost.

The dictators today declare they will drive the wedge of class distinctions in a different, if not a new, location. The masters of destiny will be those around whom a different myth is developed. Pure blood and unsullied race; the room in which to expand the swollen egos of the ruling classes; the rest of man reduced to common slavery; they will be shipped here and there, taken from their own and loved ones to work for the rulers in some distant land, probably never to return; young girls seized to "serve their country" in some strange and revolting conditions; education limited to the elect few; literature or art subjected to the censorship of bigots and perverts. The struggle of two thousand years, while man has battled upward against his ancient foes with the light of God in his eyes, reaches a new climax in ferocity.

The path of war today lies heaviest across the civilian. The army may be trained for destruction or defense according to the national point of view. But the technique of modern war is to scare or demoralize the supporting civilian population and thus force an early end to the struggle. Thus there appear, upon our horizons, refugees by the millions. Those who die of hunger and exposure and disease greatly outnumber the military casualties.

It is staggering to realize how wide the spread of distress which results. Missionaries who have served their Lord in foreign lands for years, supported by their home churches in Europe, have turned into dependents on the grace of fellow Christians in other lands. Probably 2,500 such men and women are marooned in all quarters of the globe, without visible or tangible means of contact with the home churches which they hold most dear.

The ministers and Christian workers of many churches in France, Belgium, Holland, Denmark and other countries are bereft of support. Perhaps their membership is scattered among refugees over half a continent. Their schools are closed. Their customary means of support is gone. Will they receive little packages of food, or clothes, or a Bible by mail, from some Christian neutral source? They wonder, and pray, and hope. Millions have fled before the explosions of bombs, the terror of the Gestapo. Women and children, new born infants, and nursing mothers in unoccupied France. Who will bring them the sustenance needed for growing life?

The prisoners in the camps—3,000,000 of them—doomed to atrophy of mind, dullness of inaction, shrivelling from lack of interest or information. The Geneva Convention makes it possible to keep their spirits alive through recreation, study, and religious help.

The millions of China plod along their slowly starving way. Rice is taken away from the Chinese peasants to feed Japanese, who also struggle for existence amid the increasing inflictions of a war situation. Starvation and slavery alike face the nations of the world as the accompaniments of our present struggle. But slavery and starvation are of the mind and spirit as well as of the body. Where lies the Christian's opportunity? Here, I think, is the answer to our question, "Shall I give for relief?"

When, as Christians, we face this question with candor and sincerity, we must not fail to find an affirmative answer. We Americans do not like war. Deeply we dread it because we have some prevision of the aftermath. We cry out in our souls to know how we can remove even a little of the bitterness and sting of its effects. We long to find some neutralizer that will prevent the full fury of its suffering breaking over us. We fear not so much its effect upon our bodies, as the blasting, searing effects upon our souls. And giving for relief is certainly one way to oppose destruction with a "weapon" or instrument of peace. We can heal the sharp sting of grief and pain by giving healing, both for body and soul. To a person dazed in grief over the losses sustained, and sunk in misery, it is a "balm in Gilead" to have a friendly hand bring water, and food, and medicine. When all the forces of the universe seem bowed down before the terror of war, to have a kind and loving hand bring evidence that God is not dead in the hearts of His children, is a breath of new hope. To millions who are already entering the toils of the slavery of endless suffering, there is the chance for their spirits to rebound when relief is afforded by the Christian love and gift. The progressive steps of hunger toward starvation bring a winter of despair to the spirit. Souls famished for the light and hope of God can be refreshed and made strong by the hands reached out in friendship to relieve the hunger.

I cannot help but give to these who suffer on the front lines of the spiritual warfare in our world. I could not refuse the hand of warm fellowship that helps to pull them up. I dare not contemplate letting the churches in Europe be strangled in the atmosphere of totalitarian war—not while any gifts of mine could keep alive the body, and relight the candle in the soul. The Christian ministry must keep alive those souls to carry that light.

We cannot allow those hands which grasp the implements for reconstructing the world to be motivated by any other than Christian purposes. We see where we failed the last time. This time we must be sure that so far as in us lies, Christ sets the pace in justice and in truth. Hate and bitterness will bring fresh terror. Let us start to draw the sting of bitterness and fear, by standing with outstreched hand to rescue the souls of our brethren across the world in love and service to their need.

Starvation can be more than physical. But the ministration of food for the body will carry life to the spirit as well. Jesus' message of reconstruction of life can speak through our gifts now. After the war will be too late, if we do not do it now. If we do it now, we shall open doors of mind and spirit that need never be closed.

Give now. Give soon again. Continue to give. The need is tragic. Their loneliness is appalling. Your hands hold the wonderful gift of new life for millions. But do not continue to hold it. Send it on. Give through your church. And pray as you give for the growth of His spirit in the affairs of men.

"If all my years were summer—could I know
What my Lord means by His 'made white as snow'?
If all my days were sunny, could I say,
'In His fair land He'll wipe all tears away'?
Were no graves mine, might I not come to deem
The life eternal but a baseless dream?
My winters, yes, my tears, my weariness,
Even my graves, may be His way to bless.
I call them ills, but surely there can be Nothing but good that brings Him near to me."

NEGLECTED FRANCE

France is a great neglected mission field, according to G. P. Raud. There are about 8,000 missionaries in China where there are about 400 million people. There are 6,000 missionaries in Africa among 150 million people. There are 900 missionaries in the Belgian Congo alone where there are only 10 million people. Yet in France, among its 40 millions, there were only about 50 missionaries. There have been plenty of British and American tourists, but scarcely any missionaries.

When in France a few years ago an old Christian gentleman reminded Mr. Raud of these facts and made a touching appeal. "Many here are hungry for the gospel of Christ," he said, "as hungry as any of the people in Africa or India. We are a nation of white people, but what have you done with us? You have left us to die in our sins. Missionaries should have been sent to us by the hundreds. How we should have welcomed them and helped them!"—Ex.

"America"

By Florence Hornaday Summers

"What shall we sing? What shall we sing?" The teacher was desperate, for soon there was a great celebration coming—July 4th—and the school children were to sing publicly in the Park Street Church at Boston.

"It should be patriotic," observed the teacher. She struck the chord and at once the children were singing, "God Save the King!"

"That won't do," she told the children shaking her head.

"No, that won't do," said Dr. Samuel Smith, a Baptist minister, who had just dropped in. "That won't do. That tune belongs to many countries—England, Denmark, Switzerland, and many others. But the words—ah, those words are for English children—not America."

So he took pencil and paper from his vest pocket and in half an hour Dr. Samuel Smith had written:

AMERICA

"My country 'tis of thee,
Sweet land of liberty;
Of thee I sing.
Land where my fathers died,
Land of the Pilgrims' pride.
From every mountain side
Let freedom ring.

"My native country thee,
Land of the noble free,
Thy name I love:
I love thy rocks and rills,
Thy woods and templed hills,
My heart with rapture thrills
Like that above.

"Let music swell the breeze
And ring through all the trees
Sweet freedom's song;
Let mortal tongues awake;
Let all that breathes partake;
Let rocks their silence break,
The sound prolong.

"Our fathers' God to thee,
Author of liberty,
To thee we sing;
Long may our land be bright
With freedom's holy light;
Protect us by thy might,
Great God, our King."

So, on July 4, 1832, in the Park Street Church, Boston, school children sang America for the first time, just like you sing when you sing our national anthem. The original manuscript of America is now in the Harvard University Library.

THIS IS THE WAY WE HEARD IT

Some Christians think they are camels and can drink in enough on Sunday morning during the half hour of the Sunday School Class to last them for an entire week. Some even come for a drink only about once a month; others, once a year!

23 Days At Sea In a Lifeboat

By TOM M. OLSON, in NOW

One of the great sea odysseys of the war recently ended when 38 survivors of the British liner Britannia, shelled and sunk by a German raider in the South Atlantic, staggered ashore on the Brazilian island of Curupu after 23 days in a lifeboat. The survivors were 13 English officers and men, eleven Hindu passengers. Following is a composite story of several of the British survivors as told to a LIFE reporter in Brazil.

"Our lifeboat, built to hold 50, had 32 men. We took turns squatting and standing up. The wounded were placed at the bottom of the boat, but two inches of water leaked into the bottom and some of the wounded drowned when their faces were pressed into the bilge by the crowd.

During the first week we saw eight ships. We shouted and burned oil so that they might see the smoke. None did. When it rained one day, we filled three buckets with drinking water.

For the next 16 days we sailed the South Atlantic. The heat nearly crazed us and the glare closed our eyes until they were slits. Our skin festered with sores from the sun and salt water. Each morning we dumped overboard the men who had died the night before. At first we buried them with a short religious service, but later we were too weak to do even this.

By the third week men began losing their minds. An Englishman named Smith screamed delirously for his wife until he died. Those with strength left tried to bail out the boat and clean up the vomit of the sea-sick men. For food we had a daily ration of one cracker and spoonful of condensed milk with water. The lascars fought for the left-over cracker scraps. Our mouths cracked from dryness.

After two weeks of sunshine it rained again. We spread sails out to catch the rain and we opened our mouths to let the rain fall in. In desperation, however, two Hindus drank salt water and later jumped overboard. We were too weak to rescue them.

On the 19th day the color of the water changed and strands of seaweed floated by. Land could not be far away, but three more died that day.

On the 23rd day we sighted land! When our navigator saw it, he mumbled: "I have done my duty. You are all safe." Then he collapsed and died.

Later that day we landed at low tide. Many of the men could no longer walk or talk. They simply collapsed in the mud. The others stumbled further ashore, bowing their heads to thank God for deliverance.

Shortly after the weaker men had been dragged to safety, we heard human voices. At the sight of the Brazilian fishermen who found us, some of us fainted with happiness."

Truly these men had occasion to bow their heads in thanksgiving to God for deliverance—deliverance from the shelling and sinking of the Britannia—deliverance from death by thirst and starvation—deliverance from possible violence of heat-crazed men and deliverance from all the perils of the sea.

But those who are compassed about with "songs of deliverance" are those enjoying a deliverance even greater than physical deliverance.

The Psalmist said: "The sorrows of death compassed me, and the pains of hell gat hold upon me: I found trouble and sorrow. Then called I upon the name of the Lord; O Lord, I beseech Thee, deliver my soul."

The Lord answered and the Psalmist exclaims: "Thou hast delivered my soul from death, mine eyes from tears, and my feet from falling. I will walk before the Lord in the land of the living."

To accomplish our deliverance from sin, Satan, death, and hell, it was necessary that the Deliverer Himself, the Lord Jesus Christ, be "delivered for our offenses" and be raised again for our justification.

IN HIM—NO CHANGE

"Whate'er my change, in Him no change is seen,
A glorious sun that wanes not nor declines;
Above the clouds and storms He walks serene,
And sweetly on His people's darkness shines.
All may depart—I fret not, nor repine
While I my Savior's am, while He is mine.

He stays my falling; lifts me up when down,
Reclaims my wandering; guards from every foe;
Plants on my worthless brow the victor's crown,
Which, in return, before His feet I throw,
Grieved that I cannot better grace His shrine,
Who designs to own me His, as He is mine.

While here, alas! I know but half His love,
But half discern Him, and but half adore;
But when I meet Him in the realms above,
I hope to love Him better, praise Him more,
And feel and tell, amid the choir divine,
How fully I am His, and He is mine."

"A PRESENT HELP"

"Unless the Lord had been my help."—Psalms 94:17.

"Unless the Lord had been my help,"
I dare not think what might have been;
Unless His love had sought me out,
I must have perished in my sin.

Unless He had been near to help
In many a dark and crucial hour,
I must have suffered sore defeat,
Gone down before the tempter's power.

When sudden danger overtook,
A "present help" indeed was He—
He sheltered me beneath His wings
And with His feathers covered me.

Unless the Lord shall be my help
Through all the days that are to come—
But, oh, He will, I know He will!
A "present help" the whole way home!

GOD DOES A

STAFF AND STUDENT BODY (1941-1942) OF TH

With a farmyard for a campus and an abandoned farm house for a building, the first little classes of the Prairie Bible Institute began in the fall of 1922. Eight uninterested "teen-age" young people comprised the first student body. They were the children of certain families, the "Kirk clan," "whose hearts God had touched."

God's beginnings are small. He has not "despised the day of small things." To poor enfeebled Israel He still says: "Look unto Abraham . . . for I called him alone, and blessed him, and increased him." It is still part of God's plan to plant a seed, and from that very inconspicuousness, confound the splendid wisdom of the wise and prudent.

Many were the sacred classroom hours in those first days. Recitations often gave way to protracted periods of prayer. Worldliness fell away like dead leaves in the spring. Gospel passion possessed old and young alike. Our constituency of about eight families began to farm for Christ and missions.

Those first classes closed in the spring with a missionary pledge-offering of $2,000 from those few poor families. There was scarcely a dry eye in the old farm house. Tears of joy flowed freely. But how could such an offering be met? During the previous dry season these families had scarcely reaped a harvest sufficient for next year's seed-grain. But God met them—met them with a bumper crop, and gave us over $2,000.00 for missions. He meets those who love to "prove Him now herewith."

The student body grew the next year to 23 students, all of whom lived in nearby homes. The spirit of faith rose higher and higher. Some doubting Christians said, "What do these feeble Jews"?

Then we faced a problem. The little old house would suffice no longer. To build or not to build became the burning question. But whoever hea such a thing? A Bible School in a country dis What folly and presumption! It had never been It was a new thing. It was different. The patl untried. It was all so "contrary to nature." the spring of 1924, when the building program he Institute actually commenced, the site was a treeless prairie in the edge of a small Alberta ge of about 500 people, the very name of which, ree Hills," must have been chosen of God to have eckoned among the "nondescript." "Can any good g come out of (Three Hills)"? But as a saint of well said: "Let a man be any outlandish nonde-pt, the world may choose to denominate him, but let him be nondescript." Ah yes, that is the he secret! We cannot content ourselves to remain nondescript. We disdain the company of the un-ten and the "unreckoned." But God still takes

"the things which are not to bring to nought the things that are." And ours has been the holy and happy privilege to be among the "are not"—"are not" in location—"are not" in reputation. As Grandma Kirk used so often to say, "Blessed be nothing"!

As we walked through the short halls of that first little building, and into the cold half-plastered and entirely unfinished rooms, our hearts sank. The devil caused the very echoes of those rooms to mock us almost beyond endurance. We had been counting on certain students to fill them. They were not coming. God was teaching us the folly and falsehood of "expectation from man." Falling on our knees we cried: "O God, art Thou able to fill these rooms"? We felt like Ezekiel when questioned about the dry bones: "Can these bones live?—O Lord God Thou knowest"! We were without precedent, without prestige, and without experience; but not without Job's comforters and "many adversaries." The local mockers wished we would build in the center of the village—that they might use the building for a dance hall—soon. We were "appointed to death." "Without were fightings, within were fears." But withal there was one redeeming feature—we were almost too insignificant for contempt or persecution. Everywhere people "suffer fools gladly."

From the school's very inception, and until now, we have often had "the sentence of (institutional) death in ourselves, that we should not trust in ourselves but in God that raiseth the dead". In spite, therefore, of decoys and calls from more promising fields, and in spite of the severe temptation at one time to flee the place before buried beneath its insignificance, our cry to God has been: "Lord, Thou hast called us here—we stay here until called away".

GROWING PAINS

Since those early days we have passed through many and similar testings of faith and obedience. To walk in the light and keep pace with God occasions new quakings and fears. These are the growing pains of faith.

The next construction was an auditorium—a basement at first, with a temporary roof. This was an all-purpose public meeting place. But in a few months we needed the auditorium above. There came in the form of a surprise, a good substantial check from a man we did not know. From another came a second check. Then came still another. God, Who ordered these checks, also held back the cold. That building went up in January in Canada. But it seemed so huge. Would it ever be filled? Some doubted, others wondered. In a few days we were trying to pack 800 people into that tabernacle. Of course this all necessitated a new and larger heating plant—already the third expansian in that department. There naturally developed an underground system of tunnels—about one quarter of a mile in length—where repairs can now be made in spite of the cold in the mid-winter weather of Canada.

Next came the demand for more dormitory space for women. Then the conference crowds could not be cared for without another and larger tabernacle. A building 80' x 100' was decided upon. Even the believers wagged their heads: "It never will be filled"! But it was soon over-filled. When Evangelist Oscar Lowry was here, there were some 1,500 present—and there were 140 professed conversions in one day. Since then we have built balconies, and last spring had over 2,000 people packed in at our graduation. They came hundreds of miles—from as far as Denver, Portland, Seattle, and St. Paul.

We would not overlook that latest addition—our high school. Parents had long cried to God against the diabolical doctrines in our modern high schools. 110 students are now in attendance—under fully qualified teachers. It is a high school which excludes the teaching of evolution, and all suggestive as well as false literature. The courses include Bible, Bible characters, and the lives of such persons as Madame Guyon, John Bunyan and Hudson Taylor. What transformations of character are taking place in these young lives.

What shall I more say? Time and space fail me to tell all about the dormitories, the dining rooms, the classrooms, the large tabernacles, a total in all of 12 large buildings, and a half dozen dwellings for staff members. Then there are the barns, the horses, the cows, the gardens, the trucks, the wagons—as well as willing "Levites" to care for them all. No mention can be made of the print shop, electric shop, carpenter shop, blacksmith shop, barber shop, butcher shop, steam fitter's shop, the root cellar and the fruit cellar, the music rooms and store rooms, the bakery and the laundry and the infirmary—and what have you? A vine of God's planting! A man with $1,000,000 could not have done it—he would have been a fool to try it. Such a work, in such a way, in such a place! It "is not after man". Only God could have done it. Friends, speakers, and visitors, like the Queen of Sheba, all agree: "This is the Lord's doing and it is marvellous in our eyes"! We say with Hudson Taylor: "God's work, done in God's way, will never lack God's support".

We hasten also to agree with Hudson Taylor that God's work done in God's way, will never lack God's trials. He says:

> "Envied by some, despised by many, hated perhaps by others; an innovation on what have become established rules of mission practice (Bible and Theological Schools); working without precedent in many respects, and with few experienced helpers; often perplexed in mind and embarrassed by circumstances, had not my mind been sustained by the conviction that the work was His, and that He is with me 'in the thick of the fight', I must have fainted and broken down. But the battle is the Lord's and He will conquer. We may fail, do fail continually; but He never fails."

Pardon the personal pronoun. It seems necessary to use it. Early in my ministry—while still the only teacher—I sought God as to the matter of salary. There was one definite word from the Lord, a word which has been basic to the work over these many years, a word without which this school never could have survived or prospered. It is found in Luke 6:35 —just one little phrase of three words: "Hoping for nothing". But I was not ready to receive such an answer. A battle followed. I kept on praying, foolishly asking for a different word. But God did not change His mind. No sooner would I go to my knees to pray about salary than these words were emblazoned on my mind. There they were—clear as noon-day—unmistakable. God was trying to get me to believe that by these "three smooth stones" we would be well able to overcome, "always having all sufficiency in all things." And certainly I could never be disappointed if I "hoped for nothing" for myself.

The upshot of this "good seed" has been—what? None of our regular staff members or teachers—about 30 in all—have received a cent of salary or allowance. We receive our board and room and pray for clothes and incidentals. On occasion our workmen have "made tents" for a week or two. The result of following God in this respect has meant a simplicity of Christian life among all our leaders. There are no expensive homes. There is no luxury, no fine furniture, no "soft clothing", no examples of soft living before the students. The principle of "hoping for nothing" for ourselves has entered into the very warp and woof of this Institute. It has been a "word proceeding out of the mouth of God" enabling us to "live thereby". Praise His name! From this basic principle, the "get" of fallen human nature has been largely supplanted by the "give" of the divine nature.

This same principle has obtained in the matter of encouraging our young people to go to "the regions beyond". Satan reasons, "It will not help your school to see nearly all your best young people going to the ends of the earth where Christ has not been named." The devil's plan—so logical and sensible, so reasonable and plausible—is this: "Get your best graduates placed in home churches as pastors, that they may in turn refurnish P. B. I. with students—only thus can your school grow". But the devil is a liar. He "savors not the things that be of God". Christ says: "Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die it abideth alone, but if it die it bringeth forth much fruit". It is still true that "there is that scattereth abroad and yet increaseth—there is that that withholdeth more than is meet, but it tendeth to poverty".

Has this Scriptural policy worked? To ask such a question is infidelic. Of course it has worked. Being a divine principle it cannot help but work. It will work wherever God can get some born again Christian leaders to crawl into the ground and die—die to all their own "continuing city" and circumstances, die to all their hopes and selfish ambitions, and hope for nothing for themselves. God loves to take such men and "make manifest the savor of His knowledge by them in every place"—loves to prove Himself the glorious God of the blessedly impossible.

But how did it actually work out in our school? Here it is. Some of our best students—some 150 of our graduates—have gone abroad under the best missionary societies. They are serving God in China, Africa, India, Iraq, Cuba, Haiti, Santo Domingo, South America, Alaska, Australia, Papua, and Central America. Eight members of our Board of Directors have children on the foreign field, and one of these has five children serving Christ in the regions beyond. Occasionally young people have been warned: "Don't go to Three Hills or they will make a missionary out of you." We cannot supply the demand for trained missionaries. And note: visiting speakers have gone everywhere in this country recommending Prairie Bible Institute to the young people who enquire of them about missionary training. The result? We have had a continuous building program to provide adequate quarters for students. The student body now numbers 500—and the end is not yet.

MISSIONARY SUPPORT

A school of this kind—especially a school of such rapid growth—is nearly always in financial straits. However, we have sought by divine help to keep the missionary program uppermost. Each school year closes with a missionary conference. At this conference we take a missionary pledge offering for foreign missions. This is the one and only offering we take during the year. As these funds come in during the next 12 months they are distributed, as designated by the donors, among more than a score of reliable missionary societies.

During our earlier years it was a test of faith to take up such an offering just before we begin our annual building program. Of course anyone can see that if our friends are "bled dry" for missions they cannot help us to build. The test once again centers around the principle of "give" or "get". Christian progress always centers around some new application of the cross. Our life, whether personal or institutional, must be cast again and again into the mould of the cross. It is in these very practical tests that we are to be made conformable to his death. The grain of wheat must again be buried if it would multiply. We must again, and yet again, sign our own death sentence. And it is on the dotted line of some very ordinary and practical matter, such as the taking up of the missionary offering just before our own building program begins, that we die. "Get" must be eliminated if we would grow. Selfish attachments and self-centeredness must be sloughed off through new and voluntary participations in "Calvary's awful depths of self denial".

Yes, we build each year—build without debt—build simple frame buildings—build only the necessary buildings—build to "serve", as king David, "our own generation by the will of God".

Once again God is finding it necessary to do something "new"—something different. He alone knows how great is the need that those who are trammelled by a traditional and commercialized Christianity be stunned and startled and "provoked to love and good works", by His choice of the "things which are not to bring to nought the things which are, that no flesh should glory in His presence." On the one hand we dare not "let our boasting carry us beyond measure, but will confine it within that measure given us by God". On the other hand, "He that boasteth, let him boast in the Lord". To His eternal praise let it be said that in this work God has broken away from the fixed and the sterotyped, the shackled and the commercialized, in order to crucify the cold, conventional, and "calculating manhood of a prudentially wise and overgrown Christianity". He has done a "new thing", putting "new wine" into "new skins", putting a "new song" into our hearts, even praise to our God, filling our eyes with wonder and "our mouths with laughter".

Remember The three great questions: Are these few that be saved?—Lk. 13: 23. Who then can be saved?—Lk. 18:16. What must I do to be saved?—Acts 16:30.

SAVED, BUT—

"I am saved, but is self buried?
Is my one, my only aim.
Just to honor Christ, my Savior,
Just to glorify His Name?

I am saved, but is my home life
What the Lord would have it be?
Is it seen in every action,
Jesus has control of me?

I am saved, but am I doing,
Everything that I can do,
That the dying souls around me,
May be brought to Jesus, too?

I am saved, but could I gladly,
Lord, leave all and follow Thee?
If Thou callest can I answer,
Here am I, send me, send me?"

Notes of Missionary "Out In the African Bush"

By GRACE BYRON

An old man greets us at the road, and his hand is badly infected and swollen. I told him to soak it in hot water; then if he would come over, I would dress it for him. He came to have me dress his hand. He is so grateful; he gives me an egg. Road very steep and rocky. Arrive at nine hills. Robert greets us. Chief and people at Pavna. Village is small. Bought a chicken for two francs. Boiled the chicken with rice and onions. Take pictures of drums. Robert has made a chair in front of his house. He used four forked sticks (small ones). These sticks were held together with bark rope.

Miss Byron

Around the fire last night the men wanted names of animals. I gave them monmon (lion), oworro (leopard), and another hippo (mirna). One man's name is Gun (tin gali). He was stronger than all of them to me. They gave the name Elephant to me, not because I was so big nor because I had a trunk—the reason was of the "gouli bai".

"Mo chi fal bali da mo na ditil ya." (If you follow an elephant you will not sleep cold).

About a dozen youngsters know lessons well. They say them very fast. I had a hard time getting food for boys. They only brought two pots at first, but later they brought four. Very cold weather; I sleep cold. Jacques makes an egg sandwich for next morning. Leave at 6 a. m. for Kore.

The road is good except for a few places. Luc and Koui come to name me at Tel.

Arrive at Kore, 10:20. Nice compound—two houses, rest house, kitchen, chapel, and bath house. There is also an outhouse. Nearly eaten with ants. About 25 boys come to classes. The Gideons seem very earnest. Capita "Yama", a friendly old fellow, came to greet me. He sends eggs and soup. Capita "Wal" came in drunk during the lesson. Yere comes late to greet me. Have supper of fried eggs, potatoes, and pie pie. Sit around the camp fire. The children have prayers. We retire and it is very cold. Sunday service—Gideon leads. I give a little message. The chapel is very crowded. Hen and little chicks fly from one mat across the chapel. The chicks are not able to make it, but all finally get outside. Take a walk to Yama's village to see zellaphone (xylophone. Ed.)—made of gourds and sticks. An old man plays very well. Return to chapel. Will leave after diner. Ants tried to eat my bed bag but were discovered.

Had lunch. More fried eggs and beans. Left at 2:00 p. m. Arrived at Kaon at 4:00 p. m. No bridge at river. Had to be carried across. Heavy rains had washed the bridge out.

Left Barrai at 4:00 p. m. Five men. Bey at 6:00 p. m. Corne meets at top of hill—double house. Service with 58. They know lessons well. Morning service—there were 75. So much wind, I didn't sleep well. Three mothers accept the gospel. Jude encourages children to bring mothers; then he exhorts the mothers to raise their children properly. Yangora is grouchy and is talking with soldier men cutting meat dogs—licking axes when they lay them down. Yangora sends food. Leave Bey at 9:00 a. m. Young dandies come with their hoops and park them in front of the chapel. Arrive at Kokoul at 11:00 a. m. Yandona at Parna—three wives bring food for men. Give them sale for four eggs. Eat at 11:40 a. m. Have eggs, tomatoes, potatoes, and pie pie. Rest in afternoon. Service at sunset—about 25 were there. Every one gone to carry cotton. Eat out-of-doors. Sit around camp fire. Dupenze tells folk lore. Retire, dog visits me twice—eating my eggs both times.

Service at 6:30-33. Nangiai, who accepted gospel at Bassai dispensary, is still holding true, also Dupenzi. Left at 7:00 for Tel Pass—two small villages. Albert teaching his class. Greet chief with pineapple. Sends eggs and visits (Wambelenzi) just returned from Baindi selling cotton. Pain in his chest. Give him some medicine. Visit Albert. Compound—nice square mate house—two nice clean beds, one for visitors. Neat garden, belli (pineapples, guavas, mangos, bananas). Class in reading. St. John—first chapters. Has one read several verses; then explains in perfect order.

Return to rest house. Supper near the camp-fire. The boys eat at the same time. They sleep comfortable. Bright idea of hot water bottle. Leave at 6:00 a. m. Reach Lia at 10:00 a. m. Three Catholic boys located here. Loads arrive ¾ hours later. Dinner preparing potatoes, fried eggs, onions. Put beans to soak for supper. Gave woman who carried water some salt. Boys said not to give it to her till she brings enough. Wore sweater all the way.

Had service at La Pere. All that assembled K. C. got the rest returned to rest house. Sat outside and sang. Went to bed, G. M. came. Had breakfast of fried eggs, bread, and postum. Left at 6:30. Arrived at B., 11:50. Meet natives going with cotton and returning foot sore, limping, and half starved. It is a crime.

Warmer last night. Rations low. Cheese breaded, and postum. Can't buy eggs. Left Yachimailis for Haon after service boys have navy mush at Sampson's place. Take picture of loads. Reach Haon at 8:30. Meeting women and young girls carrying cotton. They carried their babies, too—carried babies for 20 or more miles on their hips and a load of cotton on the head. Surely is slavery. Boys buy flour for salt. Never lack something to put it in—just take a leaf and pin it with stem. People all in the cotton. No glue on paper for film. Have Timothy tap a rubber tree. Need not lack for anything.

Went over new piece of road wide enough for two cars to pass easily—crushed stone covered with clay. Temporary villages. Boys have a feed at Yangora's. I want my china. Sampson and Thomas, Francois, and Victor greet us along the way. Cotton place in place of building grocers—a sea of baskets of cotton or a snow bank. Making bricks near stream on our side. Housa and Barneo's set at business. Visited their booths—only a few beads, twine cloths, etc.; nothing interesting. Killed a beef so will have roast beef instead of eggs tonight.

Went to bed early. Some played a musical instrument all night. Went with Peronne. He is like a hunter advertising his wares: Oui Gui Belabai our ya belabai da chi workala mo gui, Thomas handi, mo pele kalo tou, mo gui, Elizabeth handi no gin—Little shed between two villages. Makes a seat out of gas can. Used for a drum. Not solid—puts a log inside. Starts in to sing—all sing heartily. Prays. Then tells story of creation. Prays and sings.

"Meeting women and young girls carrying cotton. They carried their babies too—carried babies for 20 or more miles on their hips and a load of cotton on their heads! Surely is slavery!"

Teacher wants to convert lessons. Discovers he has not those bai ti ya he—knows them by heart. Starts in and goes through several. They respond in characteristic. Tali House is full. Says a few words. Lines them up outside and counts 83. Returning—met some who missed. Asked why. Sees the mother come, and asks where children are. Comes to a hut where woman is sick. Calls to her and inquires how she is. We go over to hut and find she has rheumatism. Pray with her. Push boys come to meet me. Have good supper. Roast beef gravy, sweet potatoes, beans, bread postum. Service at B. about 50 or 60. Very few Catholics. Have a crowd across the road. Jean has service at Yachimaili's temp village (sells cotton here)—

Take walk. Children crowd around. Play instrument all night. Leave in afternoon for Yachimaili's. Doufinzi has traded his coat for a pup. Give the pup the name of Veston and Doupeniz pantalon he is tall. The other morning the people going to cotton. All carrying grass or wood as it is so cold. Intend to burn it. Good meeting. Sampson in earnest.

ONE WAY TO REDUCE

A man was hunting in a forest when a storm came up. Looking about for shelter from the rain he found and crawled into a hollow log which fitted quite snugly. The rain soaked through the wood. The log began to contract. When the storm was over the hunter was unable to get out. The log held tight and finally the exhausted man gave up, knowing that he would starve to death. His life flashed before him. Suddenly he remembered that he had not attended the Brethren Bible School as often as he should have done. This made him feel so small that he was able to crawl out of the log without difficulty—Southgate, Calif., Bulletin.

Editor's Mail Box

From Mrs. Hill Maconaghy, Argentina:

Mrs. Hill (Dorothy) Maconaghy writes of their first contacts after their arrival at their new location—La Carlota—in the Argentine. She says:

"Since Hill wrote you a few days ago about our coming here, I won't say anything about that, except that we are happy, believing that the Lord has called us to this town. We expect to complete very shortly our visiting from house to house with tracts, so that every family will have received a gospel tract and a personal invitation to come to the meetings.

"This morning a rich, influential widow, who is very Catholic, informed us that we should not be allowed to go about with our propaganda because the people in this town are Catholics. She said she was very sorry that a young couple like us should be involved in this sort of thing, and that perhaps we would find some Communists in the town who would be interested in what we had to say, but no one else. She was especially opposed to us because we don't worship Mary. But we talked with her a little in a friendly way, and will pray that the Lord will open her eyes.

"The other day we found a family of believers, from Italy, who have been here only about five years. They are the first believers we have come across, although there is quite a group of those who know a little of the gospel and have evinced decided interest. Please pray that the Lord will give us the wisdom, tact, patience, and everything we need in this work. We certainly realize that in ourselves we can do nothing."

From Mrs. Ricardo Wagner, Argentina

Just as we are sending the copy for this issue of our magazine to the press, a letter arrives from Mrs. Laura Wagner of Almafuerte, Argentina. Speaking of the work on their circuit, she says:

"For the most part, it is a story of struggles and disappointments. However, there are also notes of victory and joy as well.

"In Elena our hearts were much saddened when Don Juan Olmos left us for his heavenly home. . . .

"In Berrotaran we have had some difficulty on account of spiritual weakness of some of the members. Some have slipped into sins that have had to be dealt with. Nevertheless, the attendance keeps up fairly well, and we are praying that the Lord will strengthen these weak ones and give them victory over sin in their lives.

"Here in Almafuerte we have had a very trying experience with one family of believers, but it has in no way affected attendance and interest. In fact, I believe I can truthfully say that the spirit is better here than it has been for some time. On the 9th we had baptisms and the communion service here. There were three baptized; two from Corralito, and a man from Berrotaran. We hoped that there might be at least two more."

Thus sunshine and shadows chase each other in Argentina. The two to whom our sister refers were hindered by providential circumstances and expect to be baptized later. Sister Wagner says that they are now "hard at work on the material for the Vacation Bible Schools."

FROM Miss Mary Emmert, At Sea:

"Without knowing whether it were friend or foe," a letter from Miss Emmert tells of a boat which followed them on the Atlantic one night "in the dark", on their recent trip back to Africa. She tells us that while some of the passengers stayed up all night "afraid to undress and go to sleep," that our missionaries "went to bed to sleep without knowing whether it were friend or foe." These missionaries are wonderful! However, knowing absolutely that our Heavenly Father is still on His throne and is watching over His own, why should we not go "to bed and sleep" no matter what forces of hell may be prowling 'round about us seeking our destruction? Thank God for a faith that sends us "to bed and to sleep" without any fear whatever, even though it be to the last "bed" and to the last "sleep" that the saints of God shall ever know.

We quote from Miss Emmert's letter, written as they were nearing Freetown on Oct. 17, 1941:

"It took us about 16 days to cover the 3,579 miles to Bathurst, but they say we must not expect to arrive at Matadi under five weeks. We are very heavily laden with freight. Even all the deck space is full of great cases, most of which are marked 'Ford'. There is also an airplane crated, and a yacht for Liberia. It took us several days to unload at Bathurst, but it was rather disgusting to see such large quantities of ale and so little flour unloaded.

"We had some rather anxious moments the last two days out. A boat was sighted coming rapidly toward us on the starboard side. A signal light was flashing dots and dashes. It seemed like a very long conversation to the passengers lined up along the rail. The boat came within perhaps an eighth of a mile of us, all the time signaling, sometimes with the light and sometimes with flags. We were quite pleased to see her finally slacken her pace and drop behind us. All we learned was that it was a patrol boat and that her parting message was: 'Goodbye. Cheerio!'

"That same evening another boat followed us for a while in the darkness, and we went to bed and to sleep without knowing whether it were friend or foe, after having committed it into the Lord's hands. Some of the passengers stay up all night, seemingly afraid to undress and go to sleep. How wonderful it is to know that we are in the hands of a loving Father, Who is watching over His own.

"Another evening an airplane circled around us twice, speaking likewise with dots and dashes sent by a signal light. How glad we are that they are friends instead of foes."

From Mrs. Floyd Taber, Africa:

It isn't often that the editor receives a personal letter from Mrs. Floyd Taber. She is a very busy woman. Usually her husband does the writing. However, we have just received a letter from her, dated Sept. 21, 1941. We wish we might quote the entire letter; but we will give our readers a part of it, for we know that many of them will be glad for a word from Sister Taber.

"I suppose this will be somewhat of a shock when you see the signature at the end of this letter. This sort of inspiration doesn't come to me frequently. . . .

I want to tell you how much we do appreciate all your efforts to keep us supplied with funds during these very uncertain days. We have suffered the lack of no good thing which was possible to get. At times certain things would run out at Bangui, but we always managed with our own gardens and native products to keep going. Now with America sending supplies there is all any one needs. Of course it is more expensive than formerly, but the francs to the dollar have also increased.

Also we do appreciate the little greetings sent from time to time. We know they are always sent forth in Christian love and with a prayer, and it warms our hearts to know our friends are behind us in prayer. For oh! we do need them so.

Our work here goes on much the same day after day, and we never run out of things to do. Rather, at the end of every day, many things are left undone. One day brings joy and hope and the next brings sadness to our hearts.

One thing which nearly took the starch out of me was when my most reliable boy, a quiet steady faithful plodder, took a second wife. With my heavy schedule of teaching French school and my own children and the women's classes, and the head French monitor just having informed me he wanted to leave so he could earn more money elsewhere, it was just a knock out blow. . . .

I do wish sometimes I could exchange places with the folks who get the idea that a missionary woman has nothing to do and no cares to wear her out. Boys for this and boys for that, yes and troubles and palavers galore along with them! I wouldn't even ask for an electrically equipped kitchen in exchange if I could do my own work. I'd be perfectly satisfied with my "two-by-four" of Paris days with a coal range and a gas plate. Last year I had to dismiss a boy for deliberate adultery which had been going on for months before we knew.

Really though, all in all we have so much for which to praise the Lord. This colony has been very quiet most of the time, and we have had the liberty to carry on our work without any interruptions such as many others have had to endure for Christ's sake. . . .

Floyd is having a blessed time itinerating. Has been gone three weeks and will probably be gone two more. Had it been the dry season I should like to have gone along, but with a family in the rains and crowded huts it didn't seem best.

Well, good night, and God bless you all.

Behind the Scene In the European War

By REV. G. P. RAUD, Editor of "Europe's Millions"
(Reprinted here by permission)

In London, trenches in the parks and gas masks in everybody's hand; in Rome, soldiers everywhere; in Berlin, vigorous, confident airmen in great numbers: these indications of the coming titanic struggle I saw just before the outbreak of the war. . . .

Now the war is raging. In a short time it has brought about what some statesmen had thought highly improbable. How can the course of the war be explained? For the answer we need to look behind the scenes and discover what the forces of evil are striving for. Their efforts will furnish us with the explanation of the conflagration in Europe.

The war in Europe is different from wars of the past. Other wars did not threaten the world-wide work of the Lord. The present war involves countries which are Protestant or which, like non-Protestant France and Belgium, allow liberty for evangelization, and therefore reveals itself as a conflict between God and Satan. Satan has let loose his fury against Protestant countries, against nations that have furnished the printed Word of God to many parts of the world and have sent missionaries everywhere; he fights against the evangelization of non-Protestant countries.

Since the time of the apostles, Satan has done his utmost to prevent the spread of the gospel. In the early days of the church the blood of the witnesses of Christ reddened the Coliseum sand in Rome. Later he tried to dispel gospel light by the darkness of the Middle Ages, while the Roman Catholic Church and the Eastern Orthodox Church waxed in corruption and persecuted evangelical believers as heretics.

But the Word of God lives and cannot be destroyed. God raised up His mighty men—Hus, Wycliffe, Luther, Calvin, Knox, and others—whose testimony challenged the universal claims of Romanism and declared to men once more the truths of the Word of God. At the cost of imprisonment, exile, and martyrdom, the servants of God, through the power of the Spirit, brought light to Western Europe. . . .

THE DIVINE ORDER

God's missionary order seems to be to give the gospel to the white nations and then to use the white nations to send it to the rest of the world. In the centuries following the Reformation, when great numbers among the white nations had heard the gospel and millions had been born again, white missionaries began to take the Word of God to the uttermost parts of the earth.

In Europe and America Christians formed missionary societies for the black, yellow, and brown races, and for the Jews. England and Germany led in pioneer missions. Through the British and Foreign Bible Society, the American Bible Society, the Bible Society of Scotland, the German Bible Societies, and others, Scriptures in a thousand languages, have reached men everywhere. The British and Foreign Bible Society has printed more Bibles for the nations of the world than any other society; in 1939 it shipped abroad 541 tons of Scriptures. From Great Britain, Germany, Sweden, Norway, Finland, Switzerland, Holland, and Denmark, as well as from the United States, and Canada, thousands of missionaries have taken the gospel to the world's mission fields, and many millions of dollars have assisted their work. Millions in heathen lands have found Christ. Praise God for His grace to men!

SATANIC OPPOSITION

Now as the age of grace approaches its close, Satan has summoned all his wisdom and might, and has called for the co-operation of his mighty princes (Eph. 6:12) to withstand the work of God and thus prevent the coming of Christ and his own doom (Rev. 20:10). He realizes that his time is short; his anger and efforts, consequently, are intensified to resist the purpose of God, which is the completion of the church of Christ, the body of Christ. Instead of allowing the gospel to go to all men to bring about the completion of the church, he aims to stop world evangelization and to mold the nations into his dupes which will receive the Antichrist, his own king for the world.

First, Satan laid his hand upon Germany, the land of Luther and the Reformation, a country having godly men and women, from which many missionaries and much missionary money went out continually. A new order was established. Nationalism became the religion in which man worshipped man and for which men were to die gladly. Gradually it hindered the work of God within the country and paralyzed the German mission work outside the country. . . .

Obtaining success in Germany, Satan thought to attempt as much in other countries. The gospel of Christ is still in Germany and the countries under its control; but money for missions cannot be sent from Norway, Denmark, and Holland; activities on their mission fields are crippled. Much missionary work is affected, because Christians in these countries were generous suporters of missions and gave their sons and daughters to many fields.

ATTACKING ANOTHER STRONGHOLD

Great Britain has long been a stronghold of Protestantism and the land which provided many men and much money for missions in all parts of the world. Millions of precious souls with yellow, brown, or black skins have been born again through the prayers, the gifts, and the young men and women from the British Isles. How Satan would delight to destroy that source of far-flung evangelization.

To-day we see his fury against Great Britain. He seeks to paralyze or destroy the country. . . .

Billions of pounds, taken partly from the Lord's people, are spent for ammunition; and promising Christian young men are conscripted for active service. It must be done to win the war, but nevertheless Britain is being impoverished for the Lord's work both in wealth and young men. British missionary societies have already appealed to Americans for aid in their work. If Satan destroys that country or brings it under foreign totalitarian control, what will become of the Lord's work there and in thousands of mission stations? Should Britain lose Palestine, what will become of the Jews in Palestine? Much missionary work in Africa and Asia will end if Britain and France lose authority over their colonial possessions. The missionaries there will be ousted just as in Abyssinia when a totalitarian government took it. Likewise, if Holland and Belgium remain under German control, missions in their colonies will disappear. Few Christians in America have considered these possibilities.

THE AIM OF SATAN IN THIS WAR

The extinction of missionary work on many large fields, including the vast unevangelized field in Europe, is a chief aim of Satan in this war. . . . Since the dark Middle Ages the devil has never attempted so powerful an attack upon the church of Christ. It may be

Boys & Girls Corner

HOME IS WHERE THE HEART IS

By MRS. RUTH WAYMIRE

Marybeth and Janellen were two little girls nine and eleven. They lived in a lovely old house on the outskirts of a small town. It wasn't such a fine house, but it was a Christian home, roomy and comfortable, and the girls shared a big room that was the whole of the second story. It was furnished with fine old furniture that had belonged to their great grandmother. Their mother had added a modern touch by bright print draperies, flounces on the bed, and dressing table.

One day father came home with the news that he had to go on a business trip to a distant city. He wanted mother to go along.

"Oh, can't we go to?" asked Marybeth.

"I'm sorry, dear, but it's such short notice, I don't see how it can be arranged," he answered.

Mother said, "Well, since we won't have time to take them to grandmother's or have her come here, how about staying with some of your girl friends. It won't be for long, only three days."

"That will be fun," cried Marybeth, "Carol has been wanting me to stay with her ever since school is out." "Fine," exclaimed Janellen, "Freda said Sunday at church she wanted me to go with her to visit her aunt."

So the next day each girl was duly delivered to her chum's home after arrangements had been made with parents.

Three days later they returned home. Father was happy over a successful business trip, and mother looked refreshed after her rest. But the girls! Well what had happened to them!

Marybeth ran to her mother for a great big hug.

"Oh, mumsie, it's so good to be back home again. Everything looks so grand." She ran her fingers over the keys of the piano. Then she ran out into the kitchen. "Oh, it's all so clean and shiny. And our dishes are so pretty. May I have a piece of bread and jam this minute?"

"Well what in the world has come over you?" asked mother with a slightly dazed air.

"I think she's crazy," said Janellen with a frown. "I think our house is a dump. Look at the worn old rugs in the living room. The piano is a wreck. And as for the kitchen, well I know its clean, but the woodwork is so shabby and the plumbing just too, too out of date."

Poor mother looked at her two daughters in amazement. Something had certainly happened. Then father began to laugh.

"I think I get it, my dear. Just where did you visit?" he asked Marybeth.

"Well you see Carol's family are so poor; they all live in four teeny little rooms. Carol's sister and Carol and I all slept in such an old bumpy bed. And they don't have any rug on the floor. They have to carry all their water from the neighbor's pump. They don't have any piano at all, Janey, and their kitchen —well it's terrible: just an old iron cook stove, some shelves for cupboards, and a wobbly table and chairs. Why, we live in a mansion."

"Yes, but mother," and Janellen looked quite injured, "you see Freda took me to visit her aunt, and they live in the most marvelous house: big rooms, lovely deep carpets, and the most exquisite grand piano. They have a cook, a maid and a chauffeur. You should see the room where we slept: a dream all in rose and blue, with beautiful twin beds and a full length mirror set in the wall."

Mother and father exchanged very understanding smiles. "Quite a study in contrasts, isn't it?" mother said, and then turned to the girls and said, "my dear daughters, don't you see it all depends on you and not on your surroundings? It's the home that counts and not the house. Is Carol happy in her home, Marybeth?"

"Why yes, I think she is. They all seem to love each other very much."

"And are Freda's relatives happy?" she turned to Janellen.

"Well to tell the truth, I don't know. I suppose so, but they weren't home very much. I don't see how they could leave such a lovely place."

Then she looked at father and saw the funny crinkly simle he had, and had to laugh herself.

"It is funny isn't it?" and then she put her arm around mother. "I'm sorry if I hurt your feelings or the old house's either. I do like it."

Mother kissed her gently. "You see, my dears, the Scripture says, "Godliness with contentment is great gain." I am sure that everyone can be happy if he has Christ in his heart, no matter where he lives."

one of the last great attacks which he launches, because he sees that the coming of Christ is near. . . .

IT CAN HAPPEN IN AMERICA

Some people are saying that what has happened in Europe could never happen in America; those who make such an assertion should remember the forces of evil are not passive but aggressive and powerful. America needs the prayers of all its Christians. If Satan could, after crippling Great Britain, paralyze God's work within America and the missionary enterprises of American Christians, what would be left of foreign missionary work? Practically nothing. Satan will not overlook this the richest country in the world and the liberty here for the preaching of the gospel.

A joint appeal of a number of African missions recently appeared, asking prayer for the victory of the Allies because the Allied defeat would imperil African missions.

How we children of God now need to wrestle in prayer to overcome the spiritual hosts of wickedness against us (Eph. 6:12,13), in order that the purpose of God for this age may be accomplished in Europe and throughout the world.

"MEAT IN DUE SEASON"

With the involvment of our own country in the conflict which has now engulfed practically the whole world, the responsibility of the Christian minister becomes a very solemn matter. It is a time for sober and thoughtful leadership, and such leadership will be exercised only by those who keep close to the written Word of God. Only thus shall we be guarded from aberrations in judgment and unwise extremes. Mere good intentions will not keep us infallibly in the path of truth and wisdom. The Word of God contains "meat" for just such a "season" as this, and those who are wise will know where to find it.

"THE MOST HIGH RULETH"

First, this is a season when we should preach the sovereignty of God. All discussions of the present catastrophe should begin and end with this truth. Under the influence of modern religious thought, God's sovereignty has been obscured, treated with contemptuous silence, and even openly denied. Humanistic tendencies have striven to make man the measure of all things. Small minded men have attached such vast importance to their own freedom of action that they were willing, in the interest of their own narrow logic, to scuttle the doctrine of divine sovereignty altogether rather than admit that the final word in human affairs belongs to God, not man. The result, today, is distressing. The grand truth of God's sovereign will and action, that anchor of the souls of men in ages past, is no longer seen clearly. It has been the singular good fortune of our group of churches (providentially, I feel), to have seen this forgotten truth more clearly than ever in the past few years. It has been one of the truths which have cemented us together indivisibly in Christian fellowship. Since we know this truth, let us see that we preach it in the present hour. Nothing can possibly clear away the confusion of thought so well. To know that the Most High worketh all things after the counsel of His own perfect and sovereign will, may not solve all the mysteries of human existence, but it will enable you to face the mystery strong and unafraid.

THE SURE WORD OF PROPHECY

In the second place, since we believe that God has revealed prophetically the main outline of the ages, we should with humility search the prophetic Word and interpret present events in the infallible light of this Word. Here again it is necessary to point out, with a sense of humiliation, that leaders professing themselves to be Christian have approached the prophecies of the Bible with hearts of unbelief, denying the possibility of any genuine prediction of future events. Even among those who call themselves "Brethren," there are some who openly discourage the study of divine prophecy and who scoff at those who search the prophets to find the Word of God for the present hour. Unable themselves to read the program of God in the prophetic Word, they would forbid others to make the attempt. Because some interpreters in the past have made mistakes in matters of prophetic detail, they argue that further attempts are useless. Thus their people are left in the dark utterly without the "sure word of prophecy" which was intended by the Holy Spirit to serve as a "light that shineth in a dark place" (2 Pet. 1:19). Here again our pastors and churches have been greatly favored of God in that all of them, so far as my knowledge goes, believe not only in the reality of the prophetic Word but also in the possibility of its true interpretation. The same is true of every missionary that we support. Very humbly, therefore, we should study anew the writings of the prophets and without fear teach what we find there. The fact that serious students of prophecy have made some mistakes of interpretations need not discourage us. We have been right at least on the main points of the divine program of the future, and this is certainly more than the unbelievers can say for themselves. Consider, for example, the wild predictions they made of a saloonless nation, a warless world—all within our memory and generation—and all monumental blunders. We at least knew, and warned the dreamers more than once, that there would be no permanent and universal peace until the coming of the Lord. We still believe, therefore, that the prophets of Scripture are safer guides to follow than the prognostications of those who scoff at prophecy. There are some, of course, who admit the reality of divine prophecy, but who say we must not expect exactness as to details regarding future events. To such we reply that we have found fulfilled prophecy to be exact as to detail. For example, Christ was to be born in Bethlehem, not in Nazareth where His mother lived. And although He died a violent death, not one of His bones was broken. We believe, therefore, that divine prophecy will continue, as in the past, to be infinitely exact as to detail. Hence, no scoffing of the scoffers should be permitted to hinder us in the present study and teaching of predictive prophecy. More than ever before people are interested in the future, hungry to know its secrets.

NOT BY BREAD ALONE

Finally, a word of caution. While we should not be afraid to discuss the bearing of the Word of God on present events, let us be careful to give the Word first place. Some pulpits may become, unfortunately, as in the last world war, mere sounding boards for the rehashing of the daily news. We should beware of that error. The souls of men must be fed, and there is no Bread for the soul outside the Word of God. Battles, the movement of events, the rise and fall of empires, are important; but it is vastly more important to know what the Word declares about such things. Therefore, those of us who still believe in this Word should be careful to give it the first place in our pulpits. The human heart may at least grow weary with hearing about men and things, but it never grows weary with the refreshing springs of divine revelation. In a certain very worldly and modern city church, Hitler and his doings had been discussed from the pulpit ad nauseam. Sensing at last the congregational reaction, the minister suddenly realized that something had to be done. And so, to launch the change in policy, he advertised his next Sunday evening service with the following announcement, "Hitler will not be discussed!" In our current preaching we shall do well to avoid extremes. On the one hand, we shall not hesitate to mention Hitler if the need requires. But we shall see to it that the Word of God is our main subject.

IN REALITY WE DO KNOW

Ivan Bloch, author of a notable work on the "Future of War," analyzes the history of our race from 1496 B.C. down to 1861 A.D., a total period extending over 3357 years, and finds that in this vast concourse of time there were 3130 years of war and only 227 years of peace. For every year of peace there were 13 years of war.

The record is appalling, and earnest men have made serious attempts to discover the basic causes of war. A recent writer, commenting on this matter, asks the question, "What causes war?" Then he answers, "Kings, we once said. But now there are no kings. Munition makers, we said a few years ago, but now we know that was a silly answer. In reality we do not know."

The wise men of this world may not know why mankind spends most of its precious time in fighting, but the Christian knows why. Our Lord answered the question clearly and fully when He said, "For from within, out of the heart of men, proceed evil thoughts, adulteries, fornications, murders, thefts, covetousness, wickedness, deceit, an evil eye, blasphemy, pride, foolishness: all these evil things come from within" (Mark 7:21-23). The reader will notice in this list of sins every evil impulse which leads to conflict. Not one is missing. And these things, our Lord declares, come from "within," not from without. Circumstance, training, environment—these may precipitate the battle. But the source of the evil is within the hearts of men. Hence the ultimatum of the Lord, "Ye must be born again." And those who are preaching the gospel which produces the new birth are doing the most important work in the world. If any service deserves the rating of "essential" in our troubled days, it is this.

DOES PIETY PRECEDE THEOLOGY

It is both astonishing and disconcerting how easily the human mind can be fooled by a popular slogan or a hoary-headed half-truth. That is one of the reasons why political spell-binders, smooth talking religionists, and dangerous dictators, win their way so easily over great masses of people. With uncritical minds, they pick up the catch-words of the hour and often follow them to disaster. There is nothing more greatly needed today than a suspicion of all popular slogans. Very few of them will bear the light of critical analysis.

Even well meaning preachers sometimes fall victims, especially those who like to keep something worth while on their church bulletin boards, and are in the habit of picking up ideas without careful thought. Recently on a church bulletin board I read the following: "Piety Precedes Theology." And I could not help wondering just how much careful thought the minister there had given to these words placed there presumably for the edification of the public.

Just what do these words assert? The term "theology," as most people know, means knowledge about God. "Piety" refers to right living. The verb "precedes" means to come before. Therefore, in saying that "Piety Precedes Theology," we can mean nothing else but that "right living comes before the knowledge of God." Is this true? Well, it may be said at once that any competent student of religion will recognize here the very heart of modernistic religion as defined by men like Dr. Fosdick. But even some of the followers of Fosdick are beginning to wonder whether it is true, if we may judge by their most recent writings.

Judged by the Word of God, the slogan is absolutely false. In the Bible, theology always precedes piety. The knowledge of God not only precedes the good life, but produces it. That is why in the book of Romans, which presents Christianity as a system of truth, the first 11 chapters are devoted to theological doctrine, while the discussion of the good life begins with chap. 12. That is why in the book of Ephesians, the first three chapters deal with doctrine, the last three with duty. Those who do not see this order either have not read the Word of God with care, or else they do not regard seriously what it teaches.

It is serious business to scatter poison around carelessly in public places, even if we do not know it is poison.

BOOING THE PRESIDENT

Sitting in a Chicago theater during the showing of a newsreel, a young man let out a belligerent "boo" when the face of the President of the United States appeared. The audience, in no mood for this sort of thing, fell upon the young man and pummeled him. He was then arrested, sentenced for disorderly conduct, and thrown into jail to serve out a $200 fine which he was unable to pay.

In ordinary times it is possible that the young man's action might not have been regarded as anything more than the exercise of his democratic rights. But these are not ordinary times, as the young man quickly discovered. In any event, while we may not agree always with the policies and actions of our rulers, it is never wise to treat them with open disrespect. There has already been too much of that sort of thing in American life. For example, some of the things that have been said and written about the former "old men" of the Supreme Court were even more reprehensible than the "boo" of the young man in Chicago. It is not easy to build up respect for governmental powers. It is easy to destroy it.

The Word of God demands that we show due respect to all rulers. Concerning this very thing, the Apostle Paul wrote, "Render therefore to all their dues: tribute to whom tribute is due; custom to whom custom, fear to whom fear; honor to whom honor" (Rom. 13:7).

And he wrote this when Nero sat in the seat of the Caesars. "To speak evil of dignities" was in Peter's day one of the marks of an ungodly man (2 Pet. 2:10). Because "the powers that be" have been ordained of God, the Christian must treat them with respect. This does not mean, of course, that we may not criticize the conduct of the men who hold the powers.

Attorneys representing the Chicago young man who booed did not attempt to defend his conduct but argued that his unfortunate action took place while he was "suffering from too many drinks" and did not realize what he was doing. And the attorneys might have added still another plea, namely, that President Roosevelt was responsible more than any other living man for making available the "too many drinks" to the young men of this country. During the former world war, our country was fortunate in having a government which was quickly the incalculable evil of alcoholic liquor in a critical time when men needed strong bodies and clear minds. It is quite generally admitted that the incredible collapse of France was due in no small measure to the alcoholic excesses of its people and rulers. Even if men have a "right" to drink, as Mr. Roosevelt once convinced a majority of the voters, this is one "right" which sensible and prudent men might well put away at least for the duration of the war. But such a course has not been even suggested by our present government.

Why the Brethren Church Needs Grace Seminary

By CHAS. H. ASHMAN

Member of the Seminary Board of Trustees and Pastor of The First Brethren Church of Whittier, Calif.

During the years of our ministry in The Brethren Church, we have seen a number of ministers enter the Brethren ministry. We have always been keenly interested in each one and have prayed for them. We have seen them come from Bible Institutes, from other denominations, from Brethren homes. We have become firm in a few settled convictions concerning our ministry.

Rev. Ashman

First, The Brethren Church is not just another "fundamental church." The Brethren Church is "fundamental" as opposed to "liberal" or "modernistic," but it presents, expects, and demands more faith in and obedience to the Bible than those included in the current name "fundamental." Therefore our ministers ought to be trained in a distinctively Brethren seminary. They must have this "plus" ordinary "fundamentalism" to be genuinely Brethren.

Second, The Brethren Church has a unique form of church government. Generally it is identical with others as congregational. But there are certain distinctive features about ours that gives it superior value. Every Brethren minister ought to be well informed and thoroughly trained in Brethren church government. This requires our own Brethren seminary.

Third, The Brethren Church has a distinctive background. This is what makes it so difficult for a minister of another denomination to take his place among us. He inevitably brings his former denominational background with him, and sometimes seeks to adjust the whole Brethren denomination to that instead of undergoing the revolution himself needed to fit into The Brethren background. To safeguard this heritage of the past demands our own Brethren seminary.

Fourth, The Brethren Church requires an efficiently trained ministry. We are not an emotional church, therefore it requires more than sincerity and inspiration to be successful in our ministry. It requires the fullest and best of instruction. We are a doctrinal church, therefore our ministers must be thoroughly indoctrinated and be prepared to present and promote the great doctrines of our faith. We are an evangelistic church, therefore our ministers must be thoroughly prepared to go forth as soul-winners. We are a missionary church, therefore our ministers must be thoroughly acquainted with the missionary program and challenge of the the Word of God. All these require a trained ministry which only our Brethren seminary can give.

Finally There is nothing more vital to our present or future as a national fellowship of Brethren churches than our Brethren seminary. Every minister entering our ministry ought to have the fullest degree of training in that seminary possible. Regardless of what they get elsewhere because of necessity, they ought to spend some time, as much as possible, all if possible in Grace Seminary. The Brethren Church believes in Grace Seminary, and that's the reason she is supporting it so nobly and will continue to do so.

The Deadly Parallel - -

By ALVA J. McCLAIN

Lately I have been reading once more certain sections in a book which I have learned to value very highly. Its title is "The Church and the Ministry in the Early Centuries," and the author is Dr. Thomas M. Lindsay, noted scholar and Principal of the Glasgow College of the United Free Church of Scotland. The book contains the 18th Series of The Cunningham Lectures, the author's aim being "to portray the organized life of the Christian Society as that was lived in the thousands of little communities formed by the proclamation of the gospel of our Lord during the first three centuries."

Dr. McClain

For those acquainted with the careful scholarship of Dr. Lindsay, it will hardly be necessary to say that the book is well worth reading, especially by those who value and desire to maintain the simplicity which characterized the organization of the early church. It is not my purpose in this brief article to attempt any review of the book. I only wish to quote a few paragraphs from the author's concluding chapter, and then offer a few comments. I had read these paragraphs some years ago without fully feeling the impact of their significance. But now, looking back over our recent experiences in the Brethren Church, and also observing the unmistakable and powerful trend represented by the Federal Council of Churches, the words of Dr. Lindsay suggest the repetition of history in a "deadly parallel." May I urge the Brethren to read and study with care the following paragraphs from his work; remembering that he writes of the church in the first three centuries.

"The close of the third century is the limit of our period; it saw the last stage in the growth of the church before it became absorbed within the administration of the Roman Empire.

"But the use of the word church is very misleading. There was no one all-embracing institution, visible to the eye, which could be called the church of Christ. What did exist was thousands of churches, more or less independent, associated in groups according to the divisions of the empire. The real bond of association was the willingness of the leaders of the individual Christian communities to consent to federation, for the terms of communion were never exactly settled. The federation was constantly liable to be dissolved. When the party in Rome which favored a stricter dealing with the lapsed formed a second and rival congregation and placed Novatian at the head of it as bishop, he and not Cornelius was in communion with many of the Eastern bishops and their churches. It was only the magnanimity of Cyprian which prevented the breaking up of the federation on the question of the re-baptism of heretics. Hundreds of the associated churches broke away from the confederation in what was commonly called the Donatist schism. Church is therefore scarcely the word to use; associated churches is the really accurate phrase.

"It should also be remembered that according to the view of Cyprian every bishop occupied a thoroughly independent position, and could accept or reject the conditions of federation and decline to be bound by the action of the associated churches. Examples of such bishops are to be found very late. But besides such sporadic cases, there were rival associations of churches outside what historians misleadingly call the Catholic Church of Christ. In some parts of the empire they were more numerous than the Catholics, and everywhere they were, to say the least of it, as sincere and as wholehearted Christians. Marcionites, Montanists, and many others, lived, worked and taught, following the precepts of Jesus in the way they understood them, and suffered for Christ in times of persecution as faithfully as those who called them heretics and schismatics. The state of matters was much like what exists in modern divided Christendom than many would have us believe.

"It is very doubtful whether the great body of associated churches would of itself have been able to overcome these nonconformists of the early centuries and stand forward as the one Christian church, including all or all but a very few Christian communities. That this state of things did actually come to pass was due to the constraints and persecutions of the imperial government, which never tolerated these Christians, and whose persecution was almost continuous after the Council of Nicea till the dissolution of the empire. It was the State which first gave a thoroughly visible unity to the associated churches. The imperial unity was the forerunner of the Papal. The State supported the associated churches by all the means in its power. It recognized the decisions of their councils and enforced them with civil pains and penalties; it also recognized the sentences of deposition and excommunication passed on members of the clergy or laity belonging to any one of the associated churches and followed them with civil disabilities. It did its best to destroy all Christianity outside of the associated churches, and largely succeeded. The rigor of the State persecution directed against Christian nonconformists in the fourth and fifth centuries has not received the attention due to it. The State confiscated their churches and ecclesiastical property (sometimes their private property also); it prohibited under penalty of proscription and death their meeting for public worship; it took from these nonconformist Christians the right to inherit or bequeath property by will; it banished their clergy; finally, it made raids upon them by its soldiery and sometimes butchered whole communities, as was the case with the Montanists in Phrygia and the Donatists in Africa. And this glaringly un-Christian mode of creating and vindicating the visible unity of the Catholic Church of Christ was vigorously encouraged by the leaders of the associated churches who had the recognition and support of the State.

"Safe within the fold of the State, they could speak of themselves as the one Catholic Church of Christ outside of which there was no salvation; they could apply to their own circle of churches all the metaphors and promises of Old Testament prophecy and all the sublime descriptions of the Epistle to the Ephesians, while their fellow-Christians who were outside State protection were being exterminated. Such strange methods do men think it right to use when they try in their haste to make clear to the coarser human vision the wondrous divine thought of the visible unity of the church of Christ." (pages 358-362).

From the above remarkable summary of the conditions existing in the churches of the first three centuries, I wish to point out several things which to the intelligent observer of our times will need little comment.

1. Even as late as the latter part of the third century there was no visible one and only Catholic Church, such as is declared dogmatically by the Roman Church, and which is often carelessly assumed by Protestant writers. Visibly there were only churches and associations of churches, a very striking similarity to modern Christendom and its divided condition.

2. We also find back there the congregational principle of independence very widespread. Churches entered or remained outside the various associations as they chose in large measure, in spite of the tendency toward central authority and away from primitive congregational freedom.

3. We note that one federation of churches finally grew large and strong enough to get itself recognized by the Roman State.

4. Once recognized by the State, this federation of church which centered at Rome, in the interest of an outward and visible unity of the church, began to bring pressure upon outside churches and other associations to bring them into the one federation.

5. Finally, having come to regard the visible and organized unity of the church as essential to the welfare of Christianity, the central federation took the next logical step of invoking the power of the State against the churches which stood outside and declined to conform.

* * * *

The tendencies toward what is called the "Reunion of Christendom" are very powerful today. Protestant believers are acquainted with the activities of the Federal Council of Churches. On every hand there is a demand that some arrangement be consummated in the near future so that when the present war is ended, the "church" will be able to speak with one voice in the settlement of human affairs. And the Pope of Rome is already laying down the social and economic principles upon which the final peace shall be based. Recognizing the power of the Papal voice, President Roosevelt sent Myron C. Taylor as his personal representative to the Papal court, ostensibly in the interest of world peace. In the 1941 Yearbook of American Churches, a prominent Catholic editor lists this appointment first among the important activities of the Roman Church. And he noted the astonishing fact that "the executive committee of the Federal Council of Churches indorsed Mr. Taylor's appointment." Coming closer home, the Brethren should recall that at its latest general conference the Church of the Brethren silenced the last futile protests within its membership by voting itself into the Federal Council. And the Ashland group of churches at their most recent general conference voted to revive the defunct report of the Committee of Ten which recommended eventual union of The Brethren Church with the Church of the Brethren. All these events may be widely separated in space and time, but they all point in one direction. And the pity is that to many sincere men it seems to be the right direction.

PROMOTED TO GLORY

"LOOSED-AWAY-UPWARD TO BE WITH CHRIST"

ROYER, MOSES, at the grand old age of 83 years, was "loosed-away-upward" to be with Christ early last Thursday morning. He departed for the heavenly ascent from the home of his daughter, Mrs. Clifford S. Wall, of our city.

Moses Royer accepted Christ as his Savior when 20 years of age, and united with the Brethren Church at Lanark, Ill. Later, he moved to Falls City, Neb., and was elected to the deaconship in the church, an office he exercised with honor all his life. The pastor recalls Brother and Sister Royer when but a little child of four years. Moses Royer was an intimate and faithful friend of the pastor's father for many, many years in the Master's service. At the time of "the division" and the reorganization of The Brethren Church in 1883, Moses Royer took his stand with the socalled "Progressive" wing of the church, and hence was really a charter member of the Brethren denomination.

In the year 1920, Brother and Sister Royer and family came to Long Beach, and placed their letters in our congregation here. Mrs. Royer went to be with her Lord on Mar. 27, 1922. She, as her husband, was on our Board of Deacons. His son, Francis, together with his wife, was also later elected to our Board of Deacons. Francis and his wife now live in Morrill, Kan., and are loved and honored as active and faithful servants in the church. Between Sept. 1933 and Jan. 1939, Bro. Royer held his membership in the church at Morrill, Kan., living there for most of that time with his son. But when he returned to Long Beach, his letter came back with him, as it should.

The pastor wishes to testify that Moses Royer lived one of the most exemplary Christian lives he has ever known. He always did what he could in the service of his Lord and never complained, and was the last person to find fault with his co-workers. He dearly loved his Lord "unto the end." Many others—those who knew him best—will testify that he possessed one of the sweetest dispositions they have ever known. They will testify that he was never known to have lost his temper. The memory of his godly life will live in the hearts of those who are left behind. He will be missed—greatly missed.

The funeral service was conducted Nov. 10 by Dr. L. S. Bauman. The earthly house he occupied returned to Mother Earth who loaned it for his earthly habitation, at the Sunnyside Cemetery, where so many of those loved and honored in the service of God at the First Brethren Church of Long Beach have had their bodies laid to await the resurrection day.

Our Christian Endeavor Pledge

MRS. PHILLIP J. SIMMONS, Director Prayer Meeting, Fremont, O.

"TRUSTING IN THE LORD JESUS CHRIST FOR STRENGTH . . . I promise Him that I will strive to do whatever He would like to have me do; that I will make it the rule of my life to pray and to read the Bible every day, and to support my own church in every way, especially by attending all her regular Sunday and mid-week services, unless prevented by some reason which I can conscientiously give to my Savior, and that just so far as I know, throughout my whole life, I will endeavor to lead a Christian life.

AS AN ACTIVE MEMBER . . . I promise to be true to all my duties, to be present at and to take some part, aside from singing, in every Christian Endeavor prayer meeting, unless hindered by some reason which I can conscientiously give to my Lord and Master. If obliged to be absent from the monthly consecration meetings of the society, I will, if possible, send at least a verse of Scripture to be read in response to my name at the roll call."

A COVENANT WITH "IFS"

Years ago, a young Hebrew made a strange covenant with God. The setting and reason for this covenant is found in Gen. 28. We read that "Jacob vowed a vow, saying, 'If God will be with me, and will keep me in this way that I go, and will give me bread to eat, and raiment to put on, so that I come again to my father's house in peace; then shall the Lord be my God. And this stone, which I have set for a pillar, shall be God's house: and of all that thou shalt give me I will surely give the tenth unto thee'" (Gen. 28:20-22).

Now this was good, but very Jacob-like. Any young person of the world would gladly make such a bargain or covenant. Such a covenant costs little, for it is a "give me, give me, Lord" bargain—no duty, no yielding, no sacrifice.

THE GOD OF THIS COVENANT

Two people are necessary in making a covenant, of course. Let us look at the other One involved in Jacob's covenant. Who was He? None other than the God of all grace. Was He faithful to His promises? Yes. 20 years after Jacob made this covenant at Bethel he testifies thusly: "With my staff I passed over this Jordan, and now I am become two bands" (Gen. 32:10). God truly fulfilled His promises.

OUR COVENANT

How different our Christian Endeavor covenant with our Lord begins. Notice, instead of the "if," our covenant indicates that we are "trusting in the Lord Jesus Christ for strength" to fulfill our part of the covenant. "Ye are not your own; ye are bought with a price: glorify God in your body and in your spirit, which are God's (I Cor. 6:19,20). Therefore "present your body a living sacrifice unto God" (Rom. 12:1).

In what ways may a Christian Endeavor member demonstrate that he has done this?

(1) By doing whatever He would have him do.
(2) By praying and reading the Bible every day.
(3) By supporting his church in every way, especially by attending all regular Sunday and mid-week services.
(4) By consistently leading a Christian life.
(5) By being true to all his duties.
(6) By being present at and by taking some part, aside from singing, in every Christian Endeavor prayer meeting.

THE GOD OF OUR COVENANT

Some make this covenant carelessly with the thought in mind that it is a covenant with the Christian Endeavor society. Others make this covenant without intending to keep each phase of it. Let us remember that this covenant is a covenant with our Lord: it reads: "I promise Him that. . . " Even as Jacob made his covenant with God, so do we. And has God changed? No, He is changeless. He is the God of all grace today even as He was in Jacob's time, almost 4000 years ago.

Let us, therefore, trust in the Lord Jesus Christ for strength that we may keep this Christian Endeavor covenant. He has told us, "My grace is sufficient for thee: my strength is made perfect in weakness" (II Cor. 12:9). "Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need" (Heb. 4:16).

Participation

RUTH A. McCLAIN

Director Lookout Dept., National C.E., Los Angeles, Calif.

We hear and read today so much about making wise investments. Surely we must realize as never before the uncertainty and insecurity of temporal things, and with this realization should come the determination to invest our money, time, and lives, in the Lord's service as good and faithful stewards.

According to the teaching in the parable of the talents, found in Matt. 25, rewards are based upon one thing—faithful service given for God's glory.

Our Christian Endeavor societies afford an opportunity for participation in active service for our Lord and Savior, and should challenge us to give our best. "And whatsoever ye do, do it heartily as to the Lord, and not unto men" (Col. 3:23).

Participation becomes real and vital only as we are faithful in our presence, in our prayers, in our pledge and in our daily practice of living the Christian life.

Regularity of attendance cannot be over-estimated, and only when we have a reason that we could give to the Lord Himself, should we permit ourselves to be absent from the regular church services. In other words, let's take the Lord's business as seriously as we do our own business. We cannot expect to interest outsiders and win them for the Lord if our own members attend irregularily. Support the work with your presence.

We only go forward as we advance upon our knees, and so prayer must have its place in the society and in the lives of the members. Prayer will help to solve problems, will give victory over sins in our lives, will keep us from being discouraged, will put a song on our lips, will bring peace and calm to troubled hearts and will help to win that lost friend to the Lord. Pray and keep on praying. Remember the quiet hour.

God has also a right to the monetary gifts He has given us; and if He doesn't have our pocket books, I doubt if He has our hearts. How about the tithe? How many Christian Endeavor members are tithers? It's worth while to find out and to encourage the right use of our money. Tithing will solve all financial problems.

Our lives should daily and hourly be a testimony to those about us, as the world reads our lives, not the Bible. Do we always give that testimony when afforded an opportunity? Do we take part in the activities of our society, or do these things become a "weariness" to us? These activities may vary in different societies, but might include: work in missions, singing for the sick, leading meetings, a regular visitation program, definite soul winning, accepting responsibilities as officers, participation in social activities, definite Bible study, etc. Rom. 12:1: "presenting our bodies a living sacrifice" might be a daily slogan. Let us practice our Christian life every minute of the day, and of course this is only possible after we have known Christ, not only as Savior but as the Master of our lives.

Fellowship

By MIRIAM GILBERT, Social Dept., Washington, D. C.

The Word of God has much to say about fellowship. Jesus by His example placed His approval on fellowship in its various phases.

Fellowship with God in Christ should have first place in our lives. This is essential if we are to be all we should be in Christ Jesus. Our Lord had the need of fellowship with God! how much more we need this fellowship! How are we to do the will of God if we have no contact with Him? A God Who knew our needs long before we did, provided a means of contact with Him. He first of all gave His Son, Who made it possible for us to come to the Father; and then He gave His Word that He might speak to us through it; and then He provided prayer that we might speak to Him. When we have that true fellowship that God means for us to have, we have a joy and peace that nothing can take away.

Then there is the fellowship of Christians. Jesus loved to fellowship with Christians during his earthly ministry. Often He found time to slip away for a visit with His friends. So we too need this fellowship with Christians who love the same Lord. Christian Endeavor affords a wonderful opportunity for just such fellowship.

Then also we can influence the unsaved by our happy genuine Christian fellowship. Many a soul has come to the Lord when he saw Christ manifested in the lives of Christians, when he saw that Christians can have a good time and be truly happy. Unsaved friends should be invited to our socials that they might come and enjoy the good things that the Christians enjoy. I heard only recently of a missionary in Europe who held in her room what she called Gospel Teas. Here she would invite unsaved friends; and when they gathered around the table they would discuss the way of salvation, and many a soul in that far away land came to the Lord during that fellowship hour. So our socials should not only be a time of fellowship and good times, but a time when the Lord can be with us and be made known.

We can also have fellowship with the poor and needy. Many souls have been brought to the Lord just because some Christian has been willing to give of his substance to help them along in their hour of need, just because some Christian has been willing to stop and bring a word of comfort and cheer in their hour of need.

So let us be up and busy for the Lord in these latter days, doing everything that He might be exalted and that souls might be brought into the kingdom.

The Christian Grace of Stewardship

By E. F. PINE, Treasurer National C. E. Union, Juniata, Altoona, Pa.

All Brethren Christian Endeavorers believe that they have been saved by the grace of God, and that without merit or effort. Grace sufficient to forgive all our sin is ours. And because grace has played the all-important role of saving us, our Lord requests of us that since we have been saved, it would be profitable for us and pleasing to Him if we would continue to grow in grace and in the knowledge of the Lord Jesus. Listed among the graces of the devoted Christian life is that of stewardship, or more particularly here listed as "giving." In II Cor. 8:7 we read, "Therefore as ye abound in everything, in faith, and utterance, and knowledge, and in all diligence, and in your love to us, see that ye abound in this grace also." By looking to the preceding verse we note that the teaching was about giving. In all these graces we are to share, but of the last, giving, we are admonished to abound. How different our Christian Endeavor Societies would be, yes, how different all of our churches would be, if they would abound in this grace also.

Rev. Pine

We also find, from an examination of the passage, that stewardship involves several separate acts. We would not want to push into the background the dominent idea that comes to nearly all that consider the matter at all, namely giving of our financial means, but there are other important considerations of equal value. There is the giving of ourselves, the stewardship of life. A word of praise is here offered by the beloved apostle because these people had first given of their own life to the Lord, and then of their material gifts; this is the proper order.

It is also important to look first at the indisputable fact that the Bible teaches the ownership of all things by our God. This is an essential acknowledgment on our part before we will be willing to recognize His rightful claim to a portion. Abram revealed the truth of our statement in his contact with the King of Salem, "And Abram said to the king of Sodom, I have lift up mine hand unto the Lord, the most high God, the possessor of heaven and earth." All that is in heaven and all that is on the earth belongs to Him. Also the Psalmist gives us an inspired acknowledgment, "The earth is the Lord's, and the fullness thereof; the world, and they that dwell therein." Therefore, we conclude that God owns all things, and so far as we are able to determine. He has never passed on the title to anyone else. Among these many possessions of His is man, and all that man possesses: they are God's. When we reach this conclusion, we are then ready to present the claims of God to a portion of that which He is allowing us to tend for Him. It is all His, we are but caretakers of His possessions. A portion of all things is to be separated for Him. The proportion of this separated portion is common knowledge, and not to be less than the tithe, or one-tenth. This is not the maximum but the minimum. We are just beginning when we reach this goal, but it seems to be a very hard place for many to find.

That the teaching of stewardship is not confined to finances only is clearly revealed. For the Corinthians were first admonished to give themselves to the Lord. God does not want the financial grace of giving to precede the stewardship of life. It is not that God must have our money or else He cannot function, but that He wants us to receive the definite blessing and growth in grace that accompanies our giving. This blessing and growth in grace cannot be bestowed where there has been no birth of grace in the life of the contributor. God wants you first of all; and then the realization that all belongs to God, and you are sharing not your own things but God's possessions, will dawn upon you. The gift without the giver is worthless. God would far rather have the giver without a gift, than to have the richest gift that man can bring without the heart of the giver. Let us not mistake the teaching; there is no blessing promised to anyone making a financial gift to God unless there accompanies it the gift of that life in dedication to Him.

Realizing that our life is a stewardship—that is, that we receive it not as an attainment of our own, but as a bestowal of God—we ought to regulate and order that life in keeping with His desires and wishes. God has a desire for every life, He wants a definite portion of your time, a share of your ability to be expended in His service, and all that touches your life to be so regulated that He will share in it.

What a different church ours would be if all would realize that our time belongs to Him, and that such time should be spent in the service of our Lord. Much time that is now spent either in self-indulgence or sinful practices would be eliminated. For some God expects full life surrender for full time service. To many this call has come only to be set aside or never heard, but God still wants your time. We are hearing just now a call to industry to go on a seven-day week for the production of vital war necessities. To the Christian God is issuing a call for the same action, a seven day week for Christians. We have been so used to giving God the left-overs of our time; but He wants a definite portion of it. Why not give Him all of our time? Spend time between Sundays that formerly was spent for self—spend it now for Him!

God wants a share of our abilities. We give the devil first claim on the things that we can excel in. Why not reverse the order and give God the best that we have, and let the enemy get along any way that he can? If the cause of Christ is worth our belonging to, it is worth every ounce of our enthusiastic energy. Your voice, your musical talent, your ability to teach, your aid in assisting those who lead, why not lend them to the Lord?

Now, finally, let me assure you that God does need your stewardship of money. God's work is carried on by the lives that have been touched with the grace of giving. In Christian Endeavor Societies the world over, there exists a fertile place to learn to share with God. The need for such is increasing hourly. We ought to share with Christ to save the lives of men, or we will soon be forced to share for bullets with which to destroy the lives of men. The impelling motive must not be to escape other levies, but that we realize we are partners with Christ and that He asks for a loving token to be given Him. A great blessing is promised to those who learn to give to the cause of Christ. How much of this blessing have you claimed as your own? Let's rally to the cause of Christ and His church and give while we may!

Loyalty to the Church

By GLENN E. MILLER

Vice President National C.E. Union, Whittier, Calif.

Only one life to live—that, my dear friends, is the sum total of our earthly existence; yet it determines our eternal destiny. Only one life to live—and that life determines eternity for you and perhaps another. "Only one life, 'twill soon be past; only what's done for Christ will last." Yes, it's only what's done for Christ and the church that is going to count for eternity. As we think of the subject, 'Our Loyalty to the Church', let us never forget that it is our loyalty to Christ that really counts, for if we are loyal to Him, it will naturally follow that we will be loyal to His church.

What does loyalty to the church mean? It means loyalty to Christ first of all—a life that is fully yielded and dedicated to the Master Architect Who has a plan for every life, to the One Who has never planned a failure. A life that is Christ's will be a life that is busy in the church. I cannot stress too much the importance of a Christian's loyalty to the church, its organizations, and its activities. Yes, it means full time attendance at its every service, a real participation in its Christian Endeavor, a faithful interest in its Sunday School, a regular attendance at its every prayer service, and a willing part in its soulwinning activities.

What can the church do for you? Christ and the church can stir your very soul, they can become the guiding factors of your life. Together they can stir the fires of revival within your heart, and warm that life of yours to the point that you will really become an Ambassador for Jesus Christ, giving out His wonderful plan of salvation to a world darkened with sin. Yes, today we as Christians need to realize as never before that we are living in the most awful, the most terrible time that has ever been known; yet to the Christian it is the grandest time in all world history because of the imminent return of our blessed Savior. What a real responsibility that places upon us—millions in sin, without a Savior, doomed to eternal death; and we are the only ones who can tell them about Christ. The church as the world knows it has tragically failed in this task; but we as Christian Endeavorers in Christ can not, we dare not fail in this great commission to go and preach the gospel to all the world.

As I sit at my desk writing this article at the close of the first week of America's entry into the war, and I look back upon a week of Southern California's buildings blacked out because of air raid warnings, of everyone talking war, and then think of the airplane plants, the rich oil fields, the large industries within five minutes driving time of my home, I can say that things look serious. But I want to say with all my heart, and with all the emphasis I can place in print, that what America needs today is not Christians talking about the war or its consequences, but Christians telling the world about a living Christ Who today can save men and women from sin, make them acceptable before God, and give them the promise of eternal life.

God's church, through His ministers and teachers, can teach you the wonderful truths of His blessed book. No one can get through the radio what he could get if he were willing to go into God's house itself to learn about Him. If you are too busy to attend the Lord's services in His house and learn from His Word, then you are busier than Almighty God ever intended man to be. If that be so, you had better stop and let something go. The reason some of us Christians have so much sin in our hearts is because we have so little of the Word of God in them. Let us not forget God's house and God's people, remembering that the thing called Christian fellowship is the sweetest thing in all this world. Whenever His house is open and your chair is not filled, there is sorrow because He misses you and His people miss you. Your own church and its services should come first.

What can you do for the church? First you can wholly dedicate that life of yours to Jesus Christ and His church, laying your all on the altar of service for Him. God has a plan for every life—if you refuse the plan there is no other. With dedication there comes a willingness to assume leadership, a desire to be used within the church and without. Dedication also entails the yielding of your time, your belongings, and your money. One of the biggest jobs in the church is for you to pray, for every prayer is a prophecy if really meant. Let us ever be so close to Him that we can touch His throne of grace anytime or anywhere. As we come to the most important part of it all, I want to present to you the fact that you can and should be a soul winner for Christ and the church. That's the reason He left you here after He saved you. We are His mouthpiece to tell others about Himself.

Now, what will be the results for eternity? There will be a crown awaiting the one who has been loyal to Christ and the church. No man in Christ Jesus is ever going to wear a crown unless he earns one; but to you who have been faithful, there will be crowns to cast at His feet as we spend those ceaseless, unending ages of eternity in untiring adoration to our Savior and King.

"Training"

By LEO POLMAN

Executive Secretary National C.E. Union

Matt. 4:19: "Follow me and I will make you fishers of men."

Rev. Polman

Every Christian Endeavor who is truly desirous of endeavoring for Christ and His church will want to train for Christian service. The other day I read a magazine advertisement which illustrated two groups of men, one in the army service, the other at a desk. The caption read, "The Army Trains Its Men—Are You Training?" This caused me to ask, What are we as Christians doing when it comes to training for the Lord's service?

No Christian Endeavorer can truly be efficient in his or her work for the Lord without training. Whatever your part may be in the Christian Endeavor society, that part will be done with more ease and effect if you will give yourself to some training for your specific task assigned.

With few exceptions, most of the churches' leaders, teachers, preachers, and workers, have had their early training in some Christian Endeavor Society or similar organization. This being true, then we who are to take their place some of these days, need to be in training for our tasks that will be handed over to us.

There is a need for preparation among our young people today. Be prepared. Know your Bible. Read everything that pertains to the particular department to which you have been elected in your C.E. society.

Christ is our example. He prepared for His God-given task. Know Him that you might be able to make Him known to others. Follow Him and He will train you for His service. He will make you fishers of men, and this is the task of every Christian Endeavorer.

The Expressed and Accepted Purpose of Christian Endeavor

NORMAN UPHOUSE, News Editor, Dayton, O.

Some things cannot be regarded in the real purpose of C.E., certainly not the following: to preach world peace; to be a reform society; to unite efforts of all churches regardless of creed; to provide something for youth to do.

Rev. Uphouse

An organized effort designed to lead young people to Christ is the real purpose of C.E. This is the important thing. The other things have their places; and most of them are worthy, but incidental.

World C.E. has fallen into the error of presumption in respect to peace.

Reforms are desirable. Every Christian person would welcome and support proper reform movements. However, we realize that the source of evil must be corrected before we can have confidence in a reformer or reform movement.

There is a wrong teaching about unity and fellowship which we need to know. We simply dare not sacrifice honest convictions of truth for fellowship. The Bible teaches plainly that we should separate ourselves from worldliness and evil. We want to work and worship with others who love the Lord. Therefore, desirable fellowship must be with Christians. Creed has a lot to do with fellowship. People who have beliefs and ideas that are unscriptural do not make proper friends for Christian Endeavorers.

Some think you must keep young people busy to keep them interested in Christian things. I do not think it works that way. Interest must come another way, and activity will surely follow. One becomes interested in Christian work when one is genuinely converted. After conversion we aim to supplant some of the old activities for new ones decidedly Christian.

This brings us back to the real purpose of C.E., "To know Christ and to make Him known to others." This is personal work known as soul winning.

Endeavorers, the time is here to speak for the Lord. How long we shall be here we do not know. We do know that the coming of the Lord is near, and what we plan to do we must do quickly!

The double-hinged door of Jno. 10:9. We "enter in" for safety. We "go out" for service.

The devil's gospel—"Do." God's gospel—"It is finished." (Jno. 19:30).

Remember Christ is the Way (Follow Him); the Truth (Learn of Him); the Life (Abide in Him).

TYPICAL OF MANY OTHERS THAT COME TO OUR DESK

Brethren in Christ:

Just impossible to get along without the Herald. Has been such a blessing in the dark hours when shut in by a long, serious illness. When it came I seldom layed it down until I had read it through. I find it excels all other church papers I have been privileged to read, not because I am of the Brethren faith, but because it is full of spiritual help and uplift and draws us closer to Him for Whom we are looking.

Your sister in His service,

I BELIEVE THAT CHRIST DIED FOR OUR SINS

By R. E. GINGRICH

Ellet, Ohio

In the cross of Christ I glory,
Towering o'er the wrecks of time;
All the light of sacred story,
Gathers round its head sublime.

It must have been such sentiment as that expressed in this verse penned by John Bowring that prompted the apostle Paul to give utterance to that memorable prayer: "But God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, by Whom the world is crucified unto me, and I unto the world" (Gal. 6:14). The one central theme of holy Scripture from cover to cover is that Christ died for our sins. The death of Christ is the substance of the ceremonies and rituals of ancient Hebrew worship. The death of Christ is the subject of the most familiar prophetical utterances of holy Writ. The death of Christ is the first truth in the teaching of the divinely commissioned apostles, for, said the apostle Paul: "For I delivered unto you first of all that which I also received, how that Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures . . . " (1 Cor. 15:3). The death of Christ is the heart of the sacraments perpetuated by the church by the authority of Christ for over nineteen centuries, even as Paul declared: "For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do shew the Lord's death till He come" (1 Cor. 11:26 with v. 23). The death of Christ is the theme of the antiphonal anthem sung by the blood-washed throng and the angelic chorus in heaven, as set forth in Revelation 5:8-12. The death of Christ is the guarantee of every blessing to the child of God today, even as it is written: "He that spared not his own Son, but delivered Him up for us all, how shall He not with Him also freely give us all things?" (Rom. 8:32). The death of Christ has been the theme of the redeemed of the Lord throughout the centuries of human history. Fanny Crosby, the blind song writer of saintly fame, expressed this universal sentiment of blood-washed saints when she wrote:

Redeemed, how I love to proclaim it!
Redeemed by the blood of the Lamb;
Redeemed through His infinite mercy,
His child, and forever I am.

The death of Christ will be remembered as an everlasting monument to God's grace and love in the eternal state. In the Patmos vision John saw the Lamb of God as the prominent figure in the eternal city, the New Jerusalem. Every object, person, and act in that state is set forth in relation to the Lamb (Rev. 21-22). That name, ascribed to Christ, is symbolical of his death upon the cross. Even as Sir Robert Anderson declared: "The cross of Christ is the moral and spiritual center of the universe. An eternity past knew no other future, and an eternity future will know no other past."

In persuing the general theme of these studies, "What I Believe, and Why?" we approach the subject of the death of Christ with deep humility and profound appreciation. May the Spirit of the living God give us keen discernment as we search the Word of God in unfolding this study.

Our investigation in this particular study will be confined to the necessity for the death of Christ. Why did Christ die upon the cross? Upon His official rejection by the Jewish authorities from being King of the Jews, Jesus declared that He must go unto Jerusalem, and suffer many things of the elders and chief priests and scribes, and be killed, and be raised again the third day (Matt. 16:21). The word translated "must" in this passage is the strongest Greek word expressing necessity that could have been used. Jesus Christ had to go to Jerusalem and die. It was an absolute necessity. But why was this necessity laid upon Him? Was it because He simply accepted the common lot of all men, in that it is appointed unto men once to die (Heb. 9:27)? We are convinced that it could not have been thus. Was it because He sensed the growing opposition of the Jews, and felt that He could not escape their deadly hatred of Him? Not so, for said He upon one occasion: "No man taketh it (His life) from me, but I lay it down of Myself" (John 10:18). Why, then, did our precious Lord die upon that cruel instrument of barbaric torture? Why was it necessary for him to lay down His life as He did?

It was necessary for Christ to die on the cross in order that He might share His own life with sinful men. While this is not the only reason for His death, we believe that every other reason centers in the above purpose—that He might share His life with sinful men. Examine with me this purpose as set forth in John 3:14-15, where we read: "And as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of Man be lifted up: that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have eternal life." Why was the serpent lifted up in the wilderness? Because Israel had sinned, and was under the curse of sin. Without that serpent upon the tree, Israel had perished. Why was Christ lifted up upon the tree? Because man had sinned, and was under the curse of sin, which is death. Without that Son of Man upon the tree (Gal. 3:13) humanity had utterly perished in its sin. But he who believeth in Him shall not perish, but shall have eternal life. Israel, smitten with the curse of his sin, looked upon that brazen serpent, and lived. Man, smitten with the curse of his sin, looks upon that uplifted Christ thru faith, and receives the gift of eternal life. Yes, it is just as simple as that. You may look and live; you may refuse to look, and die in your sins.

"Look and live" . . . my brother, live, live, live,
Look to Jesus now and live,
'Tis recorded in His Word, Hallelujah!
It is only that you "look and live."

My House Shall Be Called The House Of Prayer

By DR. V. C. Kelford

In John 2:16 we read,

"Take these things hence; make not my Father's house an house of merchandise."

Dr. Kelford

Here we have the Lord cleansing the temple and forbidding that it should be used for merchandising purposes. From this Scripture, many of God's children have taken the idea that to sell books pertaining to the gospel or the Bible is a parallel case to that for which the Lord rebuked these temple desecrators.

However we may be affected by the teaching, we must have the Lord's mind in the matter, even though it explodes some of our current notions and upsets our practices; but to arrive at the true interpretation of this Scripture we must find what is the temple of today. Is it the house in which we worship? If so, then what is meant by Acts 7:48,

"Howbeit the Most High dwelleth not in temples made with hands . . . "?

Or again in I Cor. 3:16,

"Know ye not that ye are the TEMPLE of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you?"

In the dispensation of grace, while it is true that we are admonished not to forsake the assembling of ourselves together, yet the place in which we assemble is not the antitype of the Old Testament temple, but rather as Paul puts it,

"We are God's temples."

So then, when Christ cleansed the temple of his day, he made no reference to the place of worship as we know it at this time, but the application is rather to the believer's body itself, or as we find in Rom. 12:1,

"I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God . . . "

It is this "holy" use of the body of the believer that Christ had in mind, and to make it otherwise puts the believer back under the old Jewish order. Wherefore we read in Heb. 10:

"For the law, having a shadow of good things to come . . . " The temple, in all its implications, here merely shadows Christ indwelling the believer, the substance or the antitype.

All of this does not mean that the place of worship as we know it today should be used for any purpose whatsoever. One cannot conceive of a reverent atmosphere being generated by some of the modern social functions so prevalent in churches today. This is entirely different from the sale of literature which makes clear and glorifies the Word of God.

What difference could there be between a man giving a sermon from the pulpit and one of his hearers making a contribution to his support through the medium of the offering plate, and taking that same sermon from the book table and contributing to its publication through the price of the book?

Again we say we would by no means advocate the use of our church buildings for anything that would hinder or grieve the Holy Spirit. And this would preclude the use of the church as a medium for the raising of money by suppers, sales, etc., etc. But the propagation of the gospel by any means whatsoever, so long as it is consistent with the teaching of God's Word, is perfectly in order.

ATTENTION+ACTION

Who? All teachers in our Sunday School, all who who have ever been called to substitute—in fact we want all who wish to be of real service to the Lord in our Bible School and church to register today for teachers training class to begin tomorrow evening at 7:30, at the parsonage.

The above item appeared in the Martinsburg, Pa., Church bulletin, of which church Bro. Robert Miller is pastor; and was accompanied by the following insert, which we felt was worth printing:

YOU GO ON SUNDAY TO YOUR—

CLASS, but how do you go? Do you go with your lesson well-prepared and a sense of having something worthwhile to give the class? Or do you go hounded by fear that there won't be time during the singing to read hurriedly the verses on the lesson leaflet?

If the Gallup people went to work on the matter, they'd probably find that there are more cases of indigestion on Sunday morning than on any other day of the week. For that's the time when most Sunday School teachers grab their quarterlies and lay them down beside the breakfast coffee, feeling fairly certain that if they simply manage one reading of the lesson, they'll be 'way out in front of everyone else in their classes.

And of course they're right. Few people with the latest magazines around brush up on their Sunday School lessons any more. They sit like vapid vacuums in class, reading a verse apiece and calling the lesson thereby "gone over;" or they absorb listlessly the scanty comments of the teacher.

If the comments were not so scanty and were better founded, some of the problems of disinterest would be solved. Few people would think of trying to teach a high school class in Science or English Literature if they had gone through no training themselves in such courses. And yet those people shoulder carelessly the problem of bringing His Word—the greatest, most important subjects ever taught—to boys and girls and adults.

Fifteen minutes on Saturday night, or a half-hour in bed on Sunday morning, are poor allotments of time for the preparation of a lesson. It is easy to "spot" the presentation of a lesson that has been prepared in that time. It rambles, it falls flat, it piques no interest, holds no challenge, commands no attention. And it makes the assembly bell seem hours in coming.

All experts agree that the best time to begin preparation of next Sunday's lesson is the week before! It is to meet this need not only in our own Sunday School, but in our whole community, that we have definitely felt led of the Lord to begin a Teacher's Training Class tomorrow evening. This class will feature the study and presentation of the International Uniform Sunday School Lessons used in practically every denomination. Modern pedagogical methods will be pointed out, problems will be given special attention, a working outline will be presented each week, and adequate opportunity for questions will be given.

All of this takes time: Of course it does—more than 15 minutes on Saturday night, or twice that much Sunday morning. But the teacher who accepts a class with the idea that it will not take any time, plans at the outset, consciously or unconsciously, to cheat! Besides, it's a pretty safe guess that folks willing to use the time can find it!

Jesus warned against false prophets and teachers. Teaching only half the truth, in unstudied, ill-prepared fashion, is one method of false teaching! You go on Sunday to your class. HOW do you go? As a disciple, a learner versed in His Word, or as a time-keeper through the Bible class period?

News from Brethren CHURCHES

ADULTS, DAYTON, OHIO

The Dayton church can again testify to the fact that our Lord answers prayer, for it has been the prayer of many of our people for some time that we might have a C.E. Society for adults. Now the Lord has seen fit to answer that prayer by giving us an adult society of earnest, sincere Christian workers, who are truly endeavoring to let their lives tell for Jesus Christ.

The last Sunday of the quarter completed our first two months of work and fellowship together. During this time we, of course, had to take time to lay the foundation of our work by electing officers, laying plans ,etc. We chose the four department plan as our plan of operation, and have the directors and committees all chosen and operating smoothly.

There has been more accomplished, however, than just laying the foundation. We have had some splendid inspirational and soul-stirring meetings composed of testimonies and prayers by our people, special music, discussions, Bible lessons, and outside speakers. Perhaps the most outstanding meeting which we have had to date was our first home missions meeting, led by Mrs. Roy Patterson. It was our privilege to have with us that evening Rev. Sewell Landrum of Clayhole, Ky., and Rev. Norman Uphouse of North Riverdale, Dayton, who told us of some of their experiences in home mission work. Inasmuch as we Dayton folks are so vitally interested in both of these mission points, the messages proved both educational and inspirational. In addition we heard of the far-reaching program of the Council when Mr. Roy Patterson, president of The Brethren Home Missions Council, presented a challenge to us who were not on the field. Our people were interested in missions before this meeting, but I know their interest was deepened because of our fellowship together that night.

What lies ahead of us as a society we don't know now, but this one thing is certain: as long as our membership continues to look to the Lord in prayer in behalf of this work, we know the Lord will continue to bless us and will make us a channel of blessing to others.

Mrs. Phyllis Towner.

YOUNG PEOPLE, LOS ANGELES, CALIF.

The young people of the 2d Brethren Church of Los Angeles, Calif, have been for the past several years very active in our Lord's service. We have, at the present time several of our group in attendance at Grace Seminary, and many others in schools here preparing for full time service. Surely the Lord has been more than gracious in sending us consecrated lives to do His work among us.

To describe our work I'll relate just one week of our activities. Of course, you know our sponsor is Miss Ruth McClain, and the Lord has marvelously used her in the lives of us all.

Dear diary: Mar. 9. Nothing really happened today. Am staying home tonight. I almost feel sorry for the kids that go to evening school at Bible Institute, 'cause they don't even get one night a week to recover. No more time for chatter now—I'm going to bed.

Tuesday, 10. Just returned from holding services at the San Pedro Rescue Mission. Sometimes I wish we went more than once a month, for the Lord so wondrously answers our prayers on behalf of those poor broken lives and souls. Tonight 17 men received our invitation to accept our Christ and walk with Him. It just makes me happy all over to see how our young people of just college age are really interested in seeing souls born into the kingdom of God.

Wednesday 11. O, am I tired! Prayer meeting and choir practice tonight. I sometimes think I should quit working so I could at least sleep during the day. Dr. Bauman was certainly good tonight He's been giving us a study in Romans, you know, and he just gets better and better. Then choir practice—and what a work-out! I sometimes wonder what would happen if our group ever went on strike, since about half the choir is from our age group. Who says young people aren't ready and willing to accept a challenge?

Thursday 12. Calling, as usual. There were six of us that went tonight. We called on the young people (unmarried) that attended our services last Sunday for the first time. You know, we've had ten new people in Sunday School class alone in the last month. Beyond a doubt this is the most successful way we have ever found to contact our new people, and now the whole church has set aside this night for visitation. We really feel quite smart, since we were the ones to originate the idea.

Friday "13," and not a bit unlucky. Tonight all of us girls went to a big district Sisterhood party. We haven't a society at our church at present, but if tonight is any indication, we will soon be boosting an up-and-coming organization.

Saturday 14. Finally we found a night open to have our installation banquet. We're starting on another six months with officers I believe the Lord chose for us; so of course we are looking forward to a time of real blessing and fruit-bearing. I do believe this was the nicest affair we have had—a wonderful speaker, rousing song service, and a time that really gave glory to our Lord.

Sunday 15. Sunday School, church, C.E. and church—a real time of feasting—and then a "sing." Our C.E. was a particular blessing to me since our leader spoke on prayer, and we had a time of wonderful communion with our heavenly Father.

But now another week is gone, and yet more important, a new week is beginning. I wonder what we will accomplish for our Lord in another seven days.

WHITTIER, CALIF.

Greetings, Brethren Christian Endeavorers, from those of like precious faith at Whittier, Calif. We are happy to be able to tell you about our Christian Endeavor work out here in sunny California. We have eight Christian Endeavor Societies in the church. It seems like a lot, but we could not get along with any less. Only this year we organized a Young Married People's Society up to 30 years of age. The primary, Junior, and Junior High groups function with an adult as the teacher. The High School operates under their own leadership with a young married couple as an advisor. The other societies: Young People, Young Married, Ambassadors (30 to 40 years), and Adults, carry on with their own elected officers. There is a General Christian Endeavor Superintendent who is elected annually by the church, who is responsible for all societies.

All groups except the two youngest groups meet from 6:15 to 6:30 o'clock for pre-prayer in their own rooms. Then the usual custom is to have 15 minutes of rousing chorus and song service, after which follows the announcements and offering. Until seven o'clock the time is taken up by a devotional period of praise, prayer, and musical special numbers. The remaining 20 minutes is taken by one of the group or an occasional outside speaker bringing an inspirational message. Once in a while we bring in an outstanding spiritual person or a gospel team for a combined meeting of all societies.

Three nights out of the month a group of Christian Endeavorers go to three missions—one the San Pedro Sailor Rest Mission, and two others in Los Angeles to take charge of the evening evangelistic meeting. A group of young men comprise the church-sponsored Jail Team, going every other Sunday to Los Angeles City Jail to preach the gospel. We have endeavored to use many kinds of tracts in soul winning work—brightly colored wrapped cellophane rolls, colored folded tracts, and Spanish tracts. We are starting a Christian Endeavor sponsored tract rack with glass shelves for the church, placing 2500 tracts of 115 different kinds of colored tracts at the disposal of every member of the church.

It was our privilege to have Dr. Dan Gilbert during this past year for a five day Christian Endeavor sponsored conference. Each of the older societies plans to have one night a month as a social evening, and endeavors to bring in unsaved friends and win them to Christ and the church.

Although the time for the annual report of the church elected secretary-treasurer of Christian Endeavor has not yet arrived, still I can say that our average attendance in all societies will be about 125 and our average offering about $5 weekly. Three fourths of all offerings are paid into a general Christian treasury, the money being used mainly for missionary and soul winning work; and one-fourth is retained by each society to be used for whatever they desire. We endeavor monthly to send an offering, plus a substantial gift at foreign and home mission time, to our Brethren National Christian Endeavor organization.

The Lord has abundantly blessed us; yet we covet your prayers that we as Christian Endeavorers in Christ will be used even more in the winning of the lost in this coming year.

Glenn E. Miller, General Christian Endeavor Supt.

YOUNG PEOPLE, DAYTON, OHIO

Greetings from the Young People's Christian Endeavor of First Brethren Church, Dayton, O.

We have just completed an interesting and educational year of Christian Endeavor for 1941. During the past six months, the young people's society has been reorganized and a new corps of officers has been doing its best to make the society grow, both in numbers and spiritually. Our attendance has shown no phenomenal gains, but rather seems to be growing steadily, though slowly.

Our society is carrying out several projects. Usually about once a month, the entire society is invited to some member's home for a "tract rolling," and several hundred "Gospel Bombs" are wrapped in brilliant cellophane paper, later to be distributed as directed by the pastor and the president of the society. These meetings are full of Christian fellowship and fun, and at the same time a little of God's work is accomplished, we believe. Another of our projects was the assembling and printing of quite a number of chorus books, containing favorite choruses of our young people, many of them taught us by the Polman's. These books contain quite a large number of choruses, and are used in practically every C.E. meeting.

Just recently our society voted to do visitation work. We don't call it a gospel team because it is not limited to any certain persons. On different occasions, different people go in the group. Several of the number play musical instruments. We usually have a solo and a duet and one of the musical group accompanies the singing of old hymns by the entire assemblage. These visits to groups of shut-ins are very inspiring to those of us who participate, and we firmly believe that this type project is well worth the time and effort it takes to plan an interesting program.

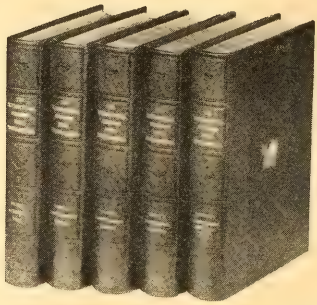
Another phase of our young people's work is the round table discussions. These are held irregularly, but are well responded to and interesting to those who participate in the discussions. Of course this type meeting is rather informal but this leads the reticent ones to speak out more freely. Then occasionally we have an outside speaker, one who is qualified to bring a message of value. Our social activities are limited to a C.E. party about once every quarter, either at the church or at some member's home.

We are now looking forward to a new year of Endeavor for Christ. Who knows what it will bring in the way of victories for Him? In this time of world chaos and uncertainty, let us as Christian Endeavorers look to our Leader, Jesus Christ, to guide and direct us till He comes.

Harry Shipley.

WHAT TO GIVE

Nine dollars for me, and one for the Lord—
Can I spare that dollar now?
Ah yes, I have promised the tenth to Him
And so I will keep my vow.
That certainly is enough to give—
It costs so much in these days to live!



Nine dollars for me and one for the Lord—
Somehow that seems so small
When I think how He counted not the cost
But freely poured out His all!
Shall I stop with giving a tenth, when He Has given Himself, priceless gift for me?

Dear Lord, all I have and am is thine,
Redeemed with thy blood one day;
Oh take every bit of this life of mine
And use it in thine own way!
I love thee, my Savior, Redeemer, King,
And gladly my all to thy feet I bring.

A NEW YEAR'S MESSAGE

WHAT WILL REMAIN?

"That those things that cannot be shaken may remain" (Heb. 12:27).

When these words were first written everything was shaking. The entire Roman world was falling apart. Confusion and uncertainty were everywhere. It was a perfect demonstration that every human institution or conception of life will pass away. The old Jewish institutions were fading away. The temple was about to be torn down by Titus. The Jews were soon to be sold as slaves to all nations under heaven. The apostle unquestionably saw the terrible devastation that was imminent and strove in this epistle to prepare Hebrew Christians for it.

Not only were Hebrew institutions crumbling, but also the rest of the world was falling apart. Rome, with its mighty military juggernaut, was disintegrating through its own corruption. Grecian culture and philosophies were being abandoned, for they had been tried and found wanting. Paganism with its powerless gods was dying. Justice was practically dead. Christians were being stripped of their homes, thrust into prison, and often slain for Christ's sake. We can well understand the Hebrew Christian cry, "All is lost. Nothing remains."

Today and for years past we have seen a shaking world and its people as never before. Man's world is falling apart as this age draws to its close. The nations are in distress, as Jesus said they would be. We have evidently seen the rider on the red horse come forth with a "great sword" to "take peace from the earth" (Rev. 6:4). One thing is sure: there is no land on earth where there is really peace. 24 crowned rulers have fallen; and ruthless, inhuman dictators have succeeded them and hurled the whole world into chaos. Economic and social systems have crumbled and taken from mankind all the liberties that came with the Christian era. We have seen the homes of the world swiftly fall apart and the state take over the house, the children, the parents, and the souls of all. We have seen the dream of the post-millenialists, that the world would get better and that the age would end in complete righteousness, die of their own folly. Surely it seems that the day has come when "God ariseth to shake terribly the earth." (Isa. 2:19).

Little wonder that the worldling should stand today and fearfully ask, if, after all this terrible shaking, anything at all should remain!

As we face 1942 with the world shaking beneath us, what can we be assured will remain when, and if, we come to Jan. 1, 1943?

God will remain. He is not dead, nor sleeping. Though nations rage and sweep over the earth; though they lift their puny fists at Him in defiance, yet,

"Thy throne, O God is for ever and ever." (Heb. 1:8).

He lives to keep His own.

And God's Word will remain. How the pompous boasts of Hitler that he would win complete victory in 1941 rise up to condemn the empty words of man. "Man proposes but God disposes." Well did Jeremiah shout,

"Cursed be the man that trusteth in man and maketh flesh his arm, and whose heart departeth from the Lord" (Jer. 17:5).

The promises of man pass as a mist in the night. They are as a broken reed that pierces the hand that leans on it. They are as a snare to the foolish, for man is helpless to fulfil his own words. But God ever liveth to keep His promises and He has all power to fulfil them.

"The grass withereth and the flower fadeth, but the Word of our God shall stand forever" (Isa. 40:8).

It was the sheer joy of this victory in God that made John the Apostle write,

"The world passeth away and the lusts thereof, but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever" (1 John 2:17).

The church of Christ shall remain. History is strewn with the wreckage of religions which are the invention of men. The people who have trusted in them have gone down to a hopeless eternity. But of His church, Jesus said,

"The gates of hell shall not prevail against it" (Matt. 16:18).

The church of Christ shall ever remain because He lives to preserve it and every member of it.

"Christ is able also to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by Him, seeing He ever liveth to make intercession for them" (Heb. 7:25).

The hope and confidence of the pre-mellenialist shall remain. Instead of dimming its light, this hope grows brighter with every passing day. The steady collapse of every human endeavor; the dying of the nations; the despair of the world without one optimistic statesman; the failure of every scheme of self help; the wide sweep of Christ hate over the nations of the world, all confirm the words of John in Rev. 19, that the world will reach a state of rebellion against God before Christ returns. World events have steadily confirmed the words of Jesus that the world would reach such a state of collapse just before He returned in power and glory (Luke 21:25-28).

While the hope of the post-millenialists has steadily faded and died, the faith of the pre-millenialists has grown brighter and brighter. The breakdown of

THIS IS OUR ANNUAL JEWISH NUMBER

1941 has been an unusual year of blessing for our Jewish Mission in Los Angeles. God has greatly blessed the word. Bro. Zimmerman has been wonderfully used in bringing Jewish young men to Christ. His visit among our churches last summer was the most effective thing we have yet had to stir up our people to a deeper love and concern for the salvation of Israel. As we enter 1942 we are dedicating this, our first issue of the year, to our Jewish mission.

The article from Dr J. Hoffman Cohn, head of the American Board of Missions to the Jews, is one that will stir the heart of every reader. The report of Brother Zimmerman coming fresh from the field will be a blessing to all. If you enjoy the Jewish issue, why not drop us a card and say so? We would appreciate it.

this Satan-inspired world holds no disappointments for them. They know that the darkest hour is just before the dawn, and that the darker the world gets, the sooner will break forth the "bright and morning Star," which heralds the new day of righteousness for the world.

Oh, yes, if the world crashes in 1942, there will be much left that remains in 1943—for the true Christian. In fact everything he has really lived for will remain and be waiting for him, at the right hand of God. So, rejoice Christian, "for your redemption draweth nigh."

HOW OUR JEWISH MISSION IN LOS ANGELES IS SUPPORTED

Although we have told it over and over again, still we find that there are many people who have never understood how our Jewish work in Los Angeles is supported. But we are always glad to give out the word so that everyone interested in the work will be able to help intelligently.

When we first undertook the work of a Jewish testimony for Christ, we had not the slightest idea of what we could do, but we had a burning desire to do something for poor, suffering Israel. We believed that the testimony to Israel was being sadly neglected by the Christian church, and that there was blessing and prosperity for them who would bless Abraham and love and pray for the peace of Jerusalem (Ps. 122:6, Gen. 12:3). So we went ahead wholly on faith. We were struggling hard to maintain our own fast-growing mission points, and we knew that we could not take on a Jewish mission out of current funds. Therefore we decided to take the work on as a wholly extra work, entirely above and apart from our regular mission work. We would look to God to provide for this Jewish work in addition to all our regular work.

The only way we could raise such funds had to be aside from our Thanksgiving offering. So we had to plan to depend solely upon the offerings received from the Jewish conferences conducted by our Jewish speakers from the American Board of Missions to the Jews. Our people were a little slow to get started in this way of doing it, but now they are beginning to catch the vision and the spirit of it all. Our aim is to have at least one Jewish conference in each Brethren Church each year, to provide an offering for our Jewish mission work. Some of our pastors arrange for two, and are loud in the declaration of the blessing and prosperity that result from the plan. All of the offerings at these conferences, whether in cash or pledges, goes to our Jewish mission work. The cash is immediately sent to the office of the Council in Berne, by the speaker who has a special form report for it. As the pledges are paid by the individuals to their regular church treasurer, he sends them to us with the names and addresses of those paying their pledges, and then they are also sent to the work in Los Angeles.

We are asking that our folks begin praying now that somehow the Lord will provide for a suitable building in Los Angeles to relieve the crowded conditions that prevail there in the mission now. $10,000 will do the work. We have no idea where the funds might come from, but the Lord knows where it is. Maybe some heart that loves Israel will read these lines and be moved to provide such a sum as a life testimony to their love for Christ and the people who suffer so for His sake.

HAVE YOU FORGOTTEN KENTUCKY

Word has just come to us from Brother Sewell Landrum that very little clothing has been received at the mission this fall. We wonder if our folks have forgotten the needs down there. The mothers come again and again to see if anything has been received. Why not do the grand thing and send down a real package of good clothing for this winter? Ask your local merchant if he has any out-of-date clothing that is unsaleable that you could have for this mission work. Many times shoes cannot be sold, and they are worth as much in those Kentucky hills as though they were up to date. This is a chance for our Sisterhoods, Women's Missionary Councils, Christian Endeavor Societies and individuals to do a fine thing for Christ and for those who need your help.

Be sure you address them right when you send them.

DO YOU KNOW BRETHREN IN TEXAS?

Of late years there have been quite a number of Brethren who have moved to various parts of Texas. We are trying to find one section where there are enough Brethren in one locality to start a Brethren Church for them. Please send the exact name and address of all such to our office at once. The secretary expects to go out there soon and will try to promote such a work if it is at all possible. But we must have names and addresses at once.

What Our Brethren Mission is Doing

ELIAS ZIMMERMAN

Another year has passed; and as we look back we feel that we have reason to lift our hearts and voices in praise and thanksgiving to our heavenly Father for the outpouring of His rich and manifold blessings upon our ministry and labors among the lost sheep of the house of Israel. We have no startling and sensational statements to make; but we can report work quietly and faithfully done, and God's approval and blessing upon it.

Attendance

The attendance at our services on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Sundays has kept up considerably well, especially so during the winter months; this in spite of the fact that Los Angeles is a defense area, and some of our "boys" have joined the army, others the navy, and still others have found work in various defense projects. On special occasions our mission hall is quite crowded, and we often wish and pray for a bigger and better place.

Distribution of Tracts, New Testaments and Bibles

We still find the "Shepherd of Israel" published by the American Board of Missions to the Jews, the finest literature to distribute among the Jews. We get something like 1,000 every month, and we give them out freely to all who will take and read them. Jews often ask for it, read it eagerly, and pass it on to others. However, we find that the giving out of tracts and literature is not enough. It must be followed up by personal work. Nothing will ever take the place of the personal touch by well trained and efficient missionaries. We have had many requests especially for New Testaments and Bibles this year. These we give only to those who ask for them and promise faithfully to read them. The New Testament translated in Yiddish, recently published by the American Board of Missions to the Jews, is meeting with a warm and enthusiastic reception everywhere. It has met a great need out here, and we thank God for it. More than 20,000 pieces of literature were distributed in all during the year, and we know that God will not permit His Word to return unto Him void.

Visitation and Refugee Work

We had hoped and planned to do a real and definite work among the many Jewish refugees here in Los Angeles after our return from the eastlast summer. However, we soon realized how ill equipped we were for that kind of work. And, besides, we have found the refugees so scattered, mostly in Hollywood, Beverly Hills, and Pasadena, that we have found it almost impossible to go beyond the stage of visitation and relief work.

Work Among the Women

Miss Graber, our volunteer worker, is doing a splendid work among the Jewish women in their homes.

Many of the Jewish women are hesitant and even afraid to come to our regular services at the mission. The mission is located almost in the very heart of the Jewish business section. They are afraid they would be seen entering the mission, and so might be reported to their husbands or the Rabbi. We have had some Jewish women asking us if we had a back door so that they might slip in unobserved. However, Miss Graber is an experienced and fully trained nurse. She visits their homes, nurses the sick, and makes herself useful in so many ways that she soon wins their confidence and love. The Lord is indeed wonderfully blessing her in her visitation work among the women and children.

Our Thanksgiving Dinner and Service

So much has taken place during the last few weeks—war with Japan, Germany, and Italy declared; blackouts, air warnings here on the Pacific coast; and all kinds of rumors and excitement—that it scarcely seems possible that it is only a few short weeks since we had our Thanksgiving celebration in the mission. And yet the memory of it still lingers with us. It is one of the outstanding events with us during the year, so we try to make it a real day of rejoicing and thanksgiving among our "boys." To many of them it is probably the only real and satisfying dinner of the whole year. We, therefore, go to all kinds of trouble and expense to make it as impressive and helpful and beautiful as time and our limited means will permit us.

This year our long tables were beautifully decorated with flowers, red berries, and four large horns of plenty filled with all kinds of fruit: oranges, persimmons, apples, pomegranates, etc. And we had two large turkeys with all the trimmings. How the women folks managed to feed between 50 and 60 hungry people—some of them getting a second helping—is beyond us, especially so after we listened to a report over the radio that it took 15 turkeys to feed 150 soldier boys in some of our camps near Los Angeles. However, none went away hungry, and above all there was a wonderful spirit of festivity and thanksgiving in our midst. The most interesting part, however, was when the dinner was over and the tables were cleared. We then entered into our Thanksgiving service. While sitting around the tables we sang gospel hymn after gospel hymn, and then one man after another stood up and either gave his testimony or told why he was thankful on this particular day. We were deeply touched when so many thanked God for the mission, and prayed God's blessing upon all who helped to keep the mission going. Others rejoiced in their salvation of the Lord Jesus Christ.

One tall Jew with gleaming eyes pointed out with his finger the very spot in that mission where he accepted the Messiah and made public confession of his faith. And his greatest ambition and purpose in life was, he said, to tell other Jews the good news of salvation and to bring them to Christ.

Still another Jew, neatly dressed, refinement written all over his face, stood up and said: "I was here last year. I sat on the other side of the table, but I was still an unbeliever. This Thanksgiving Day I am a different person, for I have found Christ and know assuredly that He is my Lord and Savior. This is the happiest Thanksgiving Day in all my life, and I cannot thank God enough for all His loving kindness and tender mercies, and for all He has done for me."

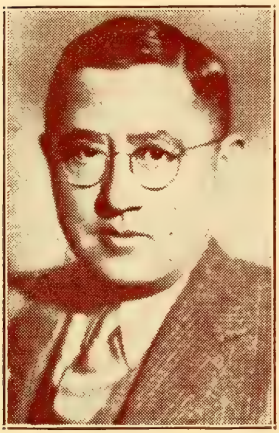
He sat down, his face literally beaming with thanksgiving and the inward joy and peace because of his knowledge of and faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. Knowing his circumstances—how he had lost in his business ventures, was heavily in debt, and had been almost entirely without employment during the whole year, and on top of it all had a sick wife on his hands, facing a very serious operation—we were deeply moved and touched by his beaming face and true spirit of thanksgiving. We felt humbled and ashamed of ourselves, because of our condition, and our failure to rejoice and give thanks unto God continually for His goodness and grace in redeeming us through our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. With the Psalmist of old we prayed: "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and all that is within me, bless his holy name. Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits" (Ps. 103:1,2).

Among those who were present at the Thanksgiving dinner was a refined Jewish woman. Apparently she is comparatively well off as far as worldly means goes. It was the second time that she had come to the mission; and we were, therefore, surprised and gratified when she got up and thanked God for such a place as this mission, where hungry Jewish boys and men were fed and taken care of. Several days later Mrs. Zimmerman and myself visited her in her home. Like a little child she opened her heart to us. Evidently she has all that her heart could possibly desire, but she told us she was not at all happy. This gave us a wonderful opportunity to tell her of Him Who alone can take away all the longings and cravings and misery of the human heart, and that "blessed (happy) are all they that put their trust (that seek refuge) in Him," her Messiah (Ps. 2:12). And just yesterday, when we visited her again and found her upset and nervous because of the war and the many rumors that Japanese planes might be bombing Los Angeles, we comforted her heart and pointed her to Him Who said: "My peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid" (John 14:27). Pray, dear friends, that the Lord may soon open her eyes to the truth, and that she may soon experience that peace and joy, which only those can have who seek refuge in Him Who is our Lord and Redeemer.

Results

From among those who took a definite stand for Christ, six were baptized by Dr. Louis Bauman in the First Brethren Church of Long Beach, and another one in the Second Brethren Church here in Los Angeles. Aside from these, we believe many went away changed men and women because of their contact with the Lord Jesus Christ in that mission which you are so faithfully supporting with your prayers and gifts. We know that your prayers and gifts have not been in vain.

NEW YEAR'S GREETINGS FROM THE BRETHREN JEWISH MISSION



This little poem by C. M. S. came into our hands a few days ago. We liked it so much that we send it on as our greetings to you, and our wish and prayer for all our friends for the coming year.—E. Z.

"Dear friends of ours, the year is new;
We wish a happy year for you!
Whatever lies within its hand,
Easy, or hard to understand,
Whether it bring you smiles or tears,
Filling your heart with hopes or fears,
May He Who marks the sparrow's fall
Protect and guide you through it all.
The path you tread has once been trod
By Him Who is the Son of God.
Fear not the future; trust it all
To Him Who marks the sparrow's fall.
Dear friends of ours, the year is new,
God grant a happy year to you!"

To the Jew First---Hitler Believes It!

J. HOFFMAN COHN, Gen. Sec. American Board of Missions to Jews.

The devil believes it too, and together with Hitler and others of Hitler's ilk, he practises it! For has not the Jew been always first in every explosion of world hate? Is it not upon the Jew that the devil has ever been concentrating his most damnable fires and darts and destructions? And when the Pharaohs of the Egyptian bondage thought to secure slave labor for the rearing of their pyramids and their cities of treasure, "to the Jew first" was the passion which possessed their wicked souls. And "the Jew first" became the butt of Egyptian over-lordship and savagery. "To the Jew first" likewise possessed the soul and body of such an arch fiend as Haman. "There is a certain people," he told King Ahasuerus, "scattered abroad and dispersed among the people in all the provinces of thy kingdom; and their laws are diverse from all people . . . it is not for the king's profit to suffer them" (Esther 3:8). And "to the Jew first" marked a day of slaughter and vengeance in all of the 127 provinces of ancient Persia.

Rev. Cohn

And so it has been all down through the pages of secular history; banishments, exiles, wholesale massacres, burning at the stake, drownings enmasse, confiscation of property, these are the signal posts that point us through the black pages of world history, because always the world has believed that when it comes to cruelties and agonies of soul and body it must be "to the Jew first!"

And in these recent years a new incarnation of the devil himself has arisen in the form of a strutting pigmy with comic mustache, who goes by the name of Hitler; and the ruling passion of this demon's life is once more "to the Jew first!" The Jew must be exterminated not only from Germany, but from every part of the world! It must be "to the Jew first" once more in starvation, in robbery of every penny he possesses, in open murder, in fiendish torture.

It is exactly true to Bible form. God says, "I have loved Jacob and hated Esau." In other words God tells us that in His own thinking Israel comes first. But the world has ever perverted and controverted the declared purposes of God; the world raises defiant fists to the God of heaven and fairly shouts at Him, "We have hated Jacob, and have loved Esau!"

God Had a Good Reason

Which side are you on, beloved reader? Do not these solemn facts present the most potent explanation why God ruled, 1900 years ago, that the church shall ever keep this cardinal missionary principle before her, that the gospel must, and must, and must, be given to the world in one order only, and that is "to the Jew first?" If the world has to put the Jew first in its scheme of hate and destruction, think of the unmeasured shame that must be heaped up against the church which will refuse to take its position unequivocally, indeed belligerently, as a defender of this principle, "To the Jew first!" Our most elemental emotions and sentiments that speak to us of justice and fair play must surely require that if the Jew is to be first in the devil's program, certainly he must be first in the program of God's church! Is this not a logic that is water-proof, fool-proof and irrefutable? Were it not for the fact that God has stirred up those who truly and earnestly are seeking the revelation of His truth, to a concentrated emphasis on giving the Jewish Mission appeal the right of way above everything else, were it not for this miraculous fact, what a sorry plight the nation of Israel would be in today! And think what a terrible punishment God would have to visit upon those of His professing church who have dared to flout Him in His plainly declared purposes!

Our Hats Off to the Brethren Churches!

And to this opportunity the Brethren churches of our country have responded nobly, generously, heroically. And God has seen fit to bless this unquestioning faith that they have exhibited in His Word, for He has given a bountiful fruitage at your mission station in Los Angeles under that devoted man of God and his equally devoted wife, Rev. and Mrs. Elias Zimmerman.

And never in many centuries have the Jews been so tender-hearted as they are today to the approach of the gospel. They have come to our mission stations from coast to coast bleeding with the sores and the wounds of a brutal Germany; it has been our privilege to bind up these wounds and to administer the oil of comfort and healing in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ; and you may be sure that these ministries will not go unrewarded. These refugees have fallen into the lowest depths of poverty. In the old country they used to be leaders in high places, bankers, professors in universities, physicians of world achievement, lawyers. But now they have not a place to sleep nor a crust to eat. Ought it not to be the coveted privilege of every true child of God to minister to these little ones of His brethren? They will not always be down and out; they have within themselves that driving force which has explained their persistence through 4000 years of such persecutions as have crushed many another nation, and exterminated them; but this inherent God-given persistency within the Jewish heart has kept them above water throughout the centuries, and will so continue to keep them until every purpose that God has in this people shall be fulfilled to the letter.

"I Am Live Wire!"

A spare, thin Jewish refugee came to see me; he was fresh from Berlin, but he could talk excellent English, despite his foreign accent. He brought with him the portfolio of his curriculum vitae; he had been the manager of one of the largest banks in Germany, his salary had been something like 40,000 marks a year. His face, his whole bearing, was that of a master of men, a man who was accustomed to giving orders and to being obeyed. The wife was one of the most beautiful women I have ever met; she could most easily move in the very highest of social circles, and take her place among the nobility. This banker sat opposite me at my desk. "I am what you say in America, 'live wire'. In Berlin I earned 40,000 marks a year; here in America I look for job $10 a week. I will scrub floors, I will wash windows, I will run errands, I will do anything and everything to make living for my wife and child. But I will not always scrub floors; by and by my employer will find out that I am live wire, then he will promote me and then I will rise." When we agreed to grant him $12 a week to keep him alive until he should find a job, he broke down and wept like a child. "To think" he sobbed, "that I should come to you a perfect stranger, the first time you ever saw me in your life, and you should give me this money!" But, what an opportunity this was for us to give him this visible and practical testimony for the Lord Jesus Christ!

From another grateful refugee, a mother who used to be a practising physician in Vienna, and who came to us with the husband, also a physician, and their two children, we have received many letters bubbling over with gratitude for what help this mission has been able to give to them. We have cared for this family for over a year while the mother and father are studying afresh the medical science of our country so that they might be qualified to pass new examinations, to open up a practise in America and once more to earn a living. Here are a few paragraphs from a recent letter this dear child of God sent us:

Dear Dr. Cohn:—

You certainly remember, when I came over from England last year with my children. What yould I have done, if you would not have helped me? I never forget my dear friends in England who have brought me to you. God was our convoy at sea at that dangerous time and we left all our life to His leadership.

During the last year, in which we so richly have received your Christian love, you made all of us forget those troubles we went through. Today, when you brought our children back from the camp, I cannot be quiet; I must thank you so much! And I don't thank you only for the most wonderful vacations they ever had, but also for all your humane kindness and generosity all this year.

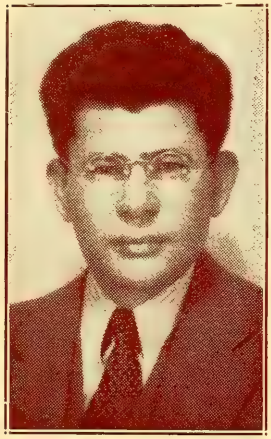
Your noble example of Christianity has made my children forget their disappointments they had in their birthtown. They don't speak any more about their best friends in Vienna, who after one certain night behaved as bad enemies. Our children's souls which were so badly hurt, when their poor father was taken to one of the worst concentration camps, have been completely healed during this last year by the sunshine of your Christian love.

I pray that your blessed country, where there is no discrimination, may become the new home country of our children one day, and that you as a great followers of our dear Lord Jesus Christ may be to our children like a shining light, which to approach may be their goal.

Thankfully yours,

S. H.

The most important prophetic fact of the present hour for the church to keep in mind is that our Lord's coming is literally around the corner. If the Lord should take us up to be with Him before tomorrow's sun shall rise, who is going to preach the gospel here upon this earth? One thing is sure, God must have a continuing witness concerning Himself upon this earth. Do you not see the place that He has for the Jew in this dispensational program? To this Jew we must now, if we have the minds of Christian statesmen, bring the gospel message with ever intensified force, so that when we are taken out, they may seize from us the torch of gospel light, and then this little remnant of Israelites will be the ones upon whom God will depend for continuing the witness concerning Himself.



Hunted and haunted the wide world over by Nazi hate, these Jewish refugees find Christian welcome and Christian hospitality. Christmas dinner at the Brooklyn building of the American Board of Missions to the Jews. Most of these are believers. "Sweet land of liberty" never had a deeper meaning as these victims of hate thanked God for a Christmas of love and freedom, and above all, for that greatest of all gifts, the Lord Jesus Christ.

The Why and Wherefore Of To The Jew First

ELIAS ZIMMERMAN, Los Angeles, Calif.

Due to the Nazi propaganda against the Jews, the Jewish question is discussed everywhere. It is about time that the church and the Christian people take up the question in earnest: "What are we to do about the Jew?" "What is our obligation to the Jew?" The church has been altogether too indifferent to this question, with terribly tragic results, not only to the Jews but also, as we shall see later, to herself and to the world at large.

Rev. Zimmerman

"What are we to do about the Jew?" God's Word is our only but sufficient guide. Our Lord says plainly:

"Preach the gospel to every creature."

"Every creature," surely includes the Jew. About this there can be no question whatsoever. But many Christian people say, let us attend to the Gentile first—they are much more numerous, much more needy, and much more accessible and hopeful. God's reply to this is:

"There is no difference between the Jew and the Gentile, for the same Lord over all is rich unto all that call upon Him. For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved" (Rom. 10:12,13).

The church has said, and keeps on saying by word and deed, that there is a difference, a difference in favor of the Gentile. God says there is none. Which is right? The only two forms of Christianity that have been presented to the Jewish people throughout most of Christendom, in the past centuries, have been bitter persecution and some form or other of idolatry. Have we any right to complain of the hardness or even blasphemy on the part of some Jews in their attitude towards Christ and Christianity? Can we expect a different attitude on the part of the Jewish people? Christ's command to His disciples and to us is to carry the good news of salvation to every individual on the face of the earth. And the Holy Spirit assures us there is no difference between Jew and Gentile, but that whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be saved.

However, not only does our Lord command us to preach the good tidings of salvation to every creature, but He also lays down the procedure we are to follow, the method we are to carry out in obeying His commandment. Before His ascension we are told that our risen Lord opened the understanding of his disciples that they might understand the Scriptures.

"And He said unto them, Thus it is written, and thus it behoved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day. And that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in His name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem."

"Beginning at Jerusalem" does not mean begin at home as it is usually explained. Nowhere in the Bible, as far as we know, does the word Jerusalem stand as a synonym for home. Now, it is perfectly legitimate and right and fair for us to make such an application of this passage of Scripture; but this is not what Christ said and what He meant. What Christ did say and what He did mean was that His disciples were to begin their missionary activities in Jerusalem, for there was the center of Jewish life, the center of the religious life of the Jew, the center and the heart of the Jewish people. In other words begin with the Jew: or, as the apostle Paul, who knew the mind of Christ as no other disciple, tells us: "to the Jew first." The same Paul who once hated and despised every Jew who called upon the name of Jesus now longed and yearned that all the Jews might find salvation through this same Jesus. The same Paul who once thought it the height of folly and shame and blasphemy for any Jew to confess that Jesus is the Christ, the Redeemer of Israel, now proclaims with all the vigor that is within him that:

"Whosoever believeth on him shall not be ashamed" (Rom. 10:11), and that the gospel of Christ is the dynamo generated by God Himself unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek" (Rom. 1:16). And Paul not only prayed for the salvation of Israel, he not only taught and preached "to the Jew first," but he practiced what he prayed and what he preached throughout his entire ministry. Read the book of Acts, and you will find that in all of his missionary activities, in all of his missionary journeys, he went first to the synagogue and preached Christ to the Jew. Even on his visit to the synagogue at Antioch where the Jews "spake against those things which were spoken by Paul, contradicting and blaspheming," he tells them,

"It was necessary that the Word of God should first have been spoken to you."

Even though he yearned for their salvation, even though his heart ached and grieved because of their stubbornness in rejecting Christ, yet he felt some satisfaction in the thought that he had done his part, that he had done his duty, that he had followed the example and the method laid down by his Lord and Savior. It is quite true that he also tells those Jews:

"But seeing ye put it from you, and judge yourselves unworthy of everlasting life, lo, we turn to the Gentiles" (Acts 13:46).

And some thoughtless and ignorant Christians have grasped on this as an excuse, as their alibi for their neglect of going with the gospel to the Jewish people. "Aha, you see" they say, "even the great apostle Paul says that he is through with the Jews, that he is turning his back on them, and that he is now going to the Gentiles." But they forget that Paul is speaking here of the Jews and to the Jews of Antioch only. For soon after we find him and his companion, Barnabas, on their way to another city, Iconium, their next stopping place. And there we read:

"And it came to pass in Iconium, that they went both together into the synagogue of the Jews, and so spake, that a great multitude both of the Jews and also of the Greeks believed" (Act. 14:1).

In Acts 17:1,2 we read:

"Now when they had passed through Amphipolis and Apolonia, they came to Thessalonica, where was a synagogue of the Jews. And Paul, as his manner was, went in unto them, and three sabbath days reasoned with them out of the scriptures."

While in Corinth we are told that

"He reasoned in the synagogues every sabbath, and persuaded the Jews and the Greeks" (Act. 18:4).

In Ephesus, where Paul spent three busy months preaching the gospel, we are told that "He went into the synagogue, and spake boldly for the space of three months, reasoning and persuading the things concerning the kingdom of God" (Act. 19:8).

What does all this mean? Simply this: when the apostle Paul said, "seeing ye put it from you, and judge yourselves unworthy of everlasting life, lo, we turn to the Gentiles," he spoke to the Jews of Antioch. The gospel was preached to the Jew first in Antioch; and since they refused to heed and to listen, Paul and Barnabas turned to the Gentiles of Antioch. But when they came to any other town they felt that "it was necessary that the word of God should first" be preached to the Jews of that particular town or city, whether that be Corinth or Ephesus or Rome. The principle, the divine order "to the Jew first" did not cease to operate anywhere else because the Jews of Antioch or any other town should reject Christ and "judge themselves unworthy of everlasting life."

Now all this that we have just said is not in contradiction with what we have said at the beginning, namely that there is "no difference between the Jew and the Gentile." Some years ago we heard a young preacher (who just left the seminary and evidently had more zeal for the Bible than insight and knowledge of the Bible) preach a missionary message on "The Jew First." At the height of his appeal and impassioned plea, one of the old deacons shouted from the back of the auditorium: "But does not the good Book say, 'There is no respect of persons with God'?" "Yes," said the young preacher, "but our great text tells us quite distinctly and unmistakably" and he began to read in his opened Bible,

"For I am not ashamed of gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek."

"There you are, it is as plain as the nose on your face." "Yes," shouted back the old deacon—whether to justify himself because of a deep felt conviction that he never as much as offered a single prayer for the lost sheep of the house of Israel, and that he never gave as much as a single dollar for Jewish missions in the many years of his Christian life, or whether to justify himself for not believing in the divine order "to the Jew first" we know not—"but" he yelled back, "does it not also say quite as plainly and quite as unmistakably that 'there is neither Jew nor Greek, for the same Lord over all is rich unto all that call upon Him" (Rom. 10:12)? The preacher was quite confused and did not know what to say in answer to that, and to cover his confusion he repeated his text, after which the deacon quoted his passage again. Many of the people left the church that night, no doubt, feeling that the Word of God contradicted itself. To add to the confusion, a retired preacher stood up and said that in his view "to the Jew first" was literally fulfilled when the gospel was first presented to them. "He came to his own, and his own received him not." We mention this little incident because it presents the views and the ignorance and the misunderstanding that is generally prevailing among the Christian people, the layety as well as the clergy, in regard to the teaching of the Word of God about "the Jew first."

In the first place, there is no contradiction whatsoever in the passages quoted. All we have to do is to examine each passage in its setting. In Rom. 2:9, 10,11 the Apostle Paul tells us in the same breath, "to the Jew first" and "there is no respect of persons with God." Evidently Paul knew what he was talking about. He is speaking of rewards for good deeds and punishment for evil.

"Tribulation and anguish, upon every soul of man that doeth evil, of the Jew first, and also of the Gentile. But glory, honour, and peace to every man that worketh good, to the Jew first, and also to the Gentile."

Why "to the Jew first"? Then follows the reason: "For there is no respect of persons with God." In other words, since God has given the Jews greater privileges, he has a right to demand from him greater responsibilities. Responsibility goes with privilege and ability, and chastisment and punishment is measured out accordingly. Because God has chosen the Jewish people to be His witnesses among the nations of the earth, because they are the seed of Abraham, and because "they are beloved for their fathers' sake" does not mean that He will close His eyes to the abuse of their privileges and their misdeeds and transgressions. Oh, no! "For there is no respect of persons with God." When the Jew fails and does not measure up to his responsibilities, then he gets "tribulation and anguish" first. The Gentile and even the church says "good." There is general approval. "But" adds the Holy Spirit, "glory, honour, and peace" also "to the Jew first" if he does good. "For there is no respect of persons with God."

In Rom. 10:12, where we are told that "there is neither Jew nor Greek," the apostle Paul speaks about the relationship between the sinner and God and the method by which he can find forgiveness of sin and salvation through Christ.

"Whosoever believeth shall not be put to shame."

In v. 13 we read:

"Whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved."

The emphasis is on the "whosoever." At the beginning of the chapter Paul tells us that his heart's desire and prayer to God was that Israel might be saved, because the Jews did not submit themselves to the righteousness of God, and were going about to establish their own righteousness. "No," says Paul, "there is no difference between Jew and Greek" faith in Christ is the only avenue of salvation, and it is the only kind of righteousness that counts with God for either Jew or Gentile.

There remains but one other passage for us to consider briefly, and that is found in Gal. 3:28.

"There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female."

The meaning and intent of this passage is quite clear and evident when we read the last part of the verse,

"For ye are all one in Christ Jesus."

In Christ there is neither Jew nor Gentile; out of Christ "to the Jew first."

In the second place, was the divine principle "to the Jew first" chronological? Was this order, ordained by God Himself and followed by the great apostle Paul, temporary and confined to the times of Christ and the apostles? If so, where and when did this order cease to operate? Where and when was this method changed?

There is no doubt that no one can possibly put his finger on the chapter and verse, on the day and year, when the change took place; but just the same there is a general prevailing feeling among many God-fearing Christians, and even among many faithful fundamentalist ministers of the gospel, that again and again the Jew had the opportunity, and Christ and the apostles gave them the choice, and the Jews deliberately and persistently refused to believe and accept Him as their Messiah. When Pilate pointed to Him and said "Behold your King!" they cried, "Away with him, away with him, crucify him." When Pilate asked them "Shall I crucify your King?" the chief priest made a terrible, tragic choice for the nation in answering, "We have no king but Caesar;" When the Jews cried "His blood be upon us and our children" they brought doom upon themselves and their children.

Somehow there is a feeling that with Pentecost a change took place, a new order came into being, and a new dispensation was started. But we seem to forget that it was on the cross, while wounded, bleeding and dying, our Lord prayed "Father forgive them, for they know not what they do." We seem to overlook the fact that it was many days after the crucifiion that our risen Lord commanded His disciples, "Go, preach the gospel to every creature, beginning with Jerusalem." And so many of us fail to realize that it was approximately 25 years after the crucifixion and Penticost that the epistle to the Romans was written, where we are told that the apostle Paul preached and practiced "to the Jew first." Look at Rom. 1:16. There some tremendous assertions are made by Paul: (1) that the gospel is the power of God unto salvation; (2) that this power is not limited, it is "to every one that believeth; and finally, "to the Jew first." Is the first statement true today as it was in the days of Paul? Or has the gospel lost its power? Is it no longer the power of God? "To every believer" surely is as true today as it was almost 2000 years ago. How about the last statement, "to the Jew first"? Are not these three truths eternal? Or by what right does anyone claim that the first two are eternal, and the last one only chronological and therefore canceled? It is indeed a dangerous thing to handle Scripture in such a fashion, and make the word of God of none effect.

And now time and space will permit us to mention only some of the reasons why God has laid down this method for us to follow in our missionary activities and enterprises. True, to those that love the Lord all that should be necessary is to know that "thus saith the Lord," but the Word of God, has not left us in the dark on that point.

1. In Rom. 3:1 Paul asks the question:

"What advantage hath the Jew?"

And quick as lightning and definite comes the answer:

"Much every way" yea in many, many respects, but "chiefly, because unto them were committed the oracles of God."

In the ninth chapter of the same epistle he elaborates and tells us that to them

"Pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises. Whose are the fathers, and of whom as concerning the flesh Christ came, who is over all God blessed for ever."

Need we make any comment to all this? What a crescendo of divine music appealing and pleading with every true child of God to make "the Jew first" in his prayers, in his giving, and in his presentation of the gospel to every creature!

2. The apostle Paul gives us our second reason in the tenth chapter of Romans when he tells us why his heart's desire and prayer and longing was that Israel might be saved.

"For I bear them record that they have a zeal of God, but not according to knowledge."

This is true today as it was in the days of Paul. Paul never forgot his own zeal in persecuting his own brethren according to the flesh in his blind ignorance. Paul realized, as few have realized since, the vast amount of zeal and energy stored in the heart and soul of the Jew for God, but which was either dormant or used not according to knowledge. How he prayed and how he labored that this energy and this zeal might be used according to knowledge, in the service of his Lord and Master! This is just as true today. What a flood of energy and zeal would be utilized if the Jew could be won for Christ today! It would indeed be "life from the dead."

3. Our third reason is—no matter what all the Pharaohs and the Hamans and the Hitlers think and say about the Jews—

"They are beloved for their father's sake."

God loves them. Do you? How can any child of God hate or despise those whom He loves? How can any child of God fail to pray and to give and to labor for their salvation "first," when God says do it for the sake of their fathers, for the sake of Abraham and Moses and Isaiah and David!

4. Because the church and every Christian is more indebted to them than to any other people. The Scriptures, and the promises, and all that is dear and precious and holy to us, we have received from them and through them. "Salvation is of the Jews" said our Lord. Surely our common sense of gratitude demands some definite expression of appreciation towards them.

5. Because all the spiritual blessings that God has yet in store for the nations and the world will come through the channel chosen by God, the Jewish nation.

"For thou art a holy people unto the Lord thy God: The Lord thy God hath chosen thee to be a special people unto himself, above all the people that are upon the face of the earth" (Duet. 7:6). "In thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed" (Gen. 22:18).

And isn't this the reason why God has kept and preserved the Jewish people throughout their long and stormy history, when nation after nation has sought their utter destruction and extinction? The Jew still exists; and he is kept separate and is preserved to be blessed and to become a blessing to all the world.

"For if the casting away (setting aside) of them is the reconciling of the world, what shall the receiving of them be but life from the dead?" (Rom. 11:15.

6. To many of us the second coming of our Lord is our blessed hope and the bright shining light of our faith, even in these dark days of gloom and confusion and wars and rumors of wars. But how many of us realize that we are literally hindering and delaying His return because of the neglect of the church to go with the gospel to the Jew, and because of our disobedience to the divine order of "to the Jew first"? And yet this is the truth. For we are told in the Word of God that Christ came to call out a people unto Himself, from among the Jews as well as the

Remember "It's hypocrisy to pray for what you are not willing to work for."

Gentiles, which will make up the completed body of our Lord here upon earth. Our blessed Lord will not return until this body is complete. Now look at church gatherings and our church rolls. How many Cohens and Levis and Goldsteins will you find there? Yes, we may pray, "Lord, come quickly," but how many of us are doing our part to make it a reality? And how many of us realize that it has been Satan's master stroke all along to keep the church indifferent towards the Jew, and to get many of our ministers to misinterpret and misapply and many of God-fearing Christian people to ignore the Divine order, "to the Jew first," and so delay the return of our blessed Lord and his own doom and destruction?

7. And finally, because of the rich blessings that God has in store for those of His children who sincerely and faithfully make "the Jew first" in their prayers and missionary activities. Just the other day a good Christian friend of ours called us up, and told us how richly and abundantly the Lord has blessed her life and her home because she has made "the Jew first" a vital part of her prayers and her giving and her labors. And many are the God-fearing people and Bible teachers and ministers throughout the land who can testify to the truthfulness of it. Yes, pray and give and labor "for the peace of Jerusalem, for they shall prosper that love thee" (Ps. 122:6).

Roger W. Babson says, "I have not been able to find a single and useful institution which has not been founded by either an intensely religious man or by the son of a praying mother. I have made this statement before the Chambers of Commerce of all the largest cities of the country, and have asked them to bring forward a case that is an exception to this rule. Thus far, I have not heard of a single one." —Watchman Examiner.

Our Work Among Jewish Women and Children

By MISS HELEN GRABER

"Ye gave me meat . . . ye gave me drink . . . ye took me in . . . ye clothed me . . . ye visited me . . . ye came unto me"! And Christ says: "Ye have done it unto me" (Matt. 25:35-49).

It is indeed a privilege to serve God among His chosen people, Israel, in various ways, as mentioned above.

Many times I have asked myself the question: "How can the Jewish people be won to Christ?" And each time my heart responded: "Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord of hosts" (Zech. 4:6). Yes, it is only by that power that any soul can be won for Christ. Practical Christianity must often be exercised first before they will listen to the Word of God. Let me mention one day's experience in my visitation work.

I asked the Holy Spirit to lead me to needy souls, and to use me as it pleased Him. So I came to the mission to select suitable clothing for a young Jewish mother and her babe. Upon leaving, I noticed a Jewish woman reading the portion of Scripture in Yiddish displayed in our window. She seemed surprised to see such literature here, and was even more surprised when I offered her a New Testament in Yiddish. She accepted it; and just then the street car came, and she was gone. May the Holy Spirit, the Author, interpret for her the Word of God.

I came to the young Jewish woman with the baby. The report had come to us that she was ill. But she greeted me cordially, and said that she was feeling good. She had been frightened by the "blackout," but soon had become more calm like the rest of us. We unpacked the clothes which I had brought, and you should have seen her smile! (Thank you, friends from Southgate, for bringing the clothing. We are making good use of them.) Both the mother and the father are Hebrew Christians. And, by-the-way, the young mother accepted Christ as her Savior in our mission, and was baptised in the First Brethren Church of Whittier, Calif., by Rev. Chas. H. Ashman. Both father and mother witness for Christ as opportunity offers, and they are anxious to have the baby dedicated unto the Lord in the mission. We had prayer together, and then I left.

My next visit was at a convalescent's home The friend I came to see is an ardent witness to Jews and Gentiles about the grace of God. Several Jewish families in that apartment house are interested in the claims of Christ. While I was there, two of these women came in to talk about the things of God and Christ. One could not understand, and wondered how God could possibly forgive a murderer even upon confession of his sins. And then it was our opportunity to explain to her the meaning of grace, and that Christ died for all, yea, even a murderer.

The third stop was at a home where the father has been away for two years. The mother has night work, and the boy goes to school. This particular evening the mother was depressed and discouraged because of disappointing news received from her husband. Then the boy came home from school with a note from the nurse, stating that he had impetigo with directions how to treat it. I purchased the needed medication, bandaged the hand, and both seemed easier. "Just a bit of love." And "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these my (Jewish) brethren, ye have done it unto me."

Across the Nation - - WITH OUR SECRETARY

8 New Members for Cleveland—

Showers of blessings continue to frequent our Brethren Mission work in Cleveland, where Brother Walter Lepp recently began his pastorate. The congregation is growing numerically, financially and spiritually. Eight new members, including a family of four, were added this week following a special baptismal service Sunday, Jan. 11th. Let's continue to pray for this promising field of opportunity.

Bus for Clayhole—

The National Sisterhood has voted to purchase a bus for the Clayhole, Ky., mission. The former bus simply fell apart. The bus down there gets hard usage. It goes full every trip. The work is now suffering for lack of a bus. The sooner it can be obtained the better for the work. The bus that is preferred is one that has been used as a school bus, and is in good repair. The school boards change types of busses every few years, and these buses are still able to do good service in our mission work. If any of our Brethren have knowledge of such a bus that could be obtained, please write the secretary of the Council at once, describing the machine and the price of it. The secretary was down there a few weeks ago and the work is really suffering for lack of transportation for scores of the Sunday School attendants.

Kentucky Needs Clothing Now—

When we were in Clayhole recently the clothing room was almost bare of winter clothes. Bro. Landrum remarked that very little was coming in. We urge the Women's Missionary Councils, and others who can do so, to send clothing at once, please. It is already very late. After January very little winter clothing can be used. Please do what you can now, while the need is upon them.

Hagerstown Building Is Proceeding—

Last week in Hagerstown, we found the church building going up steadily. It was raining when we were there, but we got a couple of pictures that were not so bad. They were not so good either, for some reason. The stone work is up to the first floor, and they are going right on up as fast as they can raise the money. So far they have been unable to borrow anything, so they are just going ahead on what they can raise from week to week among themselves. These dear people are showing a wonderful spirit. The world is becoming more and more a difficult place for the church of Christ. It is almost impossible to borrow money for church building purposes at all. The government agencies will not lend to the church, nor will they allow the banks to do so except on personal security (which is a thing the young mission church generally has very little of), nor can a building and loan association be allowed to loan to a church. For a long time the secretary has hoped for a revolving building fund of $50,000 out of which loans of not more than $5,000 could be made to new works just when they need it most. It should be made without interest charge and paid back by annual appropriations from the Council from current funds. Thus the fund would always be replenished, but the church would get the help at the right time to prevent hurt and delay to the work. Well, such a fund would be a blessing to Hagerstown right now. But the pastor and his people are not dismayed by their difficulties, and are going ahead, trusting that the Lord will provide in one way or another. We praise God for the wonderful spirit manifested in our mission points.

Back In Washington—

We were privileged to spend a few days here with Bro. R. E. Donaldson and his daughter Mabel. Bro. Donaldson is one of our directors on the Council, and it was profitable in many ways to be here. He prints, free of charge, much of the material used by the Council. He cannot do large work for his press is small. But his assistance is of great help to us. We found the Washington church going along in a fine way under Bro. Bernard Schneider. He is developing material for the ministry from among his men already. In a few years there will undoubtedly be several from this congregation to give their lives to full service for the gospel. He told us that the Washington church had set their goal at $2,000 for their Thanksgiving offering for home missions. Maybe you think that didn't make us feel good! It will be a great day for the gospel here in America when all our Brethren churches and pastors once get the real vision and passion for home missions. It is the key to every greater work we ever hope to do for our Lord before He returns.

Winchester Getting Started Again—

Rev. and Mrs. Paul Dick

As most of our readers already know, Norman Uphouse has left Winchester and taken the new work at North Riverdale in Dayton. Paul Dick and his wife have come from the Grafton, W. Va., field to take up Winchester. They have now been on the ground for two weeks, and they are already doing mighty fine. Brother Dick is getting hold of the situation and will soon be leading this people out to greater things for Christ. He is handling the radio programs in a fine way. His wife is a most accomplished pianist, and is in this way an invaluable aid in these programs. The people have already fallen in love with them and have confidence in their leadership. Pray for them and the work, that multitudes may be brought to Christ.

Uniontown, Penna.

On our way west we stopped in to see Bro. Clough for a few minutes. Sister Clough knew that we really longed for one of her good vegetable dinners, and did she give it to us! What a meal that was! Bro. Clough is still going from victory to victory in his Uniontown field. There is never a dull moment at Uniontown. God has surely glorified Himself in a great work through our brother in that city. And they are doubling their Thanksgiving offering there also!

North Riverdale, Dayton, Ohio—

This is the first time that we had been back here since the meetings we held in the tent during August. Brother and Sister Uphouse are doing a wonderful work already. They are happy in the fine parsonage which this new congregation is already buying for them. The night that we were there, the building committee was making its final decisions on the building plans. The steam shovel was ordered out on the site the next morning to start the excavation. So there is going to be a new church building in North Riverdale early next spring ready for dedication. And right in the midst of all this strain under which they labor, with a thousand needs for money for themselves, they have given over $300 for the Thanksgiving offering for home missions that others might have the gospel also. Praise God for a people like this. Little wonder that the hand of our God is upon them for good.

The Revival At Osceola—

As we write these lines we are in a campaign to reach souls in our Osceola, Ind., mission. These faithful Brethren have stuck to their guns through thick and thin, and it has been pretty thin a lot of the time! There are some mighty fine folks here, and if it hadn't been for Brother and Sister Herman Schumacher, who have never known what it means to give up, we wonder if the work would have ever come to its present place of blessing. There will be a wonderful story told in heaven some day of the faith and labors and sacrifices of laymen whose names have never been mentioned on earth.

Here we have a fine church building that is now just a year old, appropriate, comfortable, and attractive. They have just the one room, but there is plenty of space on the grounds to build to it and care for the Sunday School as it grows. And it has been growing, too. A brilliant Neon electric sign lights up the front of the church for all who pass by to read. A heavy traffic passes by on the highway No. 33 that fronts the location.

Bro. Robert Hill one of our seniors in Grace Seminary, is now pastor of this group and is doing a very fine work. As soon as he graduates from school next May, he will be able to make much faster progress in the work. There are people here by the hundred to reach with the gospel. Bro. Hill is well liked by his people and they are warm in their praise of the sermons he preaches and the fine Christian spirit he shows in the work.

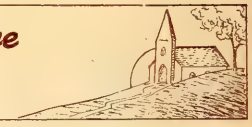
So far we have had delegations from New Troy, Imbody Community church, Elkhart Baptist, and many from other churches. A fine spirit of helpfulness and brotherly interest has been manifested by other churches. But we will have to close this report here as we must go to press. The results of the meeting will have to wait till the next Home Mission Number of the Herald.

One Hour At Grace Seminary—

At the request of Dr. McClain, we drove over to the seminary and spoke to the student body on home missions, believe it or not. We enjoyed it a lot; but whether the students did, we cannot say. Anyway, those students are going to give an offering for home missions! Of all individuals who might be expected to pity themselves and keep what they have, they are giving that others might have a chance to hear the gospel. Some of those students have almost to live on love and scenery because of their limited incomes, but they are thinking of others. That is a spirit that God will reward. Right today there is one real detriment to Grace Seminary: its student body is just one fourth the size it ought to be and MUST be to fulfil the ministry it is designed for. Something must be done about this, pastors, and soon!

MODESTO, CALIFORNIA

We have been so busy here in Modesto that we have not had time to send our news items, but here are some of them. Since July 1 we have taken into the church 21 new members, 7 by letter and 14 by baptism. This just doubles our membership, as we had only 21 members on July 1.



Our attendance in Bible School is about 55 average, and they all remain for church. Our attendance in the evening is about 40 or 45, and prayer meeting between 25 and 30. We took our home mission offering Nov. 23 and the amount in cash and pledges was even $425. We praise the Lord for His goodness to us.

One Saturday night recently, about 45 members and friends surprised us in our new home and presented us with a lovely mantle clock, and also with the assistance of Brother and Sister Hammers from Tracy, held a beautiful dedicatory service, and dedicated our new home to the Lord. We appreciated very much this thoughtfulness of our friends in arranging this occasion.

Ralph, Grace, and Sam Rambo.

How Brethren Missions Give to Home Missions

We are publishing the first of the gifts to our Thanksgiving offering. The reports of wonderful increases as shown by our mission churches makes us mighty proud of them. They have set a remarkable example of devotion to Christ to all of our churches. Some of our mission churches have doubled, some have tripled, and some have quadrupled their offering of last year. It is clear that churches which have come up as mission points realize how vital is the need for supporting home mission work liberally. Having depended upon such aid, they appreciate its importance to their existence. Now note the offerings from some of them.

Modesto, Calif., reporting 41 members to date, writes that they have $425 in their offering. They meet in a rented hall and have all of the burden of erecting a church building before them. They average over $10 per member.

Wooster, O., with 50 members, has sent in $328.47. This point is now two years old.

Flora, Ind., with 106 members, reports $479, and they purpose to go to $500. This work is just a little over a year and one-half old.

Cleveland, O., another mission point with 110 members, reports $425.

North Riverdale, Dayton, O., our newest baby church, has sent us $200, with $100 or more still to come. They have about 35 members.

Hagerstown, Md., has just sent us $317, with more to come. This is more than the former church in Hagerstown used to give. These dear folks are right now in the midst of the financial strain of a building program. They are now just about two years old.

Our Third Church of Los Angeles, Calif., has sent in $228, with perhaps another $100 to come. This work is now just two years old. They have just 56 members.

Mansfield, O., which is so far just a Bible Class, having not been organized into a church, meeting in a public park civic room and having a total of 50 in their group, reports an offering of $150. These people surely show the right kind of a spirit for a new church.

Ft. Wayne, Ind., a mission point which has just become self-supporting, reports an offering of $820. They have about 150 members. That is the kind of a spirit that Brethren Home Missions builds into its churches.

Berne, Ind., a country church, laid a cool $1000 on the line for home missions on Thanksgiving Sunday. This amount has now gone up to over $1100. Who said that it wasn't worth while to establish country churches? This church has a membership of about 150.

Fillmore, Calif., rises from $47 last year to $235 this year, with more coming. That is an increase of over 400%. Something surely has happened in Fillmore.

It is to be noted that all except the last three churches are mission points. What more could we ask in the way of progress, devotion, and sacrifice in our mission churches? Isn't it pardonable to be proud of such a wonderful testimony? What a fine tribute this is to the ministry of our mission pastors. We would like to mention many other splendid reports which have come in so far, but space forbids. Read the report that follows.

FROM A TITHER

Don't Read This If Money Talk Bothers You!

A Northern Montana church had a church building valued at $5000—no prayer meetings, 25 in Sunday School, and a congregation of about 20. Six years later they had a $40,000 church building, an $8,000 parsonage, and a membership of 300. The pastor's salary was raised from $500 to $1800. They have 62% of their membership in the Tither's Band and 14 in their life service class.

Reports From Mission Churches

GOD'S BLESSING ON FLORA

We the members and pastor of the Grace Brethren Church of Flora, Ind., extend greetings to the readers of The Brethren Missionary Herald. We are setting forth in the following paragraphs some of the great blessings which God has bestowed upon us here in recent months. It has been one year now since our new church building has been completed, and great and wonderful have been His workings here among the children of men, in the past 12 months.

OUR FALL REVIVAL

For our fall revival the congregation called one of our own elders, namely, Bro. William Clough, pastor of our church in Uniontown, Pa. Bro. Clough came during the month of October and led us in a splendid meeting. How we thank God for men who preach with conviction, who preach with compassion, men who preach boldly, and yet in a Spirit-filled manner, as did our brother in a two weeks' meeting. The Spirit of God worked in a mighty way so that definite decisions were made for Christ. The Evangelist and the pastor made many calls during the series. Scores of homes were contacted, and the gospel was presented to many in the community. Bro. Clough labored very earnestly and very fervently, pointing men and women to the Lamb of God which beareth away the sin of the world. Much prayer ascended to God in behalf of these meetings; and God heard and answered, for 7 decisions were witnessed. Several of these followed the Lord into the baptismal waters a week after the meetings had closed. We rejoice greatly for this time of revival; many made new decisions in their hearts to serve the Lord more earnestly. We hereby thank Bro. Clough for his untiring efforts while in our midst. Eternity will reveal the real results.

A SHORT MEETING IN BUENA VISTA, VA.

During the third week in October it was our joy to preach for a few nights in our Brethren Church in Buena Vista, where our Bro. Edward Bowman is the pastor. The interest was keen, and the attendance good from the beginning. The Spirit of God worked in a definite way, and as a result a number of souls found Christ as their Savior. Our fellowship with the Brethren at Buena Vista was very sweet, and we shall long remember our short visit with them. We thank our Bro. Bowman and his people for the privilege of serving them in such a meeting. We pray that God will continue to bless and use the Bowmans, as He has in the past, so that many shall find Christ as Savior, that a strong church might be built up to the glory of God.

A FOUR-IN-ONE SERVICE

November 9 marked an important mile-stone in the history of our church here at Flora. This was the date set for our Anniversary Day, our Home Coming, our Rally Day, and also our Home Missions Day. We had an "All-Day Service." Bro. Herman A. Hoyt was our speaker. During the morning service he preached upon the timely subject, "When Is It Time to Harvest the Wheat?" At noon, the congregation with friends and acquaintances of the church gathered about the tables in the basement for a fine dinner, which had been prepared by the ladies of the church. At the 2 o'clock hour we again assembled in the main auditorium for the home missions service. The Bible School was in charge of this service. First the children's department gave a program centered in the general theme of home missions. Each class in order presented then its offering for home missions. After the children had brought in their offering it was counted, and it amounted to $41.81. At this point Bro. Dyson, General Superintendent, took charge and called on each of the adult classes to present their offerings. Each class representative spoke a word as he brought the offering of his class Thus our entire home missions offering was given entirely through the Bible School, and each class was held responsible to raise as much as possible. After all the classes had reported, it was found that $300 had come in in cash, and that the pledges amounted to nearly $120. We certainly rejoiced over such a fine offering, and praise God that He made hearts willing to give To date our offering stands at $423.81; we have set our goal at $500 and still hope to reach it. This great day closed with a splendid evangelistic service at which Bro. Hoyt brought the message.

OUR FALL COMMUNION

On Thursday, Nov. 13, our membership met in the basement of our church to observe our fall communion. What a joy it was to see the young with the old gather about the Lord's Table to commemorate the death of Christ our Savior. The Lord was very near and precious to all of our hearts. At the close of the service several testified to the joy of having again been privileged to meet in this capacity. We had 67 in attendance. We left with the Lord's joy in our hearts and with the determination to proclaim the Lord's death until He come. May all of His children be found faithful in these days of spiritual need, is our prayer.

Yours because of Calvary,

—Henry Rempel, pastor.

WHAT HAPPENED BECAUSE ONE GIRL STAYED AT HOME

It was her birthday. Some friends were stopping through on a journey. She was hoping they would invite her to go with them and help her celebrate the day. The friends came and went and did not once mention her birthday. As a result, she was at home feeling very blue and perhaps just a little sorry for herself when the minister came.

Now this girl was a Christian, but she was not going to church; she was not yielded to the Lord's will, and she was not in fellowship.

The minister had come for the special purpose of inviting her to the tent meeting that evening. He gave her the invitation and left.

That evening, the girl and her friend were at the tent. They came again the next night, and the third night, and for almost every night during the meetings.

One evening, at the close of the service—the invitation had been given, the benediction pronounced, and the people were leaving—the young man came to Bro. R. Paul Miller, the evangelist, and told him he wanted to get right with the Lord. He had been a church member all his life but now for the first time the message of salvation was made plain as it fell on listening ears. Two nights before he had gone home and thrown away his cigarettes. Now he came to accept Christ as his Savior and Lord.

He immediately felt called of the Lord to give his life in full time service in the Christian ministry. He could never make up his mind before to enter any field. He could not be settled or satisfied, but now there came assurance and peace in a steadfast resolve to go where the Lord might lead. He is planning to enter Bob Jones college this coming semester to begin his preparation. The few months of waiting have tended to strengthen rather than change his purpose.

The girl never made an open renewal of faith, but her life during the past few months have given evidence that fellowship with her Lord is restored. She is an exceptional artist and had great hopes of making a name for herself. Before, whenever she was asked to use her talent for the Lord, she would refuse. Now she volunteers to help whenever possible. She has yielded her talent to the Lord, and hopes to study so that she can use her talent to His glory. Both of these young people are planning to be baptized and enter the church.

The girl's family were Christian and counted our church as their church, but they were not coming regularly. They began to come to the tent meeting, and have become more and more interested in the work of the church. The mother is trained in working with children, and has volunteered to start an Intermediate C.E. society. Then, too, they are a help in reaching the older young people.

OTHER ITEMS OF INTEREST

The attendance, in the services, has grown during the past few months. On Rally Day, we had an attendance of 76 for S.S., and about 90 for the home mission play which was given the following hour. The Sunday after Rally Day there were 65 in Sunday School. Last Sunday the attendance was down a little, but it was still double the attendance for a year ago on that Sunday.

One thing which has been especially gratifying is the church attendance. There are always some children who leave after Sunday School, but during the last few weeks since the tent meeting, a number come in so that the morning church attendance is as large or larger than the Sunday School.

—Russell Williams, pastor.

THE THIRD BRETHREN CHURCH OF LOS ANGELES

As we come to the end of 1941, we would like to tell the brotherhood of the work of the Lord in this part of His church. We are very grateful to all who have, by prayer and gift, helped to make this work possible. We are trying, under the leadership of the Holy Spirit, to be faithful in the place of stewardship where the Lord has placed us.

This congregation has always held a very warm spot in our hearts; for it was while we were serving the South Gate church that we had the privilege, with the Brethren of that church, to begin this as a mission point entirely under the control of the South Gate Brethren. The work was begun Apr. 1, 1938, and remained associated with the parent congregation for a little more than a year before it became an independent congregation.

When, on June 1 of this year, we were given the unanimous call of the congregation and of the Home Missions Council to assume the under-shepherding work of this church, we felt definitely led of the Holy Spirit to accept. So now we are just completing our seventh month of work on this field. During that time the Lord has wonderfully solved several problems that existed within the congregation at the time of our coming. For this we thank Him, for there was no future for the church so long as those problems existed, and no limits to what might be done for Him once they were removed. So, you can see why we rejoice in Christ Jesus.

Just as we came unto this field, the congregation had a business meeting and revised the church roll, not desiring that the new pastor should begin his work with more names on the roll than there were members. We appreciated this very much. After that meeting there were 37 names left on the roll, most of whom have been active since we have been here. We have added by letter and baptism those who have desired membership in the congregation. One has been lost by death. At the time of this writing there are now 63 members, with several awaiting baptism and membership. For all this evidence of growth we praise our Father in heaven; for although we plant and water, the increase is all of Him.

Sin is the thing that puts hell into a soul, and that will put the soul into hell.

During this time the financial condition has been completely changed. Then there was difficulty in getting sufficient money to keep all bills paid; but now they are paid on time, several fine special offerings have been received and given out for God's work and workers. The saints find great joy in giving when they know the cause is worthy. In addition to the regular payments on the property we have paid an extra $200 during this time. The home missions offering, in cash and pledges, is now a little more than $325. We are now planning for our offering for Grace Seminary.

The church is paying for, and sending to each home represented in the congregation by a member 16 years of age or more, The Brethren Missionary Herald. This paper and this plan is proving to be a great blessing in the various phases of the work. (We thank the Lord that we have a church paper of which we are not the least ashamed and for which we offer no apology whatsoever.) We recommend this plan to other mission churches especially.

We are very happy, also, in our relationship with The Brethren Home Missions Council. The help that the denomination is giving to us, by way of this Council, is most heartilly appreciated. We are now looking forward to the first two weeks of March, when we shall have Bro. R. Paul Miller with us for a revival-evangelistic campaign.

We covet the prayers of the intercessors that we may prove faithful witnesses in this part of this great city, where thousands live within a mile radius of the church house; that this war and black-out scare shall not hinder the work; that the Lord will bless Bro. Miller and the church as they work together for souls in March.

Conard Sandy, Pastor.

God is so holy and just that He demands the penalty of His broken law to be paid. God is so gracious that, to save us from paying it, He came forth in the person of Jesus. God in Christ went to the cross that there He might take upon Himself the guilt of the whole human race, and thus unveil the passion of His heart for a world of sinners. There the penalty was fully paid, and now God is just, and yet the Justifier of those who believe in Jesus. We are justified by His blood. The cross is God's grace in action.

—Frederick P. Wood.

The cloud that seemed so dull and gray
Is ladened, bringing answered prayer;
Henceforth "be not dismayed" nor fear;
Faith sees the "substance" all the way.

The cloud has been to thee God's test,
And will disperse as on you go;
The rainbow's in the cloud; look up,
And see God work for you His best.

Jan. 1942 — News Briefs From Our Workers

The following item, of interest to all who uphold our missionary work in prayer, appeared in the Dec. 21 bulletin of the First Brethren Church of Long Beach "A special request for prayer goes forth to those who know how to lay hold on God and who are interested in our foreign work. Under our board, there is a very fine national pastor in Argentina by the name of Pereira. As you read this calendar, his wife is in a hospital in RIO CUARTO, ARGENTINA. She is the victim of a tumor that may be cancerous. She and her husband, valuable national missionaries, need our prayers in this hour of trial." Let us pray that the Lord will heal her completely, if that be His will.

Another missionary item of vital interest to all concerns BROTHER AND SISTER ROBERT WILLIAMS, who were denied passports after they were returned to America following the Zamzam disaster. A few weeks ago we rejoiced to learn that after considerable effort on the part of our foreign board, passports were finally granted the Williams. They have returned to the east after a tour to the Western churches, so as to be on hand as soon as passage can be secured, and their freight replacing that lost on the Zamzam, is in Philadelphia. Mrs. Williams is supported by the Waynesboro, Pa., church, in whose bulletin of Dec. 28 we read "Permission to sail for Africa is again revoked by U.S. BRO. ORVILLE JOBSON wants us to pray for a plane to take him back to his post in Africa. Talk about courage!" Surely, as the age draws to a close, Satan is doing his utmost to block all missionary efforts. Let us pray that God's work be not hindered, and also pray "the Lord of the harvest, that He will send forth laborers into His harvest."

Two new young people's organizations were recently started at the MEYERSDALE, PA., church, one for young people 15 years old and un in charge of the pastor, Bro. Orville A. Lorenz, and the other for those from 7 to 15 in charge of Sister Lorenz. The first Sunday nearly 50 were present, and an increased attendance is expected. The Meyersdale church has also recently organized a teacher's training class for present and prospective teachers in their Bible School.

The First Brethren Church of DAYTON, O., has undertaken to supply about 100 Bibles which Bro. Sewell Landrum needs for his work in the public schools at Clayhole, Ky. This same church, in its drive for subscriptions to The Brethren Missionary Herald, has reminded its members, "For the small cost of about the equivalent of two sticks of chewing gum a week, you can have The Brethren Missionary Herald. It comes regularly into your home, and it is worth many times that amount to any family that is interested in the work of The Brethren Church."

Bro. A. H. Williams of the HAGERSTOWN, MD., church, sends this recent communication, "Praise the Lord! Home missions offering $307.79; goal set, $200; still coming in. Capacity house tonight—folks eager to hear the true Word." Not only is this church to be commended for its splendid mission offering, but a publication offering of $66.85 was received in December for The Brethren Missionary Herald Co. This exemplary giving comes from a home mission church which is in the midst of a building program.

On Christmas Sunday, open house for the members of the LA VERNE, CALIF. congregation was held at the home of the pastor, Bro. Donald Carter. This open house, the pastor stated, "is being held as a change from the customary sending out of greeting cards."

The Grace Brethren Church of HAGERSTOWN, MD., is offering to pay $2.50 toward next summers camp fee for all its young people who have a perfect attendance in Bible School from Jan. 1 to July 1. Green Mountain Camp, the Brethren young people's camp headquarters for this district, is having some improvements made, among which are a new swimming pool, a large new playing field, and a drinking fountain.

The war has necessitated some drastic changes in our churches on the WEST COAST, as can be seen from the following items taken from church bulletins

LA VERNE, CALIF.—"Because of the present emergency, it shall certainly be our duty as a church to cooperate in every respect with the authorities regarding air raid precautions. The ministers of Brethren churches in Southern California favor conducting all evening services at a later afternoon hour until conditions merit the return to the former time. Therefore, unless otherwise announced, Sunday evening services shall be at a time before dark."

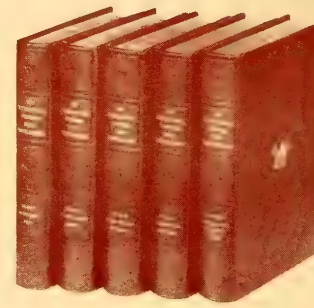
GLENDALE, CALIF.—"During this time of emergency, and until further notice, our evening service is to be unified with the Christian Endeavor program and will meet at 4:00 P. M., closing by 5:30. The following schedule will be observed: 4:00 P.M.—Christian Endeavor societies will meet in their respective rooms for prayer and discussion—no song service. 4:30 P.M.—Christian Endeavor does not dismiss, but will assemble in church auditorium for vesper congregational song service and message by the pastor Due to the existing emergency and air raid precaution, we will combine our Bible School and church Christmas program. It is to be held next Sunday afternoon at 3:45 P.M. We realize that this is not the most convenient time, but feel that it will be for the best under existing circumstances."

LONG BEACH, CALIF. (1)—"The Greatest Black-out of All Time" —that will be the pastor's subject for the service that is to begin promptly at 3:30 P.M. today. Remember, this is the daylight service that is to take the place of the regular evening service. Whatever we do in the winning of this war, we dare not ease up on our spiritual efforts. A material victory would profit us little if in winning it we lose our souls No Christian Endeavor services this evening—all Endeavorors should attend the afternoon church service at 3:30 P.M. in lieu of their own service this evening . . . No general Christmas program will be held this year, due to the present national emergency. Certain departments of the Bible School, however, will conduct Christmas programs in their own assembly rooms next Sunday morning"

The First Brethren Church of DAYTON, O., has adopted the plan of having its members make their contributions toward home and foreign missions a weekly matter. Half of the year the offerings in the "missions" side of the regular offering envelope go toward the donor's home mission offering and the rest of the year toward foreign missions. The pastor, Bro. R. D. Barnard, has termed this an "easy way to give a large offering." Through this plan over $500 in accumulated gifts were on hand for home missions before the annual home mission offering was taken.

The WHITTIER, CALIF. church reports that over $1,000 of their $1,500 goal for home missions was received on Thanksgiving Sunday. That, we are told, was the largest first day amount received for years.

BRO. AND SISTER FRED TAYLOR, whom those attending the last National Fellowship of Brethren Churches will remember for their musical contributions, have been serving their Lord in the Pacific Garden Mission, Chicago. They wrote their home church (Long Beach 1st), "More people have turned to the Lord in meetings in these last three days (since the U. S. was drawn into the war) than in weeks preceding the news." The Long Beach bulletin, in commenting, states, "We are hearing such news from other sources also. What opportunities for witnessing Christians now have! Let us be up and doing, for 'the night cometh, when no man can work'."



From what we are able to learn, some very fine watch night services were conducted throughout the brotherhood on New Year's Eve. Among the special services which have come to our attention are the one Norman Uphouse, pastor of the North Riverdale church at Dayton, O., conducted at HAGERSTOWN, MD.; the one at GLENDALE, CALIF. where testimonies of refugees from Germany and songs by a converted Russian opera singer were special features; and the one at FT. WAYNE, IND., in which testimonies from those received into the church during the year played an important part in the reception for new members, and in which the new prayer chapel just completed was dedicated by Bro. Herman Hoyt from Grace Theological Seminary.

Don't overlook the notice elsewhere in this magazine that you can have your Brethren Missionary Heralds bound. If you want to take advantage of this offer, send in your copies immediately.

A Message from

MRS. HOMER A. KENT

National President

W.M.C.

Dear Sisters:

The New Year lies before us—a new year fraught with promise of victory; a new year holding out the blessed privilege of serving when days are difficult; a new year in which to walk closer to Him; a new year in which to study the Word and fellowship with others and thus grow in grace ourselves.

The threshold of the new year permits us to look backwards as well as forwards. We can look back and recognize our failures, our weaknesses and our neglect of Him. We can see our disappointments as well as the manifold joys and blessings which have been ours. Surely it is a time of rejoicing and praise "that hitherto hath the Lord helped us." We are strengthened and emboldened to go forward with every confidence, knowing that "when He putteth forth His own sheep, he goeth before them."

We covet for every council a greater yieldedness, a more earnest willingness to serve, and a deeper passion for the lost souls of men and women.

MRS. EARL VIRTS

Literature Sec'y

It has really been a pleasure to serve as Literature Secretary during the last few months. It has made me realize that the W.M.C. has a very important part to play in the work of our church.

My desire is to fill this office efficiently and to cooperate with you all in every way. In working together, may we bring glory to His name.

A Message from

MRS. W. A. OGDEN

Dear Women of the W.M.C.:

These are surely critical and yet wonderful days in which we live. In troubled times people are more willing to receive a word of testimony and spiritual help. May we be constantly in prayer and alert for opportunities to witness for our Lord, ever watching for His return.

Greetings from

MRS. H. W. KOONTZ

Greetings from the financial department of The Brethren Women's Missionary Council. It has been a heart-warming privilege to record the gifts that come because of your liberality, and to realize that as we send this money forth we are a part of the Lord's work in many places and phases. These offerings prove that you have done as the Macedonians did, who "first gave their own selves to the Lord," for dedication of self means dedication of possessions and pocketbook too. May we all press on to greater heights of godly living and giving till Jesus comes.

Greetings from

MRS. ORVILLE LORENZ

Every work, small or great, is a challenge to the inner forces of the one to whom it is given. The work of The Brethren Women's Missionary Council is a challenge to every woman of The Brethren Church. Let us meet it unitedly with prayerful lips and willing hearts—remembering

Only one life—'twill soon be past
Only what's done for Christ will last.

The Editor

MRS. R. E. GINGRICH

Sees Victory

Dear W.M.C. Members:

Greetings for a happy new year!

May we approach the tasks that await us with confidence. We stand upon the threshold of a new year in a world torn by turmoil and chaos, but we need not fear. Victory is ours because we are in Him.

"Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord" (I Cor. 15:58).

QUIETNESS

"Be still and know that I am God;"
That I Who made and gave thee life
Will lead thy faltering steps aright;
That I Who see each sparrow's fall
Will hear and heed thy earnest call.
I am God.

"Be still and know that I am God."
When aching burdens crush thy heart,
Then know I form thee for My part
And purpose in the plan I hold.
Thou art the clay that I would mold.
Trust in God.

"Be still and know that I am God,"
Who made the atom's tiny span
And set it moving to My plan,
That I Who guide the stars above
Will guide and keep thee in My love.
Be thou still.

"BUT GOD"

Or,

"WHAT GOD HAS DONE WITH THE MATERIAL FROM WHICH HE IS BUILDING THE CHURCH"

Ephs. 2: 4-10, 13-22

By HOMER A. KENT, Grace Theological Seminary

In our last study in the Book of Ephesians, we noted from chapter 2 the character of the material from which the church is being built. We saw that the material was extremely inferior. Man in his natural state, apart from a divine work of grace, is dead in trespasses and sins, under the dominion of Satan, walking after his own pleasure, a child of wrath, without Christ, an alien and a stranger to grace, without hope and without God.

"But God" did something with the material which He found. The account which we have in Ephesians 2 shows man's natural state to be altogether hopeless. Then we come to the two words "but God" and the whole picture is changed. Two similar words are also found in the chapter. After telling the far-away position of man before he found Christ, the apostle stops and presents the other side of the picture. "But now" (v. 13) "in Christ Jesus" all is changed.

A Glorious Transformation

When in Florence, Italy, some years ago, the writer visited one of the great art galleries where is a remarkable statue of David, the sweet psalmist of Israel. He learned the interesting story connected with this magnificent work of art. At first the great piece of marble was mutilated by an incompetent sculptor. It seemed irreparably marred and work upon it ceased. Then the Senate of Florence voted to have Michael Angelo see what he could do with it. He complied, and the result has drawn the admiration of countless thousands who have come to see the masterpiece produced from a block of stone supposed to be ruined beyond repair. But this is nothing in comparison to what God has done in reclaiming lost mankind. Man was in a hopeless state, but God! It is the wonder of the hosts of heaven what He has done in man's salvation.

What God Has Done

In vs. 4-10 and 13-22, note 12 things God has done in the redemption of lost mankind:

(1.) He has "Quickened us together with Christ" (v. 5).

He has given us spiritual life. By grace we are now alive "in Christ." All that this includes will take an eternity to unfold. Whereas the believer was once dead and in the grave-clothes of sin, he is now alive unto God through our Lord Jesus Christ. Let us pray that John 10:10 may be more fully realized in our lives.

2. He has given the believer a place "In the heavenlies," vs. 6-7.

In a very wonderful sense it is true that when Christ ascended into heaven, every believer ascended with Him. For we arose from the dead with Him and we also ascended with Him. The believer is "in Christ Jesus." We have a new position before God "in Christ." We have a new standing. We have access now into His immediate presence. See Col 3:1. Some day when Christ comes we shall come into a fuller possession of what is already ours, but right now every believer is seated with Christ at the right hand of the Father.

3. He has "Saved" us, vs. 8-9.

Wonderful word is the word "Saved"! It is connected with the very heart of the message of the Bible which is the Book of salvation. We who once were lost are now saved from the guilt and penalty of sin. And more than this, the believer is constantly being saved from the power and habit of sin in his daily life and one day shall be saved from the presence of sin when Christ comes.

4. He has created us for Service (v. 10).

We are "His workmanship." Literally, we are his "handiwork." From the same Greek word comes the word "poem." The Lord has saved us for service. He has ordained that we should walk in good works. What a glorious privilege it is to be called to work for God!

5. He has made us "Nigh by the Blood" (v. 13).

How nigh to God is the soul made by the blood? As nigh as Christ Himself because the saved soul is "in Christ."

> "Near, so very near to God,
> Nearer I cannot be;
> For in the Person of His Son,
> I'm just as near as He.
> Dear, so very dear to God,
> Dearer I cannot be;
> For in the Person of His Son,
> I'm just as dear as He."

6. He has made Jew and Gentile "one new man" in Christ (vs. 14-15).

This is one of the great "mysteries" of the Scriptures. God is now forming His church out of both Jews and Gentiles who accept Christ as Savior. The church is a new creation made up of people of every race and nationality.

7. He has brought about our reconciliation to God (v. 16).

It is clear from this passage that it took nothing short of the cross to bring about the possibility of such reconciliation. Sin had separated man from God. The blood of the cross is efficacious to take away the sin and bring man into fellowship with his Maker.

8, 9, 10, 11. Space forbids that I should more than mention the next four things God has done for the believer, namely, (8) He has made us recipients of peace (v. 17); (9) He has provided us with access to God (v. 18); (10) He has constituted us fellow citizens with the saints (v. 19); and (11) He has constituted us members of the household of God (v. 19).

12. Finally, He has constituted us part of that great invisible temple of God, the church, whose foundation and cornerstone is Christ, abiding inhabitant and whose is the eternal Spirit (vs. 20-22). Each individual believer is a part of that holy temple. It is the fairest and noblest institution in the world. None shall ever prevail against it. There is nothing so worth belonging to as the church.

"Open Doors" - Mukti

By MRS. NORMAN UPHOUSE

Ramabai, the daughter of a learned Brahman, had an unusual life for a girl of her day in India. Her father, a widower, while at a religious festival, met and married the nine year old daughter of a Brahman pilgrim. That very day he started with her to his home 100 miles away, and the child-wife never saw her parents again.

Some years before he had studied with a noted teacher in the city of Poona; and daily, as he studied, he could hear his teacher's wife learning to read also. He was impressed with the fact that a woman might be taught to read, and tried to teach his wife. She, however, did not wish to learn and his mother forbade the lessons, so he gave up the attempt. Now he began to give his new little wife lessons in Sanskrit. His mother again forbade, so he departed from her house and built one of his own where he taught his wife to read.

Here three children were born, two daughters and a son. Ramabai, the only child who survived, was born in April 1858. Her mother was her first teacher, but later when her father found how apt a pupil she was, he became her teacher.

When Ramabai was nine her family left their home and spent seven years in pilgrimage, visiting shrines and temples and sacred rivers. They were welcomed by the priests because of their gold, but later when a famine came and their money was gone, the priests drove them away with harsh words and curses. The suffering among the poor families became intense, and Ramabai heard her first call for service when she saw the suffering among the women and children, especially the child widows.

Ramabai spent the next few years travelling through India lecturing. She had the degree of Pandita or teacher conferred upon her. This was the first time any woman of India had been honored thus.

Ramabai married in 1880, and because neither she or her husband believed in Hinduism or Christianity, they were wed by civil rite. At the end of 19 months of happy married life, during which time a little daughter, Manarama (Heart's Joy), was born, her husband died suddenly of cholera. Of his death Ramabai says, "This great grief drew me nearer to God."

As a widow Ramabai again took up lecture work, and formed a society to promote the education of children and to discourage child marriage. Branch societies were established all over India.

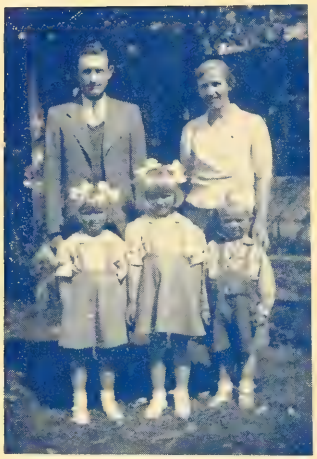
During this time the Holy Spirit was at work in Ramabai's heart. She became definitely conscious of God's guidance, and longed for a deeper knowledge of spiritual things. She wrote a book entitled, "Morals for Women," and with the proceeds of its sale determined to go to England. She and her little daughter were cared for by the sisters in St. Mary's Home at Wantage, and there she came to know the truth of Christianity. She accepted the Lord Jesus as her personal Savior; and on Sept. 29, 1893, she and her daughter were baptized into the Church of England.

After three years given to study of English, she received an invitation from a cousin in Philadelphia saying, "Come over and see me graduate from the Medical College. Come see these American women, they know how to do things."

Ramabai visited America; and in Philadelphia she took up the study of the kindergarten system; and on her return to India opened a school for child-widows. The school increased in numbers, many widows coming to escape the sufferings and persecution of their homes.

Each morning before the day's tasks were begun, Ramabai and her daughter had family prayers in their room with the door open. At first the girls stood without and listened to the Christian hymns, and later they entered and sat on the floor during the morning prayers. When the directors of the school heard she was leading the girls to know the Lord Jesus and many of them were embracing Christianity, they threatened to take the child widows away from the school. Ramabai did not stop teaching Jesus Christ, and the Board of Directors closed the school. However, the incident was published all over India, and the child widows, realizing they had a friend, came flocking to her. The Lord provided the means and she continued her school. A great storm had threatened her work, but in that storm God sent His great blessing.

Ramabai realized she was not sufficient for her task but she learned to depend on her Lord. When the terrible famine broke in 1896, she went into the stricken area and brought hundreds of girls to her home. She did this with the permission of the British government. But the city officials of Poona, where her home was located, said, "You cannot bring those women and girls here, for they are from famine districts and have all kinds of diseases. Take them away."



What should Ramabai do? Then God's hand was revealed. A few weeks before a friend from America had sent some money with which she had purchased 100 acres of land about 30 miles outside of Poona. To this farm she took the girls and women, and there they camped in the fields.

Friends from England and America, hearing of the work, sent money; and a settlement was built which they called Mukti (Salvation). Here the women and girls were housed and fed and trained. They were taught sewing and cooking, farming and weaving, and also typesetting. Beside all this, they spent many hours in the school room. Many were led to accept Christ as Savior and became earnest Christians.

As day by day God led Ramabai on in her work, so her faith and workers increased. At one time $1,500.00 was needed to complete some of the buildings; and early one morning, Ramabai and her Christian girls gathered for a day of fasting and prayer. All day long they prayed, and when the sun set they rose and sang, "Praise God from Whom All Blessings Flow." Then they went to their evening meal and to sleep. That same night in a city in America a man could not sleep. God was speaking to him, and in the morning he sent Ramabai a check for $1,500. So God answered Ramabai's prayer.

Ramabai went to be with her Lord on April 5, 1922, and "she being dead, yet speaketh"; for all over India her children in the Lord rise up and call her blessed. In humble homes are happy Christian wives and mothers, who, without Ramabai's aid would have died of starvation or lived a life of shame in some temple of India. Scores of Bible women, trained in Mukti, are today giving the Bread of Life to their less fortunate sisters. Nurses, who learned from Ramabai the joy of service, are bringing relief to suffering womanhood. Teachers in the schools of cities and villages of India are opening the eyes of the mentally and spiritually blind.

NOTE: For a few months, we are to have as our missionary letter a diary provided by Mrs. R. C. Wagner. Our prayer is that these glimpses of the life of a busy missionary may serve as a real challenge to our W.M.C. women. The picure at left shows Mr. and Mrs. Wagner and family.

Monday, Aug. 25th—

Had our devotions and mate as usual this morning, and after a bite to eat began the day's work. Got the setting hen and her 13 little chicks into their new living quarters, then started on the washing. I wonder when my woman will learn to do things the way I tell her instead of exactly the opposite. Have explained to her that we wash white, light colored, and fast-colored clothes in the machine; and what does she do but spend half a day this past week washing all of her white, or nearly white, clothes on the board; and today she brings me her colored things, including a red coat and a red dress. But today is her birthday so we'll not say anything this time.

Since we were celebrating a birthday, we decided to eat the noon meal together with the Cavegnos. Mr. C. prepared the barbecue and they furnished the bread, while we furnished salad and oranges. Ate out-doors picnic fashion. Then after I got the clothes picked in, I made an angel food cake and an orange cake, and so about 5:15 p. m. we had bread, butter, jelly, honey, cake and chocolate together. This served as the evening meal for both families. I washed up the dishes and had the girls wipe them so they won't forget how, and that gave the Cavegnos time to go to their evening class.

Haven't had time to have school for the girls today, so sent Elena to school both morning and afternoon. Had to get a letter written to Mrs. Dowdy and a few lines to my mother to let her know we are all right, and then set the hose going in the front yard. Got my share of the ironing and some mending done this evening. Tonight the parrot died.

Tuesday, Aug. 26th—

Have not been able to settle down to anything very definite this A.M. Gave the girls some school work and tried to keep Victor quiet enough so they could concentrate a little. Taught Maria (my woman) how to make bookmarks out of little Scripture texts and ribbon. She got through with her other work early enough to do some darning for me too. Got dinner.

Wrote two letters this P.M., then got the children ready to go up town. Called to see why two of my S.S. children have not been coming and made another visit. Got supper. Prayer meeting tonight with nine present.

Wednesday, Aug. 27th—

Have had devotions with the children and have them tucked off to bed, so maybe I will be able to write a little. This morning, besides giving the girls their schoolwork and the preparing of a simple meal, typed 50 invitations for our S.S. which we hope to have on Sunday mornings instead of afternoons from now on. We want to encourage the children themselves to hand out these invitations, in the hopes of reaching many new children who are too much entertained on Sunday P.Ms. to come then. My mornings seem so short for the work that needs to be done, but I am so thankful for the burden of prayer that the Lord is laying upon our hearts. May God keep us ever faithful to our morning watch with Him.

This afternoon, made a poster for the bulletin board announcing the change of time for the S.S., extra classes for Sunday P.M., and the change of hour for all meetings. Also prepared a stencil for the mimeographing of some more copies of the simple statutes governing the women's and girls' organizations. And now will try to write some news items from Almafuerte for the women's section of the new church paper, "Heraldo Misionero Argentino." What a relief it would be if one of our women or girls would do such writing!

Wonder when I'm going to get at all the sewing I was going to do this week.

DISCOURAGED? NEVER!

Discouraged I must never be:
I have a Lord Who cares for me.
The trials that come my faith to test
I count as precious. He knows best!

Tempted, I can ever stand
Upheld, clasped by His mighty hand.
My strength's but weakness; His I take
And find a sure way of escape.

Tried as by fire, I trust His Word.
Hast thou not known, hast thou not heard
He giveth power, increaseth strength?
His love's past measure: bredth, depth, length.

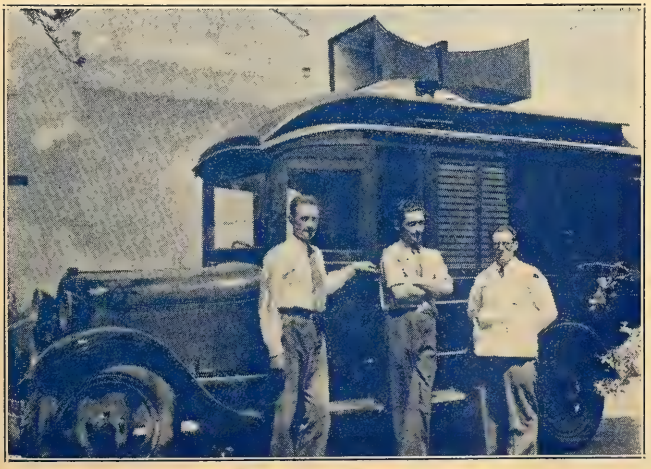
What Have ? You Done?

Our Bible Coach In Argentina

Centuries ago the Master sent His servants out into the streets and lanes, the highways and hedges, to gather in the lost. Today no more effective manner of literally obeying that same command can be found than through the instrumentality of the Bible Coach. Its workers are able to reach lonely places and carry the good seed to scattered farms and hamlets many miles from the railway, which would never otherwise have opportunity of receiving the message of life. They also have the privilege of preaching the Word to multitudes, through its loud-speaking system, who would never have been persuaded to enter a church or hall.

To the Latin-American people, the missionary, on first acquaintance, is a suspicious character; the Book he brings a forbidden one, his message of the evil one. Various dire predictions are made as to the character of events that take place within the mission walls. We have, so it has been said, as one of our rites, a processional about the statue of the Virgin Mary, and each person spits upon the statue as he files past; and we also perform black magic upon the unfortunate boys and girls who come to our Sunday Schools. And so the ball of suspicion rolls about the missionary at his entrance into the community. You can easily see why the people, many times, are slow about coming to us in our halls; but through the Bible Coach we can go to the people with the message. In the open-air, hidden by the shadows of night, they can listen unafraid, and the confidence of many is won.



Our field in Argentina in which the Bible Coach operates is a large one. Taking Rio Cuarto as a center, to the east we have 250 miles with towns from 6 to 15 miles apart; to the south there is an equal distance; to the north, 150 miles to the capital of Cordoba; and to the west about 100 miles. In all of this half of a large province, there are but the few established missions of The Brethren Church, with the exception of one or two towns in which believers of other denominations are carrying on. This is but one of many such fields in Argentina, comparatively untouched by the Christian message. The opportunities for Bible Coach work are enormous.

Picture, with me, the Bible Coach wending its way across the great Pampa of Argentina; its route unmarked by any road signs; over rough roads, here and there over-run by sand dunes, or converted into veritable lakes during the rainy season; through towns, many of them as alike as two peas in a pod. But whether the town be large or small, the procedure of the Bible Coach is the same as each town is reached. A report must be made to the Police Department as to their business, and to the Municipality for permission to use a certain corner for the meeting. We thank God for the fine cooperation we are finding these days on the part of the authorities in most towns. The workers then find a room in which they can be housed. The Coach itself furnishes them with folding cots, bedding, cooking utensils and other necessary articles. About sundown the Coach is out, going up one street and down another, drawing the people from their homes with the unaccustomed sound of music from the loud-speaker, then announcing the hour and place of the evening meeting. At the hour announced the Coach is taken to the spot selected, the curtain made ready, and with the first notes of music the people begin gathering. Soon there is a large crowd about the Coach, with many more standing in the shade of trees and buildings, where they probably hope to pass unnoticed. In addition to these are the many within a radius of three or four blocks around the Coach, who cannot help but hear even if they remain in their homes. Colored slides are thrown on the screen and the message of salvation given through the loud-speaker.

The following morning the colportors are on the street, going from house to house with the Bible, doing personal work and giving out tracts and leaving some portion of the Bible in every home. After several days the Coach moves on to the next town, having been an inspiration and help to isolated Christians and to groups of believers. Many who had bought Bibles, perhaps years before, and had put them away because of lack of interest or understanding, now have them out reading them; having been brought, through the meetings, to a deeper appreciation of the value of the Scriptures. Men and women of all walks of life have been dealt with. Many hear for the first time of a Savior, able to save to the uttermost. It is impossible to estimate the results of this great work; only eternity will reveal that to us. Contacts made through this work open the door to meetings in the homes, and this later expands to meetings in the halls and an established work. Space will not permit to tell of the many precious souls we have known personally, many now in glory, who first came to know the Lord through the Bible Coach work. The work in Hernando, Tancacha, Huinca Renanco, Alejandro and other parts, all had their beginning in the work of the Bible Coach.

South America has long been called the Land of Opportunity. In a spiritual sense it has never been more so than it is today. There is an open door, and a willing ear is lent to any voice that professes to speak with authority on ultimate things.

This condition presents a challenge, and constitutes a supreme opportunity for the forces of both light and darkness. That the latter is taking up the challenge and embracing the opportunity, there can be no doubt. Spiritism, theosophy, and kindred cults, are making enormous strides. The Church of Rome has not failed to be alive to the possibilities. Rome today, more afraid than she has ever been of the evangelical movement, is out combating it in two ways—by imitation of our methods, and renewed persecution and intolerance. Institutions similar to ours have been set up. Editions of the Gospels, of course with Roman Catholic notes, have been circulated to compete with the work of the Bible and Missionary Societies. Missions are held by preaching friars, sometimes in tents, in an effort to undo the work of the missonary. In connection with these, we have known of the priest actually performing baptismal and ceremonial rites, gratis; this, of course, in imitation of the missionary.

Today is indeed the day of opportunity in the Land of Opportunity for the Bible Coach. This great work presents a challenge to the women of the W.M.C. who have undertaken this year to contribute to its support. Will you keep its wheel rolling? Remember, there is no people in all the world more in need of the gospel than these dear deceived people of Latin America!

PRAISE THE LORD! JUNIORS

Two new Junior Sisterhoods since National Conference—and both of them wrote about their societies and their offcers!

Let's Listen to Waterloo, Iowa Speak—

"We have had two meetings and we can surely see the workings of the Lord in it all. We had six at our first meeting and 12 at the next. We are very much interested and are reaching those outside our church who are unsaved. We are bringing our things for the Kentucky box and have started our scrap books. We are saving tinfoil and are going to make some attractive mottoes to place in homes for Christmas, thus giving a testimony. We want to be real soul-winners, so please remember us in your prayers. And we would be thrilled to hear from any of the other Sisterhoods too. Our officers are: Pres., Norma Jean Schrock; vice-pres., Lola Deits; sec'y, Jeanne Azbill; treas., Peggy Lane."

Now a word from our other thriving "baby": Fremont, O.

"We just organized in October with 11 present. The second meeting increased to 14. We are having such a good time working on our scrap books. We take them to our monthly meetings, and work on them after our devotional period and business. Our officers are: Pres., Helen Miller; vice-pres., Virginia Ash; sec'y., Ruby Koontz; treas., Nancy Beier; patroness, Mrs. Phillip Simmons; ass't patroness, Mrs. Carl Brooks."

And the Fremont group sent yours truly some samples of the program booklets and invitations they are putting in their scrap books.

May 1942 find many more Junior groups organizing and reporting. Don't forget your financial goal at this time. Jan. 31 is the dead line. What about your Bible reading? The winter months when we have to stay indoors so much is a good time to catch up. Remember, our big goal is—Every Junior Sisterhood a banner society this year. Will you help us reach it?

Yours because of Calvary,

—Aunt Mabel.

BIBLE HIGHLIGHTS

The 3 chapters; 61 verses; 1,559 words in the Second Epistle of Peter contain a timely message!

At present, we face a new year brimming with new adventures and responsibilities for the Christian. What shall be our goal?

For the present, fruitful lives (1:8); for the future, an abundant entrance (1:11); both of which are based upon our past escape from corruption and our partaking of the divine nature (1:4).

We can realize this goal by possessing our possessions (1:3); by claiming the promises (1:4); and by progressing in the Christian life (1:5ff).

In 1:5-17 the Holy Spirit draws a picture of the Christian life in full bloom. From the seed of faith springs forth the stem and leaves of virtue, knowledge, etc., which blossom into the flower of love that will bear the fruit of the Spirit.

II Peter and II Timothy are very similar. Both writers are facing death. Both have a vision of the last days. Both are concerned about those they shall leave behind.

1:18 is very interesting when read in the light of Matt. 17:1-8. Suppose Peter's request to stay upon the mountain top had been granted!

Against what shall we guard ourselves in the days ahead? We must guard ourselves against the persuasive ways of the false teachers which are so prevalent today. They are vividly described in chap. 2. (Compare this chapter with the Epistle of Jude).

Peter is not speaking of Christians in 2:20-22. The Bible speaks of Christians as sheep, not dogs and pigs.

Our guide for the new year is the Word of God (3:1 ff). The Lord is not slack concerning His promises, and of them we dare not be ignorant. If the Word ever becomes common to us, or we become calloused to it, we will become careless in our Christian living.

Therefore, as we read our Library Books every day, let us look for Him on every page. Let us let Him have the 'last word' in our lives.

I—Introduction

Wendell Phillips has said, "It is the Indian race that the people of the United States will most dread to meet in the awful day of judgment."

361,000 of the United States population are Indians, composed of 300 different tribes, the largest of which is the Navajo Indian tribe numbering over 50,000. The Navajo Reservation. "America's Foreign Field," is situated in the big desert lands of northern Arizona, New Mexico and Utah.

They are not a village people but nomadic and pastoral. They are widely scattered over a vast area of 17,000,000 acres of land, which makes it very difficult in reaching them. They are a primitive and backward people. Few, especially in the section where we are located, can speak, read or write any English. Their own language is unwritten. Thousands of boys and girls of school age are out of school, for education is not compulsory. One of the great tragedies of Navajoland is that, usually, those who have gone to school must return to the homes and ways of their people, and finding themselves unable to battle the customs and traditions they sink to the same level.

II—Superstitions and Fears—No Hope

The worship of some 300 created things is the religion of the Navajo Indians. Ceremonials are held in the hogans by medicine men of the tribe, who are their leaders and priests. These divine dreams, practice witchcraft, dispense medicine made of native herbs and other substances believed efficacious, and use occult power to drive out the demons causing bad dreams, disease and death. Their practices are unscientific and often cruel. The religion is pagan. Superstition, fear and despair are the daily lot of those who have no hope outside of their tribal teachings. The dying are carried outside of their hogans to die, lest their dwelling places become the habitations of demons which bring death. Truly they are a people "having no hope and without God in the world" (Eph. 2:12). A medicine man little knew that he was telling the truth when he said to us, after the light of God's Word had shined in, "It seems that we are all in the darkness. We do not know what we worship. Yes, it would have been different had we had the Book."

Lying on the ground by the door of her hogan was an aged Navajo woman, blind and sick. Her bedding was a ragged quilt and a dirty sheepskin. In her hands she held a cold flat rock, and whenever a pain came through her abdomen she would muster all the strength which she had in her feeble body and massage herself with it. Groans and words came at the same time. Over and over again she repeated, "C' in-dih bagan-go" ("To the home of the devils I am going"). Her tears fell fast, and an appeal was made to the lightning, a Navajo deity, to save her. What was her hope? Why must she die this way—in the land that boasts of its allegiance to the One Who loved her and all Navajo Indians?

III—Christ, the Only Hope of the Navajo Indians

Heb. 2:15 gives us a picture of the condition of the Navajo Indians: "Who through fear of death were all their lifetime subect to bondage." Rom. 1:23,25 also describes them and their worship. Heb. 2:14,15 tells us that our Navajos might be delivered from this fate, for the Lord Himself died to "destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil."—Mrs. B. H. Stokely.

IV—The Price of Being a Girl in Navajo Land

She had grown up in a hogan. She had enjoyed the petting of mother and father and the teasing of brothers and sisters. She had enjoyed herding the sheep as she grew older. The great Navajo country with its rocky mesas dotted with small trees, and the far reaching vistas of uninhabited land, were loved by her. But in her heart was a dream, a dream of finding out what lay beyond the confines of the reservation.

Small wonder then, when the Navajo policeman went through the reservation seeking for children to fill the great government schools that she responded Her father, an old medicine man named "My Bones," was willing; for he thought of her return later, educated and able to teach the people many things. And she would be much sought after by the men of the tribe, and would bring him more profit than an uneducated girl.

So she found herself whisked away from the hogan in a car, and when she reached her destination she had seen many things—a city, trains, buildings, many cars, and many, many white people. For eight long years she lived in this school and was happy. Then her folks wanted her to come home. They needed her, for her mother was not well. This word came through the trader or some other white person. She had forgotten the customs of he people. She did not realize that now it was time for her to help her people by accepting a husband and his gifts to them.

It was hard for her to lie down on the sheepskins at night to sleep. It was hard to trudge miles daily over the rough country with the sheep as herder. Worst of all were the advances made by an old medicine man. One night she heard her parents talking. Yes, it was true; they were going to marry her off to that old man. He was willing to pay well for her. That would never do! There was Edgar at school and he was going to marry her!

Much struggling of mind and heart resulted in a decision. She would appeal to the missionary lady, and perhaps she would let her come to live with her. For many months Lilly, for that was her school name, lived with the missionary family. She accepted Christ as her Savior and was baptized. She learned to pray and she loved to read her Bible.

Then she was taken away by her people. And she was sold into marriage—not to the old man but to a young, uneducated, non-Christian man whom she did not love or respect. How could she? Had he not been in jail for wronging her sister? The missionary man went to plead her cause with her father. Two days of work along this line resulted in failure and disappontment. Lilly was to live with the man. "What if she did not love him? She would learn to make the best of it." He had married off the other sister when she was 13 years of age to an old medicine man whom she had not loved. He had been paid well for her in horses, sheep and jewelry, and he needed these things because he was getting too old to work.

So Lilly lives in a hogan. She spends her time in herding sheep and learning again to weave. She cooks over the fire on the earth floor, and sleeps in a sheepskin. She is 20 years of age. Her future has been decided for her. She wonders and hopes.

Do You Love America?

Some thoughts from a sermon recently given by R. D. BARNARD, Dayton, O., to his Church

YES!

If you're at all worthy of saying, "I am an American," you'll love the America that gives you freedom and protection. But America is facing the most critical period in her history. Human resources alone are insufficient. Our President has repeatedly uttered a plea to God for His guidance and help. Can all Christians in America do less?

Rev. Barnard

God and Man Judge Nations Differently

Daniel 2 tells how man sees the Gentile nations of this earth—they are seen as glorious—"Thou art this head of gold." Bright shining metal to which the nations are here likened would illustrate all the pomp and pride with which nations of this world see themselves. But, Daniel 7 sees things as God sees them: "And four great beasts came up out of the earth." God sees the nations of this earth as they really are—rapacious, ravenous beasts, bloodthirsty and cruel. But, God has planned a "Way of Blessing," or a "Way of Sorrow" for the nations of this earth; yes, even for our America.

"Blessed Shalt Thou Be—"

Read all about it in Deut. 28:1-14. Of course it was a promise given to Israel, but even a casual reading will reveal that there are principles involved that will bring blessings to any nation that meets the requirements. And what are the requirements? "If thou shalt hearken unto the voice of the Lord thy God," is the condition mentioned at least five times in these few verses. God really judges nations on three things: right attitudes toward God (Ps. 33:12); right attitude toward God's people (Matt. 25:13 ff); right attitude toward righteousness and sin (Prov. 14:34).

"Cursed Shalt Thou Be—"

is the part of Scripture we would rather not read, but it's just as truly Scripture. Read all about it in Deut. 28:15-68. And there's a condition that will bring this sorrow and curse upon America just as certainly as the conditions mentioned about bringing blessing. "If thou shalt not hearken" is mentioned many times in these 53 verses. Read them! Then pray that America shall not so turn a deaf ear to God as to bring this wrath upon our fair land.

Lying, Swearing, Stealing

Killing, committing adultery, wine, drunkenness, and forgetting God, are mentioned definitely as the things that bring the displeasure of God—see Hosea 4:1-11. Now look out across America and stand with me in fear for the judgment and sorrow that is certain unless our America turns to the right and judges her sins.

Nineveh, a Great and Wicked City was condemned of God to destruction for her sins. Read about it in Jonah 3. But after the sentence was pronounced and announced by Jonah, the city repented in sackcloth and ashes; they cried unto God. God withheld His hand of judgment and the city was saved. O, that America would follow the suggestion of our President and "ask forgiveness for our shortcomings of the past."

God Chastens Those Whom He Loves

Read Heb. 12, and see this teaching for yourself. God must love America because of the millions of sincere believers who live here, with the permission and favor of America. If we don't repent, God's chastening hand must come upon us to make us turn again to Him. England had almost forgotten God. Before this war, churches were empty; ministers were disheartened. Then the chastening hand of war came, churches were leveled to the ground. Then, the worshippers came—hundreds of thousands of them. They're now worshipping in caverns and tunnels. England is turning to God. Pray God that our people here in America may turn again to God before He must lay His chastening hand upon us. He will chasten us as certainly as we continue in our sin and in our negligence of the things of God.

May God grant that the day may soon come when girlhood shall be freed of such experiences! That will come as you pray and give for these lost souls.

THE NAVAJO'S CRY

"Carest Thou not That We Die"

God of all life. Thou Who dost live
Beyond the stars, beyond the sun and moon,
Beyond the stretching curtains of the night,
Beyond the sunset's glow, the midnight's gloom,
For Thee we search! To Thee we make our cry,
"Carest Thou not that we die?"

For many moons our people roamed at will
Across these mesas, plains and desert sands.
Our life was free, no evil did we fear
Until there came a people cruel and strong.
Broken and scattered now, yea, sick we lie,
"Carest Thou not that we die?"

We had no hope, no friends, no Savior God
To lead us from our bondage to the light.
Our old men searched in vain for help, and then Turned back in anguish to the gods they knew.
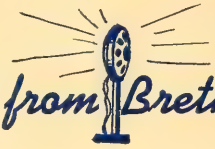
These could not them suffice!! Great God, we sigh!
"Carest Thou not that we die?"



We die! Those whom we love we lose! At night
We bear them off into the brush for fear
Of spirits, haunting ones, who seek our doom.
They die alone! They moan! We writhe and groan!
We look for help, then helpless sink, and cry
"Carest Thou not that we die?"

THINK IT OVER

A man may be at his wit's end but he need not be at his faith's end.

THE DEATH OF CHRIST

By REV. R. E. GINGRICH, Pastor, Ellet, O.

That Christ died upon the cross is an established fact in human history. That it was necessary for Him to die upon that cruel tree is an explicit doctrine of the Christian faith, and essential to the work of redeeming lost sinners. In our last study on the theme, "What I believe and Why?" we declared our belief in the necessity of the death of Christ as it occurred. Having established that necessity in our thinking, we shall now endeavor to set forth the meaning of the death of Christ.

There are at least six primary ideas set forth in the Word of God to establish the meaning of the death of Christ. We shall set forth four of them in this particular study. They embrace:

The death of Christ was a ransom price paid to release the sinner from just condemnation.

Upon one occasion, as recorded in Matt. 20:28, Jesus declared: "Even as the Son of Man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many." The meaning of a ransom is clearly set forth in Lev. 25:47-49. It gives instruction as to the course of procedure to be followed in the event a Hebrew, struck with misfortune, sells himself into bondage. A kinsman may pay a price which will redeem or ransom the one sold into bondage. Three important elements appear in this account. (1) a man has sold himself into bondage. That is what man has done—sold himself into bondage to Satan thru sin. (2) A price may be paid to release the enslaved person from his bondage. That is what was done when Christ died upon the cross. His shed blood was the ransom price that was paid to release enslaved humanity from the bondage to Satan and sin. It has been said that sin is a slave market in which sinners are "sold under sin" (Rom. 7:14); there souls are under sentence of death (Ezek. 18:4). Christ, by His death, buys sinners out of the market, thereby indicating complete deliverance from service to sin. He looses the bonds, setting the prisoners free, by paying a price—that price being His own precious blood. (3) The one who is to pay the ransom price to set the captive free, was to be a kinsman. That is what Christ had in mind when He clothed Himself with humanity. He thus became our Kinsman-Redeemer. Identifying Himself with humanity, becoming a kinsman thereby, our precious Lord placed himself in position to ransom us from the cruel bondage into which we sold ourselves thru sin. An awful price did he pay as our kinsman when he made possible our release from bondage! That price was his very life—precious life! There was no release until the price was paid. There was no release unless the enslaved sinner accepts his release at the hands of his Kinsman. Some accept with deep appreciation their liberation. Others reject that proffered grace and remain in their bondage. Which are you this fateful hour?

The death of Christ was a propitiation for our sin.

This is an aspect of the death of Christ which, tho appearing often in Holy Writ, is little understood by the mass of Christendom, we fear. God has been outraged by the sin which man committed against Him. His anger has been kindled against rebellious humanity. His holiness, His justice, His wrath demanded judgment. What did that judgment entail? "The soul that sinneth it shall die" (Ezek. 18:4) was his sentence. Nothing less would appease His righteous anger. Into the breach appeared God's beloved Son. He presented Himself to bear the full penalty for outraged holiness, received that penalty in its full fury in His own body, and thereby appeased and led God to be favorably disposed toward the sinner. Thus it is declared in 1 John 4:10: "Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that He loved us, and sent His Son to be the propitiation for our sins." The penitent sinner, burdened with the sense of his sin, sensing the wrath of God upon his soul, seeing in the shed blood of God's own Son the only means of appeasing the wrath of God against sin, looks to Jesus, receives him as his Savior, and realizes that now the wrath of God is turned away from him forever. My friend, have you looked to Jesus' blood to cover your sin and appease the wrath of God?

The death of Christ reconciled God to man.

The sin of man destroyed the amity between God and man. To remove that enmity that now existed, God sent His Son by Whom He reconciled us to Himself. Thus it is written in II Cor. 5:19: "God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto Himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them. . . . " What blessed ministry that was! Thus it was that the enmity felt by God toward man was now removed, and divine favor toward sinners that repent was extended. God is no longer angry at sinners, unless they reject his means of reconciliation. Then there is no choice left but to execute upon them the just penalty for their sin. In Christ the sinner is brought into perfect harmony with God, the debt is paid, the disability all removed, and a new relation to God is sustained. Oh, that lost and condemned souls would receive Jesus Christ as their Savior, and be at rest with God, reconciled and at peace!

The death of Christ was a substitutionary death.

While substitution is not a Biblical word it is a Biblical truth. It means the replacement of one person or thing for another. In reference to the death of Christ, it signifies that the righteous judgment of God against sinners because of their sin was borne by Christ, as He substituted in the stead and room of the sinner. This truth appears clearly in a Scripture which we have already presented in this study, Matt. 20:28, the last part of which reads: "And give Himself a ransom for many." A critical study of the word translated "for" will reveal that it means "in the stead of," and hence signifies substitution. Jesus gave Himself in the stead of many." He took their place, He bore the penalty they deserved. He suffered the just punishment they merited. He received the full fury of God's wrath against sinful men. Jehovah laid upon Him the iniquity of us all, transferring our sin upon Him and His righteousness upon us. That's what the death of Christ means. Has it become effective in your life?

It was because He loved me so,
When lost in sin and steeped in woe,
Christ did for me atone;
He cast a pitying glance on me
And said, I died for thee,
To claim thee for my own.

He washed my sin-stains all away,
And turned my night to bright noonday
By His own blood applied;
The longing in my heart was stilled,
The aching void His presence filled
And fully satisfied.

In loving kindness none can tell
He deigns within my heart to dwell,
This friend so kind and true;
I want the whole wide world to know
My Savior Who has charmed me so,
Then they will love Him, too.

A dear old saint, who had seen much trouble and was in dire need, was asked if she ever felt like murmuring. She replied, "When I do, I just ask the Lord to put me in the easy chair and keep me quiet." The visitor, seeing no easy chair about, asked what she meant. "My easy chair," she said, "is Romans 8:28, 'And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to His purpose'."—Selected

NEWS BRIEFS From Our Workers

At this writing Bro. William Gray is conducting a revival at the ALEPPO, PA. church. This church, for some time, has been without a pastor.

The ELLET, O. church, of which Bro. R. E. Gingrich is pastor, has adopted Garner Hoyt as their personal missionary to Africa. Bro. Hoyt and his wife hope to be able to secure passage to Africa shortly after his graduation from Grace Theological Seminary this spring.

From Bro. Stanley Hauser we learn that the GRAFTON, W. VA. church is holding two prayer meetings weekly, a cottage prayer meeting on Monday evening, and the regular mid-week prayer service at the church. Bro. Hauser is acting as supply pastor until the arrival of Bro. Randall Rossman, who has accepted the call of the Grafton church and is closing his pastorate at Altoona, Pa.

Bro, H. W. Nowag, pastor at LISTIE, PA., writes, "The Listie church recently held a two weeks' evangelistic meeting under the leadership of Rev. Kenneth Ashman. A number of reconsecrations and confessions were the visible results. Every phase of the church and community life was richly blessed and strengthened by the Scriptural sermons and tireless work of Bro. Ashman."

On two successive Sunday evenings during the holidays, the evening church services at the First Brethren Church of DAYTON, O., where Rev. Russell D. Barnard is pastor, was in charge of young people of the church who were home from college. Each of the services concluded with messages from two of the young men.

The First Brethren Church of LONG BEACH, CALIF. has seized another opportunity to preach the gospel. Services are held Sunday evenings at 9:30 on the Pike.

By the time this magazine reaches you, REV. AND MRS. LEO POLMAN expect to be well on their way to Southern California, where they are scheduled for revivals at the Long Beach (1st), Los Angeles (2d) and Whittier churches. Between meetings Bro. Polman plans to visit other Southern California churches in the interests of The Brethren Missionary Herald publications.

Pastors desiring to have Brother and Sister Polman can write them in care of 1st Brethren Church, Long Beach. Dates available are Feb. 23-27, Mar. 16-20. The Polmans will be using, in their meetings, the rare instrument, organ chimes, as well as the vibra harp and accordian. Their daughters, Elaine and Joyce, will accompany them on this western tour.

The Church on the Hill program, sponsored by the Ghent Brethren Church of ROANOKE, VA., and broadcast weekly at 8:30 Friday A.M. over WSLS, has begun its second year on the air. 59 programs were given during the first year. During the first 11 months, 155 letters and cards were received by people who listened to the broadcasts. Many dozens of the Gospel of John, the book of Romans, and the booklet, "The Reason Why," were sent to those requesting them. Through this radio ministry, thousands of lives were touched, which the church otherwise could never have reached.

A white gift offering of $137 was received at the First Brethren Church of PHILADELPHIA, all of which goes into the building fund. Digging for the new building is expected to begin soon. Notes and mortgages involved in the purchase of the property were burned on New Year's eve as a part of their watch night service.

Good reports of the service conducted in SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA by the gospel team from Grace Theological Seminary have come into the Herald office. Several were saved in their meetings in Los Angeles County, and a church at which they had not yet appeared informed its congregation, "We are told that their program will 'just thrill you.'" The team is headed by Bro. Harold Mayer, middler at the seminary.

Special Meetings Now In Progress

JAN. 24-25—At Portis, Kans., conducted by Rev. Leo Polman.

THE MAGNIFY BROTHERHOOD

Of The Brethren Churches of Southern California

The Men's Brotherhood of the La Verne Church conceived the idea of the Brotherhoods of all the Brethren Churches of Southern California meeting for a time of fellowship, and thereby having a closer knit relationship among the laymen of these churches.

At the cordial invitation of the La Verne Church, some 200 men met Oct. 17, 1938. That was the birth of the organization whose name is the title of this article. With Cecil Snyder of the First of Los Angeles as president, this first meeting was the foundation of a group of laymen, banded together in Christ to do and plan in prayer beyond even the fondest hopes of the instigators in La Verne.

We praise our Lord for the part He has given us in His plan, and we look joyously ahead to what He may have on the program for us in the future. Believing that this brief resume may be useful to some other district desiring to start a similar movement in their area, we are forthwith presenting some of the highlights in the three year life of the Magnify Brotherhood.

The usual routing of forming a Constituton and electing officers was taken care of in a surprisingly short time, considering the size and scope of such an organization. The Lord placed little in our way as an avenue of endeavor until the formulating stage was passed. Then we heard a call from Modesto for a tent and Bro. R. Paul Miller told of one in the Missionary Herald, so these men raised $165 to meet that need. After Modesto used the tent, we found the size to be prohibitive for our use in evangelistic work, so these same men raised an additional $150 to put a 20 foot strip through the middle, making the tent 20 feet longer and capable of seating 300 people. After Men's Magnify of the First of Long Beach donated the lumber for seats, we find ourselves preparing to furnish seat ends and then the tent will be fully equipped.

The District Mission Board has the standing offer of the use of this tent any time, any place, rent free, set up and taken down at the expense of the Magnify Brotherhod. In between calls from them, any church in this district has the same offer. South Gate has already availed herself of this opportunity, while Fillmore has her name in for a date starting Jan. 20.

Fostering inter-church sports, recreation and fellowship for the Brethren young people is another type of service in which this band of men find themselves engrossed. Since the forming of a Brethren Young People's Convention, the Magnify Brotherhood has on their minutes a definite plan to cooperate and further in any way possible the program of this convention.

Should you read our constitution, these items are outstanding:

1. An annual picnic for all Brethren in Southern California.
2. Regular meetings the third week of January, May and September.
3. A definite missionary objective.
4. No elder can hold an elective office. A pastor-counselor is selected every year.
5. A Central Council, made up of one representative from each Brotherhood and the elected officers, is the governing body empowered to transact business.
6. Each meeting must have inspirational singing, testimonies, prayer and a devotional message.

Should further information be desired by any readers of the Herald, I would be only too glad to impart more detail.

Yours in His service,

—L. W. Marvin, Pres.

FILLMORE, CALIFORNIA

Since our having come to the field as pastor of the First Brethren Church of Fillmore, it seems that time has been pretty well utilized, and therefore, no "News from the Field" has been sent. However, we do want all to know that God is blessing our church, for which we praise Him. At the annual business meeting another call was extended to the pastor, the call extending to July 1943; and to the great surprise of the pastor, by unanimous vote he was called with a 10% increase in salary.

The members of the Fillmore church are to be commended for the fine way they are standing in back of their pastor in full support of the work. They rallied to his call for a great home mission offering, and gave the largest offering in the 23 years of the church's history. The Lord is blessing us and we are meeting all our financial obligations in a fine way. He is also blessing with real treats. During the past few months we had with us Brother and Sister Jobson and family; Brother and Sister Williams; and perhaps the outstanding blessing was our Day of Prayer. Beginning at 5:00 A.M. and continuing until 6:00 P.M. found one to a half a dozen people in the pastor's study on their knees in prayer. The day was closed with the quarterly communion service. Many commented that it was the best communion that had ever been conducted in the church. For these blessings we give praise unto the Lord! During the last few months there have been seven decisions for the Lord, five of them first time confessions.

On Jan. 2, 3, 1942, the Brethren Student Volunteers Rally of the Southern California District, was held at the Fillmore Church. The Grace Seminary Gospel Team was in charge of most of the rally.

Our Christmas program was a most unusual one, being worked with a public address system. The pageant "Bethlehem" was presented with the use of an actual reproductive scene of Bethlehem. In addition to this, slides were shown in conjunction with the pageant to illustrate the program.

The Fillmore church extends greetings to the Brethren.

The Conscientious Objector

By R. I. HUMBERD, Martinsburg, Pa.

Christians often bring reproach upon the name of Christ by their inconsistant lives. This is also set forth in young men whose lives have differed but little from that of their worldly companions until they are confronted by military duty, then they claim the privileges of the conscientious objector. Recently there came to my attention a very remarkable case that would be well for both young and old to ponder.

For eight years I have taught Personal Evangelism in the Altoona School of the Bible. One of the graduates now attends my class in the Hebrew Mission. His zeal for the Lord is unequaled by anyone I know. He has led scores to the Lord from the streets and other places in Altoona. He has ten helpers in his follow-up work, for he endeavors to anchor thoroughly each convert. When the Bob Jones College perfected an organization of over 100 young people in Altoona, this young man was selected as president.

Recently I missed him for two evenings at the class. Last Monday, however, he was there again and had a very remarkable story to tell. He had become convinced of the tremendous need for work among the soldiers, so he enlisted in the army.

All went well, and his physical examination was so perfect that the physician remarked about his steady nerves. Finally he came to the last test; a specialist on the nerves was to test the reactions of his mind. Again all went well and he about to pass when, for some reason, the specialist asked a very unusual question,

"What do you do in your spare time?"

"Seek to lead men to the Lord," was the reply.

The specialist was puzzled and asked for an explanation. But it was too much for him, and he called in two others of like profession. For half an hour the young man faced the three worldly wise men. He told them that they were all right physically and their mind was sound, but that they were dead spiritually. He told them of his own former life and how it had changed four years ago when he was saved. He quoted Rom. 10:9 "If thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised hm from the dead, thou shalt be saved." When he asked them about accepting the Lord, they reminded him that he was not conducting the examination.

1900 years ago, Paul was charged with turning the "world upside down" (Acts 17:6), and with a similar excuse this young man was rejected from the United States army. It would probably be difficult to find, anywhere in the records of the United States army, another instance where a young man was rejected because they feared his influence upon his fellow soldiers.

I have all sympathy with a conscientious objector, for that was my position in the last war; and the yellow cards and acts of self-appointed patriots so worked on my nerves that it was not until recent years that I have been able to hear the National Anthem without a violent mental reaction.

My position hung mainly on the words, "Thou shalt not kill"; but a study on the covenants has revealed that these words refer to personal vengeance and not to governmental executions. A few years ago I had an article of two or three columns in one of Altoona's leading daily newspapers on "Capital Punishment." Once there was to be a debate on Capital punishment in the Altoona High School. One student, who was planning to debate against it, read my booklet on "The Covenants" and changed her mind and debated for it.

These are indeed hard times. I have brought three young men up to manhood. I gave them to the Lord before they were born; when lo, to my utter disappointment, the government has called, and one is now in Camp Lee, Va., as a non-combatant conscientious objector, and is baking bread for the army in place of passing out the bread of life, as I had so longed that he would do. It is well, however, that we know what the Scriptures say and anyone interested in the words, "Thou shalt not kill," can find a short discussion in my booklet, "Capital Punishment," which can be secured for 15c from the Brethren Missionary Herald Co.

Remember that since there are five Saturdays in January, there will be no Brethren Missionary Herald next week. The Herald is published four times monthly.

TRYIN' TO GET TO HEAVEN

by your good works? Well, here's the best you can expect:

"A telegram from George, dear."

"Well, did he pass the examination this time?"

"No but he is almost at the top of the list of those who failed."—(Revelation).

Did You Know---

You can have each year's copies of your Brethren Missionary Herald bound in an attractive volume (like the one on display at our book table at Winona Lake last August) for only $2.25 if enough sets are sent in to be bound at one time. In case we do not receive enough sets to secure them at this low price, you can still have your copies bound for $2.50 In either case you furnish the magazines.

From A Tither . .

A Calcutta merchant met a misfortune in his business. A missionary was visiting him to interest him in some mission work. The business man handed the missionary a check for $250. At the moment the business man was handed a cablegram. Reading it he looked troubled. "This cablegram tells me that one of my ships has been wrecked and the whole cargo is lost. It makes a very large difference in my affairs. I will have to write you another check," said the business man. The missionary understood perfectly and handed back the check for $250. The check book was still open, and the business man proceeded to write the missionary another check and handed it to him. On receiving the check the missionary was amazed. It was a check for $1000. He said, "Haven't you made a mistake." With tears in his eyes, the business man said, "No, that cablegram was a message from my Father in heaven. It read, 'Lay not up for yourself treasures upon earth'."

Need more be said?

If you have money tucked away somewhere, and you want it to be safe and to produce interest and to do good, did you ever think about loaning it to mission churches for their building programs? In the years of depression one bank in six failed; one hospital in 47; one business in 22; but only one church in 2234 closed its doors because of the depression.—Dayton, O. (1st) Bulletin.

Write Leo Polman or R. Paul Miller if you want to get in touch with churches in building program.

Sometimes the pastor envies the doctor. When a person gets sick he immediately decides to go to his doctor for help. The doctor never has to be running after sick people all the time. But with the pastor everything is just the opposite. He believes that he has the cure from the Word of God for all spiritual diseases. People are spiritually sick everywhere, but instead of them seeking help by going to the pastor for a personal interview, the pastor has to be running after them. And many times he is humiliated by the fact that such persons will elude him, if possible. The pastor's business is to help men, women and young people with their spiritual problems. He will be found to be sympathetic, able to be trusted not to tell your problems to others, and capable by means of the Word of God to help those who really want to believe and follow the Bible.—Ghent Brethren bulletin, Roanoke, Va.

FOREIGN MISSIONARY ISSUE - FEBRUARY 7, 1942

Editorials

By LOUIS S. BAUMAN, Editor

BY COURTESY OF "LIFE MAGAZINE"

The pictures of the Zamzam in this issue were taken by the photographer of the Life Magazine who was on board the boat. The Germans confiscated his films and pictures, as well as his camera. For some reason or other the Nazis decided to return these items to Mr. Scherman and sent them to the State Department in Washington. The State Department returned them to Mr. Sherman, and the Life Magazine printed its second Zamzam issue containing these pictures. Surely the readers of Life were not more interested in that boat than we Brethren folks are who had six adult missionaries, besides two little children, thereon.

Therefore we requested permission of the Life Magazine to use these picttures, and our request was very courteously granted.

EXTRA COPIES THIS ISSUE

Anyone desiring an extra copy or extra copies of this special Zamzam issue of the Herald can obtain such by sending for the same to our office, 1925 E. 5th St., Long Beach, California. Pastors who may desire to distribute a number of these magazines to their members, or friends who are not subscribers for the Herald, should be sending for them at once. The supply necessarily is limited; therefore, "first come first served."

This issue is not our regular Easter Offering issue. That special Easter issue will also be sent free, as usual, to all pastors, churches or church organizations desiring them. The special Easter number will go into the mail the first week in March.

It isn't too early to drop us a card and let us know how many copies of the special Easter number you will want. Doing this will enable us to give a closer estimate of the extra number we will need to print.

"HANDBOOK OF MISSIONARY FACTS"

The copy has been prepared and forwarded to our good printer in Cleveland, Ohio, for the new Foreign Missions Handbook. Brother Miller promises to rush this handbook into print and get it into the mails at the earliest possible time, so that all pastors desiring to make use of this handbook in the various organizations of our local churches can have it in good time before Easter. These copies will be furnished, as heretofore, free of cost to our churches. It will be a complete, yet concise up-to-date history.

Brother Jobson and Brother Sickel both have spent a lot of time in helping to make this a better handbook by far than our first one. The maps appearing therein have been carefully drawn by Mrs. Raymond Burch of Long Beach, under the supervision of the superintendent of our work. Miss Geraldine Judd, our Office Secretary, has given a lot of time to research work with the idea of making the handbook exact with reference to the historical data therein.

It will be impossible for us to scatter these handbooks as freely as we do some of the rest of our literature. Nevertheless, every member of the Foreign Missionary Society is entitled to one, and beyond that a reasonable number will be furnished free to the pastors to place as they deem advisable. Orders for them can be sent in to the office here in Long Beach now.

STEREOPTICAN LECTURES AVAILABLE

We are glad to announce that we have ready five lectures, illustrated by stereoptican slides, for use in the churches of the Brotherhood. If you would like to present one or more of these lectures before your Church or Missionary Society, or any other organization within the Church, you may make arrangements for the use of the same by writing to our office, 1925 E. 5th St., Long Beach, Calif.

Brother Orville Jobson, while on furlough in Long Beach, made a through perusal of all the foreign mission stereoptican slides that were on hand, and prepared five most interesting and helpful lectures explaining the pictures. Anyone may give this lecture by simply reading the descriptions of each picture.

The titles of the various lectures are as follows:

Lecture I: "Opening The First Station of The Oubangui-Chari Mission." (These pictures give something of the history of the beginning of our mission work in Africa from the year 1921 to about 1935. 59 slides.)

Lecture II: "Building A Mission Station." (These pictures show just how the missionaries go about putting up a building in Africa, showing the buildings on the various stations. This is a shorter lecture, and it is suggested that it be shown along with one of the other shorter lectures. 40 slides.)

Lecture III: "Travel in Africa" (showing the various means of travel. 40 slides.)

Lecture IV: "Village Scenes in Africa" (38 slides.)

Lecture V: "Chapel, Church, School & Hospital Activities." (Very interesting. 47 slides.)

We hope to announce a similar series of lectures on our South American field later on.

We believe these lectures will boost your Easter Offering. Order early.

PASTORS ATTENTION! IMPORTANT!

Only 57 more days until Easter! ! ! Have you sent in your order for Missionary Offering banks and dime folders? If not, please fill in the card which was sent you IMMEDIATELY and drop it in the mail box. Due to the present national immergency there may be some delay in the filing of our orders for these items from the publishing houses; hence, the need of knowing as soon as possible how many wil be required. If you failed to receive an order form, simply address a postal to our office indicating how many banks you can use, how many dime folders for either 10 or 30 dimes, and how many extra copies of this issue of the Brethren Herald you wish.

PLOWING

Mission work is like breaking new ground. It is hard labor, but it is necessary. The first missionaries are the ploughmen who toil and see no harvest. But their work tells for all time.

ANOTHER FAR SOWING:

A certain little girl had been promised a handsome Bible for her birthday. On hearing a missionary tell of the need of Bibles in India, the child asked if she might not have two Bibles, each half as costly as the one her mother was planning to give her. Her mother consented, and the little girl wrote her name in one of them and gave it to the missionary to send to India. Years afterward a missionary was telling the story of the love of Jesus to a few women, when one of them exclaimed, "Oh, I know all about that. I have a book which tells me these things." She brought the book to her teacher, who, on opening it, saw to her amazement her own name on the fly-leaf! It was the very book which she had given many years before. It had led to the conversion of its owner, and through her influence to the conversion of many in the town where she lived.

ONLY MOVING

A bright little girl of about eight summers was wisely teaching a bit of a brother some two years younger than herself to master the difficult art of riding a bicycle. After many fruitless trials the little lad steadied himself as he wobbled from side to side and proudly shouted: "I'm moving! I really am moving!" His sedate bit of a sister eyed his movements calmly, and coldly replied: "Yes, you are moving, but you are not going!" How true this is in the Christian life. Bishop Fowler used to put it in this terse and homely way: "Lots of folks are like a yard engine, that toots its whistle, rings its bell, and makes a lot of noise, but never goes anywhere."

"Who will go?" We are told to go—to "get a move on us"—to go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature!

THE EDITOR IS PUZZLED

We have just glanced over a sermon by a young Methodist minister, in which he makes the statement: "The divine purpose of the coming of Jesus, and the task to which He gave Himself, is to tell men that they are, and to enable them to become, the sons of God." Just why our Lord should have striven "to enable men to become the sons of God" when they already "are the sons of God is rather puzzling to us. Sometimes we feel like saying: "Ain't ministers funny?"

JAPANESE THEORY OF THE CREATION OF MAN

The Creator rolled together a lot of clay and shaped it into a man. Put it in an oven to bake, but forgot to take it out. Result, the man was overdone, and this produced the negro race. So, the Creator tried again, made another man, put him in the oven; took him out too soon. Result, the white race. Then, the Creator tried it again. Experience having taught Him, this time He took the man out at exactly the right minute. Result, the yellow race, the Creator's perfect man, who is destined to rule the whole earth!

The authority for this weird philosophy, or theology, is Dr. George Dewey Blomgren, who states that this is taught in all seriousness in Japanese schools to the children.

THE DOOR OF OPPORTUNITY WIDENING IN LATIN AMERICA

World Dominion reports that the Brazilian penal code, which came into force with the opening of this new year, 1942, enacts severe penalties on many persons who "publicly jeers at anyone because of his religious belief or function, or hinders or disturbs any religious ceremony or act of worship." Apparently, the authorities of Brazil are sincere in their belief that every human being has the right to worship his God according to the dictates of his own conscience. That is religious freedom.

From all sides, come reports that conditions are becoming more and more favorable toward the progress of the gospel in Latin America. Practically the entire continent of South America, as well as Mexico and Central America, has taken their stand with the United States in the tremendous battle now in progress for human freedom, the liberty of the press, and of speech, and of religion. South America has been a very difficult country in which to carry on evangelical work, because of the opposition of the priests of Rome. But, since Papal Rome has shown her sympathy with the Fascist Government of Italy, it may be that the day is near when the grip of the Papacy upon the Latin America will not be so firm as it has been in years gone by. Perhaps, if our Lord shall tarry, our faithful missionaries, who have labored with apparently so little results, will yet see the dawn of a mighty revival that will sweep the South American continent. Let us keep on praying! Keep on believing! Keep on toiling!

RELIGIOUS EDUCATIONAL MOVEMENT REGARDED WITH SUSPICION

What was advertised as "an enlarged meeting of the North American Administrative Committee of the Worlds' Sunday School Association" was held July 13-15, 1941, in the Chula Visda Hotel Cuernavaca, Mexico. A report of this Sunday school conference was sent out from 156 5th Ave., New York City, by the Worlds' Sunday School Association. Glancing through this report, the eye of the editor caught this statement:

"Due to lack of adequate contacts and interpretation—and original training—large numbers of pastors and other church workers regard the religious educational movement with suspicion or indifference. This must be corrected by a more effective training in seminaries and Bible training schools."

What about correcting this situation by a return to the faith on the part of many of the leaders in the Worlds' Sunday School Association?

GIVING HALF OF WHAT WE HAVE

How often we hear people say, "Oh, if I were only rich, I might do so much! If I had as much money as such a man, I would use it better than he does!" Perhaps they are not giving nearly as much as they might of what they have. The United Presbyterian published a story that illustrates this: One native said to another, "If you had 100 sheep, would you give 50 of them for God's work?" He replied: "That I would. I would be willing to give 50." "If you had 100 cows would you be willing to give 50 of them to the gospel work?" "Oh, yes, I would," was the prompt reply. "But you would not do it if they were 100 horses would you?" "Oh, yes, I would. You would see that I would." "But if you had two pigs would you be willing to give one of them?" The man's countenance fell, and he quickly replied, "No, I wouldn't. You know I have two pigs; then why do you ask me that?"

Easter Offering 1942

The Easter Offering, 1942, is just ahead. Many pastors, fully conscious of this fact and conscious of the fact that of all times this is not the time to be laying down upon the task of making Christ known to the nations, are already preparing in deadly earnest to tackle the job of providing the wherewithal to keep our foreign mission work thoroughly alive and properly sustained.

In the near future, pastors will receive the usual notifications as to the Easter offerings through the mails, together with suggestions for supplies that they may desire to use. However, as per a notice elsewhere, foreign missionary dime containers, boxes, barrels, etc., may be obtained immediately by those who have not already sent for them.

In the opposite column we are printing a list of all Brethren Churches that contributed "$300 or over" during the six months from January 1, 1941, to June 30, 1941. This was a "short year." Our previous report to the Board, covered a period of eighteen months instead of twelve. This was due to the upheaval in the Church, and is a matter of common knowledge to all Brethren people.

We are printing this list of churches, not because these churches deserve praise any more than our numerically weaker churches. The figures will call to mind, however, to our stronger churches the mark at which they must shoot if they intend to reach or surpass their Easter offerings of one year ago. Of course, these figures show in some cases a larger offering than what was known as purely the Easter Offering, due to the fact that they cover a full six months period, in which, of course, the Easter Offering was the big thing.

With all due respect to the fine offerings the churches listed herein gave, it must be remembered that in the sight of the Lord some of the smaller churches did even better than these. From a sacrificial standpoint, if we can speak of sacrifice, their gifts were even greater. We say this for the same reason that our Lord said as He watched the well-to-do cast in large sums, the widow "hath cast in more than they all."

The pastor of the First Church in Long Beach has a son who is the pastor of the Second Church in Los Angeles. This particular son seems to know only too well the meaning of the words "per capita." He likes to compare the offerings of his church from time to time with the offerings of his "dad's" church, and then talk about that thing that financial folks call "per capita"!

Well, he has about persuaded us that the only fair thing to do at the close of the fiscal year (July 1, 1941 to June 30, 1942) is to publish a list of the churches that give the largest amounts "per capita." "Honor to whom honor is due."

But, after all is said and done, none of us have wherein we may boast. "God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ."

We are publishing a summary of the District Offerings for the six months period from January 1, 1941, to June 30, 1941, showing the entire amount contributed during this "short year." The total, as will be note, is $46,480.86. Can we do it again? God helping us, in spite of the stress and extra expense that is upon us due to the turmoil of war—WE WILL! God's work must be done!

All money received in our office on and after Feb. 1st, 1942, will be regarded as a part of the Easter Offering. Individual Brethren sending in their offerings direct, will please indicate the congregation in which you hold membership. Your offering will then be added to the total coming in for that Church, thus helping the local Church to reach its goal.

His Wonders On the Deep

By MISS RUTH SNYDER, Conemaugh, Pa.

They that go down to the sea in ships, that do business in great waters; these see the works of the Lord, and His wonders in the deep (Ps. 107:23-24).

(Miss Snyder was one of the six Brethren missionaries aboard the ill-fated Zam Zam)

Zam Zam! What a name for a strange ship with its interesting past, its inglorious present, and its loudly lamented end! During World War I, this ship operated as a British troop ship. After the war, it was sold to an Egyptian company, which used it as a "pilgrim ship" to transport devout Mohammedans to Mecca. In the city of Mecca, according to Mohammedan belief, is the well of water which Hagar saw when God opened her eyes, as we read in Genesis 21. This well, for the Mohammedan, is a very sacred spot in a very sacred city. In their own language, this well is called Zam Zam. Therefore it was very fitting that this ship should be the Zam Zam.

Ruth Snyder

World War II interrupted the pilgrimages to Mecca; so the Zam Zam turned to other business. One day her new affairs brought her into New York with her amusing Mohammedan crew. She was described as "the funniest ship on the ocean."

When she left New York, Mar. 20, 1941, there were on board 323 souls. In addition to the crew, there were the passengers, who can be identified in four distinct groups. There was a group of British people, victims of the war in one way or another, who were setting out for a safer and happier life in the outposts of the Empire. Another group was made up of men, whose commercial interests were taking them to far places. Third, there were the ambulance drivers who were setting out on a merciful errand. The last, and largest, group was made up of the missionaries and their families.

Among all these people were many religious groups. There were Jews, Mohammedans, raw heathen from interior Africa, pagans of all sorts, Catholics, and many groups of Protestants. Among the irreligious group, perhaps there were those who hoped that some god of the many represented there would be able to hear and answer the prayers of his followers for the safety of the ship. There was One Who proved His mighty name.

This trip for the missionaries was an unusual one. On board were many of the calling, so it was possible to have daily prayer meetings. Many were the hymns sung on deck during the blackout. These moments of Christian fellowship will long be remembered.

There were other ways in which the trip was not so pleasant. One such thing was a fleeting glimpse of the cook! How was one to get service from a steward, who spoke neither English nor French—only "Gyptan"? The horrors of the dish washing process were not a subject for the table. Sheets, towels, water—all were part of the general confusion. There were times when the passengers declared the greatest "peril on the sea" to be in the dining-room.

Easter Monday brought something new to discuss. Why had the ship turned suddenly west? Why, as the sun went down, were we facing it? Would we ever again see a sunset? That night the blackout was more eerie than usual, for some unknown danger lurked out there in the darkness. As the next morning dawned peacefully, the tension relaxed. Tuesday, Wednesday, we are safe! Early next week we will be in Africa.

Thursday morning, Apr. 17! The sun was just peeping over the rim of the ocean when we realized even in the midst of our drowsy comfortableness that the Zam Zam had become a target in World War II. Jump out of bed into coat and slippers, but above all—do not think. Do not think of the walls that might collapse on you! Do not think of the shrapnel which may strike you! Do not think of a pool of blood around a wounded man in the corridor! Do not think of the wailing of babes so rudely awakened from sleep! Do not think of a sinking ship! Do not think of a drifting life boat! Do not think of tongues blistered with thirst! Do not think—!

If this be The Valley, it is beautiful with promise; for over the side of the wounded ship, drifting and sinking life boats, people struggling in the water, the watching Germans in safety on their ship, and the fluttering swastika, the Lord was gracious and placed a rainbow! To each saved heart came that peace that passeth all understanding.

We thought of the Apostle John who has told us of a "rainbow" he saw round about the throne of God (Rev. 4:3). In the midst of judgment, God set His bow to speak of mercy and hope. That da-- for us, God set His testimony to remind us of His faithfulness. We thought of the day when God will set His throne without the rainbow. How glad we were that in the midst of disaster there was a rainbow for us!

Little wonder that the officials declared that the "Zamzam" Missionaries "were a resourceful, united group which stood up well under troubles."

At that scene, it was six o'clock in the morning. At home, it was midnight. Somewhere on a sick bed, a saint felt led to pray for some missionaries on a German raider. She prayed. It was midnight! What if she had not heeded the Spirit?

Then came the ordeal of facing the Germans. What might they do to us? Is it possible to make a ladder long enough to reach from this tossing little boat to the deck above? When the difficulties of the ladder proved too much, it was a German seaman who helped. On those watching curious faces above, there was not a smile of amusement. There was only one question: "Where are you from?" Amazement registered on their faces at the answer: "United States"!

Below we went into the bowels of the ship. How gracious God had been! Not one missionary, not one child, had received so much as a scratch from the shelling. Of the other groups of passengers, each had one who was seriously wounded. The attack had come with daylight. During the dark of the night, the raider had followed our vessel. At six o'clock every morning the Catholics had held services in the lounge. The lounge that morning became a charred mass of ruins. Who held back the attack until daylight? Who permitted the attackers to do their work before six o'clock? Is it any wonder that another prison heard hymns sung as these things became known to us that morning there in the hold of the Tamesis?

That day passed. Night came. In the hold of the raider ship we were "bunked down" for the night. On one side of a canvas were the women and children; on the other side, were the men. Midnight brought the torture of an alarm. Never again will we hear a certain type of automobile horn without associating it with a life belt! There was only one way of escape, and that a single doorway which was now locked and deserted by its German guard.

Overhead was the sound of running feet. Locked in that hold were souls whose only thoughts were of death. Life had been sweet; but if now death were to be our testimony, then He would supply the needed grace. Moments dragged. A guard appeared who told us that a ship had been sighted, and if there was any danger, they would let us out. He then vanished into the unknown parts of the ship. When he soon reappeared, it was to say that they had met the ship to which we were to be transferred the next day. We crawled back into our bunks and began to long for the morrow.

The Dresden! As we saw it tied up with the Tamesis, we wondered: "What now?" During that day the Germans went busily between the two ships. Flying overhead were many sea birds whose presence might reveal our hereabouts; so the birds were doomed. As the machine gun did its work among those birds, I was haunted by some lines read many years ago when a child in school: "Instead of the cross, the albatross about my neck was hung."

During the afternoon we were transferred to the Dresden. As we boarded that little ship, a peace and calm only from above settled upon us. It was with a shock that we realized that no longer could we be individuals in this affair, but we were part of a group moving under orders from our captors. We began to realize that it means something to "stand in line." Never again until we reached New York did we make individual decisions. Perhaps to some of us, this was our keenest trial, having worked so hard to be able to think!

Night found us all crowded in some way. Quarters for 25 people now accommodated 105 women and children. Somewhere in a hold of the ship, the men were put to work making their own beds. Our own cabin was furnished for one person. Mrs. Morrill, Elaine, and Stevie, were given the bed. Two thin straw mattresses (?) served Miss Byron and me with beds. With various contortions, we were able to get into our beds. The only pain each one was spared was that of seeing himself!

That night, Steve was a sick little boy. The exposure of the morning before had left him very ill. Everyone else had quieted down for the night. The doctor had visited Steve and done all he could do. Human resources were exhausted; but still he screamed. What that screaming might do to the tired nerves around us, we did not know. We felt helpless and hopeless. Mrs. Morrill said: "Let's pray!" In a short while, the baby was sleeping. Thus, in the smallest things the Lord was good.

That night was long! As the gravity of our present situation confounded us anew, we were filled with despair. In the awful darkness of that hour, hope seemed futile. In the midst of the deepest distress came this thought from the Lord: "Is anything too hard for God?" No, nothing would be too hard for Him—noe even the blockade! It was that night's experiences, that returned in memory hour by hour to comfort us when hope again seemed vain.

Morning again! Oh, how sweet was that daylight! Routine soon filled our unoccupied time to chase by the hours more quickly. There was Steve, who without shoes, could not walk on the cold decks. He had to be passed from one pair of tired arms to another. The meager store of clothing had to be frantically washed in a desparate attempt to be clean and normal. The human mind seemed resourceful when pushed; so each one was soon busy with sewing, knitting, crocheting,—those things that keep women contented.

Days slipped by with their slippery diet, in spite of the fact that we were sitting on a ship which seemed to be parked in the middle of the ocean. To be on a week's vacation is one thing. To sit for a week in mid-ocean, on a German boat, is another proposition! At last the word was passed around that we were waiting for the supply ship.

Why did we wait those days in the waters with only the spouting of the whales to vary the hours? Only God knows certainly. However, we were told later by the captain and the first officer of the ship on which we returend to America, that, had we not gone through the blockade while the British were looking for the Bismarck, we would never have gotten safely through. No doubt this fact, humanly speaking, was a factor in our safety; for the last few days, while the Dresden slipped through the blockade, the Bismarck and the Hood were already engaged in their momentous game of tag. "They that go down to the sea in ships . . . see . . . His wonders in the deep."

One great daybreak brought with it the Tamesis. As we saw these two ships again together, a rainbow was in the sky. It brought fresh courage, and the assurance that our deliverance was to begin.

That day the Dresden received more supplies, and its involuntary "guests" received false hopes. Several cases of eggs were brought on board. Now we had heard that the Tamesis had been to sea a year and a half without putting into port. That story seemed too "tall" until we sat down to our first meal of those eggs! Having smelled the eggs, we are inclined to believe their story! Our false hopes centered in a promise that the Americans would not be taken through the blockade. Alas for us! As some one else so aptly expressed it: "Their psychology worked."!

Each day brought new manifestations of His faithfulness. Little hearts were comforted for lost toys and clothing. Older hearts found comfort for lost hope—the greatest of losses. Material possessions seemed nothing; but what of Africa's great need for the gospel? To Romans 8:28, we fastened all our hopes!

Even the weather itself was ample proof of His faithfulness. As we sat in the calm South Atlantic, we had a calm sea. One night it changed and the ship began to roll. We thought of our crowded condition, and sea-sick people. Sea-sickness is one disease which needs a lot of room! Here there were no comforts for the sick. We took our fears to the Lord. Soon the waves were still. "He maketh the storm a calm, that the waves thereof are still" (Ps. 107:29).

Never again did we have rough seas until we reached what they were pleased to call "the danger zone." Then the sea grew rough. With the memory of our former experience, we once more went to the Lord for the same purpose. To our great disappointment, the storm grew worse, and not less. As we passed those few hours in bewilderment as to why the Lord had not answered as before, we learned a fact that was news to us. We were told that a submarine could not operate if the sea is too rough! Then we realized that sometimes we ask, and we have not, for we ask amiss. As the waves piled higher, we could more than share the joy of the Germans, who were delighted with the storm. We knew Who had sent the storm: They thought that they were "lucky." "He commandeth, and raiseth the stormy wind, which lifteth up the waves" (Ps. 107:25).

One night, just at sunset, we were filled with more than the usual let-down that came with the darkness. In a few minutes we were to go below and be locked in for the night as usual. This night was especially hard, for our little ship was running away from some danger. How gracious of the Lord to place His bow again in the ship in that hour of need. We went to our quarters with peace; for, God was still on the throne.

Each day brought its blessing of Christian fellowship. Never will we forget our first Sunday on the Dresden. Everyone turned out for a service that afternoon. Even the captain of the ship listened with others of his men. So now they are without excuse, having that day heard the gospel of grace. A rainbow in the afternoon sky was the only background for the minister as he quoted: "Yea, though I walk through the Valley." As the strains of "Faith of Our Fathers" drifted across the waves, many silently wondered if, indeed, it would be "to death."

Having found the advice of the apostle Peter very timely we girded up the loins of our minds. In speculations on the future lay a snare to doubt; so we lived moment by moment, trying to let the Lord keep our minds in perfect peace. We felt that we had experienced somewhat of Peter's thoughts when we spoke of the "trial by fire." At least we had been under fire, and our faith had not been in vain. It was to Peter's epistles that we turned for comfort when we could borrow a Bible. One day, I read aloud: "The end of all things is at hand." So, with new zest, hope, and energy, we awaited each tomorrow.

May 19, after almost six weeks at sea, we saw the coast of Spain! Over that beautiful shoreline was a rainbow! We felt that now we could understand the joy of ancient Israel in the pillar of fire and the cloud. All that day, a rainbow appeared from time to time. At sunset it was just before us.

May 20, we were at port in occupied France. Over the flapping swastikas, the rainbow graced the morning sky. We had not wanted to come to this place; but now we were silently reminded that "His kingdom ruleth over all."

That afternoon we were taken to Biarritz. Of our experiences in France much could be said. We heard of their need for butter, flour, meat, potatoes, coal. We saw the despair that came with defeat. We heard the tramp, tramp, tramp, tramp of booted feet, and the haunting strains of their marching song, as the troops of occupation paraded the streets of the city. Everywhere the conquerors were in evidence.

One day a lady called to me. When I answered, she said: "Lady, when you go back to America, send us flour and milk for our babies!" It was hard to explain to her just why this was impossible. She said: "Yes, I understand!" Often I have wondered if I could have understood, had our positions been reversed and it had been I whose starving babes would soon be joined by another little mouth to be fed!

The Word of God tells us that the "curse causeless shall not come" (Prov. 26:2). Before we left France, we had an experience which we believe indicated the cause for the sufferings of France. One of the young ladies had lost, among other things, a French Bible. Thinking that it would be easier to replace this Bible in France than in America, three of us went from book store to book store looking for a Bible. The shop keepers would point with pride to their English books, but of French Bibles there was a dearth. It was not possible for this lady to replace her lost Bible. Everywhere they seemed amazed that anyone should want to read the Bible. Finally we were told that it would be impossible to purchase a Bible in Biarritz. Evidently France had not been reading the Word of God. Had the people honored this Word, perhaps they would not now stop Americans to beg for food.

Those long, doubtful days, in sad France, at last ended. Saturday morning, May 31, we got on busses to start our long journey to Lisbon. Never have any children anticipated a visit to grandpa's like young and old looked forward to this trip. At last the busses moved, and we were on our way. From the busses we went to a train. Those last few moments in occupied France were long. Outside, a German guard paced the platform. "Good-bye to you and your fellows!"—for the primitive train is moving! Just one long breath and we were in Spain! The last day of school could not compare with this! It was then that old reserves were cast aside and we rejoiced together.

That day we spent in San Sabastian. The luxury of a bath in hot water was a thrill. Dessert for dinner gave us a stuffed feeling. The supplies of poverty-stricken Spain seemed riches to us weary refugees.

"LET US CARRY ON"

Under the above caption, we are reprinting in this issue an article by Dr. Jesse R. Wilson, the Home Secretary of the American Baptist Foreign Missionary Society. This article has just appeared in "Horizons Abroad," issued by The Student Volunteer Movement, New York City. It was also published as Section Two, of "The Intercollegian" January, 1942. It represents the spirit and thought of the true missionary forces of the Christian church, in this desperate hour when some are wondering if the foreign missionary forces will be able to "carry on" during this time of international stress. One thing sure, as yet we have had no defeatist talk among Brethren ministers, or even the laity. Let us hope we shall hear none. God is on His throne. Have we faith to believe that His Spirit will continue to operate in the breasts of His own, war or no war? Yes, "Let us carry on! God does!"

A "GREENHORN"

Our good brother, Harold L. Dunning, may class himself as a "greenhorn." However, for a young man who has just been on the field one year, his keen analysis of the native mind, as is revealed in his article printed elsewhere in this issue, makes it evident that he has been studying his job. Apparently the job of the missionary is to penetrate the darkness of the heathen mind, so that the light of the glorious gospel of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ, may completely expel that darkness. The fact of the matter is, it is not alone the benighted beathen of Africa who lack a real consciousness of the nature of sin; but more and more the lack of a consciousness of sin seems to be possessing the minds of the people in so-called Christian America. Don't fail to read Bro. Dunning's article.

SAFE IN AFRICA

Just as we were about to go to press, the mail brought us the first letter written by Mrs. Minnie Kennedy after the arrival of herself and her two missionary companions in Africa. Her letter reveals the fact that a trip across the ocean these days is certainly fraught with great dangers. It also reveals that God is able. He kept His own, who were on the Zamzam, from a watery grave. He has kept His own again as they traveled the dangerous pathway. He can stir the waters, or He can still them. Her letter also reveals that in traveling on small freight vessels, which are furnishing the only possible means of travel for civilians these days, missionaries have to go through some things that are harder to pass through than even the dangerous waters. Sin is a horrible thing! Read Mrs. Kennedy's letter elsewhere in this issue.

Soon we were on another train "speeding slowly" toward Portugal. Now we were "somebody"! We were riding cars reserved by the American Red Cross. As we went in and out of tunnels, climbed up mountains, looked down into deep narrow valleys, we could have enjoyed the Pyrenees better had we not known that a "hot box" had developed in our nice private car—first class!

Our next trial was to have to abandon our coach. Baggage went rapidly out the windows. Soon all were out in the pouring rain. There we waited until another car was hooked onto the train. Back we went, but alas! This coach was much smaller. Some of us had to go back thru the train to the 3rd class. That night we spent with singing, drunken Spaniards. Others of our traveling companions were Jewish refugees from Germany, whom we met again to our joy on the Mouzinho. Traveling 3rd class in Europe is an experience to be dreaded; but having done it, we would not have missed the fun for the proverbial farm in Spain.

Sunday. We crossed into Portugal. There we encountered the experience of presenting our passports to a man in civilian clothes. We would not have worried, had not our advisor from the American consul been greatly agitated by our action. We did not breathe easily again until those precious documents were again in our hands.

That afternoon, as we traveled on toward Lisbon, a rainbow appeared over the rocky fastness of Portugal! To some of us, it brought joy and peace. To others it was an omen of "bad luck." What a picture it gave us of the gospel, which is a savor of life unto life, and death unto death (II Cor. 2:16).

Monday morning we arrived in Lisbon. From there we were taken to historic Cintra, to hotels where we awaited word from home. That word came from the State Department. We must return to America!

How were we, unknown and in humble circumstances, to obtain passage to America? Thousands of wealthy refugees are crowded into Lisbon, which city is known as the "escape hatch of Europe." There was nothing too hard for the God of heaven.

June 10, 26 of us boarded the Mouzinho. Here we were crowded into 3rd class quarters. Third "class" is a misnomer for there was no "class" to it! Sanitary conditions were unspeakable.

Our fellow-passengers interested us as much as we interested them. If we went by faces, we were in Egypt on the Zam Zam! We had our wilderness wanderings on the Tamesis and Dresden. Now, by looking around, we could believe that we were in Jerusalem! It was our privilege to travel with Jewish war refugees from all over Europe.

Each afternoon we tried to teach heavy tongues of little boys to get our difficult English "th", for they were eager to have us teach them English. Adults and children met daily for classes with the Americans. Our greatest privilege was to speak the language of heaven to these people and speak of our Lord.

The Americans were the most popular passengers on board. These poor Jews were amazed that we could laugh after our experiences. They had not even smiles. We had the Savior and they did not. Therefore, we could laugh while they were sad.

On Sunday, we had a service in the lounge. It was crowded to capacity. Many Jewish ears heard the story of the cross. God had not set us aside, but turned our feet another way.

In our group was a German-speaking young lady. In conversation with an elderly German Jewess, it was her privilege to lead this old lady to the Lord Jesus. Truly, "God works in a mysterious way, His wonders to perform." Had the Zam Zam reached Capetown, who would have witnessed to this woman?

So, "He bringeth them unto their desired haven" (Ps. 107:30). May 21, we reached New York! It was exactly three months since we had left. During that time we had traveled an estimated distance of 21,000 miles. Now the words of the Lord Jesus became real to us. "Go home to thy friends, and tell them how great things the Lord hath done for thee, and hath had compassion on thee" (Mark 5:19).

It was little Elaine Morrill, who, one night, on the Dresden prayed: "Dear Jesus, you know all about the Zam Zam; but I don't care any more, for I have other things to play with now!" We older ones share her sentiment. It is not toys which have comforted us; but we were comforted by the everlasting arms which have proven such a safe refuge. He has bared His mighty arm in our behalf. He has proven His name to be a strong tower into which the righteous may run.

There's nothing that can sever me from the love of God;
No want, no pain whatever, no famine, peril, blood.
Though thousand foes surround me, and in their base design
A sheep for slaughter count me, the victory still is mine!

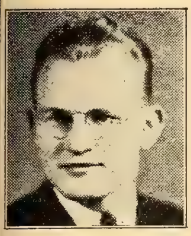
"OVERSHADOWING WINGS"

Nearly three milleniums ago a prophet of God wrote: "Woe to the land shadowing with wings, which is beyond the rivers of Ethiopia: That sendeth ambassadors by the sea," (Isaiah 18:1,2). Many believe that we have in this passage a reference to Great Britain and some believe that America is the land of the overshadowing wings.

However that may be, a careful reader of current events in these perilous times cannot fail to be struck by the large number of instances in which God seems to have spread shadowing wings over His own. One such striking incident the reader will find related by the missionaries who passed through the terrible experience of living for more than a month as prisoners on the German raider. They verily believe that God spread his rainbow over them. The Elim Evangel is authority for the following illustrations of the above truth that occurred among Chinese Christians in the terrible experiences that they have been passing through.

From Honan: "The wings of death have visited our city, many buildings being destroyed and people killed. Several of our Christians had narrow escapes, but none was injured! One was running with a friend when a bomb fell close behind. Suddenly he stumbled and fell flat. His unbelieving friend was killed by shrapnel, but he himself was unhurt."

From Kiangsi: "Seven bombs landed on our mission compound, destroying the chapel, part of the church, school building, and boundary wall. Of the seven bombs, only one failed to explode, and that one weighed 200 lbs. and fell but twenty feet away from a shelter in which fifteen of us had taken refuge."



From Szechwan: "The visitation here was very terrible, with heavy toll of life. Bombs fell on three sides of us. Two doors away a bomb dropped, killing several, and causing fire to break out. As we were getting some of our possessions out of the house, expecting it to fall at any moment, planes came over and dropped

Prayer Needs Here In Africa As Realized By a Greenhorn

By REV. HAROLD L. DUNNING, Yaloka, F.E.A.

The wings of the morning were just beginning to grow on the eastern horizon. Over three quarters of an hour before, Voloungou, the native evangelist who took this trip with me, had awakened me, calling "La aga aoue," which means "The sun has arrived." Through the white vapors of that rainy season's early dawn, black naked shadows could be seen hurrying to a little hut just opposite the one in which I had been sleeping. Into that dim grayness I ventured, and I was greeted by "Balao, Monsieur," from several throats as I stooped to enter that small mud hut. In it were gathered about 23 natives ranging from 15 to 50 years of age. They were the Church of God at Selegoro.

Harold Dunning

Three days before, I had arrived at this large village, while out on my first itineration trip alone in Africa. I was as green as the new, tall grass around me, and this was the first village at which I had stopped to work. I had arrived just at dusk, and being very tired of body from a long trek by bicycle and foot, had turned the meeting into the very competent hands of Voloungou.

Feeling our utter incompetence, we constantly raised our hearts in prayer during these three days. From the very first meeting we felt the Spirit's moving among the people. We preached, did personal work, and taught converts. As we sat in that hut viewing this little group, we could say God had indeed been faithful. Many Christians who had fallen away were restored. Several heard and heeded the call for the first time. All those who professed faith, both new and old, were dealt with personally. Those whose previous profession had shown no fruit, and who now refused the call to repentance and faith, we rejected. Those who obeyed from the heart the Word, were dealt with and given as much instruction as time would permit.

Now in this early dawn, in response to our call, the believers in good standing in that village were gathering for prayer, and for the great purpose of making some form of church organization through which they might be mutually nourished and built up, and might witness of Christ in that center of heathenism.

Short and stumbling were the prayers that went up that morning, but they were prayers to the true God and in Jesus' name. Prayerfully two of their number were chosen to become "big brothers" to watch and care for the flock of God. Finally, through the damp morning air came the call for work; and after a brief prayer for God's protection of that little flock, we filed out into the mist that was now brightened by the first rays of the sun, to go to the place where the villagers gathered to receive instructions from the chief concerning the day's work. Here, before they separated to go to the various allotted jobs, I again made known His name that is mighty to save.

Soon after these black forms disappeared along the many paths leading out to their various gardens, we finished packing our road equipment; and after giving instructions to the porters concerning our next stop, we rode away, leaving that infant church in the everlasting arms. From my heart, the prayer was rising that soon the way might be opened for us to visit them again.

Many such morning dews have come and gone since then. In fact, almost two months have passed. We have sent word out for all the "big brothers" to come into the station and attend the Junior Bible School. As we enrolled those that came, I saw one from this village. Where was the other? Our inquiry brought us the sad information that he, as well as several others of that little group, had counted the reproach of Christ too dear.

How sad! Had we been mistaken, and only supposed that God had worked? Had the response been only the artificial effect of the presence of a white man? No, we who had been there, and had prayed, and had heard the natives pray, and had seen the struggle going on in the hearts of men as they listened to the Word, know better. God had worked, His work had been real. Why then this falling away?

The answer to that question is the purpose of my writing this article. May I say that here, even more than in the homeland, experience counts. Knowledge of the spoken language may be acquired by listening and studying with other missionaries and native teachers; but knowledge of what goes on in the native mind, knowledge of his habits, can be gained only in the class rooms of experience. This I keenly realize; and, therefore, would not trust my own judgment, if it were not that I have heard these very judgments advocated by those who have been long enrolled in these classrooms.

The first prayer need is that soon we might experience a mighty movement of the Holy Spirit. The calling, converting, and consecrating of men is a spiritual work, and only the Spirit of God can perform it. Unless God does this work in Pentacostal power, we labor in vain who seek to accomplish it. The missionary or native evangelist is but the tool of the Holy Spirit. Unless the tool is used by the spiritual Master-Mechanic, it is utterly impotent, and becomes but a dead weight that must be supported.

The African mind has no concept of sin's seriousness. It recognizes the evil of certain social sins on society, but has no idea of sin's guilt before a holy God. In fact, a holy God is a foreigner to him. That sin is hateful to God, and that He must condemn each and every sin, are concepts still very faint, even to those who are classed among the most promising converts. Since the coming of the Word of God into the land, they had gained some knowledge of God in the face of Christ. They know "He so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son;" but why He gave His Son, they have no clear idea. True, they can say, "For our sins;" but when asked what is so terrible about the things have done that made it necessary for God's Son to die, they look at us with a blank look. Why? Those who know, say, "They have no concept of the sinfulness of sin."

Yes, many have seen the light and have faith in Christ. They believe He died for their sins; yet, not understanding the seriousness of sin, they can see no reason for not sinning when they think it might bring them some advantage. They think, "God will forgive. Is it not His business to forgive?" They have no notion of the obligation placed upon God, because He is God, of judging sin.

Some will refrain from open sin because they think it displeases the white man. They desire to stay in his favor because of their jobs, or other worldly ambitions in the heart. Others have gone through the mill of adversity, and have come to realize that God really does not like sin. They have found that the way of the transgressor is hard. These, therefore, refrain from sin, through a fear of its punishment; but in their hearts, there is no knowledge of why it is that God does not like sin. The sinfulness of sin is foreign to them.

Some are beginning to see the meaning of sin, but these are few in number. Therefore, our first great prayer need is that God will lay bare His arm, and through the power of His Spirit, bring upon us the conviction of the sinfulness of our sins. Until this is realized, the grace of God, the gift of righteousness through the blood of Christ, and the power of God available for the deliverance from sin, will be only dimly seen.

Will you pray with us that God will make the sinfulness of sin real to these poor sin blind souls? Will you praise God for the many, many of them that, though they see so imperfectly, yet their faces are turned toward the light of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ, and they have a hunger for the true and living God within their hearts? These are your African brethren. Will you who prize the name "Brethren," intercede on their behalf at the throne of grace?

The other prayer need is that the Holy Spirit will call to the work consecrated, trained native workers. Only the native really knows the native mind, the native language, the natives attitude and response. A good native catechist can do much more effective work than a white missionary. But he must be a good one; and that means one who is really consecrated, and one who is trained in the message of the Word, and in the method of handling that Word in effective Christian service.

Here is perhaps the most apparent need of that small church at Selegoro. Of the 23, only two have any knowledge whatsoever of reading, and these cannot read with any great intelligence to speak of. Within the next few months, unless God raises us some consecrated native catechist to go there, they will hear the Word read and taught intelligently, perhaps three or four times at the most. Can one wonder that they soon fall away, or, to use their word, "forget the way"?

I believe their way of describing it is more Scriptural than our. See Matt. 13:1-23. The native memory is good (above the white man's); but this message is so utterly strange, so disconnected from his village thinking, that unless he receives some real grounding in the Word, he soon forgets what he has heard and falls back into his former village life. True, within his heart, if he has truly turned to the Light, there is the seed of God; and as he walks in the way of the village again, there is a new consciousness of wrong-doing; but unless this is given intelligent interpretation to him, he soon ceases to feel its sharp prick. Thus it lies weak, from lack of necessary nourishment, until awakened to new vitality by the next visit of the messenger of God with the message of God.

But, you suggest, why does not the missionary go more often and teach such groups of people? The reason is that there are literally hundreds of such vilages that must be reached and only one or two available to reach them. Some of these villages, off on bush paths, they tell me, have never been visited even once by a missionary. In fact, this "greenhorn," after his first little experience, is amazed that as many villages are reached as have been.

Marc Volongou, Pastor at Yaloke

This very village of Selegoro had not been white wissionary in three or four years. To go to preach there takes two days for the round trip, which must be made by bicycle or push; and much of the way the bicycle must be pushed or carried, and the way covered by foot. No, the missionary can never effectively evangelize this land. If it is to be done, as God has commissioned, then it must be done by native evangelists who are consecrated and trained.

The Lord Jesus has given to us a wonderful promise in Matt. 9:37-38: "The harvest indeed is plenteous, but the laborers are few; pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth laborers into his harvest." He is God's given promise that cannot fail; and it is just what we need. God is ready to work, He is willing to work, and He will keep His promise. Will you have a part in that work? Will you fellowship with Him in the bringing of the gospel to these poor people? Will you join with Him in the sending of a worker to that village of Selegoro? Money is not needed, the native church will pay his salary. Prayer is the thing that is needed. "Pray ye" (may God help us to see this as His personal call to each of us!) "the Lord of the harvest"!

In the French school, there are several young lives being trained; in the vernacular school there are others being taught to read; in the Junior Bible School, there are over 40 young men taking the course; at Bozoum, in the Central Bible School, there are others taking advanced work. Will you pray for them? Will you pray that the appeal of this world will not allure them into sin? Will you pray that they will each meet the first and foremost requirement: a real consecration.

At our last Native Workers' Conference, held three months ago, an event happened which will reveal the need for the spirit of consecration among our workers. One of our most intelligent and talented young catechists, on the very last day, while in the very process of professing his consecration and call of God to the work of evangelism, took from a Mahammedan trader a charm, which is supposed to help him secure a better job (one with more pay and higher prestige in the eyes of his brothers). After a while God, in answer to prayer, convicted him of this; and he has just come to confess it since the Junior Bible School commenced. He burned the charm in front of the church last Sunday.

When Dr. Taber dealt with him, he found that the boy had no sense at all of the sinfulness of dabbling in native or Mohammedan charms. He thought that God did not like it, but why it was sinful—a knowledge of the jealousy of God—was utterly unknown to him. The fact that he was professing consecration and a call of God to preach the gospel, while at the same time seeking for a better position in this world system, to him, was perfectly natural and legitimate.

Others are daily being trained, daily being brought to the place where they can teach others; and they are lured into worldly jobs by commercial companies, who desire trained help, and who offer to pay them large salaries. Only the burning heart that was in Jeremiah can guard them during those temptations, and this heart comes only when the Holy Spirit brings about real consecration in their lives.

While thinking on the reason for the revival that stirs our chapel points—not only when the missionary is able to visit, but also when Voloungou is able to spend a day or two there—we have come to feel that the real answer is the fact that the catechists in charge are incapable of "feeding the flock of God." The reason is that they lack training in the message of the Word and the way to handle it. What has been accomplished in training workers has amazed and thrilled us. That missionaries have been working hard is very evident. When one begins to realize the problems faced in the taking of these raw idolators, unable to read, whose thinking has never transcended very far above the animal quest for a livelihood, and the bringing of them to their present condition, one must worship the God of wonders. Much, however, remains to be accomplished. A great need for more trained workers still remains.

The Lord is able. There are many whom He has given us. Daily they are tempted and allured by all the devices of the wicked one. The heat of these temptations is hardly realized by us, they are so severe. I shudder when I wonder how many church leaders back home would be able to resist them. Yet, several of these black jewels stand. They are the fruit of your prayers. Will you bare more fruit?

Selegoro, and many, many villages like Selegoro, are waiting for a teacher. The harvest is plenteous. Will you pray the Lord of the harvest to send a consecrated trained native catechist to them, and through his ministry, bring conviction of sin and the meaning of salvation by grace to their sin-darkened, Satan-dominated minds? "Pray ye the Lord of the harvest!"

their missiles on the other side of us. However, thank God, all of us were preserved."

From Shensi: "I had almost finished preaching when, all unexpected, an air-raid alarm sounded. Oh, the sound of these sirens is nerve racking! We took to the dugouts immediately. There were two bombings that evening, and the last one was far too near us for comfort. The planes dropped bombs to the right of us, and then to the left, but the place where we were escaped."

From Anhwei: "The city was almost entirely destroyed. Amid the smoldering ashes many charred bodies could be seen, whole families having been overtaken by destruction. But among the killed and wounded there was not a single Christian. And, most wonderful of all, was the preservation of our church building. A falling wall grazed the wall of the chapel with only an inch to spare! Not the slightest harm was done to us. Manifestly the living God is with His children, and He is wholly trustworthy."

Mr. Toliver, a missionary in Szechuan, West China, recently met two high government officials in that land who were out and out Christians and real soul winners. One of these Christians related to him an experience that he, his wife, and their six year old daughter went through in an air raid. Having no dug-out, they took refuge under the dining room table. As the bombs bursted near them, they bowed and prayed. They came through unscathed. The little Chinese girl looked up and said, "Daddy, the Lord Jesus is the best dug-out, isn't He?"

The little Chinese lass was absolutely right. She was a living illustration of the truth of the text and of the experience of little Israelitish maids, who, long before her day, passed through the awful plagues that fell on old Egypt: "The Lord doth put a difference between Egypt and Israel." Yes, the Lord puts "a difference" between those who love Him and those who love Him not. We believe that this old world is going to be made to realize before this World War is over that it pays to be on the Lord's side in these days of world-wide judgment.

GONE HOME!

Maximino Pereira and Family

On Dec. 23, 1941, the editor received a cable from Rev. J. Paul Dowdy, the superintendent of our mission in the Argentine, conveying the sad news that Mrs. Pereira, wife of one of the best and most faithful of our Argentine pastors, has passed on to be with her Lord. The cablegram read:

"Mrs. Pereira died this afternoon in Rio Cuarto after major operation for cancer. Burial tomorrow."

The sympathy of all our readers, we know, goes out to our good brother in these hours of his grief and loneliness; but his star of hope shines brightly. It will not be long until "the Lord Himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with Him in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord."

"Together"—Blessed word, that!

MRS. MINNIE KENNEDY WRITES HER FIRST LETTER AFTER ARRIVAL IN AFRICA

Matadi, Congo Belge,
Nov. 10, 1941.

Dear Friends,

At long last, we have finally reached our destination. And how we do praise the Lord for His goodness to us.

When we first started on our journey, I thought we would be safe as soon as we reached the coast. But when we heard that our first port would be Bathurst, we were glad that we knew the Lord would still be with us. While at Bathurst, we heard of the sinking of the American ship Lehigh, 70 miles out of Freetown. We then thought "after we pass Freetown we will be in safe territory." But when we reached Marshall Liberia, we heard of the sinking of an English boat off the coast of Cape Palmas. Cape Palmas was still beyond us. We finally decided that no place is safe in this old world anymore without the Lord. With Him we are safe everywhere.

The phrase in Ps. 148:8, "stormy winds fulfilling His word," came to mind continually. They say that planes and submarines cannot manoeuver so well in stormy weather. We have had stormy winds and waves all the way. Generally, the sea along the West Coast of Africa is very calm, just like a great lake. This time it has been very rough. The dishes rattle and tumble about all night. One night they left a plate of oranges on the table. During the night I heard an awful banging of plates, and looked to see what had happened. The plate of oranges was on the floor, and another plate was just ready to follow suit. Fortunately the plate was not broken.

The wind was so strong and cool that we couldn't stay on deck very long. It rained most every day, too. But we praise the Lord for all He sends, and especially the cool weather. We know that all things work together for good to them that love God.

After we left Marshall, we traveled blackout. I would call it semi-blackout, because we could have a blue light on without closing the port hole.

The third night after leaving Marshall, we were awakened about one o'clock by a terrific blowing off of steam. Then the boat stopped, and we bobbed around for six hours before we were on our way again. A cylinder in the engine had cracked. So we had to travel the rest of the way with two cylinders instead of three. It cut down our mileage some 50 miles or more a day.

Then just two nights from Matadi, we suddenly stopped again, around 12 o'clock at night. This time we only bobbed around three hours. I don't know what the trouble was this time. It doesn't matter, just so we keep going.

Over six weeks on a boat is a long trip. In all that time we never set foot on land until we got off at Matadi. But nothing matters since we have reached our destination safely. We certainly are glad to get into another atmosphere. Such cursing and swearing, taking God's name in vain with every other breath, I never have had to endure before. There is always some, of course; but never so bad as this time. They surely did manifest their hatred for the Lord and us—no imagination needed. Poor souls, it surely is heartbreaking to see their hatred for the Lord. Why should they hate Him so? He only loves them and has done so much for them!

One day, one of the crew caught a big fish—a horse mackerel. It was on the aft deck, so we went back to see it. As soon as the one, who hates us so, saw us coming, he started in. "Here they come, now we're in for it. Now we'll be having prayer meetings." Then away he went. As soon as we saw what we wanted to see, we left. I would like to have had a talk with him but didn't have a chance. Had we tried to say anything to him then, he would have cursed a blue streak. One of the men is a Lutheran—have had several nice talks with him. It brings to mind 1 Kings 19:18. How I do praise the Lord that He has brought me to Himself.

Now we have the inland trip to look forward to, with all its problems and difficulties. But, "when He putteth forth His sheep He goeth before.'" He will make the crooked places straight. We will be so glad when we reach the field and can get to work again. One thing I know, they won't swear at us and curse us when we tell them about the Lord.

The next letter will be written on the river boat and mailed from Bangui. Until then—continue to praise the Lord with us.

Yours in Him,

M. W. Kennedy.

THE SAVING POWER OF THE GOSPEL DEMONSTRATED!

MISS ESTELLA MYERS

Bassai, Oubangui-Chari, French Equatorial Africa

We praise the Lord that the Word of God is living and active and sharper than any two-edged sword. We thank Him that the blood of Jesus can wash the blackest heart clean. Yindoko, a woman from the village Kekessi, was a very wicked one, an adulteress of the worst kind. Her husband whipped her, but she continued in her sin. He was a very stern man and treated her cruelly; but this did not change her sinful heart.

"I AM NOT WHAT—

A teacher of the "good news" was sent to Kekessi, and the village people began to attend the services. Many accepted the gospel, and among them was Ynndoko. She found her Savior. She believed the blood of Jesus was able to wash away all her sins. She wanted to sin no more. When she put away her idol worship, her husband objected. He then opposed her in attending the church services. She continued to go; and early in the morning she ran away to pray in the little chapel. Her husband whipped her, but this did not prevent her from going.

One day she said to him: "You know how wicked I used to be—how I caused your heart to ache by running to other men! Being away from home, I did not cook your food for you. Do you not see that I am a changed woman?" He replied that he did. Then she added: "Why, then, do you try to hinder me from attending services and hearing more about this Jesus, Who has made a different woman out of me? I have put away my sin, and intend to follow the true God. I cannot worship idols again. Do not hinder me from following God, and from being His child. Do you not appreciate that I am not what I used to be?"

He then stopped hindering her from attending services. She prays that he, too, will go with her to the services. Yindoko's prayers are very touching, and we know that God will answer her prayer. We thank God for Yindoko; and may she be used in her village to bring many to the Lord she loves.

THE MACONAGHYS MAKE THE PRIEST RING THE CHURCH BELL

By HILL MACONAGHY, Carlota, Prov. of Cordoba, Argentina

"We are in our summer work now, and the days and nights are full. The work in our three towns goes along real well, especially the work among the children. The class in Alejandro has grown considerably despite all the opposition of the priest, who, you will remember, does us the great kindness to ring the church bell to warn the people that the evangelicals are in town.

We will probably have some pictures of the group there for you folks in the homeland soon. The believers there continue taking care of the expenses of their work. During the last year and nine months they have given 204 pesos and 80 centavos. To these folks a peso is the same as a dollar to the people in the States.

In about a week the schools will be out, and we are planning on having open-air classes for the children. There are many sections where there are groups of children, who do not come to our meetings in the salon because of the distance, or because of fear and the opposition of the priest. So we plan to go right into their neighborhood with the gospel, and thus overcome these obstacles. We will have these meetings also here in La Carlota.

The work here in Carlota makes progress slowly. We have a very nice group of children; and there are many homes where we are welcome to visit each week. We praise the Lord for these answers to prayer. We are on the streets every week with tracts from house to house, and we are confident that the Lord is going to bless His Word, and give us a real group of born-again ones here in this pagan town. Yesterday we had 17 present for the Sunday School, and took a picture. If it turns out well, we will send you a copy.

This afternoon we plan to leave early for a neighboring town, where we shall go from house to house with tracts. There is no gospel work of any kind there; so we are praying the Lord will open the way for a definite work to be opened over there.

The condition of things in this country, as a result of the war, grows steadily worse. The poor people are really suffering terribly. They depend so much on the corn harvest, and last year there was not much cut. The owners just turned the stock into the fields. And those who did harvest their fields received very little. Now this year we have been having terrible storms, late frosts, and earlier in the season, terrible dry spells. Much of the corn that was planted has been ruined. Others did not plant because of the lack of a market. The wheat, for the most part, has been ruined. Lat week, near Rosario, they had a hail storm which lasted for 45 minutes. The hail stones weighed a pound apiece. The other night we just missed a terrible storm here. It struck a section close by, destroying all the wheat.

Here the Catholics and Nazis go hand in hand. Truly, it looks like this country is in for some terrible times. This last week they have commenced publishing air-raid precautions. Well, all these things make us press on all the more in the work of the Lord. The time is short. Souls are perishing, and only the Lord Jesus can save. How we long and pray that the brethren in the homeland will have hearts that beat more fervently for the work in Argentine. The souls here are just as precious as those in other parts of this sin-cursed world. But oh, how neglected they have been and still are! We just must have a gospel testimony in all the towns in our district. The salvation of lost souls demands it; and above all, our Lord commands it!

No excuses that we, the missionaries, or you brethren in the homeland, may give for not doing so, will "hold water" in the day of His appearing. We ask for more prayer—for more definite interest in the work here—for more workers, and for more money to extend the work.

The Lord has set us (the brethren in the homeland, and we, the missionaries) as watchmen to warn the wicked in this district of their danger, and to give them the message of salvation. We are failing Him, and them, by not reaching all these towns. And the Word says that when we fail to warn, the wicked, they shall die; but, their blood shall be on our hands. See Ezek. 3:16-21. Well, enough said!—we do not want the blood of the lost souls in Argentina on our hands!

You will be glad to hear that last week we received a check for $50 towards a better car. It came from some dear folks who are not Brethren, but who dearly love the Lord. They are the teachers and the superintendent of the Sunday Breakfast Association Mission Sunday School. During the days we were in the Philadelphia School of the Bible, we taught in the mission, which was at that time the Eighth Street Rescue Mission Sunday School. Ever since that time they have faithfully remembered us in the work. We now have 275 pesos towards a car.

HEART THROBS OF GREAT MISSIONARIES

"Oh, let me pray once more for Feejee."—John Hunt.

"How will even heaven be heaven where there are no Nestorians to be led to Christ?"—Der. Perkins, Persia.

"If I thought anything could prevent my dying for China, the thought would crush me."—Rev. Samuel Dyer.

"If I had a thousand lives to live, Africa should have them all."—Bishop Mackenzie.

"That land is henceforth my country which most needs the gospel."—Count Zinzendorf.

"I cannot, I dare not, go up to judgment till I have done the utmost God enables me to do to diffuse his glory through the world."—Dr. Asahel Grant, Persia.

"The word 'discouragement' is not found in the dictionary of the kingdom of heaven. Never let yourself use the word if you have God's work to do."—Melinda Rankin.

"I will go down, but remember that you must hold the ropes."—William Carey.

"It is my deep conviction, and I say it again and again, that if the church of Christ were what she ought to be, twenty years would not pass away till the story of the cross would be uttered in the ears of every living man."—Simeon H. Calhoun.

"The prospect is as bright as the promises of God."—Adoniram Judson.

YOUR MISSIONARY—STILL!

Recall the 21 years, give me back its shipwrecks, give me its standings in the face of death, give me it surrounded with savages with spears and clubs, give it back with spears flying about me, with the club knocking me to the ground—give it back, and I will be your missionary still.—

James Chalmers.

Editor's Mail Box

A "FLOOD OF MAIL" recently arrived in the hands of the editor that was mailed in Africa during the month of October. Much news of great interest to those interested in the work of the Foreign Missionary Society was contained in these letters. We will give to our readers as much from these letters as space will allow.

Miss Estella Myers, on Oct. 12, wrote:

"We praise God for all things. He is taking care of us in health and in every way. Needless to say we are busy. One is always busy, but the time best spent is the time when we put first things first.

In two weeks Mabel and I will close our Bible school. We have enjoyed the students so much. Their spirit has been so good. The attendance has been good. We have over 40. These are lads teaching in their own villages. Most all of them are places where there is no chapel. In the afternoons they worked on the auto road that was washed badly this year by the heavy rains.

After the school is out, I am going out in the villages to establish more schools. I hope to be out a great deal of the time this dry season. . . .

We have sent the translations to the Bible house in New York. We hope that God will bless the printing of the manuscripts, and that in time the Karre New Testament will arrive here. Of course this will be a long time, for the proof reading must come first. We pray every day about the safe arrival of the manuscripts in America.

Some months ago I started a school for little girls in the morning. They are reading now, and I am so glad. There are about 30 in the school. The school will continue while I am in the villages.

Some Christians came to me several days ago and said that the village was trying to force them to go to the bush school. They wanted me to visit the chief and plead for them. I went to see him, and asked whether we could not have a school in his village for all the children who wanted to be Christians. Since he was permitting the bush school for those who did not want their Savior, I asked for reading classes for the converts and Christians. It pleased the Lord to cause the chiefs to consent, and we established two large schools and several small ones. There had been schools before, but for some reason they were discontinued. I would like to see all the Christians reading the Word. I shall try my best to do this as I travel around in the villages.

The Christians are going to build a classroom beside the chapel. In this, the older people will learn to read. The children have school in the chapel. We are building a classroom on the station for women's meetings. We have always taught the women on the verandas.

Unless more workers come out next year, we will be few in number on the field. God used the remnant of the Jews, so I know He will use us. I can say the same as did the little boys who were playing soldier in the street, with biscuit tins as drums, and broom handles as rifles, and letters R.F.A. on their arms. When asked whether the letters meant Royal Field Artillery, they replied "Nah it means Ready For Anything."

When we were going up the river, leaving Brazzavelle for the first time, Mrs. Rolliers died, leaving us when we were in the midst of the battle. Our hearts were sad. We could not understand. A mighty one of our number had fallen. But we took courage and went on. Now we must do the same, for we are again in the midst of the fight. The risks are great; but those outside the church are taking risks also. Let our souls be daring, for we have a conquering Lord in this battle to overthrow the forces of evil. The children of Ephriam, armed for battle, turned back. Let us not make the same mistake. We do not know how long we will be called to fight, and it might be tough; but God is faithful and will sustain us to the end. I want to take the risk, and am willing to give up anything that will distract my thought, or cause me to halt or slow down in the battle. I believe God wants me here to face all risks; to yield my life anew to Him and fall low at His feet, broken; to live the life of the unsandalled feet that the Lord taught Joshua.

"Wholly surrendered, a trophy of grace,
Wholly enabled all trials to face,
Wholly triumphant at each testing place—
This is His purpose for me."

J. H. Foster, our acting field superintendent in Africa, wrote under date of Oct. 15, a most interesting letter, from which we quote:

"This morning we received your two letters. One was dated July 3 and sent air mail; the other one dated July 5 and sent regular mail.

First of all: The decisions made by the Field Council in placing the missionaries were made with the belief that they would soon be with us. But since the tragedy of the Zamzam has delayed them, naturally we are very disappointed; however, not "upset" as you say. We are "setup" ready for anything that now comes! But how we praise the Lord that they are all safe in America; since the Lord did not see fit to permit them to come on at that time. We know that He will bring them forth in His time; therefore we are simply resting and waiting for Him to work.

We are very glad that our missionaries are willing to return at any cost. However, we feel that precaution should be taken; especially as to the cargo of a boat, and naturally with the permission of the government. For what they do, they try to do for the citizens' good.

We have already written to you about Miss Crawford's physical condition. Dr. Tabor had advised her to leave the field no later than Aug. 1, but she tried to hold out until next spring. However, she finally decided to leave Dec. 1st; therefore, we cabled for her furlough funds. Dr. Tabor also advised her to spend several months in S. Africa until the worst of the winter is over; and not arrive in New York during the coldest months.

Even though our personelle may be reduced we take courage when we read how the Lord reduced Gideon's army to such a small number, yet worked miracles through the few. We refuse to be discouraged, for it is the Lord's work that we are engaged in.

Foster furlough: If the Lord so wills, we are not expecting to go home until "the rough ways shall be made smooth;" and that will probably not be until the war is over. If the Lord soon returns, we will not need a furlough.

We cannot see how any churches could possibly criticize any one; especially in the face of the terrible experience that six of our number so recently suffered. Should criticism come, suggest that the criticizers make the trip. I think conditions at the present time should arouse Christians to give more than ever before, and be willing to continue the support of those who cannot return to the field of labor where their hearts really desire to be. Jehovah-jereh still liveth!

We need the prayers of our brethren at home. Our trials are many, and it is very evident that the enemy is trying hard to hinder our work. We ask our brethren everywhere to pray definitely for this, the Lord's work and His workers."

Miss Grace Byron, in a very interesting letter that was written on board the vessel, and completed after they had landed in the Belgian Congo, closed with the following paragraph:

"Men are risking their ships and their wealth, and the seamen their lives on the high seas, every day for the products of Africa. The only time the natives hear the name of the Lord Jesus is in the curses used when unloading the boats. The Pan American Airways is taking this time, when traveling on the sea is so dangerous, as a golden opportunity to establish air ways around the world. Is this the time for the church to become frightened and discouraged? No, it is the time to be courageous, and attempt big things for Christ. The Lord has proven that He will see us through if we do not become weary and frightened. We arrived at Matadi this morning. We have been busy getting our freight and baggage out of customs, and other formalities. Mr. Orhman of the Swedish Mission met the boat, and was a great help to us."

Miss Elizabeth Tyson, under date of Oct. 17, writes from Yaloke:

" The government has asked Floyd to come to Bangui to help in the medical work there. They are short of doctors, and have asked him to help out. They are supposed to go about the middle of November. Unless the Lord rules otherwise, we then will be only three here on the station. Then when we think of the vast district that need workers, we can only cry out to the Lord for Him to thrust workers forth in the needy harvest fields. We ought all to praise the Lord for the way He has cared for us during these terrible days of war and strife. Of course one can hardly tell what a day may bring. Yet we know that nothing can touch us without God's permission, so we just rest in Him, and work as hard as we can while the doors are open to the gospel. Pray for us."

Again, under date of Oct. 28 she wrote: "Several days ago we received a copy of the telegram, announcing the departure of the ladies (Miss Emmert, Miss Byron and Mrs. Kennedy) for Africa. My, but we are glad that they are coming, but where are the men? I really thing that Grace is brave to start out so soon after that hectic experience she had on the Zamzam, but that shows what she is made of. Are the natives rejoicing! It has been only two weeks ago that I asked them to pray very definitely for the Lord to open the way for Mary to come back, as well as all the others. Today Voloungou came to visit me, and in his prayer he prayed so wonderful for their safety. What struck me most was when he said, "Lord, take care of these three women, who are willing to face death in order that we might know the Word of God. I still can paddle my 'bic'. I made five kilometers in 15 minutes today, and there were plenty of hills too. It is great going down the hills, but when it comes to climbing them, I wish that I had a motorcycle. Hill climbing never was one of my accomplishments, but I get there just the same."

Marguerite Gribble Dunning, on Oct. 28, 1941, wrote the editor as follows: "I bet you wondered what we wanted with ten cans of baby powder! Well they listed six more cans than we ordered. Out of the ten they supposedly sent, only one arrived; but 'most everything else was in good shape.

Everybody out here, too, seemed to be worrying that the baby things from the States wouldn't come on time. I think I did the least worrying of any one! Our baby has been the Lord's ever since the first minute we knew about him, and hasn't the Lord promised to provide for His own? If you could see the nice little chest of drawers Harold made for him, and how well filled it is, you would know He has abundantly supplied. His missionary aunts and uncles have been very nice to him, too!

Well, we hope he will be a boy, too, altho half the time Harold hopes he will be a girl! As to name, he will be James, but William James. You see, he has two very wonderful grandfathers, and we just couldn't leave one out, especially since this is Pop Dunning's first grandson—I mean if it is! He will probably be "Jim," but I hope he escapes "Jimmy"."

Well, on the 4th day after Marguerite wrote those words, "he" was "a girl!"—and "William James" became Marguerite Ruth. We don't always get what we order in either the matter of "baby powder" or of babies. However, we understand that Harold and Marguerite are eminently satisfied with that which the Lord gave them, and the Lord makes no mistakes. Congratulations!

On Oct. 8, 1941, Mrs. Dunning wrote a letter which arrived in the same mail with her letter referred to above. In this letter she gave the editor 'something to laugh at," which we shall pass along to our readers, so that they may join in upon the merriment. We quote:

"If you feel the need of something to laugh at, you ought to be here about 20 minutes every morning when Harold leads the Bible School men in calisthenics. It is the funniest thing I ever saw! There is one short, squatty fellow whose name means 'work' who is invariably two counts behind. When the rest are down he is up, and vice versa. And he goes at everything so nice and easy!

"Another fellow who wears long trousers and a sort of pinkish shirt is another clown. He is long and skinny, and how I wish I could take a moving picture of him doing the 'jumping jack' exercise. He hops up and down just enough to get his feet off the ground, but without moving his legs otherwise. He touches his fingers together in front of his nose, and his chin ever so gracefully, instead of clapping hands over his head and slapping his thighs. He reminds me for all the world of some dear old man who gets 'happy' in an old-fashioned revival service!

"When it is time for them to begin, they have a large audience. Today all the Taber family except Floyd, who was watching out the office window, were standing outside watching. I had timed it so that I would be passing from my classes on the hill to those down the hill at the time. Incidentally, it took me 20 minutes to pass! And all the house boys, workmen, hospital boys, etc., who possibly could, were watching from one place or another. One hospital boy said to Elizabeth: O, Monsieur Dunning is a child yet! He still knows how to play!' They can't understand why this play tires them out more than the work some of them do!"

Well, folks, all the editor has to sap, is that Harold will have to be forgiven for maying a monkey out of himself in the eyes of those ebony children of the sun, as well as before the "white folks." You see, at that particular time there was a reason for his "acting up."

Hill Maconaghy, La Carlota, Argentina, under date of Nov. 22, 1941, wrote to "Mrs. McNeeley and members of the W.M.C. of the First Brethren Church of Long Beach," a very fine letter which was much appreciated by the missionary ladies of Long Beach. It is quite evident that Brother and Sister Maconaghy are thoroughly on the job of making Christ known in the benighted Roman Catholic region wherein they work. We quote a portion of his letter:

"We are now located in La Carlota. It is about 110 kilometros to the southeast of Rio Cuarto. It is a real center, as two railroad lines cross here and two main highways as well. Thus we can reach out in all four directions with the gospel of the grace of God. The town itself is a real Catholic town, given wholly over to the pleasures of the world. Many times it makes one think of Vanity Fair in Pilgrim's Progress. Dances, drinking parties, movies, gambling, and immorality abound. The town operates a loud speaker which blares out its so-called music three or four times a week. During these times, the people promonade up and down the sidewalks in front of our house.

The work was opened here Sept. 1 with a series of conferences. During these the people came in goodly numbers. But soon the priest got under way with his opposition and the attendance dropped considerably. However, we have a nice group of children who attend the Sunday School, and also several families who come to the evening services. The opposition continues, and the work seems to go forward so slowly—and yet we know it is going forward.

There are two other towns that we visit each week for meetings. One is close by, a town called Los Cisnes. There the work goes real well. We have a large group of children in a child evangelism class—many of them have already received the Lord Jesus, and one can see them growing in Him. In our last children's meeting we had 31 present. In the summer we have had as high as 50 children attending. The evening meetings are also well attended—the last one we had 65 present. Of course we had a real special meeting, having some of our other pastors present. However the attendance is usually always good. Several of the older folks have been saved.

In Alejandro we have an established work. It is growing slowly. For almost a year the believers over there have been paying all their expenses. This is a great thing for the mission. The children's class is growing.

Last week, or rather the first of this week, we went to another little town with tracts. Going from house to house, we had many opportunities to speak to souls about the Lord. We now plan to add that town to our list, and visit it each week with tracts, and later with open air meetings. There are many children over there, which, of course, takes our eyes for a children's class.

And so the work continues. We would appreciate your prayers in behalf of these four towns which we are now reaching. Also please pray that the many other towns which are all around us without the gospel may soon be reached. Pray that there may soon be a real wave of evangelism sweep this province in which we work."

WHY?

Some child, in a happier future,
Will ask when his lesson is through:
"Why did they bomb the children?
What did the children do?"

And who will be able to answer?
Who will be able to say
Why war was made on children
In a barbarous dark day.

The question will echo forever
Though the face of the world may be new:
"Why did they bomb the children?
What did the children do?"

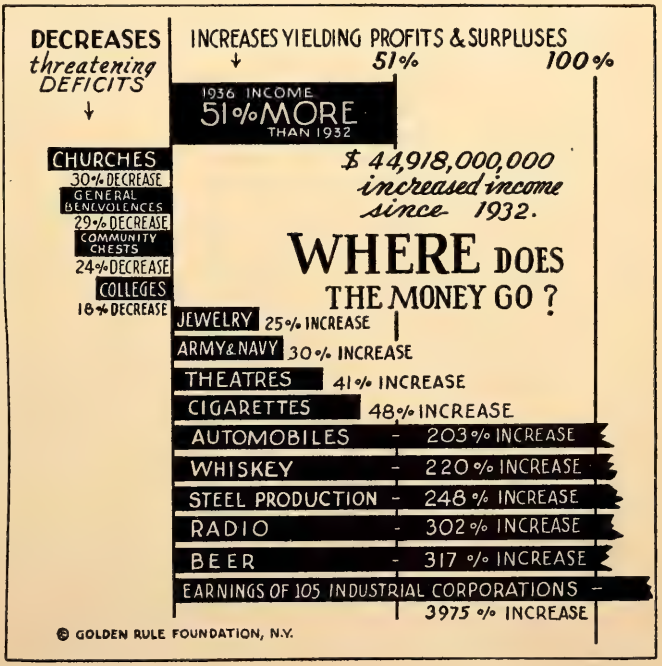
THE GREATEST WORK ON EARTH



" The work of Christian Missions is the greatest, noblest and sublimest to which the energies of the human mind can be devoted. No labor that we can bestow, no sacrifice that we can make is too great to be undertaken for the glorious purpose of illuminating the dark world with the light of the glorious gospel."—John Williams, missionary martyr.

KNOW ANY ONE THAT NEEDS SOME?

A pharmaceutical concern back in New Jersey offers to supply its products at wholesale rates to our foreign missionaries. One of these products is Diphenyiacetyldiethylaminoethanol Hydrochloride. It is an anti-spasm remedy. So far as we know, none of our missionaries need any of that. They work quite steadily. However, we are thinking of ordering a few gallons for some of the members of our church. It is rather expensive, but if it will do the work, it is worth it. True, the Christmas spasms are over. But Easter is coming. A second product that interests us is Butyloxycinchoninic Acid Diethylethylenediamide, offered as a cure for spinal anesthesia. The laity ought to be interested in having us get some of this to give to certain preachers some of us know. And if it will cure ecclesiastical spinal anesthesia, it will be worth all it costs. Then, too, this concern offers Lodochloroxyquinoline at a very reasonable price. That is a dusting powder. A lot of folks might use that on their Bibles. One thing sure, if "them thar" remedies do not work, they ought'er!—From Calendar, First Brethren Church of Long Beach, Calif.

"WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH AMERICA?" HERE'S "WHAT'S"!

America is now in the throes of a world war, the end of which no man can foresee. Our Congress, at the behest of our President, is in process of appropriating about $56,000,000,000 for the implements of war. Our national debt will soon be well over the $100,000,000,000 mark—a number that no man can comprehend. Why has the living God allowed us to come to this? Have we treated God right? Graciously through the years He blessed us as a people. Have we robbed Him in return? The above chart reveals a sad story. Remember, this chart was made back in 1936. Since then, the "decreases" have continued to decrease each year, and the "increases" have continued to increase. Black and awful are the judgments that are ahead of us, unless this apostate nation shall confess her sins and turn back to God!

"I GAVE, I GAVE MY LIFE FOR THEE!
WHAT HAST THOU GIVEN FOR ME?"

LET US CARRY ON

By REV. JESSE R. WILSON, Home Secretary of the American Baptist Foreign Missionary Society

A woman missionary in China recently closed one of her letters home with these words: "Let us carry on. God does."

That is essentially what Jesus said: "My Father worketh even till now; and I work."

That is also what Isaiah said: "He (that is God), will not fail nor be discouraged, till he hath set justice in the earth, and the isles shall wait for his law."

Tracy Strong, who is heading up the war-prisoner work of the Y.M.C.A., says that among Christian people everywhere in Europe today he finds hope. Imagine that in war devastated and harassed Europe! Why is it? Because God carries on.

We carry on too. The constructive forces of the world are not going to fail. They are now girding themselves for a greater and more united effort than the world has ever seen.

Among them all, in the vanguard of them all, and the inspiration of them all, is the church of Jesus Christ. No outstanding, or even moderately successful Christian organization, of more than local importance has folded up because of the contemporary unprecedented onslaught of the forces of evil. Some in German-occupied Europe and Asia have been suppressed in a local form or setting, but the spirit that brought them into being persists. Battle lines have shifted, but the conflict goes on. Moreover, new agencies to meet new needs and new challenges have come into being. In Washington are listed no fewer than 400 organizations set to secure or administer funds for world-wide relief. Churches and church groups and church-inspired groups are chief among these.

Certainly the foreign mission movement is carrying on. Even the 117 missions in different parts of the world, hitherto drawing their financial support chiefly from Germany or German-occupied countries and now cut off from their support, are still operating. "No essential work has had to close."

No American or Canadian foreign mission society is thinking of anything other than an advance in the years ahead. Even now, in spite of some forced withdrawals from Japan and Korea and elsewhere, new missionaries are being sent out. Some are being appointed, for whom it is not immediately possible to secure passports from our State Department because of war conditions, but the new appointees are making the most of their delayed departure for the field by further training and experience in this country. They will be all the better prepared for their work later on. Others also are being appointed, or are being sought for future appointment; and we shall witness within a few years the removal of barriers to travel, and easy access to many lands, and the going forth of scores and hundreds of young people, well-trained, chastened and disciplined by the war years; eager, devoted, ardent, to have a full part under Christ in overcoming the sin, disease, poverty, ignorance and superstiton of the whole world.

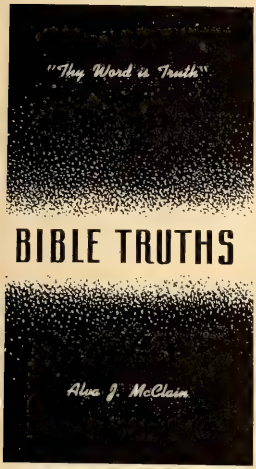
The end of missions? Rather it is the dawn of a new day for missions, of a better type of missions, freed from some of the paternalisms and imperialisms of the past, more deeply rooted in the eternal gospel of the Son of God and more aware of the ecumenical fellowship of the church universal. Such missions will again lead all the forces of civilization which make for a better world, and by the power of the Spirit, will increasingly produce the fruit of the spirit—love, joy, peace, and all the rest—among people everywhere.

"Let us carry on. God does."

Black Babies

MISS ELIZABETH TYSON, R.N., Yaloke, F.E.A.

"Mamma" and Her "Chillun"!



The maternity work is booming; there is a nice "new crop" of babies in the baby clinic each Monday morning. I am running out of names. The mothers insist that I, their "mamma" must name my "chillun." A pre-natal clinic, too, is going in full force; and I really believe that this contact and help to our women is going to help them spiritually as well as physically. I always have prayer with the mothers, and often give them a short message. They always say in their prayers that, before I started to care for them, they had to bring their children into the world just like the animals; but now, they know better and are so thankful that they can come to us and be treated like human beings. I only wish you could see some of these little kinky-headed babes. They are so cute, and especially in their little blue and pink flannel dresses that the girls made for them. Several weeks ago there was a little one born into the home of one of our Christians, but the little boy was not for this world. He only lived a few days; and when they prepared him for burial, they asked me if they could put on the nice little gown that I gave them. It never had been put on. Of course I agreed; and, O, how tenderly they pressed their precious bundle! Then, as they sat there, and pressed the lifeless form of their child to their breast, I could not help but think of the many heathen burials I had seen—the body all covered with red clay, ashes and filth. That little gown perhaps did not cost much more than 15 cents at the most; but, what it meant to that mother and father could not be counted in mere money. The maternity work is hard, and sometimes I think that I just can't get up at night after I have had a hard day; but, if we can break through and win the women of our work for the Lord, it will be more than worth the wakeless nights and hard work.

It is now past nine P.M. and I must retire, for I never know when I shall be called.

Pray for the work among the women of Africa. Only when they are truly born again and consecrated to the Lord will our work have a sound foundation.

GOING WHERE THE BEST ONES GO

When Thomas Titcombe started up the Niger River, in West Africa, to do missionary work among the pagans, one of the European traders on the river said to him, sneeringly, "If these niggers go to heaven, I don't want to go there." "Negroes will be both places," answered Mr. Titcombe; "I prefer to go to heaven with the good (redeemed) ones."—Christian Victory.

NEWS BRIEFS From Our Workers

The annual business meeting at the ALLERTON PA. church this ar resolved into a blessed prayer meeting and concluded with nging the Doxology. Many concluded that the revival which they ere anticipating began at that meeting. A unanimous vote of con- dence was extended the pastor, Bro. R. E. Gingrich, for the cour- geous way in which he is directing the work of that church.

Bro. Stanley Hauser, supply pastor-evangelist at GRAFTON, VA. rites, "We report a revival with keen interest: the membership work- g that relatives, friends, neighbors and loved ones might know hrist as their Savior from sin. We want the brotherhood to pray r this revival and for this particular work. Our communion is soon."

In celebration of their becoming a self-supporting church, the First rethren Church of GLENDALE, CALIF. conducted a week's Bible nference with Dr. Roy L. Laurin, well known radio and Bible con- rence speaker and teacher. At the close of the conference, Dr. aurin presented an autographed copy of his booklet, "Quest and onquest," to the 15 who were present for every session of the con- rence.

On his way east to become pastor of the Conemaugh, Pa. church, RO. A. L. LANTZ conducted the mid-week prayer service at the . Wayne, Ind. church and the Sunday morning church service at e Bethel Brethren Church of Berne, Ind.

The church enjoyed the best financial ar of its history. 50 members were added to the church. We ent $1,015 for paid broadcasting on Sundays, which did not include daily 15-minute devotional program we conducted for the station their time. Our home mission offering went $83 over the goal which was set at $800, better than double of last year. There was an average attendance of 182 for 138 preaching services during the year, which did not include Bible School, but did include prayer meeting and conferences held."

Rev. C. H. Ashman of Whittier, Calif., was in CANTON, O. January 18 to Feb. 1, holding revival services. Rev. Walter Lepp (of the Cleveland church) led the singing the first week, as Glenn O'Neal (pastor at Canton) was in the seminary.

The PERU, IND. church reports an attendance of 68 at the first Happy Hour conducted this year. This is a Bible class for children, which meets after school. Cars meet the children at school and take them home after the meeting.

TAKE IT TO JESUS

Sometimes our hearts are broken:
Trials seem more than we can bear;
But what peace and comfort greet us
If we meet the Lord in prayer!

Sometimes we are misunderstood
And loved ones turn us down;
The friends we thought the truest
Only meet us with a frown.
Just take it all to Jesus—
He will never turn you down.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PROGRAM

Instead of featuring the mission study each meeting, try to vary your appeal in advertising the meetings. For example, in this month you might feature the Bible study. A picture of a church on posters and invitations or printed programs might be used to represent that invisible church which we have revealed in the study. I wonder how many Councils have a poster to advertise every meeting? Do you do only what you can to get by, or are you really putting your Council over? Our record will be on high. We don't want to be ashamed of it.

Dear W. M. C. Sisters,

These words of our blessed Lord, "Watch and pray," have occurred to me many times at the beginning of this year. With conditions as they are in the world, we should have a greater determination to spend more time in earnest prayer, not forgetting that petition of John, "Even so, come, Lord Jesus."

In that blessed Hope,

—Mrs. Edward Bowman.

A SHIFT OF MAGAZINES

Due to the fact that the W.M.C. Number has been reaching some Councils too late to make adequate preparation for their meetings, an arrangement has been made between The Brethren Women's Missionary Council and Grace Theological Seminary whereby, beginning this month, the W.M.C. Number will be published the second week of the month instead of the fourth, and the Educational Number will be issued the fourth week instead of the second.

THE BEST GIFT

A mother who frequently left her home for a few days at a time used to bring each of the children a little gift. One day she purposely neglected the gifts. The little ones met her in the hall with expectant faces.

"I did not bring you any presents this time," said the mother, "because "

"We don't care, mamma dear, you are the best present," said one little one.

Can we say to Christ: "Thou are the best gift. Thou are all in all to me; there is nothing on earth I desire before thee; I would rather have thee than any earthly gift?"—Glendale, Calif., Bulletin.

(Phil. 4:6)

STUDIES IN THE EPISTLE TO THE EPHESIANS—VI "THE MYSTERY OF THE CHURCH"—Eph. 3:1-21

By HOMER A. KENT

In the chapter before us, the church is presented as a "mystery." It is interesting to note that there are at least 11 "mysteries" referred to in the New Testament. To mention a few examples, there is (1) the mystery of the incarnation (1 Tim. 3:16; (2) the mystery of the divine indwelling (Col. 1:26-28; (3) the mystery of the kingdom of heaven (Matt. 13); (4) the mystery of the translation of the living saints (1 Cor. 15:51-55); and (5) the mystery of iniquity (II Thess. 2:1-12). The subject of the third chapter of Ephesians is the mystery of the church.

It should be noted that the term "mystery" as it is used in the New Testament is not something which cannot be understood, but something which has been known to God from the beginning, but which He has withheld from the knowledge of men until His time came to reveal it to men. For an illustration, see Rom. 16:25-26. There is, of course, in all the divine "mysteries," the supernatural element in prominent evidence.

With these considerations as a background, let us look at the mystery of the church as it is revealed in the chapter before us. Note:

The Nature of the mystery (vs. 1-13).

The Apostle Paul makes it clear that he has been made the minister of the mystery about which he speaks (v. 7) in this chapter. Furthermore, he says that this mystery is something that in all the dispensations that are past was hidden from the knowledge of men (vs. 4-5). He calls attention to the fact that the unveiling of this mystery was the manifestation of God's grace (vs. 7-8).

Just what, then, is this mystery?

1. It is not that the Gentiles were to be saved. This fact had been revealed by the Old Testament prophets (Rom. 9:25-33). The truth that there are to be people from the various nations and races of earth in the saved multitude at last was, therefore, not the mystery revealed to Paul. What then was it?

2. It is the fact that God, in this dispensation, is taking people who are Gentiles and people who are Jews, and making of them a new thing in the world, even the church which is the body of Christ (v. 6). Thus the church is neither Jew nor Gentile. It is a new fellowship. This was indeed a new thing in Paul's day. It was a day when Jews looked upon Gentiles as "dogs," and the Gentiles despised the Jews. "A middle wall of partition" separated them. The revelation of this mystery was absolutely new. In Christ, all race and class distinctions disappear. The church is being formed of Jews and Gentiles bound together by the common tie of Christ's blood, and indwelt by one Spirit. How sorely the message of this revelation is needed today, when there is still so much of race prejudice and hatred in the world! Christ and the church, His body, are the only true answer to the world's need. Following the consideration of the nature of this mystery of the church, note:

The Prayer for an entrance into a proper appreciation of the mystery (vs. 14-21).

1. The One addressed (v. 14)—"the Father." The regular order for prayer in the New Testament seems to be (1) to the Father, (2) in the name of the Son, (3) in the power of the Holy Spirit.

2. The One accountable for the existence of the church (v. 15). The church is a family. It is holy brotherhood. Part of it already is in heaven, part is on earth. But wherever its members are, they owe their blessings to Christ. They are Christians, Christ's ones.

3. The petitions (vs. 16-19).

(1) He prays that the church may have a dynamic spiritual experience (v. 16). The word translated "might" in this passage comes from the Greek word "dunamis," from which we also get the English word "dynamite." A Christian life with such power in it can only come through a full yielding to the Holy Spirit, the Inhabitant of every Christian.

(2) He prays that the church may know the meaning of walking with Christ in daily experience (v. 17). There is a sense, of course, in which Christ does already dwell in the heart of every Christian. Otherwise they could not be saved. But the apostle desires that they may know what it means to walk by faith continually.

(3) He prays that the church may more fully comprehend the love of Christ (vs. 17-19). We need to make this a daily prayer. This is one of the greatest petitions of the Bible. In the answering of it is brought "filled with the fullness of God."

3. The Doxology (vs. 20-21).

Let us close our study with the great words of this doxology upon our hearts, "To Him that is able." Do the words of the apostle's great prayer seem impossible of fulfilment? Is God's plan and purpose for the church beyond human comprehension? Remember, "To Him that is able."

"AS BRIGHT AS THE PROMISES OF GOD"

A Study of the Life of ADONIRAM JUDSON

By MARIE MISHLER

"Whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises (II Pet. 1:4). God has given many promises in his Word for the believer if he will only claim them. He gave promises for times of peace; he also gave promises suitable for times of tempest and peril. In one of the darkest periods of Judson's missionary career, his faith was challenged by the question, "How bright is the outlook"? "It is as bright as the promises of God," came the answer from America's missionary. It is a faith like this that makes the child of God an effective witness. An examination of the life of Adoniram Judson reveals that he claimed the promises of God and his life became bright, not as the world calls bright, but bright in the service of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Adoniram Judson was born Aug. 9, 1788, in Malden, Mass., a suburb of Boston. His father was a minister in the Congregational Church.

At the age of three he was able to read. He gathered other children together; and from a chair, he would conduct a service. His favorite hymn began, "Go preach my gospel," saith the Lord. "He entered Brown University when 16 years of age, graduating with honors three years later.

While Adoniram was reared in a thoroughly Christian atmosphere, during his college days his life was stained with infidelity. Soon he became a Free Thinker. After his graduation he toured the northern states He stopped one night at an inn, and was given a room next to a young man who died during the night. Adoniram wondered who was dying, and if he were, like himself, a Free Thinker; or if he were a Christian. He learned the next morning that he was a close friend and classmate. Judson abandoned his trip and went home, where he became an earnest seeker after salvation. On Dec. 2, 1808, he dedicated his life to Christ and entered Andover Seminary.

Adoniram became a Christian to become a minister, and soon he added, "to become a missionary." He heard a missionary talk about Burma, and from that time on his interest lay there. With four other young men he formed a missionary society, and beneath a haystack near the college they dedicated themselves to foreign missions.

On Feb. 5, 1812, Judson married Ann Hasseltine; the next day he was ordained; and on Feb. 19 he sailed for Calcutta as a missionary under the Congregational Church.

It took four months for the voyage to India. During this time they studied their Bibles, and decided to accept the tenets of the Baptists, because they had been led to believe that faith should precede baptism and that baptism was immersion. This decision involved a great crisis in his life, for he was dropping the board that was sending him; and the Baptists, at that time, had no mission board. Surely this step was one of great faith, and no doubt it made him cling to the promise, "Lo, I am with you always."

The Judsons received no welcome in India and were sent from place to place, finally, resting on July 13, 1813, at Rangoon, Burma.

In Rangoon, the first 10 years of missionary labors were given mainly to learning the Burmese language.

During this time, he completed a grammar for the Burmese language, translated Matthew and wrote tracts. After nearly six years in Burma he preached his first sermon, and two months later baptized his first convert.

In 1824 the Judsons moved from Rangoon to Ava. That same year war broke out between Burma and the English government of India. The Judsons were looked upon as spies. Adoniram was cast into prison. It was 40 feet by 30 feet high, with no ventilation save through cracks in the wall. In this room were confined 100 persons of both sexes, nearly all naked and half famished. The prison was never washed or swept. In this place of torment Mr. Judson lay with five pairs of fetters on his legs and ankles, weighing about 14 lbs.; the marks of which, he carried ever after. At night, lest the prisoners escape, a bamboo pole was placed between the legs and then drawn up by means of pulleys to a height which allowed their shoulders to rest on the ground while their feet hung from the chains. In this position Judson spent 21 months.

After his release from prison, he returned to Rangoon, where not long after his wife and little child died.

For eight years he worked alone; translating the Old Testament, sending out the native Christians (two by two), and preaching. Then on Apr. 10, 1834, he married Mrs. Sarah Hall Boardman.

After 21 years of patient labor, Judson completed the translation of the Bible into Burmese. It was ready for the press on Oct. 24, 1840.

When he was 50 years old, and after 25 years of toil in Burma, Judson's health began to show signs of giving away; so he determined to return to America. On the return voyage, his second wife went to be with the Lord.

Judson was well received in America. His health was delicate and he could not speak above a whisper, and so he addressed his audiences by having another repeat aloud that which was upon his heart. At times he would disappoint his audiences by telling the wonderful story of redeeming love instead of his own adventures and labors.

June 2, 1846 he married Emily Chubbuck, and on July 11 they sailed for Burma.

After his 18 months' absence, Judson returned to find a king whose barbarities and cruelties far exceeded anything before known in the land. Missionary activities, if any, had to be done in greatest secrecy. During the day he worked on his dictionary; and at night in his home he met native Christians who would risk their lives to meet him, so that they might hear more of the One who gave His life for them.

Adoniram Judson died Apr. 12, 1850. When the evangelization of Burma first formed itself in his mind, he had hoped to build up a congregation of at least a hundred converts before he died. At his death, however, Burman and Karen Christians who had publicly accepted Christ Jesus as their Savior and had been baptized, numbered over 7000, beside the many who had died during his 35 years of service. There were 63 congregations established under the direction of 163 missionaries, native pastors and assistants.

The story of Judson's life, and especially his sufferings in Ava, shall ever thrill the heart that is touched by suffering for Christ's sake; and his influence for world evangelization will cease only when the great task is completed.

"In the Baptist meeting-house at Malden, Mass., is a simple memorial tablet with the following inscription:

SPECIAL NOTICE TO ALL WOMEN OF THE W.M.C.

1. There seems to be some misunderstanding among some of the women concerning our mission study. The program committee, in planning the work for the year, planned to make the department, "Open Doors," the source of our mission study for the year. All that is really needed is provided in the Herald each month. Additional material, books with further mission study, were to be merely optional. The missionary letters and diarys were planned to give present-day missionary information regarding our own missionary work.

2. Some Councils can't get away from the idea of Scripture reading and prayer as conducted in the past years. That is not necessary with our present program. The Bible study by Professor Kent is supplied to take the place of Scripture reading as conducted in the past. The Prayer Circle as suggested each month in the Herald supplies the period of prayer and a much more adequate one than the old system.

3. All requests for literature should be sent to the literature secretary, Mrs. Virts.

4. All material for publication, news items, letters, etc. should be sent to the editor, Mrs. R. E. Gingrich.

ITEMS OF INTEREST

The Spectator (London, July 11, 1941) reports that a careful inquiry recently made reaches the conclusion that 90% of the people of England have not opened the Bible in ten years. One wonders if America is different.

An article in the Los Angeles Times says that City Health Officer of Los Angeles, George M. Uhl urges citizens not to "burn themselves out" in this time of war defense. Truly, now is a wonderful time for Christians to demonstrate to the world what it means to have Christ in our hearts, to have the assurance that come what may, the Christian has a peace and satisfaction within that national hysteria and the threat of war and destruction cannot affect. Christians must "burn themselves out," not in frantic efforts for self protection, but to reveal the unsearchable riches and blessings to be found in our blessed Savior Christ Jesus. If there is to be had any assurance during these dark days, it is to be found only in the crucified Christ of the cross.—La Verne, Calif., Bulletin.

"How Beautiful are the Feet of Them That Preach the Gospel--"

NOTE: For a few months, we are to have as our missionary letter a diary provided by Mrs. R. C. Wagner. This is the second installment.

Thursday, Aug. 28th—

The whole morning has gone attending to details—packing food, bedding, and extra clothing for our trip; giving Mildred some school work; shining shoes; fixing clothes; getting dinner; and watering the front yard. Left here about 1:00 P.M. and went straight to the mission at Berrotaran to fix up the beds there. Then went to visit the Fissolos as he is never at home on Fridays, the day we are in Berrotaran. After this visit, we went on to Slena. One of the families there is in charge of cleaning the hall now, so went to get the key and spent a few minutes visiting there, and then went to the hall to get ready for the children's class. By this time the weather had changed from decided heat to decided cold; a cold, damp wind blowing. Only one girl came for the class, so finally the girls and I went home with her, while Ricardo and Victor went to arrange for a cottage meeting instead of the regular service in the hall. Later they came and picked us up, together with Elsa and her mother, and took us to the home where the other believers were already gathered. Though we were only 14 altogether, we were pretty much crowded in the tiny room; and they wanted to sing even if there was hardly place to put the organ. After the meeting, we returned to Berrotaran where we had supper, and then got to bed. It was so warm when we left Almafuerte that I didn't think about the hot-water bottles, so had to heat bricks to get our feet warm.

Friday, Aug. 29th—In Berrotaran.

Cleaned up a little in the room here this morning and started packing up bedding again. Have been drilling the girls on reading this morning, and knitting at the same time. The sun came out about noon so we had a nicer day than it looked this morning. Ate early and then went to visit the Perazzolos. Today Mrs. P. with us to a creek not so far away to get watercress.

Had 13 children in the class this P.M. The folks next door do not permit the oldest girl to come to the class anymore, though they let the two younger children come. Wonder who has been working on them. Anyway, they let her play with the children and color the pictures, so we pray the Lord will open the way to touch her heart and life with the gospel.

Tonight we were 12 in the meeting, one of the members giving the meditation. His thoughts are given in a devoted spirit, though terribly disconnected. Got home a quarter to eleven.

Saturday, Aug. 30th—

Today we got a late start. It is a holiday and there is no school, so have given the girls some work, though not as much as I had expected to, for I have been writing most of my spare time. I can get a few rows of knitting or sewing done while I am helping them in their studies, but I can't very well write and help them too. Had to break into my literary efforts to get clothes brushed and pressed and to water the front yard again. Maria was in a talkative mood tonight and rather upset my plans for finishing the translation of Bro. Bauman's article, "The Three stepping-stones of the Antichrist to Power."

Sunday, Aug. 31st—

This morning I actually had time to sit down and read for a while. But the more I read, the greater my pile of articles for translation becomes, for I am always finding things that are just too good to keep to myself—often wish the "Herald" came in Spanish too, so our Brethren down here could get the benefit of its messages.

We ate early this noon, and then I got my S.S. classroom in order and lesson material laid out; then dressed the children. From now on all of this will have to be done early in the morning. Had 13 children from 4 to 14 years of age in the class today. One girl came very early to play—the second time she has come since D.V.B.S.

Had mate with the Cavegnos after S.S., and then stuck the stars onto the individual attendance cards for my children in all three towns.

There has been a big celebration going on in town all day, but evidently not all of our members were interested, for the attendance was a good deal better than it has sometimes been on such occasions. May God soon grant us a membership that will not be moved by the pleasures this world has to offer!

—Mrs. R. E. Wagner.

Travel Diary

Sept. 27, 1941—Last evening at 7:00 o'clock we were tugged away from the dock at Brooklyn. We soon passed the Statue of Liberty, and left the lights of New York behind us. From 2:00 P.M. until 7:00 had been spent watching the huge cranes swing the heavy cases of Ford ambulances aboard. The holds were nearly full before we got on. They were soon packed to overflowing, mostly with brewer's cases, it seemed. We saw several cases containing cars lowered in before the hatches were closed down. After this, probably 50 more were piled on the decks and securely cabled on. One launch and one airplane were added as the last touch. I have never seen a boat so heavily loaded.

Miss Emmert

The passenger list includes five Firestone men for Liberia, two Pan-American Airway men, a Texaco man, whom we had met in Leopoldville, and a Free France diplomat, besides us three missionaries. All but the Firestone men are booked for Matadi.

This morning we had a boat drill even though it was cold and drizzly. We are assigned to life boat number two. It is nice that they warn one when these weekly drills take place, otherwise we would never know when to take our emergency bags with us and when not to.

September 29.—Yesterday was Sunday. We enjoyed Bible study and prayer together, that is, the three of us. In the evening we heard Mr. Fuller of the Old Fashioned Revival Hour over the air. We also had a turkey dinner as a special Sunday treat. The food is not bad considering everything.

Today it is already much warmer. We are passing close to the Bermudas. Uncle Sam sent a plane out to look us over.

October 1.—Last evening we enjoyed a very lovely sunset with wonderfully delicate colors in both sky and sea. Sleeping, eating, and reading occupy most of my time. Chico, the Mexican-Cuban steward, assures us repeatedly that we have only to ask, and he will give us anything we want! There is only one thing we want, and that is to arrive safely at our desired haven, well prepared in every way for our work.

October 3.—They found pieces of a life saver floating along yesterday. We had a fire drill today.

October 5.—This is the tenth day out, and as nearly as I can tell from the chart, we are more than half way across. We only go ten knots an hour, which means about 11 miles. The course is toward Freetown, more or less directly. But even though we reach the Coast in 16 days, as they think, we are told that we shall probably be on the boat five weeks before reaching Matadi, as there are quite a few stops, and much freight to unload.

Chico, the steward, provides the comedy for us. He spoils us in between meals by giving us too much to eat, even making ice cream for us; but when we sit at the table a few minutes after meals to talk, he becomes furious. Or if some of the men are late to meals, he acts very childish about it. He speaks quite a mixture of English, Spanish, French, and what-not, so it is quite difficult to understand him. One of the men did not like the thick condensed milk, we had on the table, and asked for plain milk. Chico said, "This is no passenger boat. This is freight boat. We have no milk, we only have cream."

October 6.—We spent most of our spare time last week making out lists of our belongings to be ready for the customs man when we enter French territory. I have also diligently studied the book on photography and the instruction book, and am ready to shoot (but not on sight).

We are now entering into about the most dangerous part of our trip, so they think. I feel sorry for the passengers and crew who have nothing in which to put their trust, but in blind chance, or in the law of averages. How happy we are to be able to say: "I know Whom I have believed, and am persuaded that He is able to keep that which I have committed unto Him against that day."

The sea has been fairly smooth all the way, and none of us have been seasick. It has been rather windy and cool to be out on deck, but now it is getting quite warm. Last evening, the sea was as calm as a lake, except for slight swells. As we were admiring the silver, blue and rose tints of the sunset on the water, Minnie noticed white foam at a distance, which looked like breakers. It turned out to be a huge school of dolphins jumping out of the water and splashing as they went back again. They are a good sized fish, that sometimes jump two and three feet out of the water. It looked as though they were playing leap frog.

The small flying fish are entirely different. They dart out of the water and skim over the surface often for 50 feet or more, as the wind catches them. They look more like a stone skipping over the water. Then there is a sort of butterfly-like silvery fish that the wind carries up into the air for a short distance as they leap out of the waves.

October 11—We are about a day out from our first stop. Just now I was called up on deck to see an approaching ship. It was already quite close and coming directly toward us. A signal light on her deck was flashing dots and dashes. Was she friend or foe? None of us passengers lined up along the rail knew. How fast she seemed to come! She hoisted a small flag, but none of us recognized it. The officers ascending and descending the stairs leading to the bridge gave us no sign of assurance. She turned slightly to intercept our course. A man on her top deck signalled with flags.

"At least, she isn't firing on us," said one of the passengers.

"It's doubtless a patrol boat," said another. "It isn't very large."

The blinking light wigwagged out a farewell message, the boat slackened speed, and let us proceed, evidently satisfied that we were what we claimed to be. "There is a world of difference between an enemy and a friend," we thought, "How different it might have been!"

October 12.—Today we arrived at Bathurst, Gambia. The trip to this point was 3,579 miles and it took us nearly 16 days. How thankful we were to sight land this morning and to arrive safely. Last evening, one of the passengers saw the light of a ship back of us, and then it was gone. We went up on deck but could see nothing. Then a boy knocked on the Captain's door. "The mate says he sees a light, sir." The captain came out and clumped up the stairs to the bridge. No information was available, so we went down to our cabin for our evening devotions. Was it a raider stalking us, or a friendly patrol? There was no way of knowing, but we had committed it into the Lord's hands, so we went to bed and to sleep. The first thing I thought about, however, when I awoke at daybreak, was to wonder if the boat were still following us. I suggested that Minnie would have informed us, though, if such had been the case, for she is always the first one up; so I fell asleep again. Sure enough there was no boat in sight.

As we entered the harbor, we saw buoys marking the channel which had been swept free of mines. How nice to reach a prepared haven through a prepared channel!

October 15—Two days and a half of unloading at Bathurst and we are finally off. Besides quantities of ale, we unloaded quite a bit of flour and some miscellaneous things. An airplane circled around us twice this evening, flashing dots and dashes at us. It seemed quite a lengthy conversation. Another one appeared later, but we saw no lights. It went around us once and made off again.

October 17—The weather has been unusually hot. I have spent my extra time in writing letters and a native story. We pulled in to Freetown today about 2:15. A convoy was pulling out. There are many interesting things to see here.

October 25—The unloading may be finished today It has been a long week, fortunately not as hot as the first few days, however. We have not been allowed to go on shore. We have seen many interesting things here; but, of course, I would not try to describe them all. Yesterday we saw a ship towed in that had been damaged by a torpedo. There was quite a hole in it, judging by what we saw above the water line. They say the submarine that got it has since been sunk by an airplane. We heard of the sinking of the Lehigh today, too. It was probably sunk by the same submarine. They say it was sunk 70 miles from Bathurst, which means that we had come over that same route not many days before, in all probability, or at least not far off. The crew were all saved, we hear, and are here at Freetown, awaiting the Acadia. We got to see a sumbarine in port, too.

October 26—We left Freetown this morning and hope to be in Liberia tomorrow about noon. Five of our 12 passengers are to get off there. Perhaps we may get permission to visit the plantation there.

—Mary Emmert.

SIN IS A BLACKOUT

We hear and read much today regarding blackouts in war-torn countries. The blackest think known to God is sin. It blackens everything it touches. It makes the heart black, and eventually sin will cause the sinner to go to a place called hell which is the absence of all light—a blackout.—Allentown, Pa., Bulletin.

What Have You Done?

By MRS. W. A. OGDEN

During the past year a great disaster has occurred, a testing of faith experienced and a blessing received. I refer to the tragic experience of the ill-fated Zamzam. Upon receiving the first news suggesting the loss of the ship and uncertainty of her passengers, we at home were immediately effected. Did we not have a definite concern and responsibility for those who were going "in our stead" to preach the gospel of salvation and peace to those lost in sin and darkness?

Mrs. Ogden

Many were ready to accept defeat and believe that all hope was gone. To some was given faith to trust in spite of seeming hopelessness, "Being confident of this very thing that he which hath begun a good work in you will perform it until the day of Jesus Christ" (Phil. 1:6). How often prayers, unanswered for a time, cause the same passive attitude in Christians, and they are made to say, "I cannot understand why, but it must be His will." Others through prayer of faith are given an assurance and knowledge of His will.

Then came the glad news that all were safe; then their return to us; and some have now been granted the privilege of reaching their desired field of service in Africa.

The suggestion, made previously on these pages, will here be mentioned again. Perhaps this thing had to happen in order to awaken us to our responsibility in prayer. We are always impressed and moved by the faith of our missionaries, and too often are willing to expect God to keep them and use them because they trust Him. "Now I beseech you, brethren, for the Lord Jesus Christ's sake, and for the love of the Spirit, that ye strive together with me in your prayers to God for me" (Rom. 15:30).

Some have left home, loved ones, comfortable living conditions, and, of greatest importance, constant spiritual fellowship with saved ones, to go out alone because "the Lord of Christ constraineth" them. Will you and I, who have made none of these sacrifices, miss our privilege and responsibility in having a part in winning souls in other lands? Women, objective No. 2 is given in order to help you. Will you be faithful in praying daily for our missionaries, thereby rendering a service, and receiving a blessing? The ministry of prayer for others is the highest earthly ministry of God's children.

NOTE: How glad we are for a message from our very busy vice-president. Surely she has presented the challenge of objective II. Do we accept it with a 100% from every Council?

Dear Sister H. W. Koontz:

Please allow me to answer your letter on yours. I find that all my stationary is gone and it will save me a lot of time.

Your above check came last week just after I had especially asked the Lord to help according to our need. I keep the books and I knew our expense was especially heavy this month. Then I went to our mail box, and must I say the largest check which our work has received awaited me? Need I say I sat there and cried my thanks and asked God's blessing upon every one of the sisters who had had a part by gift or prayer?

How can our work keep from being blessed with such a prayer band behind us, and not too far behind either?

A sample of what has been accomplished through His Word in the new place for soldiers:

1. A discouraged soldier ready to quit and almost blow up the army was given a new perspective and objective. Is now praising the Lord.

2. One little girl (Catholic) said, "Mrs. Pearson, I never had read the Bible until you came." Now she has read three chapters every week, learned five verses and prays every day.

3. One woman, all muddled in evolution, said today, "Now that I am getting my feet on solid ground, I have lost my desire for my bridge club." And she's wondering how to get out of it. I advised her to give a testimony and quit.

All because He died, in His Love,

—Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Pearson.

Dear Freinds in the Lord:

Please do forgive this hurried word to say thank you for your generous gift today. The response to our mid-summer letter has been so heavy, and our office helpers so few, because of summer vacation schedules and illness, that we are quite swamped with work. But from the bottom of our hearts we can say, "Praise the Lord." For, through such loyal friends as yourself and others who are daily praying for us, He has now come to our help and has brought to us new reinforcements by way of financial help, and we can in full confidence go forward with the work.

Thank you again, and again we say, "Praise the Lord."

Ever faithfully yours in His service,

—J. Hoffman Cohn.

OUR CHURCH?

The Church is NOT a hospital, though it ministers to the Spiritually sick and morally anemic. The Church is not a gymnasium to develop ethical muscles. The Church is not a cold storage plant to keep a few saints from spoiling. The Church is not a club to give a little religious polish to complacent members. The Church IS an inspiration point to workers. The Church is a signboard which points the way to Jesus Christ. To be a signboard to every needy pilgrim, it must be friendly, evangelistic, missionary, enthusiastic. Let us endeavor for Christ's sake to make it the kind of a Church that will point the way to Calvary's Cross.—Ex.

CHRIST—OUR HOPE IN SPIRITUAL GROWTH

The three necessary factors in the pursuit called life are food, clothing, and shelter. In war-torn lands, the inhabitants have learned as never before what these three items, or lack of them, means. In their moderate provision, humanity finds security and calls life well-lived.

Essentials of Life

When we think about "growth," our minds turn immediately to physical development because growth is perfectly natural (Moses grew—Ex. 2:10a; Samuel grew—I Sam. 2:26a; and the child Jesus grew—Luke 2:52).

We are taught early the need of a regular and staple diet of wholesome muscle-and-bone-building food, and of proper exercise. Some years ago, that three-syllable word "vitimins" entered our dietic vocabulary; today it has put the 'alphabet" to working overtime, even as in the political field! We should be careful to consume so much of Vitamins B. D. etc. Were it possible, perhaps Methuselah might augment the category by other important vitamins for longevity; at any rate, we are sure, from the record of his 969 years (Gen. 5:27), that he was not afflicted with allergy!

Parallelisms

Principles maintaining in "life" are true in the "life more abundant." While we observe carefully what we eat, when and how often, much more ought we to observe our spiritual growth—keeping healthy and fit God-ward. The Great Physician, our omnipotent an omniscient Physiologist prescribes the blessed Word of God as the one, all-embracing Food for His children. We could not expect a child to grow normally by allowing him one meal a week, or better, one meal a day. Neither can the child of God grow in the knowledge of Christ apart from a regular and frequent diet upon His Word.

Considering exercise, walking is concluded generally beneficial and very simple; but, regardless of simplicity, it has to be learned. Each step becomes easier. Parallel to this is "walking with God:" the first steps are comparatively hard, but the consistent, daily walk and talk with Him helps us to grow in grace and the knowledge of Him. To walk alone is monotonous, to say the least—but, oh, the refreshment and joy of (paradoxically) walking—alone, with someone—one whom you love, a friend! Walking and talking with God (the never-failing Friend) is sweet. At the beginning of the journey, He provides the clothing, the robe of His righteousness (Isa. 61:10, Rev. 6:11, Rom. 3:25,26). Amos asks, "Can two walk together except they be agreed?" (Amos 3:3). Obviously, "No" "Enoch walked with God" (Gen. 5:24); and God took him home! The destination is the eternal home—no F.H.A. loan necessary! (John 14:2).

Hope

We read, "Faith is the substance of things hoped for" (Heb. 11:1); "hope" is defined as "the object desired." After all, it is not the act of faith or hope that really obtains; the all-important thing is the object of faith or hope. Christ is the Hope of our salvation, and thus He becomes the Object of our faith. In the manger at Bethlehem, when deity was clothed with human flesh, Christ, the God of glory (Col. 1:17), took on Himself the "substance of things hoped for." All anyone has, is, or expects to be, is in Christ. That is hope!

In conclusion, Jesus said, "I am that Bread of life" (John 6:48); "For my flesh is meat indeed, and my blood is drink indeed" (John 6:55); "As the living Father hath sent Me, and I live by the Father: so he that eateth Me, even he shall live by Me" (John 6:57).

So, let us "feed" upon Christ, the living Word, and upon the Bible, His written Word, anchor our faith in Him, and find Him our perfect Shelter (Isa. 32:2).

Whether on the threshold of active service, on the battlefield or the harvest field for Christ, or facing the sunset years of life, "the just shall live by faith" (Rom. 1:17b), and "Christ is our only hope in spiritual growth." To give Him and His Word preeminence, Lord, help us! Amen!

—Geneva G. Kuhn.

THINK IT OVER

God gives our blessings,

but we have to take them.

Juniors

Praise the Lord for Sisterhood!
Praise the Lord for more Sisterhoods!
Praise the Lord for better Sisterhoods!
Praise ye the Lord!

More of our societies are reporting, so we again pass on to you the greetings from two groups. May their ideas and suggestions be of great help to you.

"Greetings to you in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ from the Junior Sisterhood of Mary and Martha of the First Brethren Church, Johnstown, Pa.

The second meeting which we held was attended by 16 girls in ages from 7-14. At this meeting we elected officers of which are the following: pres., Violet Ringler; vice-pres., Genevieve Hawks; sec'y-treas., Audrey Upholtzer. The Senior Sisterhood girls elected as our patronness Mrs. James Bifano, and our assistant patroness, Miss June Blough. We have appointed two committees, Lookout and Social, with each girl serving on either committee.

We have our meeting the second Friday evening of each month. Each girl takes her turn in having Sisterhood at her home. We have no dues, but take an offering at each meeting. This month we are going to send our offering for the bus in Clayhole, Ky.

In order to keep an interest in our Bible Reading, we have a chart with each girl's name on. A gold star is given each girl for each chapter which she reads.

Our prayer is that we may not only grow in number but that we may grow in the grace and knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ."

Now a word from Dallas Center, Ia.—

"Since you have requested letters from the Junior girls, I shall endeavor to tell you a few things of interest concerning the Dallas Center group of Juniors.

We organized our society just ahead of national conference and had a delegate at the conference. We have our meetings the second Saturday afternoon of each month under the supervision of our patroness, Mrs. Donald Becker. We are striving to meet our goal, not merely for the sake of being a banner society, but that we might grow spiritually. We sent a box of clothing to a little girl in Kentucky. Mrs. Landrum gave us the name of a special little girl and we prepared the clothing for her. We were happy to do our bit toward the bus fund for Kentucky. Our recent meeting was the Christmas one. After our lesson, we had a grab bag.

Although our group is small in number we are endeavoring to meet our Bible reading goal 100%. A few of our girls have already completed the required Scripture. Our dime calendar is fast filling up; our scrap books are beginning to look promising. We receive a spiritual blessing at every meeting. Please remember us in your prayers that we might remain faithful until He comes. Our officers are: pres., Esther Jane Randall; sec., Alvena Owens."

What about your membership projects! And the reading of the mission book? Let's finish these up real soon. That will leave time for each group to plan for some other benevolent work for Easter season.

In His Name,

—Aunt Mabel.

My dear Sisterhood girls:

" . . . His compassions fail not, they are new every morning: great is Thy faithfulness." Truly in these days of unrest and turmoil we can praise Him for His great faithfulness toward us. During this past year I am sure that at sometime or other we have all failed Him, and yet through it all He has been faithful at every moment to us. Truly we have a wonderful Lord and Savior!

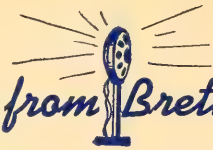
I have been praying for you and thinking about your society, and have been wondering how you are progressing. Are you going to be an honor society? I am sure you want to be, and if you work hard enough you will be. Just think how enriched your life will be after fulfilling the goals! You will want to do this because you love our Lord Jesus Christ and because you want to grow in grace and in the knowledge of His Word.

Have you started working on your box for Kentucky? We want to remember the great need of the work there. Anything we can send them will be greatly appreciated, and will be used by our missionaries in opening doors for the gospel message. The people are always very needy, and of course will be even more so in these critical times. Truly, anything we give to them—warm clothing, books, shoes, literature—is given to Christ. Be sure to do your part!

I am looking forward to hearing from someone in your society telling me of what you are doing in your particular Sisterhood.

I believe if each Sisterhood girl would put this resolution in practice during 1942, great and marvelous things would be accomplished for our Lord: "During the coming year I will go nowhere I can't take Jesus Christ; I will say nothing which I don't want Him to hear; I will do nothing I do not want Him to know about."

My prayers throughout this coming year are that He will find each one of us more faithful to Him, and may He richly and abundantly bless you and keep you until He comes.



Lovingly in His matchless Name,

—Loraine Sickel, Nat. President.

PRAYER PAUL PROCLAIMED

Mayor Stump of Stuttgart, Ark., leads the way to prayer. "Do hereby request each and every individual regardless of his occupation, to pause for a moment, bow his head in prayer and Thanksgiving for the fact that he lives in America." The churches both white and colored immediately cooperated, and urged their congregations to join the movement. Now it has spread to the entire countryside. Every morning at the stroke of ten, the little town's church bells ring. This is the signal for a few moments of prayer, and the men and women drop whatever they are doing and give thanks together. This example might well be followed by every village, town and city throughout the United States.—Meyersdale, Pa., Bulletin.

THE DEATH OF CHRIST

By R. E. GINGRICH, pastor, Ellet, Ohio

(Concluded from issue of Jan. 24)

We are, in this study, presenting the third and final aspect of the death of Christ, namely: the Results of the Death of Christ. My friends, let us keep clearly in mind the general theme we have been following in this series of studies: What I Believe, and Why. We have been setting forth these vital truths, both as a personal testimony concerning our faith, and to assist you in persuing your way through the sacred Scriptures and in laying a solid foundation for your faith.

During recent broadcasts we have been setting forth the teaching of the Word of God concerning the death of Christ, under the theme, "What I believe about the death of Christ, and why." We have observed the basic fact of the necessity for the death of Christ according to the holy Scriptures. We have also given careful consideration to the meaning of the death of Christ in the light of God's Word.

It is our desire to share with you in this concluding study on the death of Christ what I believe about the results of the death of Christ.

Just what was accomplished by the death of God's only begotten Son upon that cruel cross? Only eternity will reveal the full consequences of that significant transaction enacted upon the place of a skull on those bleak Judean hills. Since that event was enacted, nothing will ever be the same as it was before. There is nothing in heaven, on earth, or under the earth, that was not somehow affected by the cross of Christ. It is our privilege and purpose, in this study, to consider with you, a few of the more outstanding results of the death of Christ.

The results of the death of Christ to the believer:

The Bible is replete with evidences of this blessed truth.

The death of Christ redeemed us from the curse of the law, as it is written: "Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us: for it is written, Cursed is every one that hangeth on a tree" (Gal. 3:13). Now, the curse of the law is death; for "the soul that sinneth, it shall die." Our blessed Savior bore that curse in our behalf.

A mother in Mt. Vernon, N. Y., found it necessary to attend to some business in a neighboring town one day. Leaving her two children at home during her absence, she proceeded to attend to her business, cautioning them as to their conduct during her absence. Hurrying home following her business transaction she found her house empty. A frantic search was rewarded by her finding her children on the railroad tracks some distance off. A train was due! The frantic mother rushed to her children, pushing them off the track, but the engine caught her and crushed her beneath its grinding wheels. That mother died that her children might live. Had it not been for her, those children would have shared the fate she bore. Would they ever forget the sacrifice of their mother? Then how can the child of God ever forget that it was Christ who stood in the way of descending judgment upon guilty sinners, rescuing them from an awful fate, and bearing the curse of sin in their stead?

> Well might the sun in darkness hide,
> And shut his glories in;
> When Christ, the mighty Maker, died,
> For man, the creature's sin.

The death of Christ loosed us from our sins, even as it is declared in Rev. 1:5; "Unto Him that loved us, and loosed us from our sins in His own blood" (ARV). Until Christ appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself, man was held in bondage to sin, except as he looked forward by faith to the cross of Calvary. When Christ died upon the cross He provided the means for breaking the shackles of sin and setting captive humanity free. That means was the precious blood of Christ.

A teacher once asked a small boy if there was anything that God could not do, to which the little fellow replied: "Yes, he cannot see my sins through the blood of Jesus Christ." How true his answer was!

> "Jesus paid it all, all to Him I owe
> Sin had left a crimson stain,
> He washed it white as snow."

The death of Christ opened a way for us into the presence of God. Searching the Word of God in the light of the subject under consideration, we observe in Heb. 10:19-20 this precious truth set forth: "Having therefore, brethren, boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus, by a new and living way, which he hath consecrated for us, through the veil, that is to say, his flesh." Entrance into the presence of God is by the way of the cross, for it is true that,

> I must needs go home by the way of the cross,
> There's no other way but this;
> I shall ne'er get sight of the gates of light
> If the way of the cross I miss.
> I must needs go on in the blood-sprinkled way,
> The path that the Savior trod,
> If I ever climb to the heights sublime,
> Where the soul is at home with God.

It was the death of Christ upon Calvary that opened the way into the divine presence. There is no other way but this. Do not miss it, my unseen friends!

We wish that it were possible for us to exhaustively analyze the results of the death of Christ to the believers, but our time is necessarily limited. We thus pass to a consideration of the second aspect of the results of the death of Christ, namely:

The results of the death of Christ to the universe.

Sin is no small thing, though many would have us believe so. It has polluted the entire universe. Heaven was defiled by the presence of the author of sin, that is, Satan. The earth was polluted by the presence and practice of sin-laden humanity. Even the animal and inanimate kingdoms have been effected by the reality of man's sin. "For the creature was made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of Him Who hath subjected the same in hope. Because the creature itself also shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God" (Rom. 8:20-21). A careful analysis of this passage will reveal that the whole created world has been effected by the entrance of sin into the universe, and has become estranged from Him Who is holy in the absolute sense. How, then, could reconciliation between God and the creature be effected? Through the precious blood of Christ a holy God and sinful creation were reconciled. Consider with me Col. 1:19-20, where we read concerning Christ: "For it pleased the Father that in Him should all fulness dwell; And, having made peace through the blood of His cross, by Him to reconcile all things unto Himself; by Him, I say, whether they be things in earth, or things in heaven." Calvary was necessary, not only for guilty sinners, but also to restore an estranged world to its Creator. Through the blood of Christ all things are reconciled unto God, for God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto Himself. He who believes that truth has peace with God. He who rejects it as foolishness shall die in his sins.

The results of the death of Christ to sinners.

The death of Christ has tremendous value to sinners, for it made salvation and its blessings available to all men. To be sure many spurn its gracious provisions, yet they are available. The preaching of the cross is foolishness to them that perish, but to them that are saved, it is the power of God (1 Cor. 1:18). That power exercised itself in many ways, among which was that of drawing men unto the Lord Jesus Christ. Jesus Himself declared upon one occasion, "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me" (John 12:32). No man can escape that magnetism when once he has heard the gospel of God's saving grace, tho he may resist it until it not longer draws.

"O Love divine, what hast thou done?
The incarnate God hath died for me!
The Father's co-eternal Son
Bore all my sins upon the tree!
The Son of God for me hath died;
My Lord, my Love, is crucified.

"Then let us sit beneath his cross,
And gladly catch the healing stream;
All things for Him account but loss,
And give up all our hearts to Him;
Of nothing think or speak beside,
My Lord, my Love, is crucified."

News from Brethren CHURCHES

LEON, IOWA REVIVAL

Revival meetings were held in the Leon Brethren Church during the Christmas holidays. Rev. Curtis Morrill was the evangelist. Gordon Cook, Grace Seminary student, was song leader; and Mrs. Garner Hoyt, accompanist. Lowell and Solon Hoyt, from Bryan University, rendered vocal and instrumental numbers. With Mrs. Morrill and Elaine and Stevie, this made a party of eight.

A fine start was made the opening day, when the church auditorium was filled, and a side room was used at both services. The evangelistic party was very favorably received. But that night it began to rain, and rain brought mud, which was followed by snow, below zero temperature, and a blizzard. These conditions continued until after the meetings closed.

In spite of these adverse circumstances, the Lord blessed, sending unsaved people to almost every service. A total of ten confessed their faith, nine at the church, and one invalid in the home. Three were young married men, two women, and four young ladies. Each member of the evangelistic party worked and prayed faithfully, and the people who were able to attend the services were blessed.

A watch night service was held, at which time the Zamzam story was told by Brother and Sister Morrill. Then the Hoyt boys had charge of a social hour, which was followed by a midnight prayer meeting. Gordon Cook preached on the last afternoon. We of the Leon church enjoyed the fellowship and the ministry of every member of the party, and we trust that they can return to us sometime under more favorable circumstances.

BIBLE READING

A Bible reading campaign was started in the Leon church about a year ago, which has proved quite successful. 49 people read the whole Old Testament, 69 read the New Testament, and 47 read the whole Bible. Nine people read the Bible through twice during the year. A total of 5,179 books of the Bible were read by the 110 people taking part in the campaign.

In brief, the plan was as follows: on the last Sunday morning in 1940 the pastor preached on the value of Bible reading. At that time about 100 people promised to try to read the Bible through in 1941. The reading was started on New Year's Eve when the gospel of Matthew was read at the watch night service, 28 people each reading a chapter. Following that, whenever anyone read a book of the Bible, he wrote his name and the name of the book read on a slip of paper and placed it in the offering basket at any service. These names were placed on the large wall charts in the church, and a stamp bearing the name of the book was placed opposite the name. Thus a week-by-week record was kept in the church auditorium. When anyone completed either Testament, an appropriate certificate was issued. (These charts, certificates and stamps can be obtained from The Brethren Missionary Herald Co..) The plan appealed to all ages, and it has resulted in a real change in the spiritual atmosphere of the church. In most cases, a Bible reading habit has been established, which is carrying over into this year although we are not using the charts again.

SPIRITUAL NEWS FROM WHITTIER, CALIF.

The whittier church has just enjoyed a two weeks' victory revival. In spite of the "perilous times,' threatened black-outs, ban on tires, etc., the attendance was equal to, if not better than, the revival of last March. Harry McCormick Lintz was the Evangelist the same as last year. Ralph Colburn of Long Beach was the song leader. Evangelist Lintz preached a straight-forward, fundamental, evangelistic message. The church members were strengthened and stimulated in their faith and faithfulness. Much praying was done and there was much time devoted to personal evangelism. Children's meetings were held in the afternoons, and young people's services at 7:00 in the evening preceding the regular revival services.

There were 30 public confessions of those not members of the church. A large number of members presented themselves for dedication and reconsecration, of which no numerical record was kept. Whittier is a most difficult field for evangelism, being very much over-churched. However, during the year of 1941, 78 public confessions of Christ were made in our services. With close roll revision at the annual business meeting, the numerical gain brought our membership up to 505.

The Whittier church is busy beyond the limits of its own local field. Evnagelistic groups go monthly to the Union Rescue Mission, the Los Angeles Mission, the Jewish Mission, and the San Pedro Mission. This evangelism is all under the direction of the church. Several hundreds of public confessions of Christ were secured during the year at these mission services. The pastor broadcasts from the Union Rescue Mission station every week on Thursday. So the testimony of the gospel is sounded out.

The church allowed the pastor the privilege of answering a few of the calls for revivals which have been coming to him from the East. So we are on a ten-Sundays leave of absence to hold victory revivals at Canton, O.; Johnstown, Pa. (in the church of which we were pastor for 14 years); Peru, Ind.; and Dayton, O.. Ralph Colburn, an ordained minister of The Brethren Church, is our supply pastor. He is a young minister soon to become a pastor of a Southern California Church. We were fortunate in securing him as resident supply pastor until our return to Whittier.

The year 1941 recorded the best year financially which the church has enjoyed for many years. Over 50% of the money which passed through the treasuries went for worthy causes outside the Whittier Church. The local budget was increased for the year 1942 with a substantial increase of the pastor's salary and other increases, but we are sure that the mission offerings will also be kept up to former levels and we pray increased.

The large group of separated young people, members of the church, continues to grow, church weddings are frequent. Usually they are marrying within the church, thus not presenting the problem of divided allegience. The Conscientious Objector Camps and Non-combatant Service Calls are beginning to make inroads into this group. Perhaps we shall suffer more frequent losses along these lines soon. But we are sure our young people will bear their testimony wherever they are.

REPORT OF THE FIRST BRETHREN CHURCH ALLENTOWN, PA.

Greetings in the precious name of Him Whose we are, Whom we serve, and Whom to know aright is life eternal. A report from this place is long overdue. We are always glad to share in the news from other fields and rejoice in victories. We, therefore, submit the following news items from this church, hoping there may be some who would be interested and will want to share our victories and blessings.

God has been good to us in Allentown. True enough, we have had our portion of grief, sorrows, disappointments, etc. We could not appreciate that wonderful verse, "Thy rod and Thy staff, they comfort me" if we did not know that afflictions, discipline and chastisement are definite proof that we are in His family as sons. The devil, true enough, has been after us—but that is because we were worth getting after. The peculiar experiences of the past year have taught us to resort more frequently to the privilege of prayer and to lean more heavily upon God.

God has been caring for our every need. He has answered prayer in a marvelous fashion. Last summer we conducted one of the best D.V.B.S. programs in the history of the church. The Christmas pageant, "When the Star Shone," was so well received that we yielded to uraent requests to repeat the Pageant on New Year's night. Mrs. Gingrich was the director. The home mission offering is the largest for the same purpose in the history of the church—so we are told. For all these blessings and victories we are glad to give Him the glory.

For months many of our people were praying definitely for a victorious revival for the church and for the salvation of lost souls. God undertook and overruled in both phases; and we are happy

A Statement

Since war at last has come to our own country, and our pastors and churches are already faced with all the difficult problems involved in this catastrophe, we, as members of the special committee appointed by the recent National Fellowship of Brethren Churches, feel that some public statement should be made for the guidance of members who are making inquiries, and also for the information of the general public. Speaking as a committee, we understand that we have no authority to bind the consciences of our brethren; but we believe the following statement is not only in harmony with the Biblical and historical position of our church, but will also fairly represent the present feeling existing among its leadership as we have sensed it in the crisis which is upon us.

1. The Brethren Church clearly and gladly recognizes the divinely ordained place of civil government in a sinful world; that the government is truly a "minister of God" in the temporal realm for the purpose of protecting human life and "to execute wrath upon him that doeth evil." Therefore the nation, in exercising this divinely appointed function, is authorized by the Word of God to bear "the sword" against evil-doers who may threaten the destruction of human life with its precious values of "justice" and "liberty." This divine authority and responsibility of civil government is clearly revealed in Scripture (Rom. 13:1-4), and has been recognized in former statements of The Brethren Church. (See 1940 Resolutions).

2. In the present situation, therefore, we should be ready to "be subject" to our government in every possible Christian way as set forth in Scripture (Rom. 13:5-7; 1 Pet. 2:13-14; Tit. 3:1). This, we believe, includes the provision of funds for the support and defense of the government in its divinely appointed work of protecting human life and executing wrath upon evil-doers. "For this cause pay ye tribute also; for they (government officials) are God's ministers, attending continually upon this very thing" (Rom. 13-6). To assist in the raising of such funds, therefore, must be regarded as a Christian duty.

3. While fully recognizing the duty of the State to bear the sword against evil-doers, as sanctioned by the Scriptures, we also believe the same Word of God teaches that our personal ministry as Christian believers should be exercised in spiritual matters and in the relief of human suffering, rather than in the taking of human life. As followers of Christ, citizens and ambassadors of His heavenly kingdom (Phil. 3:20 ARV, 2 Cor. 5-20), we are required by His Word to walk even as He walked (1 John 2:6, 1 Peter 2:21-23). Therefore, we should be ready to serve our country in every possible way consistent with this Word, being willing, if necessary, to face danger and endure hardship in the performance of our duty, as long as we are not required to bear the sword personally in the taking of human life (John 18:36, Rom. 12:17-21, Matt. 26:52).

4. The government of the United States has, by law, graciously extended to all Christian believers the privilege of choosing in what capacity they may serve their country in the present crisis; and for this liberty we are deeply grateful, knowing that it exists almost nowhere else in the world today. Some of our Brethren young men have already entered combatant military service. While this type of service is not in accord with the historic teaching of The Brethren Church, its acceptance is not made a test of membership nor a cause for discipline, because the church does not wish to coerce the consciences of men in such matters. Others of our young men have sincerely chosen non-combatant military service, which permits them to serve in the armed forces of the nation without bearing arms personally. This is entirely consistent with the historic teaching of The Brethren Church, and offers an opportunity for rendering a genuine service to our country. Still others of our young men have chosen to enter the non-military civilian service, engaging in work of national importance under civilian direction in various camps throughout the country, for which the young man receives no pay from the government and must provide for his own living (about $35 per month). This type of service is also in harmony with the teaching of the church.

5. In whatever service they may choose to enter, we urge our young men to be faithful first to the Lord Jesus Christ their Savior, and then to serve well their country which has fostered and protected us in our liberties as Christian believers; not "with eye-service, as man-pleasers, but in singleness of heart, fearing God" (Col. 3:22). "Submit yourselves to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake: whether it be to the king as supreme; or unto governors, as unto them that are sent by Him for the punishment of evil-doers, and for the praise of them that do well. For so is the will of God—" (1 Pet. 2:13-15). And we urge upon our pastors and people the duty of constant prayer for all these young men, that they may be kept in the Lord's perfect will, feeding upon His Word, strong in His promises, bearing witness to His saving and keeping power, walking in His commands, and looking for His second coming.

6. In times of war, it should be remembered, the deepest of human emotions are stirred, the judgment of men loses its normal balance, and even Christians sometimes run toward unwise extremes. We would caution our members, therefore, to give no support whatever to that unscriptural "pacificism" which denies the right of our government to defend itself by force of arms or which seeks to obstruct its military efforts. On the other hand, we urge the pastors, through the teaching of the Word, to guard our people from falling into the opposite error of hating those who have now become our enemies, and to resist all attempts to stir up the deadly flames of race prejudice. Let us not forget that God "hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth" (Acts 17:26), and that "all have sinned and come short of the glory of God" (Rom. 3:23). If in the present conflict, our own beloved nation is on the side of justice (as we believe), this is due only to the providential grace of God toward us, and not to any inherent goodness that we possess above other less favored men. Let us be thoughtful, sober, and careful how we speak.

7. Above all there should be on our part a sense of deep humiliation and personal confession of sin, because we as a church and individual Christians have done so little to carry the gospel of salvation to a lost world during the days of national peace and security. Only an omniscient God could possibly know what might have been accomplished in such countries as Japan if the Christian churches of America had done their full duty in missionary effort. Now those days are irrevocably past and their opportunities gone. But the present hour brings new opportunities and even greater responsibilities before God. Let us therefore as never before, give ourselves to earnest prayer, to the preaching and teaching of the Word of God, to the winning of the lost to salvation in Christ, and to the sacrificial giving of our lives and substance to these ends, knowing that the time is short. In these things of the Spirit we may render our greatest contribution to our country and its security. We are facing a most solemn hour, and no man should even think of claiming or accepting exemption from military service, either as a Christian minister or layman, unless he is giving himself without reservation to the spiritual work of God.

8. Finally, let us not forget there is a God in heaven, wholly sovereign in His will and ways, who is able to set bounds to human iniquity, and without whose permission nothing can take place in the world of nations. "Since His the sway of circumstance," the last word in human affairs belongs to Him, not to the puny dictators who now strut their little day upon earth. "He that sitteth in the heavens shall laugh; the Lord shall have them in derision" (Ps. 2:4). In agreement with many devout students of the Word of God, we believe the omnious events of the present hour point unmistakably to one grand event—the second coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. He will speak peace to the nations, and in His days the unrealized dreams of humanity will at last come true. For those who know this "blessed hope," there can be no fear of coming things, no unseemly panic, no dark despair, no uncertainty as to the final outcome, but beyond the darkness there is a future bright with the promises of God Who never fails.

"Wherefore, beloved, seeing that ye look for such things, be diligent that ye may be found of Him in peace, without spot, and blameless . . . To Him be glory both now and forever. Amen." (IIPet. 3:14-18).

NATIONAL SERVICE COMMITTEE OF THE BRETHREN CHURCH.

INTO HIS MARVELOUS LIGHT

Charles A. Beal, saint of God and servant of Jesus, went home to be with Christ on the morning of Jan. 1, 1942, at the venerable age of 84 years. He departed quite suddenly from the home of his daughter, Mrs. Edna Guthrie, of Fredericktown, O. Many of the children and grandchildren were gathered in the home for a New Year family dinner at the time.

Bro. Beal has been known and loved, not only by a host of relatives and local friends, but also by many Brethren ministers who knew him during his long years of membership and service in The Brethren Church of Ankenytown, O.

He had been a Christian and a member of The Brethren Church of Ankenytown for over 51 years, and during the last 30 years a deacon. His life was an exemplary one. He possessed those blessed virtues: kindness, love, gentleness; yet, he was firm and steadfast. Bro. Beal knew how to say, No. He was unhesitatingly devoted to whatever he firmly believed to be right. More than one young pastor has leaned upon his strong arm and learned from his wise counsel in the years that are past. The present pastor of the church which owes Bro. Beal so much, in which he was found so regularly and faithfully during the past 51 years, counts it more than a privilege to have known him during the last two and one half of his declining years.

Brother Beal left behind a saintly wife, now aged 82, who shared with him a happy Christian home for 63 years. There remain to remember the sweet influence of his life four children, seven grandchildren, six great-grandchildren, a sister, and a brother, Dr. J. C. Beal, now pastor of the Grace Brethren Church of Waterloo, Ia.

Bro. Beal spent all his earthly life in Knox and Richland Counties, Ohio, part of the time a school teacher and part a farmer.

The funeral was conducted by his pastor, Robert D. Culver, Jan. 4, 1942. The service was held in the church building before a crowd so large that many stood during the service for lack of seating space. His earthly tabernacle was laid to rest in the Ankenytown cemetery.

Bro. Beal had repeatedly expressed the hope that he would live to see the Lord come. God chose to take him home before that time; and we know that when Bro. Beal awoke in His presence, he was completely satisfied that his Lord knew best.

NEWS FROM THE BRETHREN CHURCHES

to be able to report that the revival officially closed last Sunday night, with the church edified and 11 persons baptized and received into the church. Two have not yet been baptized and received. Many other splendid prospects have been contacted and will, no doubt, come later. While we are always glad to welcome children, yet seven of the eleven were adults. The spirit in the church at present is very harmonious and Christian, again we praise His name for His work in our midst. We followed the leading of the Spirit in our entire program and He produced results. Our song leader was Bob Wetzel, the Allentown radio baritone soloist. Brother Bob worked wonders with the music department of our people. The evangelist was R. D. Crees of Waynesboro, Pa. We are all sure that God sent the right man for this occasion at this time. These two consecrated men with the pastor made an evangelistic trio that the devil could not defeat. We must say a word of appreciation for the church members who sacrificed time, and money to make this meeting what it was. The pastor and evangelist were royally received and welcomed everywhere we went. These Allentown women know how to entertain. Bro. Crees very ably accepted the challenge of leading a small group of God's people into an appreciation of greater things ahead. His messages were all Biblical, timely, convicting and edifying. He will be welcome anytime he cares to return.

Brethren, continue to pray for Allentown. This is one of the most difficult fields for evangelism in all our experience. It is pronounced in Lutheran-Reformed influence. In view of this fact we are tremendously encouraged in this signal victory for the Lord's work. We are anticipating a greater year for 1942 than what characterized the past year. Pray for us as we engage in a similar evangelistic service in Waynesboro with the writer as evangelist and Bro. Crees as pastor. He is able if we are willing.

Yours in the Blessed Hope,

—Joseph L. Gingrich.

GREETINGS FROM LA VERNE TO HERALD READERS

We closed the year with a fellowship pot-luck supper, prayer meeting, business meeting, and watch night service, at which time Bro. Sheldon answered numerous questions and talked of their African work. After this, we had another prayer service while the old year passed into the new; then with happy new year greetings we dispersed, wondering what the new year holds in store for us. We thank the Lord that we have learned to trust Him Who has given us "peace which passeth all understanding."

All business was transacted pleasantly, and was shorter than usual for our yearly election of officers, due to accepting our nominating committee's report "that we retain all officers of 1941 and fill vacancies only" inasmuch as threatened blackouts were hindering night services. We had only one blackout, but expected them for over two weeks. Had they continued, our pastor said we would prepare for them and hold services in the basement, which could be blacked out easier; but we would have no spiritual blackout, and would heed Heb. 10:25 and "not neglect the assembling of ourselves together" as surely we do "see the day approaching." We are glad for our blessed hope of His soon return, and can keep "looking unto Jesus" (Heb. 12:2).

One item of business was the appointment of committee to change the constitution in regard to inactive members, so as to have only an active list and eliminate those who never come or those not answering letters. Another item was for installing a new lighting system.

Our financial report was good also, while we had a report of a deficit of $43.09, it was quickly cared for. Our home mission offering was $1188.72; our foreign mission offering was $1254.36; and paid on our church debt of $2,300 was $1,800 and the balance mostly pledged.

Our good spiritual food our loved pastor has given us both by word and action has brought us into a greater love and union, and we say, "Praise the Lord for sending us Bro. Carter and his helpful companion." Besides his regular work of the ministry here, they have a children's Bible Class on Thursdays, at which there are 35 or more in attendance, some of whom he brings in from a distance of four or five miles.

Our membership hasn't grown much—some have gone through death's door, some into other churches or congregations of our own, and last, some by revision of church rolls of those whom Satan has led in a spiritual blackout. Three were baptized lately, but very few unsaved come in to hear the Word. We have so much for which to praise the Lord, an added blessing lately being Brother and Sister Sheldon with us. We also enjoyed our seminary quartette lately, and also had Catherine Lynch, one of our members who is doing a faithful work in Kentucky 16 miles from our Clayhole work.

Bro. Carter still continues his Bible class at North Hollywood each Tuesday night, where he has been going for five months. It is a long 45-mile trip as most of it is through thick city traffic.

—Mrs. Lydia H. Frantz.

OUR BOASTING GONE

The writer has been feeling very comfortable over the home missions growth of our Fellowship of Brethren Churches during the past few years. It is true that new fields have come to us as never before. God has blessed our new works in a most unusual way. Our new churches have been growing splendidly—as we felt. They have shown a fine spirit of sacrifice and service. They have manifested a generous devotion to home missions, foreign missions, the seminary, and evangelism—as we felt. A few days ago there came to our desk a home missions news bulletin gotten out by another denomination. It represented the activities of the Northern Indiana District alone—just a small section of their national group. I began to lightly peruse that little paper of 12 pages twice the size of The Brethren Missionary Herald. In about two minutes I was sitting taut with interest. I was astounded at the things I read. That they were bona fide was unquestioned. Could such things be?

THERE WERE THE FACTS TO FACE

In the Northern Indiana District alone were 8,100 members at the beginning of the year. At the close of the year they had increased just 1500 in their membership. And the thing they were rejoicing over was that only 80 of these came from other denominations, which showed that they were truly evangelistic and seeking hitherto unreached people with the gospel. That was almost a 20% increase. Because of their continuous evangelistic campaigns in every section of their district, 513 were brought to Christ in new sections, and new churches were started. During the last 12 months 14 new churches were organized and they are already providing their own places of worship at present writing. At the time of their annual district meeting nine of these 14 churches were supporting their own pastors unaided by the district. Three more were to be independent by Oct. 1. 90 preachers were in the district, including those who promoted the new churches and are now pastoring them. The 8,100 members of this little district gave $336,276 for the work of the gospel.

GENERAL GOOD WILL

There was a fine paragraph of appreciation of their four general superintendents for the aid they gave them during the year. Such sincere and hearty words of praise as were expressed of these men, who led them through the year, were enough to put heart in those men to rise to greater heights as never before. The warmth of the spirit of love for each other and confidence in each other was most attractive—not a slightest hesitation to give honor and praise where it was due. Not a note of jealousy, self-seeking, criticism, or self-exaltation could be found. One thing alone stood out above all: one common passion possessed every one from highest to humblest, and that was to go everywhere and evangelize unreached people with the faith they themselves believe and love. the spirit in that little paper was contagious. You could feel it. It made the blood tingle in your veins to get up and do things for Christ.

LAYMEN HAD THE PASSION

There was a fine paragraph on the part the layman played in last year's work. Here is a sample:

> "Many of them toiled early and late in factories, stores, on farms, and at other occupations. . . . Then, AFTER WORK HOURS, they went to nearby towns to pitch tents, clean out halls, or prepare vacant churches for use so that Sunday Schools and churches might be organized. Any number of personal workers spent hours canvassing communities just before or during home mission campaigns. Scores of carpenters put in full holidays, working at their same old trade, in order to help some struggling church provide a place of worship.
> The godly laymen of this district never forced their pastors to beg for money with which to work outlined plans. They gave generously and liberally and expressed genuine joy over investments made in the souls of others. Sunday School teachers went far and near to teach classes in the afternoons where new Sunday Schools were being started. Several church boards voted to take Sunday night services to tent meetings when they knew these organizations would take good members from their own number. Many churches willingly sacrificed the services of their pastor for two or three weeks at a time in order to reach the unchurched multitudes of Northern Indiana."

What a testimony to the passion of the laymen of that denomination! But what a tribute that is to the success of the preachers they have, to stir their people to such devotion for the gospel!

NO ALIBI

There is no weight in saying that they teach some theology that we do not accept. That is granted. There is no weight in saying that their conversions are not genuine. There are too many of that kind of conversions in the Brethren Churches! We happen to know that some of the finest saints alive, showing the deep, rich fruit of the Spirit, are in this denomination. True separation from the world and clean personal living and habits are insisted on by them. No amount of objection will excuse us as Brethren for laxness in evangelism, and a low state of concern for lost men. If we have a better gospel, if we have more truth, if we have a greater commission, we should be producing more souls for Christ and building more churches than any other! Instead of adding one or two churches, we should be adding 14 new churches per year. One thing is sure the Brethren Churches are woefully lacking in a passion for saving the lost right here in America. Home missions has to fight for its life to get attention. It is looked upon as a sort of necessary duty that must be endured, but to be gotten rid of with as little cost as possible; when home missions should be a passion of living fire in the hearts of us all to make it the first interest of every day. This must go before every other interest. We must reach souls for Christ in America! Too many Brethren feel that they are hiring the foreign missionaries to do their soul-winning for them. This other group of people are sending out 14 new missionaries to foreign fields this year! That is the direct result of their fiery passion to win souls and spread the gospel here at home. Instead of feeling that we have 30 missionaries, every member of The Brethren Church should consider himself a missionary. Some of us go to foreign lands; that is all the difference. Our foreign missionaries would be numbered in the hundreds today if we had been on fire for Christ at home as we should have been through these years.

WHERE IT MUST START

Before we can realize the greater winning of souls for Christ, there must be new birth of fire in the Brethren pulpits. There must be a new realization that you can't make firebrands for Christ out of the laymen when the pastor is half-hearted himself. People are not going to go out after souls if the preacher won't set the example of ringing door bells. The preacher that does all his shooting from the pulpit will find that he will be facing mostly a woodpile on Sunday morning, and will have an unconcerned congregation. We need some real revivals for preachers only!—revivals that will make every preacher a living torch for Christ; revivals that will make our preachers not only preach sermons to their people on prayer, but that will give the preached a consuming ministry of prayer for lost men that will make his eyes run down with tears like Jeremiah; revivals that will make our men to so preach the Word of God that it will make the whole congregation burn in their hearts, till they will rise up and say, "We must do something about this." What difference does it make how much education a preacher has, if in the pulpit he is just so much cold turkey to which no one pays any attention? Billy Bray used to preach everywhere, on street corners, in fields, in barns. But he stirred England for God. He was heckled a lot about his poor speech. His only answer was, "I haven't been to college, but I have been to Calvary." God give our Brethren Churches another trip to Calvary that we might win lost men to Christ as never before!

FIFTY DARK YEARS AHEAD

Brigadier General Frederick F. Russell, Chief of the U. S. Army Corps, in his report to the Association of Military Surgeons a few days ago, declared that the present wave of Hitlerian social fanaticism will have to be faced and fought for the next 50 years by the oncoming generations. He said that regardless of the fall of Hitler personally, such forces and passions have been aroused that will keep the struggle going on and on. The ideology of German superiority over all other humanity has been too deeply imbedded in the German heart to disappear with the deposing of Hitler and his leaders. There is no use thinking of just an emergency that will be over in a few months or a couple of years, for it will be 50 years of struggle ahead.

We believe that the general is right so far as the outlook for this present world is concerned. He is led by his observations of world trends and conditions, without doubt. But the Word of God has long told us that end of this age will grow darker and darker. "Evil men and seducers shall grow worse and worse" (2 Tim. 3:13). "Unto the end (of the age) wars and desolations are determined" (Dan. 9:26). Dark, O, so very dark, is the way ahead for the world and the worldling who trusts in man and has no Christ. But bright, O, so very bright, is the way ahead for the sinner who has turned his back on this hopeless, hell-bound world, and has committed the keeping of his soul to the Son of God Who made the worlds and has promised that those "who keep the word of His patience" will be delivered from the final tragedies that wind up this age (Rev. 3:10). Brother, point your friends to "the Lamb of God." Don't let them perish with the world.

THANKSGIVING OFFERING CLOSES MARCH 1st

On Mar. 1 the comparative report of the Thanksgiving offering is closed and made up for publication in the Missionary Herald. All church offerings must be in the office of the Council by that date or it will be impossible to include them in the offering report. Therefore, church treasurers should have all home mission funds in the mail by Feb. 25 at the very latest. It will save a lot of explaining to those who will not understand if their gift does not appear when the offering is published.

WHERE THE GIANTS ARE

When Israel was going forward and conquering the land, they found giants in their way opposing them. It was when they were carrying out the will of God for them that they had to fight. But for all those 40 years in the wilderness they saw no giants, they met no warfare—all they did was die! There are many Christian men and women who are dismayed at the increasing difficulty they are having in their efforts to live a true Christian life today. It seems that in 1000 ways everything is opposed to them to make it hard to live for Christ. The home, the business, the social life, just seem like wild horses that cannot be controlled and brought under the sway of the Spirit of God. The easiest thing to do is to just give up the struggle and drift along the way of least resistance and have a certain kind of peace. That would be a spiritual wilderness full of spiritual dying. Christian, if you are not facing giants, it is a sign that you have given up and started to drift. Face the giants, live for Christ, put up a fight for your faith and your home and your children, and God will be with you—but you've got to fight for it. Let go and drift and you will love your fellowship with God, your power and blessing in prayer, peace in your heart, and any testimony for Christ to the lost world about you. Jesus said, "Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee the crown of life." God pity the drifter when the Lord returns. Roll up your sleeves and put up a fight brother! With God, you can lick the giants.

The Advance of Christ and Antichrist in 1941

ROBERT E. MILLER, pastor, First Brethren Church, Martinsburg, Pa.

"We are living, we are dwelling,
In a grand and awful time;
In an age on ages telling,
To be living is sublime!

Hark! the waking up of nations,
Gog and Magog to the fray;
Hark! What soundeth
'Tis creation groaning for its latter day."

We live in a day of expectancy when men wonder what is going to happen next; but few, if any, really know what to expect. All agree that something almost catastrophic is in the offing. The year now drawing to a close bids fair to be a "fateful year." To millions of starving souls it will always be. To the Christian anxious to know the meaning of this year in the light of the Scriptures, we declare that noteworthy advances have been made by Christ as well as the Antichrist. Our Lord tells us to expect a mixture of wheat and tares within the world-wide fold called Christendom today (See Matt. 13:36-40). This mystery of the kingdom of heaven (the kingdom which Christ shall establish on the earth) is revealed by our Lord very carefully, to show us that we may look for the constant growth of wheat and the tares together until the consummation of the age in which we now are living. This means we should expect the advance of Christ's work along with the advance of the work of the accuser, Satan.

The Advance of Christ

The growth of the Lord's work may be noted with rejoicing in our own denomination, which, though small in numbers, is boldly carrying out an effective "advance guard" command of the Lord Jesus to "go and tell." According to the reports of this past year from all our vital units of the "advance guard," such as the Foreign Missionary Society, the Home Missions Council, Grace Theological Seminary, The Brethren Missionary Herald, the Women's Missionary Council, and the Sisterhood of Mary and Martha, the current year has been one of victorious advances for the Lord Jesus Christ. And this not only here in America, but in the uttermost part of the earth—in Africa and in South America.

Never before have we read of such indigenous growth and spiritual activity on the part of our native Christian church in Oubangui-Chari, our African mission field. Reports of the reaching out into untouched regions in our Argentine mission field have never been so numerous as this year just passing. It is self-evident that the Lord is blessing the home mission program of the church under the leadership of the Home Missions Council, born in prayer and committed to the task of making Christ known to the millions in America without Christ and without hope. We thank God for the vision and vigor of this unit of the "Christian Advance Guard." It is from this never-tiring agency of our church that continually comes the words of William Carey: "Expect great things from God; attempt great things for God." Every year greater things are expected and attempted for the glory of the Lord and the salvation of precious souls. All this we say is in obedience to the Lord's command to "go into all the world and preach the gospel." This is the advance of Christ in 1941. Praise the Lord for every advance!

The Advance of Antichrist

Yes, the forces of evil headed by the wicked one, which shall be revealed as this age is consummated, are steadily and swiftly advancing throughout the entire world, America included. It is this very fact which constitutes the unparalleled challenge to every Christian in 1942 if the Lord tarries another year.

Internationally, it is without argument that "nation has risen against nation, and kingdom against kingdom." Governments have been betrayed from within and sold out to the ranks of the Antichrist. Our President has seen fit to warn the nation of the intentions of one man who now epitomizes the world's hatred for Christ, righteousness, truth, and honor. We are warned that this human monstrosity, if allowed to gain foot-hold in this country, would put an end to all preaching of the Bible, all religious services; and that only certain designated "orators" would be allowed to tour the country. What an advance for the cause of Antichrist this would be! International experts tell us that Europe will never be restored to pre-war conditions. All is in the state of flux. America, too, is changing so rapidly and shaking hands so vigorously with God-hating nations, that we wonder if our country will ever be the strong-hold of Christian principles it once has been.

This recent report from the Federal Bureau of Investigation reveals startling advances by the forces of the Antichrist: "Murders increased 15.4% during the first three months of last year over the first quarter of 1940. Rape increased 5:8% and other felonious assaults increased 2.2%." From the report we are compelled to admit that 3927 crimes are committed each day, a major crime committed every 21 seconds. 50% of all the criminals (and there are 5,000,000 in these United States) are under 25 years of age. Who is enlisting the American youth? Antichrist! One report tells us that 35,000,000 children and adolescents in America never cross the threshold of a Sunday School. To top it off, 40% of all the crimes are traced to alsohol, which is now dispensed to the citizens of the United States in liquor establishments which total 150% more than exer existed at any time in American history. This is the advance of the Antichrist in America!

All that seems to be appropriate at this point are the words from Isaiah: "Ah sinful nation, a people laden with iniquity, a seed of evil-doers, children that are corrupters: they have forsaken the Lord . . ." (1:40). Space forbids but a hasty mention of the lines of advance of the Antichrist. We see this advance in the present wave of labor anarchy. We see it in the wave of friendship with Russia and a compromise with Christian principles. We see it in vastly increased consumption of the most salacious literature of all time, which literally overflows our country with wicked thoughts and imaginations which are continually evil. We see it perhaps most tragically in the professing church, "having a form of godliness but denying the power thereof." In many pulpits of socalled Christian America, Satan stands as "an angel of light." God pity the men who are living lies, ministers of death, feeding the people stones instead of bread! But all this is the advance of the Antichrist who some day shall "exalt himself above all that is called God, or that is worshipped . . . "(2 Thess. 2:3).

"But we are bound to give thanks always to God for you, brethren, beloved of the Lord, because God hath from the beginning chosen you to salvation through sanctification of the Spirit and belief of the truth: . . . Now our Lord Jesus Christ Himself, and God, even our Father, which hath loved us, and hath given us everlasting consolation and good hope through grace, comfort your hearts, and stablish you in every good word and work" (2 Thess. 2:13,16,17).

RESOLUTIONS PASSED BY THE MINISTERS OF THE CENTRAL DISTRICT

January 30, 1942.

President Franklin D. Roosevelt,
Washington, D. C.,

My Dear Mr. President:

The following are the resolutions as adopted by the Ministerial Fellowship of the above conference in their January meeting at Winona Lake, Ind.
To the President of the United State of America:

We the members of the Central District Fellowship of Brethren Ministers, wish to express our gratitude and appreciation for the following:

FIRSTfor the acknowledgment of the Bible as vitally important to national defense, as expressed by our President in his letter of introduction printed in the New Testaments given to our boys in service,

SECOND—for the day of prayer as observed on January 1, 1942,

THIRD—for deferment as provided in the Selective Service Act, for ministers of the gospel, for theological students in seminaries, schools and colleges in preparation for such ministry,

FOURTH—for priority privilege granted to ministers of the gospel in the purchase of automobile tires and of other necessities for expediting the work of the gospel minister,

FIFTH—for the privileges granted, the granting of which would indicate that our government believes that the work of the gospel minister is of great importance and necessity in this time of national defense,

SIXTH—we take this occasion of assuring you of our continued supplication before the throne of grace for divine guidance upon our President and his administration in these days of unprecedented emergency.

Very sincerely yours,

My Testimony

By MARION LANDRUM, Layman, Clayhole, Ky.

I will gladly give my testimony for Christ. It means a lot to me. I am so thankful that I can say I have accepted Jesus as my Savior. I know that without Him we can not be saved. I am 27 years old and I have to say I spent 26 for Satan. Now I can see where I made my mistake. Now I know the sweetest life anyone can live is to live for Jesus. Life is miserable without Him.

Before I became a Christian I could not see why I needed Jesus. I was not interested in going to church or Sunday School. Instead of going to church I would go with crowds serving Satan drinking and lots of other idle things. I am thankful I had some dear friends who were faithful and encouraged me to go to church and to accept Christ as my Savior. I started attending the Clayhole Brethren Sunday School and church. I am glad to say it was here I was shown where my soul was in danger. June 1 1941, I gave my heart to Christ.

After I became a Christian, my mother, whom I have always loved, said to me, "You have caused my hair to become gray, but if your soul can be saved I don't mind the gray hair. My prayers have been heard. I have spent many hours in prayer for you."

As I look forward to this old world I know Jesus never fails, and wherever I go I know I am never alone.

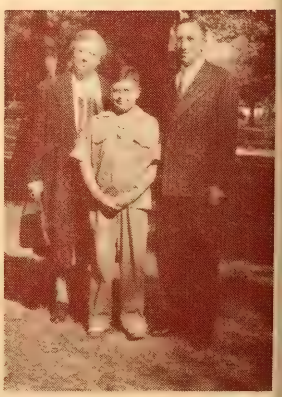
250 MINERS LISTEN TO THE GOSPEL—

We have just returned from a real opportunity to preach the gospel. The superintendent opened up an opportunity to speak to his men for 15 minutes just before they went to work. The time is usually taken up with talks on 'safety first' to impress the men for the day's work. When he offered us the chance to use that time for the preaching of the gospel we took it readily. It meant that we had to get out at five in the morning and walk several miles through a biting wind at about 25 above zero and then to climb the tipple where the coal is loaded into the freight cars. A coal tipple is not an ordinary place for a pulpit, but we used it this time the best we could. Cold as it was, those men stood around little bonfires trying to warm up a little, and listened to the gospel. They never know when they go down into the mine laughing and joking to their day's work whether they will come out alive. Every few days the roof of a mine room will fall in and crush some poor chap under tons of rock. These men work in the presence of death each day. Without Christ these hazards make men reckless; and they turn to drink as a sort of escape from the daily round of working down in that long black hole on their knees, with death lurking around them all the time, and coming out covered with the black of coal dust. But when some of these men hear of Christ and the hope of Calvary, it appeals to them as being better than the ways of sin, and they come to Him with all their hearts. We have had wonderful joy in bringing many of these hardened men, steeped in drink, gambling, wife beating, immorality and general hopelessness, to Christ. It has thrilled our hearts to see that the gospel is still able to transform the man that will trust Christ. So as we broadcast to these men this morning, they listened attentively, and some promised to come to the meetings. There is no joy in all the world like that of bringing a sinner to the Lord and see him transformed into a saint for God.

"He that goeth forth weeping, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again, rejoicing, bringing his sleeves with him" (Psalm 126:6).

The great harvest is still going on, brother; are you having any part in it?

With a few days free at Christmas time we had a chance to visit our northern Ohio mission points.



SOUTH MANSFIELD, OHIO—

This work is still just a Bible Class and Sunday School. They meet in the assembly hall of the local city park. Bro. Arthur Cashman has been caring for this group during the past year. Little progress was made for many months. A tent meeting was held last August with Bro. Chas. Mayes preaching and Bro. Cashman leading the singing and generally caring for things. It seemed that just everything went wrong with that meeting. Attendance was hard to get. At no time was the tent full. A storm blew it down during the second week. Things looked blue for a new work in South Mansfield. At conference at Winona Lake, Bro. Cashman made a resolution to go back and redouble his efforts. There is a wonderful field there and it seemed too bad to give up.

This time God rewarded his efforts in a fine way. Attendance began to rise. The Bible School got large enough to organize. Preaching services grew in attendance. Homes were thrown open for Bible classes and prayer meetings. A fine class of people began to get interested in the new work. Today there are about 50 who attend Bible School and church.

The Sunday morning we arrived they were aiming for 50 in the Bible School. Being a holiday season, two families were away and they missed the goal. But we found a most promising and interested group of people. They have already sent in their Thanksgiving offering of $152.

Bro. Cashman hopes that by Eeaster this group will be ready for organization into a church. He is doing a splendid and unselfish work in South Mansfield. It now appears that a new Brethren church will be organized in South Mansfield in 1942.

WOOSTER, OHIO—

After the Sunday morning meeting at South Mansfield we drove to Wooster for the evening service. The crowd filled almost every available seat. There was a fine spirit present and it was evident that the future was most optimistic.

They have their heating plant about completed and the building was comfortable as could be.

This pastor and people have been contacting five new families every week since September and it has already shown in the growth of the work. Bro. John Squires seems to have had a great increase in his ability since the twins made their appearance!

FREMONT, OHIO

We arrived in this city on Saturday night, Dec. 27. A fine crowd of members were present for the services.

This people are still meeting in the mission building they rent from the Presbyterian Church. They have chosen their lots and they are paid for in a fine section of the city, and they have building plans ready for erection of the new structure, but as yet they have been unable to obtain sufficient funds to build with. Bro. Jack Simmons, the pastor, is now working on this angle and we hope to hear of success very soon. This work cannot grow any more till larger quarters are provided.

CLEVELAND, OHIO

This was our first trip to Cleveland since Bro. Walter Lepp had become pastor. We arrived at noon and learned that he and Bro. Foye Miller were down town at the luncheon of the Christian Business Men's Association. Down we went too. Bro. Lepp was speaking. We heard most of his message. It was good. After the message we heard several of the business men remark that Bro. Lepp was just the man that Cleveland needed. He has already made an excellent impression on the city.

We found the attendance at both church and Sunday School was on the increase this fall. Finances are good with a balance running in the current treasury. Eight were recently taken into membership and many new people are attending the services.

If the Lord tarries there will be a real harvest of souls in Cleveland during the next few years.

Brother and Sister Lepp are satisfied that the Lord has led them to Cleveland. They are very happy in their new field and enjoy the love and confidence of the membership.

The Great Need of the Hour

"Men ought always to pray." Luke 18:1.

By HENRY REMPEL, Pastor, Flora, Indiana

Twice in the Gospel of Luke do we find Christ emphasizing the great importance of earnest, persistent prayer. The first one of these passages is found in Luke 11, where the disciples asked the Lord to teach them to pray. In Lk. 18:1-8 the Lord again taught the importance of prayer by parable, telling his audience that "men ought always to pray and not to faint." Our Lord placed a tremendous value upon prayer, so much so that He said, "Men out always to pray."

Prayer had a very definite place in the earthly life of our blessed Savior. He Who said, "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth," went apart for the entire night to pray that He might have power with God. He Who healed the sick and raised again the dead spent hours in intimate fellowship with His heavenly Father that he might carry on His earthly ministry. His admonition was, "Ask and ye shall receive!" and throughout His earthly ministry he demonstrated the truth of this statement.

However, Christ was not the only One Who lived and served by this principle, for we find the disciples in the early church prayed much; and as a result God wrought great miracles, and accomplished mighty works through their prayers. Pentecost came after a season of earnest praying and definite heart-searching on the part of those early believers. Those early Christians tarried in the upper room awaiting the fulfilment of their Lord's promise, and in due time it came. Immediately Peter, filled with the Holy Spirit, rose to his feet, preached the crucified and risen Savior, and a large multitude believed. Of these Luke says in Acts 2 that "they continued steadfastly . . . in prayer." The fact that the church so continued is verified by the incident of Peter's arrest and imprisonment (see Acts 12). "But prayer was made without ceasing of the church unto God for him." We know what happened. The miraculous deliverance of Peter came as a direct result of the 'unceasing prayers' made by the church.

Time would fail us on this occasion, to trace fully the rapid growth and widespread influence of the early church, because its members prayed 'without ceasing.' Throughout the entire history of the church, we find that she grew when she prayed, and she fainted when she did not pray.

It is small wonder that Christ instilled within the hearts of His first followers the need of persistent prayer by telling them that "men ought always to pray." But where lies the trouble today? Has prayer lost its efficacy? Is God's ear heavy and His hand shortened that He cannot help any more? Why is the work of the church waning? Why is it that hundreds of churches are closing their doors every year? Why is it that the church apparently has no power? Is it because of a lack of machinery? Haven't we thousands of beautiful edifices in the world today with good Sunday schools, young people's organizations, women's missionary societies, men's brotherhoods. Haven't we robed choirs, paid quartets, pipe organs, string orchestras, brass bands, stained glass windows, carpeted floors, upholstered seats, gymnasiums, and well equipped kitchens? Yes we have all these, and other things more; but without the power of prayer, no church can go forward.

Why is it that in many churches today we hear nothing of revivals any more? Why is it that so many church members live defeated lives? Why are there so few soul-winners going out to reach the lost for Christ? There can be only one answer, the church of today is not a praying church. Why have so many ministers nothing to preach about? Why do so many church members run to places of worldly amusements instead of going to church? We could multiply such and similar questions many times over and all these could be answered in several words, namely, we have too little prayer. Is it true then that church people are not praying any more? Not altogether, for the machinery is still there. Churches still observe 'days of prayer' and annual 'weeks of prayer,' speakers talk about prayer, and on these occasions people mutter words, and repeat prayers; but the real art of praying is practically lost, and that not only among the laity, but also among the clergy. "Having the form of godliness, but denying the power thereof" (II Tim. 3:5). By all observations this matter is directly proportional. Much prayer—much power; little prayer—little power; no prayer—no power. In many churches the prayer-meeting, which should be the powerhouse of the church, has been relegated to the scrap heap. In the average church today there is a great deal of feasting, but no fasting; much time is spent in playing and so little in praying.

In view of all this, what then is the great need of the present hour? The need of the hour is "back to prayer!" Men and women, boys and girls, clergy and laity, all alike need to go back on their knees in earnest fervent prayer; and God will hear and things will happen. Let us offer three reasons why men ought always to pray and not to faint.

1. Men ought always to pray because of the great need throughout the church. The church is in greater need today for prayer than ever before. We have, at least in part, portrayed the present condition of the church. It is apparent that the church has lost her power and her influence in the world. It is no wonder the church is failing in her mission in saving the lost at home and abroad. When Christians cease to pray, they immediately lose their vision for soul-winning. As soon as soul-winning ceases the purpose of the church is defeated. Perhaps the fault lies in the home, for if there be no prayer in the Christian home, there will be no prayer in the church. The need for prayer in the home is great in this day. Why are there so many broken homes? Why is there so little real interest in the average home for the things of God and of the church? The reason for this is simple, there is too little prayer in the home. In many of our Christian homes today we find the familiar motto, "Prayer Changes Things;" but how many people actually believe that? In many instances we might well reverse the order of those words and say, "Things Change Prayer," and it would be appropriate for that home. How great the need is for fathers and mothers and boys and girls to go back to prayer in the home.

Paul tells the church to pray for those in 'authority.' Men ought always pray for those who guide their ship of state, for great and peplexing are the problems they have to face. Here in America we still enjoy freedom of speech and freedom of worship. Let Christians pray everywhere that God might preserve this heritage unto us. Only prayer can avail.

Not only ought men to pray always because of the great need of the present hour, but because we have a God Who hears and answers prayer. Is it God's fault that so many churches fare so meagerly? Is it His fault that they have no revivals? Is it God's fault that Christians everywhere manifest to little spirituality? No, a thousand times no. The fault lies in the prayerlessness of the individual. When the son of a millionaire trots about in the country as a tramp, and begs for his daily existence, is it the fault of his millionaire father? Neither is it God's fault when the churches of today are so impoverished, and seek to live on husks instead of being rich toward God by feasting at His table of plenty. Why was it that men of old, and even men of more recent years, accomplished so much for God? It was because those men prayed to a living God, Who hears and gladly gives unto those who ask of Him. James said, "Ye have not because ye ask not" (James 4:2). There lies the secret of the whole matter. God is able; He is willing; He has promised that He will; but men today will not meet the condition. God's ear is not heavy, nor is His arm shortened that He cannot help. The fault lies in the shortness of the prayer-arm. God told the prophet of old, "Call unto me and I will answer thee, and shew thee great and mighty things, which thou knowest not" (Jer. 33:3). This promise holds true today, if men would only meet the requirement.

Men ought always to pray because of what prayer accomplishes. How true the words of James are when he says by the Holy Spirit, "The effectual fervent prayer of the righteous man availeth much" (James 5:16). Again we see that there is a condition. The praying man must be righteous, that is, one who has been made righteous through faith in Christ's finished work of redemption. The prayer must be effectual and fervent, then it will avail much. Time and again the prayer of Moses availed much, when he led out the children of Israel. Joshua was a great man of prayer and his prayers availed. Daniel's prayers were effective because he met the proper conditions. Yes, the prayers of J. Hudson Taylor, and of George Muller were effective and were honored by God. Regardless of the time, when men prayed according to God's formula, much was accomplished for God and men. Whenever the church prayed she went forward, but when she ceased to pray she fainted. Oh, that God might visit His own once more, shake them out of their lethargy and out of ther prayerlessness, and give them a new vision of the effectiveness of prayer; then souls would be saved, missions would flourish, churches would be on fire, and the blessed hope of His imminent return would soon be realized. May we pray with the disciples of old, 'Lord, teach us to pray,' and grant that men everywhere would pray and faint not.

Home Mission Object Lesson

MRS. HERMAN KOONTZ

With this issue we begin a series of object lessons designed for use in special home mission exercises at the close of the Sunday School periods. One will appear every 90 days in the Home Mission Number of The Brethren Missionary Herald.

These are being prepared by Mrs. Myra Koontz, who has written so many wonderful programs for us during the last few years. She is ably assisted by Mrs. Dewey Murray, home missionary secretary of the Roanoke Church. She is an experienced children's teacher. Mrs. Koontz has been through the experience of building a mission church and knows how to present home mission problems to children.

OBJECTS: A sprouting potato (if not available, the same effect can be obtained by inserting several pieces of crooked macaroni in a potato); a loaf of bread sliced; two home mission banks, one full and the other empty (if the church banks can not be found, label any type of bank with the words, Home Missions).

LESSON: What is wrong with this potato? Yes, it should have been planted long ago if the sprouts were to do any good. Now it cannot be eaten either. It is like a person who lives for self. Such a person finally shrivels up and becomes ugly and unhappy. He finally dies without ever having been any good to anyone. This sort of person does not help missions; he does not give of his money to send others, nor does he give himself in service.

But how different is this loaf of bread! It is wholesome, and full of nourishment. Its whole purpose in life is to spend itself that other might live. A person who is like this loaf of bread gladly shares his money and himself with those who need the gospel story. Such a person remembers Christ's words, "I am the Bread of life," and strives to make that living Bread known to others.

The first person will have this kind of a home mission bank. (Ask a child to come forward and shake the empty bank.) But the second person will have this kind of bank. (Child shakes full bank.)

Which kind of a giver are you when an offering is taken for home missions; a sprouting potato or a loaf of bread?

WHAT RICH DIVIDENDS!

It is reported that a missionary lady was telling the story of her work in China. When she finished, a little girl came forward and gave her 12 pennies. "Please," she said, "I have been saving these pennies and now I want them to be missionaries to China." How happy the missionary was to receive the offering from its whole-hearted giver! Months went by and finally a letter came for the little girl which read, "With your 12 pennies I bought 12 penny gospels of John. I give one to each of my class of Chinese girls. They read the wonderful story in their own little books, and today all 12 gave their hearts to Christ. What a splendid investment you have made in kingdom stock!"—L. B. Bulletin.

NEWS BRIEFS

From Our Workers

A real step forward for Christ and His church was taken at the annual business meeting of the First Brethren Church of Long Beach, Calif., of which Dr. L. S. Bauman is pastor. $1 per member was budgeted for district missions to build Brethren churches in Southern California. This is in addition to the home mission offering taken at Thanksgiving, which will be entirely for national home missions. This church reports for last year $3135.55 for national home missions with more to follow, $514.66 of which was designated for Southern California; and $2079.54 for Grace Theological Seminary, with the determination yet to reach their $2500 goal. This church also voted at its annual business meeting to be a 100% church on The Brethren Missionary Herald subscription list.

The First Brethren Church of FT. WAYNE, IND., after raising its home missions goal $400 this year, went "over the top" in its offering. Not only was the $1000 goal passed by $40.98, but every department, class and society made its individual goal. Bro. John Aeby is pastor of this church.

The WAYNESBORO, PA., church gave awards on Feb. 1 to 39 members of its Bible School who had perfect attendance throughout 1941. This church reports a total of $2795.31 given to denominational interests during 1941 during which time $1827.56 worth of improvements were also made on their church building. These improvements included new carpet painting the inside and outside of the building, and a new roof. Bro. R. D. Cress is pastor of this church.

The SOUTHEASTERN DISTRICT Ministerial Ass'n has accepted the government's offer to rent the Powell's Fort Organization Camp at a reasonable sum from July 27-August 10. This camp was built at a cost of $70,000,

SANCTIFICATION BY THE WORD

It is the business of a theological seminary to turn out students who are thoroughly informed in the Word of God and its great truths. This is quite generally agreed upon in the conservative schools of this country. But there is one thing often overlooked in such places, that is, the absolute necessity for this knowledge of the Word of God to become experiential as well as intellectual in the life of the student. Until this ideal is reached, all teaching may remain a frigid and powerless orthodoxy. If Grace Theological Seminary has any special distinction, it is an insistence upon this need. We recognize the value of high intellectual attainment, but we also understand that no amount of such attainment can compensate for failure to touch the heart with the truth. It is not enough to know the truth; the minister must be sanctified by the truth. Both the radical liberalist and the rigidly orthodox intellectualist may raise their eye-brows at what the late Dr. Strong used to call "heart theology," but that is the only kind of theology which really works in either the life of the preacher or the lives of his hearers. By "heart theology" I do not mean a theology originated by the human heart, but a Bible theology which has touched and gripped the heart of the preacher. This is the ideal standard of education set up at Grace Seminary.

Educational ideals, of course, are never completely realized. If they were, we would understand that they were too low in the first place. Nevertheless, from time to time we see here indications of progress. At the close of the last semester, while looking over final examination papers in my class on the Book of Romans, I found in one paper a personal testimony which is worth sharing with the friends of the seminary. The testimony was written as a footnote to a question dealing with the sixth chapter and its teaching on the truth of sanctification. The student wrote: "I just want to say, by way of personal testimony, that this truth has meant more to me than anything else in the course—to realize that, so far as sin is concerned, I am dead; it has no claims upon me; that Christ now lives in me unto God. And I believe that the victory this truth has given me has done much to make my ministry for Him effective. May it always, wherever you teach it, have a like effect upon your classes where it is needed."

THE NEWS IS NOT ALL BAD

Since the terrible catastrophe at Pearl Harbor, many changes have taken place in the city of Honolulu. For one thing, it is reported that the great crime wave which had almost engulfed the city for the past year has now receded to an all-time low. Also, we learn, no alcoholic liquor—not even beer—has been sold across the many bars of that city since Dec. 7, 1941.

If you ask why prohibition has come to Honolulu, the answer is clear: the military authorities have found that minds befuddled with alcohol are not fit to cope with an enemy such as America faces now. The Roberts board of investigation, sent by President Roosevelt to find what was wrong at Pearl Harbor, reported that there was no more drunkenness than usual among the armed forces at the time of the disaster. But evidently the military commanders decided that even that was too much. This is good news to all of us.

But if the rule is good in Honolulu, sensible men will ask whether the same rule might not help here at home. Sensible men, however, seem to be still in the minority in our home government. When, to supply war needs for commercial alcohol, some of the great distilleries were ordered to discontinue the making of beverages, a great howl went up from the wet newspapers. But government officials quickly assured the drinkers that there was no cause for worry, that there were sufficient millions of gallons aging in storage to supply their needs for the next five years.

HOLLYWOOD IS EMBARRASSED

It is not often that anyone of consequence in the movie colony gets a red face; but according to a very sober and conservative commentator of the doings out there, this actually happened. The story is in brief as follows:

A recent popular work of fiction is being prepared for the screen. The central figure of the book is a priest. And, to quote the exact words of the commentator, one of the difficulties of the producer "is finding an actor who has led a comparatively blameless life." He is not expecting to find an angel for the part, but "he wants a reasonably admirable man for the role." The main trouble seems to be that too many of the actors who might fill the part have been principals in divorce actions.

If you wonder why Hollywood should suddenly get squeamish over the divorce problem, the probable answer is not that morality is becoming the fashion there, but that the men who produce pictures have a healthy fear of the Roman Catholic church, which with all its shortcomings would doubtless resent seeing the part of a priest played by an adulterer.

If the hero were a protestant preacher, the problem of the producer would not be so acute. Those Protestant churches whose members support and attend the movies, are not greatly concerned about the divorce evil.

A GOVERNOR RECOMMENDS RELIGION

The 21st Quadrennial Convention of the International Council of Religious Education holding its sessions in Chicago, brought Minnesota's Gov. Stassen to deliver one of the main addresses to its 1000 delegates. According to reports, the speaker declared that "we can regird the spiritual foundations of our democracy only if every citizen makes a religion a living force in his own life."

There is much in the Governor's statement with which the Christian will agree. For example, first, it is true that no democracy can succeed without "spiritual foundations." Second, "every citizen" must regard spiritual matters as a responsibility which cannot be shifted to other men. And third, it is not enough to be merely in favor of religion, but every citizen must make it a "living force in his own life." So far all this is very good. But there is one ominous omission.

Just what is this "religion" recommended by the Governor of Minnesota as the necessary foundation of personal and national life? There are all kinds of "religion." The Japanese have "religion." So does Mr. Hitler. Of course, Gov. Stassen was not recommending that kind of religion. But what about the "religion" of Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick and his cult? Was he referring to that? It is the "religion" held probably by most of the men who run the affairs of the I.C.R.E. And some of us feel that the adoption of such a religion by the citizens of America would at last bring disaster, just as surely as it brought disaster to Germany and paved the way for the dreadful philosophy of Nazism.

What this country needs is not some vague thing called "religion," but the Lord Jesus Christ as Savior and Lord. It would have created some embarrassment at the Chicago convention, I suppose, if Gov. Stassen had said anything like that. But somebody in high places had better begin to say it, if we are as a nation to escape the long arm of providential judgment.

A SEVEN POINT RELIGIOUS CREED

About the same time that the I.C.R.E. Convention was discussing "religion" in Chicago, another group in the same city was busily drawing up a religious creed intended to represent the points of agreement between Roman Catholics, Protestants and Jews. It was signed by scores of leaders in these three groups, and then made public by the Secretary of the Chicago Round Table of Christians and Jews.

The creed contains seven points which, boiled down somewhat, may be fairly stated as follows. 1, They believe in one God. 2, They believe that man is more than a mere physical organism. 3, They believe that God's will is the final basis of morality and human freedom. 4, They believe that recognition of our dependence upon God is essential to human progress. 5, They believe that God is interested in all human beings, and their rights should be respected. 6, They believe that the republican form is the best government for democratic peoples, but that liberty and happiness are possible only where moral and religious principles are accepted. 7, They believe that individual rights are established by God, and therefore no man should be enslaved by his fellows. Concerning these seven points, the signers affirm in their preamble that "they are the spiritual foundation of our national life."

Now I do not hesitate to pronounce the religion set forth by these seven points as a false religion. It is not a false religion because the seven propositions are not true. As a matter of fact, if I understand them, I think they are all true. Certainly, there is one true God, man is no mere physical organism, etc. But this religion leaves out Christ and His Redemptive work; and any religion that leaves Him out is false—not false in what it affirms necessarily, but false in what it omits.

How can a religion be called "false" if all its affirmations are true? Let us forget religion for a moment and look at something that men think about more sensibly as rule. Consider the subject of bread. Let us suppose that you are hungry and in desperate need of bread. And so we get the bakers together and tell them to make some bread. But we find there is wide disagreement about what constitutes real bread. And so, having failed to get them together completely, we decide that the bakers shall draw up a recipe for making bread, incorporating only those points on which all can agree. And so at last we come to you, the starving man, with a seven point document: 1, Bread should be made of wheat. 2, It should not be adulterated. 3, It should be baked until done, etc. As we hand you the seven point formula, we remind you that this is a most remarkable document, that for the first time in modern times we had gotten all the bakers to agree on something. True, we are not yet able to offer you any bread, but you are asked to remember that this seven point agreement between the bakers deals with fundamentals and marks a great achievement in the direction of tolerance. And of course you would protest, if you were a sensible starving man, that what you need is bread, not merely a recipe for making bread; that without bread you will perish, in spite of all their fine rules for making bread!

"I am the Bread of Life," said our Lord Jesus Christ. And any system of religion or belief that leaves Him out is utterly false, regardless of the abstract truth of its philosophic affirmations. The real trouble with some of the leaders of Christendom is that they have forgotten the words of Christ, "Without Me ye can do nothing." They have changed the words to read, "Without Me ye can do something." They need to be reminded that religion without Christ is religion with no bread, and religion without bread is of no value to the human soul. Tolerance and agreement in the field of religion, we agree, are fine things, but you cannot eat them. And when even such fine things are valued above Him who is the Bread of Life, then men have become fools. Christ is more important than tolerance, more important than religious unity. Any so-called tolerance that is not based on Him will at last turn out to be utter intolerance; and any religious unity not centered in His Person will finally become a curse to mankind.

We are living in perilous times. We shall find safety only in holding fast to Christ. "He that honoreth not the Son, honoreth not the Father" (Jn. 5:23).

ANOTHER ANNUITY GIFT FROM MR. AND MRS. ABE BOWMAN

From these friends, members of the First Brethren Church of Long Beach, California, there came to the seminary on Dec. 1, a gift on the annuity plan amounting to $5,000. Perhaps it should be explained again that the principal of such annuity gifts is not available for expenditure by the seminary during the lifetime of the givers, and that the seminary pays interest on the money for that period. However, we desire to say that Brother and Sister Bowman have set the interest figure unusually low, and by careful investment of these funds it is hoped that the income will care for this interest with very little loss. It ought also be said that any loss of this nature is more than made up by other direct gifts which come to the seminary from these good friends. May the Lord bless and reward their generosity; and we trust that He may come before the gift becomes fully available to the seminary.

We can think of no better place nor occasion to suggest Grace Seminary to other Brethren who may be looking for a place to invest funds for the Lord, than in connection with this report of our recent gift from the Bowmans. There is a certain sense in which the work of the seminary cannot be brought to the attention of our churches as the work of home and foreign missions can. Some churches and pastors see the need in these fields because it is more direct and immediate, but they may not see clearly the seminary as an indispensable link between the home church and all missionary endeavor. Since this is bound to be true, the support of the training school for the workers must fall more largely upon those who have the long vision in such matters. Therefore, we trust that individual Christians who have funds or property which they desire to invest for the Lord's service may consider prayerfully the importance and need of the seminary. We shall be glad to discuss this matter, either by letter or personal conference, with any who may be interested.

If you should have funds which you would like to see at work for the Lord after you are at home with Him, but you need the income from such funds during your lifetime, write to the President, Grace Theological Seminary, Winona Lake, Ind. The annuity plan is much safer than to provide for a gift in your will. it cannot be broken by any legal contest, and it secures an income for you from the funds during your lifetime.

THE ANNUAL DAY OF PRAYER

This important event in the seminary program had been originally scheduled for the second full week in January, which was the first week of the new semester, but for various reasons had to be postponed for two weeks. This change upset plans which at the time seemed very important; but we learned once more that God never permits our plans to fail unless He has some better plan for us. We had been praying that the Holy Spirit might take complete charge of this season of intercession, and He quite evidently took our petition very literally in answering the prayer.

The entire day of Jan. 29 was devoted to prayer. The forenoon session stressed confession and cleansing, the afternoon praise and missions, and the evening general prayer and special requests. At 5:30 both students and faculty members gathered in the library for a fellowship meal planned and directed by Mrs. Kent.

Special speakers were Bro. V. C. Kelford, Orville D. Jobson, and H. B. Centz. Bro. Kelford spoke at the Wednesday chapel service on the double effect of true prayer, and at the forenoon session of the Day of Prayer on what is involved in genuine confession of sin. Bro. Jobson dealt with the work of God in the African mission at the afternoon session ,and also addressed the seminary group at regular class hours.

Bro. Centz was with us on Friday following the Day of Prayer, speaking very helpfully on the value of Bible Theology in an hour of crisis. Among the guests present during the week were Brother and Sister Schaffer of Berne, Bro. Robert Ashman from Peru, and Rev. Machlin of the American Mission to the Jews.

The results of such an occasion are never of such a nature that they can be analyzed statistically in any mechanical fashion, but some things are very evident. There is the joy and satisfaction which always attend the transfer of burdens to the Lord, a renewal of former vows and interest with reference to the Lord's work, especially foreign missions, and the formation of a group which meets weekly for definite prayer about the latter work. This was due, under God, in no small way to the ministry of Bro. Jobson, and aided by the presence of Brother and Sister Morrill here during the time of their waiting to return to Africa.

DON'T READ THIS IF MONEY TALK BOTHERS YOU!

An Indian one day asked a preacher to give him two $1.00 bills for a $2.00 bill. The preacher asked, "Why?" The Indian replied, $1.00 for me to give to Jesus, and $1.00 for my wife to give." The preacher asked him if it was all the money he had. He said, "Yes."

The preacher was about to tell him, "It is too much," when the missionary to the Indians, who was standing by, whispered: "It might be too much for a white man to give, but not too much for an Indian who has this year heard for the first time of the love of Jesus."

"THEY THAT REMAIN"

By DAYTON A. MANKER

Mr. Manker's graphic story opens amidst present chaotic conditions . . . and from this starting point weaves an intensely, interesting, intriguing narrative of the end-time events, showing how prophecy is being rapidly fulfilled before our eyes. Through splendid characterizations and a fast moving plot, the reader is shown the part Communism, Nazism and Fascism are playing in the great drama of predicted world changes. In these pages, the fascinating, exciting and climactic stages of end-time prophecy unfold—the rise of Antichrist, Rapture of the Saints, Great Tribulation, Armageddon, establishment of the Millennium.

This is the story every lover of prophetic truth must read. You will not be able to lay the book down after beginning—so realistic is the message that it contains. Cloth bound. 229 PAGES.

"THE LOVE OF GOD IS SHED ABROAD IN OUR HEARTS BY THE HOLY GHOST WHICH IS GIVEN UNTO US"

By REV. R. H. KETTELL, pastor, Pleasant Grove Brethren Church
North English, Iowa

It would not be difficult for the world to understand how God could love saints and provide good things for them. Their loyalty would draw from His heart of love. But it is hard to know how God could love sinners and provide for them a Savior. I John 4:10: "Herein is love, not that we loved God but that He loved us, and sent His Son to be the propitiation for our sins." In Rom. 5:8,10: "God commendeth His love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us." "For if, when we were enemies we are reconciled to God by the death of His Son." Surely, this is the proof of God's love for us. Thousands of men and women have been saved because they saw the great truth of the 53rd chapter of Isaiah: "He was wounded for our transgressions, He was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisment of our peace was upon Him; and with His stripes we are healed." "Beloved, if God so loved us we ought also to love one another" (I Jn. 4:11).

The love of Christ is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given unto us. In Col. 1:8 we read of "your love in the Spirit." Our text tells us that the Holy Ghost was given to us. He was given unto us because He loved us. His divine life is the source of divine love. The love of God gives, and gives again. This love that was in Christ is a revelation of God. There stands the cross, a manifestation of God's love for man. "For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

This divine love should be very practical in our lives, and be so worked out in us that men should behold the wonder of God's love. In Rom. 13 we are taught that love is the fulfilling of the law. We think of Joseph sold into Egypt by his brothers, ill-treated—and yet he showed a noble spirit. His choice of righteousness was definite and positive. He suffered wrong but remained generous; lied about he was cast into prison, forgotten by those whom he befriended; and yet without complaint! If this could be true of one in the Old Testament days, how should we act today, since we have the Holy Ghost shed abroad in our hearts? Surely, we should heed Paul's council when he said, "Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good."

God does not demand of us perfect service, but He does desire of us a perfect love. A little blind girl tried very hard to write a letter to her father, who was away on a long journey. Strings were put across the furniture, and with great effort she tried to make large letters. It was very crude and full of errors, but exceedingly precious to the father. The production was not perfect, but the love was perfect. This is the perfection that God desires. Through love to Him, we are to be servants one of another. Christian love can only be possessed by a regenerated person. Without salvation we can have natural affection, but Christian love is the fruit of the Spirit. It is unselfish. "Love suffereth long and is kind; love envieth not; love vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up, doth not behave itself unseemly, seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, taketh no account of evil; rejoiceth not in unrighteousness, but rejoiceth with the truth." And in I John 3:16 we find, "Hereby perceive we the love of God, because He laid down His life for us: and we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren."

Everywhere are hungry souls destitute of His grace. Because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Spirit, we should show forth the love of Christ. In II Cor. 4:10: "Always bearing about in our body the dying of the Lord Jesus." Jesus said, "Without Me you can do nothing." And Paul said, "I can do all things through Christ Which strengtheneth me." This ministry is to be in the power of the Spirit, for the "fruit of the Spirit is love." Fruit belongs to character, and this fruit of love is to characterize all

"Working Out Your Own Salvation"

JAMES S. COOK, Dallas Center, Iowa

It is not my purpose to criticise, but to warn those who believe that 'salvation' is a matter of 'works'; for I can recall when I was of that opinion myself. And I think Paul must have had an idea like that when he was persecuting the early church. He too was in dead earnest, and you recall he said, "I verily thought with myself that I ought to do many things;" and he goes on to enumerate them, which he found were contrary to the will of God. So it is not what we think, but what God has said about it.

Now let us turn to Phil. 2:12, from which our subject is taken. At first glance it may seem to carry out the thought of our subject. But let us read it carefully, "Wherefore, my beloved, as ye have always obeyed, not as in my presence only but now much more in my absence, 'Work out our own salvation with fear and trembling'!" But please, don't stop right in the middle of this glorious truth, read on: "For it is God which worketh in you both to will and to do of his good pleasure." Cannot you see it is not your working and doing, but God working in and thru you?

How well I recall when a very small boy, that I was always wanting to drive my father's horses, and they were pretty lively. So my father would often give me the tail end of the lines. But I was not satisfied with that; I could see I was not getting all the honor, so I would slip my hands out in front of his. Things went along quite well as long as he managed from behind. But when I got them into my hands alone, you can imagine what happened very soon. No, it is God working in us. It is His unseen hand that is keeping things in line. I may be, and no doubt am, in the foreground, taking the credit to myself, doing a lot of boasting, but it only shows the self-conceit in me.

When but a boy at home, my father bought a cow from a neighbor one time. The neighbor was kind enough to let my father have the cow to milk, while he worked out. Now that is a very good idea of what I used to think salvation was—something you had to work out, and that took a lifetime to do it; and if you failed you lose it all. Let us thank God that it is nothing like that. W.P.A. would be better than that, for they do not expect much. Oh, my brother, when "God so loved the world that He gave His only only begotten Son," he made a gift out of it. The moment you give or do something for it, it is no longer a gift. Here is the way Paul puts it in Rom. 11:5: "And if by grace, then it is no more works; otherwise grace is no more grace." And in Eph. 2:8,9: "For by grace are you saved thru faith; and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God; not of works, lest any many should boast."

And after all there is no salvation unless it is accompanied with a new birth. Jesus told Nicodemus, "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God" (John 3:3). And again, "That which is born of the flesh is flesh, and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit" (John 3:6). And in John 1:12,13; "But as many as received Him, to them gave He power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on His name; which were born not of blood, nor of the will of man, but of God." You must be born again, and from above, and become a new creature in Christ Jesus. It is not even the old nature made over, but a new man.

Is there not some place for works? Most assuredly. We do not grow into grace; but once we have been planted there, we ought to grow, and bring forth fruit. That is what vine yards and fruit trees are for. And, my brother, when I hear a lot of boasting and can see or find no sign of fruit, I have a right to place a question mark in front of that life. Perhaps God would not; but He tells me, that "by their fruit ye shall know them." These are days when the world should be seeing some of the fruits of the Spirit, of the professing church. And after all, when we can see and experience what God has done for us poor lost sinners, we ought to work our finger nails off for Him, and for this He has promised rewards.

discipies. This love is essential in soul winning. Great soul winners have always been men and women of compassion. John Knox cried, "Give me Scotland or I die." The showing forth of the love of God in us and through us is the need of the world toay. The gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ is a gospel of love and not of hate. The Holy Ghost shed abroad in our hearts will cause us to be separated, cleansed, joyful, useful; and with the Word of God we can go forth to bring men to Christ.

Then this love of God in our hearts can make us a blessing to other Christians. We need one another today. Many are sorely tried and burdened. Parents and children have been separated because of the demands of war. How we need Spirit-filled Christians who can sympathize, and care enough to pray, and love with a heart that God has touched. Many today do not realize how thirsty they are until they contact One from Whom the "rivers of living water" are flowing. If this love of God in our lives touches needy souls, they will touch others, and then others. Thus God works. May it be true of us as was said of Jonathan. "And Jonathan, Saul's son, arose and went to David into the wood and strengthened his hand in God."

So finally, "Beloved, let us love, for love is of God." "The love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost;" therefore, let us be filled with the Spirit in order that through "the love of the Spirit" we may love.

Remember "ONLY GOD MATTERS"

Some Things Eternity Will Reveal

By ALBERT L. FLORY, Pastor, San Diego, Calif.

"The eternal God is thy refuge and underneath are the everlasting arms."

In a previous issue we wrote concerning the eternity of God's plan with respect to the lives of men. In this article we shall endeavor to persue some thoughts in connection with the eternity of God's plan related to Christians in their trials; the unsaved in their punishment; and the nations in their activity. We are not attempting to present anything exhaustive, but to simulate thinking along these lines; approaching these problems with an understanding that they must be dealt with on an eternal scope.

One of the hardest truths for Christians to accept is the truth of Rom. 8:28: "All things work together for good to them that love God . . . " When this truth is applied to trials, Christians often say: "My unsaved friend is getting along wonderfully well; he doesn't seem to have the problems in his life that I have." These problems are generally concerned with financial troubles, sorrow, forsaken friendships, humiliation, ill-health, or the like. Our problems always seem harder to bear than any that has been known to men before. How often we have been forced to I Peter 1:7: "The trial of your faith, being much more precious than gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise and honor and glory at the appearing of Jesus Christ." In this promise we find a refuge that the unsaved man does not have in the comforts of life perhaps denied to us but possessed by him. The trial is precious and we can know that eternity will reveal it so.

One of the most radiant Christian faces that we have been privileged to see is the face of a girl who has spent many, many months on her back in a cast. Much to the sorrow of our congregation she was recently placed in another. "Why?" our people ask. We cannot explain it, but the face is still even more radiant with the glory of the Lord, and we can rest assured that eternity will reveal this trial to be precious. The greatest comfort lines ever penned have come from those who have gone through the most severe trials. The things which we personally have learned and obtained, which have added up to something, are those things which have come to us the hard way.

Upon reading II Cor. 11:23 ff., we marvel at the things which happened in the life of Paul. We can imagine that Paul might have asked, "Why, oh God, must I be beaten with rods? Why did you allow that stoning to take place? Why the many perils? Why the weariness and pain? Why the cold and nakedness?" In fact even we wonder and question why so much befell this man of God. On the other hand, when we get to heaven and see the abundant reward which God has for Paul, I can imagine that some of us will wish that we had endured some of these persecutions in his stead. Eternity will certainly reveal that God has done all things well in allowing trials to befall Christian people. The unsaved man may have his momentary pleasures; we are building for eternity.

Eternity will reveal that God has done all things well in his dealings with the unsaved in their punishment. We come now to one of those problems so often taken up by the scoffer in this fashion: "Can God be a God of love and allow people to suffer in hell?" Or, he might say, "I could never be happy in heaven if I knew someone was suffering in hell." Many seek relief from the problem in cherishing the hope that, after all, the Bible does not teach that people will suffer forever in hell. The writer had at one time cherished this hope and perused the Scriptures with the thought that, perhaps some day, God would reconcile the unsaved unto himself. This was a nice thought, but would not stand the test of an examination of the Scriptures.

The problem seems hard to us, looking at it from a finite man's viewpoint, because it is a part of God's infinite plan. It is not strange that infinite wisdom is hard to be understood by finite minds. We can, however, understand something of why God is going to do thus and so with the unsaved. We try to bring it down to our own reasoning by illustration and say, "If a loving father had a rebellious member in his household who was going to poison the others in that household, would he not confine the rebellious member that he might save the others?" Again, in response to the second argument we say, "There is no reason why I cannot be happy in heaven with people suffering in hell, when I have a degree of happiness on this earth with suffering going on all around me."

This method of reasoning relieves the problem somewhat, and we reason in the same way concerning the scores of other arguments that the eternal punishment scoffer presents; as a result, we feel more or less satisfied.

However, our mind is not yet thoroughly satisfied on the subject. When we look at this problem on an eternal scope, it takes on a different aspect. We cannot seem to fully understand the why of God's dealings with the unsaved, any more than we can fully understand God's dealings with the lives of men and with the Christian in his trial. For a complete understanding of this problem, we must wait until God's revelation in the eternities. In His eternal day we shall in reality have the mind of Christ, and shall then see this problem as God sees it. Seeing God's dealings with the unsaved on an eternal scope, we would not have it any other way than the way God has planned it, though we are now prone to feel sorry for the unsaved friends whom we cannot persuade to accept Christ. It is our opinion that if we could understand this problem fully, as we shall in God's eternity, we might be so satisfied with God's treatment of our unsaved friends that we might pass off our responsibility of witnessing to them about Christ with the thought, "They are getting what they deserve anyway." Eternity will reveal God to have done all things well with respect to the unsaved in their punishment, and superficial thinking along this line will either land us with the scoffer, or with those who hope the Scriptures provide a future hope for the unsaved after death. Let us look at this problem in relation to eternity, and we can rest assured that eternity will prove God to have done this thing well.

The third problem about which we desire to stimulate thinking is brought to our attention by the often-asked question, "Why doesn't God do something to stop the war?" Of course students of the prophetic Word know that upon His second advent to this earth, our Lord and Savior is going to put an end to all wars. When the throne of David is established in Jerusalem and David's greater Son takes the scepter of righteousness, the nations will beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks. But men are dying by the thousands in the awful carnage of World War II, and we are asked, "Why does He tarry; why does God allow this slaughter to go on; why doesn't God do something now?"

The nations have long since rebelled against God and turned their backs upon Him. Can we expect, or would we want, God to smile with satisfaction upon sin and not allow punishment to fall upon evil-doers? Men, and the nations which they make up, have chosen sin rather than the remedy of the cross. Sin, continued, results in war and bloodshed, in addition to many other disasters. Christ could come and stop the war now, yes; but it seems as though He is letting sin run its course until the cup of iniquity is full. Why the present carnage? We do not fully know, but the whole plan of God revealed in His Word indicates that God must allow sin to run its course before it is finally judged. Before sin has completely run its course, however, the child of God has the promise that he will be "caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air" (I Thess. 4:17). Then the awful events recorded in Rev. chap. 6-19 will take place upon this earth—events that will shade in their terror anything that this old world has yet seen, which events will be climaxed by the establishment of Christ on the throne of David. Sin must be judged before everlasting righteousness can come. God certainly knows what He is doing when He allows the bloodshed to go on.

In God's eternity we can be assured that we will be able to understand fully why millions of men have died on the field of battle in the first World War, and why the casualty lists are mounting daily in this war. We shall then see that God had to allow these things to happen that he might stamp sin from our presence forever.

Our Lord "doeth all things well." He allows Christians to pass through trials that he might make them stronger. He must punish the unsaved in hell that the best interests of all might be served. He allows nations to wage wars that sin might run its course, that it might bring in everlasting righteousness. We cannot fully understand it now but eternity will reveal it so.

In the next and concluding article on this series we shall look at some of the brighter things which only eternity can fully reveal.

News from Brethren CHURCHES

LIMESTONE, TENN.

Some weeks ago, we were privileged to have with us for three services Rev. and Mrs. Leo Polman and daughters, Elaine and Joyce. It was a rare treat to listen to the excellent music rendered by this talented family. Also the splendid messages brought by Bro. Polman were greatly enjoyed and appreciated by everyone.

Saturday and Sunday, Jan. 24-25, were days of special blessing. From Saturday evening until Sunday afternoon we had as our guests ten young men representing the Boys' Brotherhood of Roanoke, Va. They were accompanied by their sponsor, Mr. Richardson, and also their song director, Mr. Percell. A profitable meeting was conducted with our boys on Saturday evening. It was a real inspiration to have these 12 men in our Bible School and worship service on Sunday morning.

On Sunday evening we had as our guests a fine representation of the Presbyterian congregation at Washington College. The young people of that church had charge of the Christian Endeavor service. A nice program was rendered. Mr. Warner, the athletic coach and member of the faculty, delivered a challenging message equally adapted to both young and old. At the evening worship service, Dr. Warren, president of the school and pastor of the Presbyterian Church, was the speaker. The message was very impressive and one that we shall not soon forget.

ALLENTOWN, PA.

I want to thank the Lord for the privilege that was mine to conduct an evangelistic meeting for the First Brethren Church of Allentown, Pa., during two cold weeks, Jan. 5-18.

Taking into consideration the circumstances that preceded the revival, the Lord wrought a miracle, and to Him be the glory!

The spirit of the church members was fine, with a large percentage of them active and attending the meetings. Personal workers were busy both outside and inside the church. Many prayed harder than they had ever prayed before. God gave the victory, and we praise Him for the souls that came to know Christ as Sovior.

We enjoyed the fellowship of the pastor, Rev. J. L. Gingrich, and found him to be a willing co-worker in personal work visitation. Bro. Gingrich is well liked by his members, and is doing a fine piece of work in our church there.

Of great aid in the meeting was the faithful choir, led by Bob Wetzel, a popular radio announcer, who also led the singing and did solo work.

Our home during the meetings was with Mr. and Mrs. George Deifer, and we shall never be able to thank them enough for their hospitality. We felt very much at ease in their home, having stayed there for several weeks many years ago, when we were selling Bibles one summer as a student. Mrs. Deifer is one of the charter members of our church there.

The members of the church were also generous in inviting the pastor and evangelist to their homes for meals, and we appreciated both the meals and the fellowship.

One unique feature of the work at Allentown is the Daniel League, a boys club in which each member takes a covenant to live a life absolutely separated from the world. I attended two of their meetings, and they certainly know how to pray, and they love to do personal work.

Will you pray for us in Waynesboro as Brother Gingrich holds an evangelistic meeting here Feb. 16—Mar. 1?

—R. D. Crees.

VICTORY REVIVAL—CANTON, OHIO

Our church at Whittier, Calif., granted us leave of absence to answer some of the many calls for evangelism which the Lord was sending to us. We shall be absent from the Whittier church for 10 Sundays. Ralph Colburn, a young ordained minister who is soon to become an active pastor of a California Brethren Church, is our supply pastor during our absence.

Our first VICTORY REVIVAL was at Canton, O., First Brethren Church. This church has passed through several periods of severe tests. It has suffered much from a "divisive spirit" from within. There have been several exoduses of members, withdrawals, departures, which have greatly reduced its numerical membership. But it is most fortunate in securing a promising young minister, Bro. O'Neal, from Grace Seminary as its pastor. He will graduate from the seminary this spring and become resident pastor. It was our privilege to receive his parents into the membership of the Sunnyside Brethren Church some years ago. We fully believe that when he is able to devote full time to the Canton church it will go on from victory to victory. He was able to be present for only one week of the revival.

There was a real, reviving revival within the church. Without counting them in the numerical results, many responded to the open challenges to move forward as a testimony and pledge of yieldedness and unity and faithfulness. The fellowship among these was of the very best. The Canton church is ready to move forward unitedly and zealously for the Lord.

There were 15 first time confessions, most of whom were gleaned as a harvest from the Sunday School. We believe with all our heart that we must put forth three times the effort in every particular to secure the same numerical results as ten years ago. 15 souls won for our Lord is a VICTORY REVIVAL these days.

The first week of our victory revival at the First Church, Johnstown, Pa., has been one of wonderful fellowship, good crowds, fine growing interest; and already souls are taking their stand for the Lord. We are enjoying working with this great church of which we were pastor for 14 years.

—Charles H. Ashman, Evangelist.

NEWS BRIEFS From Our Workers

At the Torrey Memorial Bible Conference held at the Bible Institute of Los Angeles the last week of January. Dr. Paul Bauman, pastor of the Second Brethren Church of LOS ANGELES, delivered five messages on the subject of Biblical Archaeology. Nearly 300 new slides were prepared for these messages, and the attendance at these early evening sessions was the largest it has ever been.

The evangelistic meetings conducted at the First Brethren Church of LONG BEACH, CALIF., by Bro. Leo Polman, Secretary of Publications of The Brethren Missionary Herald Co., opened with four decisions. The average attendance for the first week at the afternoon meetings for boys and girls, in spite of much competition, was 205. And Friday the 13th proved to be anything but an unlucky day, for a number of the children accepted Christ on that afternoon.

By mistake, recently in new briefs R. E. Gingrich was named as pastor of the Allentown, Pa., church. J. L. Gingrich is pastor at Allentown.

The First Brethren Church of the ELLET District of Akron, O., has called Brethren C. W. Mayes and A. D. Cashman for a three weeks' revival, beginning Mar. 1. The plan is to have Rev. Cashman do the preaching the first week, and Rev. Mayes preach during the last two weeks. In addition to the preaching ministry, Rev. Cashman will carry on an intensive personal evangelistic campaign in the homes of the community during the first week, and three days each of the last two weeks. In this way the church and community will have the advantage of a double-headed evangelistic campaign in both the homes and in the pulpit. The church feels fortunate in being able to secure the services of two such capable men in these respective fields of evangelism.

Bro. Harold Parks, pastor at GARWIN, IA., writes, "God is wonderfully blessing here. He has opened up an opportunity that is beyond words. He has given me a class of 65 boys of all denominations in the Y.M.C.A. in Marshalltown. 15 Precious souls have made their stand for Christ. Each one is learning 50 passages of Scripture, for which they will be rewarded with a gold cross. Pray for this great work."

On Jan. 25, five people from the Brethren mission in MANSFIELD, O., were baptized at the W. 10th St. Brethren Church at Ashland, O., and received into the membership of the latter church until the Mansfield church is fully organized. One of the pastors of the district says of the Mansfield work, of which Bro. A. D. Cashman is pastor. "That work is growing as is no other Brethren work of which we know, in proportion to the size of the work."

275 people attended a special district rally at STERLING, O., recently to learn what the Bible teaches about the Christian's relation to human government. The subject was discussed by Bro. R. D. Barnard, pastor of the First Brethren Church of Dayton.

A beautiful flourescent cross on the front of the church tower at the Second Brethren Church of LOS ANGELES has been donated recently by one of the members of the church.

The time of the Sunday morning broadcast sponsored by the Ellet Brethren Church over WAKR, AKRON, has been changed from 7:45 A.M. to 8:30 A.M.

The Ellet Brethren Church enjoyed the ministry of two of our foreign missionaries on Sunday, Feb. 8. In the morning Rev. ROBERT WILLIAMS, together with Mrs. Williams, presented an inspiring and challenging message, showing how God marvelously preserved them throughout the Zamzam disaster, and indicated their desire to begin their labor for the Lord in the field where they feel He is directing them. In the evening REV. ORVILLE JOBSON spoke in both the Christian Endeavor and evening worship service. Both groups were stirred by his powerful presentation of the challenge of the Word of God in human lives. One decision for Christ was made at the close of the evening service. The Williams appeared also before appreciative audiences in both the Evangelical Church of Greensburg, O., and the Emmanuel Baptist Church in Kenmore, O. Two graduates of Grace Theological seminary are pastors of these churches, Rev. Harold Etling of the former and Rev. C. J. Pugh of the latter. Bro. Williams spoke at the chapel services in the Akron Bible Institute on the evening of Feb. 5, where an appreciative group of students received his testimony to God's grace with burning hearts.

SPECIAL MEETINGS NOW IN PROGRESS

Pray for them

Peru, Ind., Feb. 23-Mar. 8. Victory revival conducted by Bro. Charles H. Ashman.

Martinsburg, Pa., Feb. 22-Mar. 8. Revival.

The war situation is greatly effecting those of our churches who are contemplating a building program. The bank which financed the purchase of a site for the new church to be constructed by the First Brethren Church of PHLADELPHIA, and which has indicated repeatedly that they would finance the building program, now flatly refuses the loan. The HAGERSTOWN, MD., church also finds it impossible to borrow money, and may be forced to put a temporary roof on their basement unit and worship in it until sufficient funds are available to complete it. Both groups are looking to the Lord to open closed doors if that is His will. Your prayers to that end would be greatly appreciated.

The First Brethren bulletin of Long Beach carries this interesting item:

Rev. Everett B. Niswonger, of Dayton, O., ordered another of the pastor's books, "LIGHT FROM BIBLE PROPHECY," for an Ohio doctor—an M.D. He said that a sister of his bought a book for her husband, who is a doctor. The doctor is a babe in Christ. Together they read the book. Then the doctor took the book with him when he went with several other doctor friends on a hunting expedition in the Canadian wilds. He said that when these doctors were in camp, in the evenings, as they sat around the fire, they read the book. As a result the doctors are wanting copies that they may send on to their friends. Have you ever thought what this book might do if it were placed in the hands of someone who is puzzled and perplexed over the world conditions today? It certainly would be a testimony showing them how, in the present world strife, God's eternal purposes are being worked out exactly as the prophets said. There are still a few of these books to be had. The price is $1.00."

Place your order with The Brethren Missionary Herald Co., 3326 S. Calhoun St., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Something of the spirit of our Brethren Churches in those places where the war threatened to be a handicap can be seen from the following excerpts from the WHITTIER, CALIF., bulletin, dated during that period when the Southern California churches were compelled to be "blacked out:"

"Prayer Meeting this Wednesday night as usual. The work of the Lord must go on, blackout or not. We can worship in the dark. Jesus is the light of the world! . . . LOS ANGELES MISSION meeting tomorrow night. The mission of winning lost souls is just as imperative as ever. War or no war, souls are lost and must be rescued. Any inconvenience we may suffer because of a blackout is as nothing compared to what Christ suffered that we might be saved and that we might carry the message of salvation to the lost men of Los Angeles. Let's go as usual!"

Among the items of interest from the annual meeting of the LA VERNE, CALIF., church, reports from all departments show that about $15,000 was brought during 1941 "as a tribute to the goodness of our Lord Jesus Christ." The church bulletin adds, "large sums of money were brought as free-will offerings unto the Lord. No other methods are used in securing funds." Bro. Donald Carter is pastor of this church.

Bro. Wm. H. Clough of UNIONTOWN, PA., has begun a community Bible study class at his church. This class, which will be conducted on Monday evenings, began with studies in personal evangelism.

The Third Brethren Church of LOS ANGELES, of which Bro. Conard Sandy is pastor, is awarding a beautiful aluminum Scripture-text plaque to the first person who brings into their Bible School 10 people who have never been there before. The six who were recently baptized and received into this church brought up the membership to 70. A branch of the Culter Academy, which is known throughout Southern California as an excellent Christian day school, was started in this church early in February. This nonsectarian but Biblically sound five day-a-week school includes grades 1-8, at a cost of $62.50 for one-half year which can be payable in installments.

The North Riverdale Church of DAYTON, O., sends in this item: "On Jan. 4, 1942 Miss Mabel Kinsey and Dr. George Gustin were united in marriage. The ceremony was held at the First Brethren Church of this city and conducted by Norman H. Uphouse. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy H. Kinsey and is well known to the many readers of the Herald. Dr. Gustin has a practice here with his offices on North Main St. Both are attending the new work. Our prayer for them is that they may have a happy married life."

Many items that would be of interest in these columns are not usable because the church calendars containing the news are stale by the time they reach the Herald offices. If you have been holding the calendars for a month or six weeks before mailing them, how about sending them in oftener? And if you do not have The Brethren Missionary Herald Co. on your mailing list be sure to add it today.

"That They May Be One"

By GENE FARRELL

Even the casual observer of our Lord's prayer in John 17 would have to admit that its predominant theme is: "That they may be one, even as we are one." Oneness, unity,—this seemed to be His primary concern; for He knew that the evangelization of the world would be hindered most by an unhealthy, factional church. He did not fear the world, for He knew the power that had been given the church: "greater is He that is in you than he that is in the world." Our Lord had in mind the subtle, subversive influences which would work within the body itself, thus rendering it impotent to the destructive forces without.

We all know, or should know, that the counteraction of disease is best effected by the maintenance of our resistance, not by destroying or avoiding the disease itself. If we would be healthy, we must keep the organism (our bodies) strong and virile. This should be our first concern.

A similar analogy may be drawn from the politics of our present day. The great need is for unity within our borders, not necessarily in the world. Will Rogers once said that the Atlantic and the Pacific are the greatest friends of our country, but they would be powerless to defend us before the onslaughts of a nation divided against itself. Those who really study the situation know that the greatest menace to our welfare is "fifth column" activity, not the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo Alliance. And we may be certain that the dictators know this; even as the devil knows what is needed to defeat the evangelistic activity of the church.

All pastors know (some too well!) that a congregation can be either "his field or his force." His members, if carnal, can either cause him to spend most of his time patching up differences between loquacious and sensitive brethren, or, if spiritual, they can bring him great joy as they dwell together in "the unity of the Spirit;" for by doing so they give him an opportunity to reach the unsaved.

Some believers would highly resent the accusation "carnal," for they believe themselves to be the most spiritual. Actually, however, the word fits them perfectly; for the carnal Christian is anyone who is not walking "in the Spirit." It is true that they have been blessed with gifts of interpretation, faith, etc., but they seem to read unmoved the words of Paul: "But though I have the gift of prophecy and understand all mysteries and all knowledge, and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not love, I am nothing." They seem to forget that the Pharisee justified himself and went away condemned, whereas the publican condemned himself and went away justified. They seem to be blind to the fact that it is their own stubborn pride many times that is moving them to defend some interpretation of the Word, rather than their love for the Lord Jesus Christ. If they truly loved Him, they would love one another, "out of a pure heart, fervently." Do we show our love for the Lord Jesus when we "earnestly contend for the faith?" Yes, certainly, but let us make a difference between our private convictions and the established fundamentals. We may be right, whereas the fundamentals are most certainly right; and, if those with whom we contend are firmly fixed in the fundamentals (born again, separated, and witnessing Christians), who are we that we should force our opinions upon them, thus causing a division in the body? Love is always 'the end of the commandment," but because it is so contrary to us it is always the first fundamental which we seek to avoid. Love requires humility, and humility is certainly foreign to the flesh. We will do anything, "give all our goods to feed the poor, or our body to be burned" —engage in evangelistic activity, etc., anything which will act as a balm to our conscience when we read: "And above all things have fervent love among yourselves."

The right kind of conduct toward one who is "overtaken in a fault" is most important if believers would live in "the unity of the Spirit." This conduct has a three-fold aspect: (1) Reticence—before the brethren; (2) Reliance—upon the Spirit; (3) Restoration—of the one at fault.

1. Reticence before the brethren—"If any man offend not in word the same is a perfect man and able also to bridle the whole body" (James 3:2).

When we speak, though ever so softly, about a brother who is at fault, we think that we do no harm; but the Scripture says, "Behold, how great a matter a little fire kindleth." How many a forest of stalwart testimonies has been levelled to the earth by a seemingly harmless word ("a little fire") that kindled into a raging inferno, sweeping all before it! How many a conflagration (schism) might have been averted had Christians truly taken God's Word for it that "the tongue is a fire, a world of iniquity"—"an unruly evil, full of deadly poison." We say that our wisdom "descendeth from above." God says it is "earthly, sensual, devilish." We claim that our knowledge is perfect. God says, "If any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man, and able also to bridle the whole body." "Who is a wise man, and endued with knowledge among you? let him show out of a good conversation his works with meekness of wisdom." Have we offended our brother? Then we are in the wrong, no matter how accurate our observation might have been."

"The tongue can no man tame . . . " We like to make exceptions to this rule, but we soon find that it is iron-clad.

Have you never had the Spirit of God pull you up short when on the verge of speaking evil of a brother? Have you never found yourself swallowing a word, or leaving a sentence without meaning, as the Spirit said: "Sufferth long and is kind"? Often it is only by the most definite kind of committal that we can keep silence, especially when in the company of those we love most dearly, and in circumstances which press us beyond our customary composure. Then how true His Word becomes: "the tongue can no man tame" —as we trust God, and Him only, to give us a testimony similar to that of the Master who, when accused falsely, "held his peace" and "answered nothing."

2. Reliance—upon the Spirit—"Likewise the Spirit also helpeth our infirmities, for we know not what we should pray for as we ought, but the Spirit maketh intercession for us with groanings which cannot be uttered. And He that searcheth the hearts knoweth what is the mind of the Spirit, because He maketh intercession for the saints according to the will of God (Rom. 8:26, 27).

If the exceeding spiritual riches of these verses were only partially exhausted by the brethren there would be less private talking and more "unspoken requests."

"UNSPOKEN REQUESTS"

"If any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man, and able also to bridle the whole body." —James 3:2.

Two men discerned a fault in a brother.
One of them prayed, but alas, the other Sought out a few of the saints that day—
"That you," he explained, "may know how to pray."

The man who had prayed arose from his knees
Silently seeking His Lord to please,
Sought out his brother—his fault expressed;
Said to the saints, "Unspoken request."

Sacred to God are the things we discern.
"Offend not in word"—how hardly we learn!
"Know how to pray" is often a snare
To slander our brother and keep us from prayer.

THE EASTER OFFERING

The supreme business of the Christian Church is "to know Christ and to make Him known." Those of us who have been "born from above," and therefore have been made partakers of the divine nature, certainly will not fail to do all that we can to carry out our Lord's last great command. "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature," still remains the marching order for every Christian. "If any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of His" (Rom. 8:9). Is it possible that any man can say that he has the Spirit of Christ, and yet is not enthusiastic in making Christ known to the world for which He died? We believe absolutely that one of the supreme tests of new birth is to be found in our missionary enthusiasm. Brethren Churches of the "Grace" persuasion never have failed, and will not now fail, even in these distressing times, to see that the supreme business of the Christian Church remains supreme. God first!

THIS ISSUE

Our February issue, which we frequently refer to as "the Zamzam number," dealt almost entirely with our work in Africa. 2,500 extra copies of that number were printed. The Long Beach Church itself took 500 copies, and they went out "like hot cakes." This special March issue, as will be noted throughout, deals almost entirely with our work in Latin America. The fact of the matter is, that special contributions from Africa have not reached us recently, presumably due to war conditions. Fortunately our South American missionaries bestirred themselves, and thus enabled us to put out this special South American issue. We are printing 2,500 copies of this issue also, and they will be sent out to the pastors of our churches who have indicated their desire to use them.

NEW HANDBOOK

We have just sent the page proofs of the new handbook to our printer in Cleveland, Ohio, and the finished book will be in the mails at the earliest possible moment. This handbook will contain a fund of information concerning our foreign work, and will be profusely illustrated. A copy of this book will be promptly mailed to every member of The Foreign Missionary Society of The Brethren Church. Anyone else desiring one may secure it free by dropping a card to our office here in Long Beach.

THE EVANGELIZING LATIN AMERICA

With this World War, the nations of South America are more and more coming to the front. The world is beginning to realize that South America is a very important continent. It is the one continent that has a great future before it. If our Lord shall tarry, Latin America may furnish the greatest battle ground for the church in the near future. The people down there have long grown weary of mossy, musty, old Roman Catholic cathedrals. They want a religion with a living Christ; not with a dead Christ.

A number of years ago, when we made a trip through some of the countries of South America, we were struck with the fact that everywhere, everywhere there were crosses, crosses, crosses. Everywhere, everywhere, it was a dead Christ that we beheld. Only once did we see an emblem of a broken grave, reminding us of a living Christ. That was in a cemetery near Rio Cuarto. We took a picture of it, and are presenting it to our readers here. South America knows little of the Christ of the resurrection. What this means can be inferred from the words of the apostle Paul: "If Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain . . . and if Christ be not raised your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins. Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished. If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable" (I Cor. 15:14-19).

There is a Protestant faith mission in Ecuador that has installed a 10,000 watt transmitter and is reaching 90,000,000 Spanish speaking people in Latin America with the gospel. God only knows what this will mean for the future of the gospel in that continent. The President of Ecuador says: "All this country is witness to the great efforts made by this movement to serve the country in the fullest meaning of the word." Dan Gilbert says: "The evangelization of America (meaning both North and South America) is the first requisite for national defense and for the insuring of victory over the enemy nations. The evangelization of the world is the first requisite for the preservation of peace, once the war is won." Brethren, at this Easter time, will do their bit once again for the evangelization of our sister continent.

A BOOK ON RUSSIA

At the urgent request of the Fleming H. Revell Company, the editor is now writing the last pages of a book on the subject, "Russian Events and Bible Prophecy." The entire book is an exposition of the 38th and 39th chapters of Ezekiel. Just now, when Russia, Germany and Japan stand out so prominently in world events, a critical study of these two chapters and related chapters in the Word of God are of intense interest. How often we have been asked since the war with Japan: "Is Japan one of the kings of the east (Rev. 16:12), and is the way now being prepared for the 'kings of the east' to march all the way to Palestine beyond the river Euphrates?"

This book will contain anywhere from 150 to 200 pages, and the Revell Company agree to publish it, even in these times when printing costs money, at the low price of $1.00. Anyone wishing a copy may order it by writing to the editor, or to the Brethren Missionary Herald Co. at Fort Wayne, Ind.

OUR MISSIONARIES

At this writing, the Jobsons are in the east, where they are making Herculean efforts to obtain passports and passage for Africa. If Jobson doesn't "get there," then it will not be his fault. Jobson, being the Field Superintendent of our African work, will probably be given "priority" by the State Department and will be the first to reach the field. Mr. and Mrs. Williams, it would seem, should have the first right to passage, but we cannot control the forces of a war-distressed Government these days. Temporarily, they are taking care of the spiritual welfare of the Brethren at Udell, Iowa. In June, the battle will begin to get Mr. and Mrs. Garner Hoyt to the field. Garner will be an extremely valuable missionary "from the word Go," inasmuch as he already is proficient in the use of the French language. We are praying that Miss Snyder, who gave us that splendid write-up of her experiences of the Zamzam, will be able to complete that journey in the near future.

The editor has not lost hope at all that the Lord will strengthen the body of Mrs. Hathaway, and that every hindrance to the continuance of their work in Africa, for which they are so well fitted—the land they so dearly love—will be removed.

Miss Mabel Crawford is now at some seaport in Africa, praying for passage. Not only is her furlough due and overdue, but her physical condition demands the year of rest in the homeland. The Fosters' furlough is also due; and, they too should come home. But, doubtless they expect to "stand by the guns" until someone else can reach Africa to man them.

The furlough year of Dr. Floyd Taber is also due. It appears that brother and sister Taber are getting a bit of change; and, apparently are going to spend their furlough in Bangui (F.E.A.) in the service of the Free French Government. Dr. Taber's medical prowess is greatly needed in the hospital at Bangui at this time. He will be returning to the field as soon as possible, after which the governmental powers of Bangui may look with greater favor than ever upon all these fine missionaries of ours. Dr. Taber's absence from the mission stations at present, when missionaries are so badly needed, seems like a blow to our work, but his service for the Government may prove to be a stroke of great value to the progress of our work in French Equatorial Africa. We will take it that this "loan" to the Free French Government is also within the will of God.

Mr. and Mrs. Morrill are hard at work in Grace Seminary at Winona Lake, better fitting themselves for the tasks that will be theirs when once this war is over; or, when once the Government will release them to return to the field.

The Sickels are having difficulty in securing governmental consent for their return to Argentina. Again the condition is wholly due to the war; but, we are quite hopeful that they will be able to start their journey at any time now. Latin America, and especially Argentina, has long been proclaimed to be "the most difficult field in the world;" yet, the work goes forward and prospects are really brighter than they have been for many a moon. It took the Christian faith 400 years to break through the barriers and become a flourishing organization in the old Roman Empire. In far less time than that, if our Lord shall tarry, we hope that South America will turn her eyes to the Lord in a true saving faith. South America may yet prove to be the richest missionary field in the world. South America is still young in development. Her resources are enormous. Her doors are wide open. Her multitudes hunger for a virile, living faith. They are sick and tired of the formal pagan religion that parades under Christian names, but does not satisfy the soul. While the night seems to be settling over other continents, the eye of faith beholds the rising of the sun over our "sister continent." "He that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him" (Psa. 126:6).

A SIGNIFICANT GIFT

An incident related in Inland Africa is not only touching but is quite significant. We are told that the natives of a church at Blukwa, Congo, have given an offering of approximately $40.00, requesting that it should be used to furnish Bibles for the poor negroes of the United States. In the Belgian Congo a native wage is usually around 5c a day, and that is nearly always taken from the natives by taxes. The women are supposed to produce the living directly from the bowels of the earth.

Truly, this African gift compels us to say of them, as Paul said of the Macedonians: "The abundance of their joy and their deep poverty abounded unto the riches of their liberality" (II Cor. 8:2).

But, what of the significance of this gift? As civilized nations are returning to old pagan ways and ideals and as "civilized man" seems determined to revert back to the savagery of barbarism, we are wondering whether, should our Lord tarry, the day is not far distant when the natives of Africa may not be returning to us the light of the gospel that we have been sending to them.

THINK IT OVER

"THE NEED OF LIVING FOR CHRIST —A Hindu was heard to remark, 'When I read the story of the life and work of Jesus, I want to be A Christian but when I observe the life of those who claim to be Christians, I am content to remain a Hindu."

Easter Messages FROM MEMBERS OF THE FOREIGN BOARD

HOW MUCH MUST I GIVE FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS THIS EASTER?

By H. W. KOONTZ, Roanoke, Va.

This is a question that every member of The Brethren Church must ask himself between now and the time the foreign mission offering is received. It is an important question for upon its answer depends the future progress of missions in the Brethren denomination.

Rev. Koontz

There is a simple, but effective way, of discerning the exact amount that each Christian should give.

First, we must be brought to see a world in dire need of the saving gospel of Jesus Christ. Recently I heard two men in the following conversation. One said to the other: "I believe the home mission cause is a good one, and I am for it; but I never was much interested in giving toward foreign missions. You know we still have so much work to do here in the homeland." Such a viewpoint will never produce offerings for the evangelizing of the world beyond the borders of our land, nor will it be an incentive to do very much at home. The first matter of importance is to ascertain the need for taking the message to the peoples beyond the seas.

There are at least two things to do to accurately find out this need. We must first of all discount what the Word of God has to say. The Bible has some very definite commands regarding the subject of foreign missions. Whereever God gives a command, we can be mighty sure it is because there is a great need. When Christ, in His parting words to His disciples, commanded them to "go into all the world (not the United States only), and preach the gospel to every (not some) creature," He made real to us that the whole world needed this gospel. When we are informed by the Word of God that "all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God," and that the "wages of sin is death," and that there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved," we have a sufficient reason for giving so that God-sent men and women might take Jesus Christ to the teeming millions who are at this very hour lost and without hope apart from Jesus Christ.

The second thing that we can do in ascertaining the need, especially when it comes to Brethren missions, is to read everything given in Brethren Missionary Heralds and other Brethren literature relating to foreign missions. Let us read the letters from the missionaries, and sense their burden for lost men, women and children. We can feel with them the tragic situation of so few missionaries in their fields of labor —fields that become almost a nightmare to them when they try their level best to reach as many as possible, with thousands who cannot be reached crying for the gospel!

"WE HAVE GOOD TIDINGS"

HOMER A. KENT, Winona Lake, Ind.

A very pertinent lesson for the present day can be learned from four obscure characters mentioned in II Kings 7:1-20. War clouds hung low over Samaria. The city was in a state of seige. No one was permitted to go out of the gates to obtain food. Rationing had reached the last new low. Even the children were boiled and eaten. To surrender would have been utter humiliation and defeat of the worst sort.

Rev. Kent

At this dark moment, the prophet Elisha raised his voice and declared that food would be plentiful the next day and "a measure of fine flour would be sold for a shekel." But such information was not well received by the suffering, starving people. It seemed so devoid of truth. Israel had no strength. The powerful Syrians were still encamped without. No allies could be counted upon to help. Most men are slow to believe what they cannot see.

Now it happened that four miserable lepers lay at the gate. They were hopefully waiting for someone to toss them a few crumbs. But no one came. And when their destitution became almost unbearable and hope was gone, a very remarkable thing happened. They decided to fall upon the enemy's camp where food was to be had. "If the enemy kill us, we shall but die," and death was painfully imminent anyway.

The decision was put to action, and God overruled their physical infirmity and caused a great noise to put the Syrians to rout. When they approached the enemy's camp, food was plentiful. The fine flour which the prophet foretold was in evidence. So they satisfied their hunger and then hastened to Samaria with these words, "We have good tidings."

Brethren, we dare not let a trace of hopelessness settle upon our foreign missionary work. When the hour seems darkest; when difficulties appear insurmountable; when defeat threatens our efforts; it is then that we do well to think upon the decisive action of these lepers, recorded in the Bible for a purpose.

We have good tidings also. God's call for unredeemed mankind must still ring out. Countless multitudes have never heard the gospel even once. The great commission has not been recalled. Many who sit in darkness are hungering for spiritual food; and we, through His marvelous grace, have that food to give them. Though our beloved missionaries must suffer repeated refusals to go, at the hands of earthly authorities, the time will come when permission will be granted. Perhaps the dark hour must first come. May we knock at the gates of heaven through sincere intercessory prayer until the "all clear" is sounded. At this Easter time let us give a noble offering unto the Lord, so that the work He has committed unto us in foreign lands may not need to be curtailed. Missionary expenses are increasing as well as other expenses. Let us give in order that the hungry may have bread.

IS OUR WALK LIKE OUR TALK?

By CHAS. W. MAYES, Ashland, Ohio

We, as believers, talk about the crumbling of the nations, the changing of the economic system, and the passing of the times of the Gentiles. But—do we really believe what we say?

Rev. Mayes

We, as believers, talk about the things of this world passing away, and state glibly that the business of real importance is to get the gospel to the lost. But—do we really act as though this were true?

We, as believers, talk about the value of human souls as being more than the whole world. But—do we so much as walk across the street to get them saved?

We, as believers, talk about the futility of holding on to our money, saying that it is of no eternal value after all. But—do we cut it loose for God's work now?

We, as believers, talk about the fact that we are the only people on earth who have a solution to the world situation, and that we are the only people who know how it is coming out. But—what have we done to pay the bills to get this message out?

If the believers in The Brethren Church walk as we talk, we will turn loose our money for foreign missions now. Some with money in banks drawing 2 or 3% interest will turn it over to God and say, "There, I want my money to pay some interest in heaven." Others, who have saved money for the rainy day, will say, "This is the rainy day. God comes first." Unless the writer is mistaken, there are thousands in The Brethren Church keeping their money to themselves, who will never be able to use it as they see fit. There will come a time when men cannot use their money as they please. We hope that will never happen while the church is still on earth. We hope the Lord takes His own to glory before that day!!!

Let us walk like we talk and give our money to God's work while we still have the opportunity.

BEAUTIFUL FEET, Romans 10:15

By C. H. ASHMAN, Whittier, Calif.

Today, every mode of travel for our missionaries is fraught with danger and death. In the air, on the ocean, on the highway, on the tracks—all instruments of death. But, the Bible picture is that of walking. God looks at the feet! "How fair the feet of the gospelers of peace! How fair the feet of the gospelers of glad tidings of good things." Missionary's feet take them into places of dirt and filth, poverty and squalor, into dark continents and huts and jungles, into paths of sacrifice and hardship, into periods of persecution, but they are always beautiful feet to God! They become tired and weary, bruised and broken, but they are still beautiful feet to the Lord! They are "shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace. They are wearing "golden slippers" now! Angels would exchange places with them if they could. Someone has said, "If God would permit the angels to preach the gospel, heaven would be emptied within five minutes." Angels cannot preach the gospel, but the weakest child of God can. We are above the angels in this privilege of grace.

Rev. Ashman

Now there is imperative need for all to give this year that the feet of the missionaries will not suffer the lack or loss of any essential thing. We must furnish the equipment. The shoes of the children of Israel did not wear out while they were journeying across the wilderness; but missionaries' outfits go down into the bottom of the sea or up in flames, or succumb to the wear and tear of all material things. At this foreign missionary harvest season (Resurrection Day, Apr. 5) we must see to it that the shoes for the beautiful feet of our missionaries are provided.

WHAT GRACE SEMINARY MEANS TO MISSIONS, AND WHAT THE MISSIONARIES MEAN TO GRACE SEMINARY

By ALVA J. McCLAIN, President of Grace Seminary
And Candidate Secretary of Foreign Missions

Winona Lake, Ind.

The secretary of our Foreign Missionary Society, Bro. Bauman, has asked me to write on the above subject, and it is a good one. But I think both students and teachers here would want me to change it a bit, and begin with "What the Missionaries Mean to Grace Seminary."

Dr. McClain

If we were to go back through the years, and analyze the various influences which produced the men who have had a large part in the founding of Grace Seminary, we could easily make out a strong case to prove that without the missionaries, their sacrifices, and their prayers, the spiritual impetus which led finally to the founding of this seminary might have failed. But omitting that side of the matter, let us begin at a later date.

Throughout a period of several years prior to the actual beginning of Grace Seminary, I happen to know there were Brethren missionaries who were praying definitely, to the end that the church might have a seminary which would be free from the paralyzing hand of worldly men either indifferent or openly antagonistic to the whole foreign missionary enterprise. And when, almost against their own will, the missionary-minded pastors and churches of The Brethren Church joined in the establishing of Grace Theological Seminary, almost immediately we found that every active foreign missionary of the church was wholeheartedly behind the new institution, in spite of the fact that such support in certain cases meant the breaking of ties of sentiment which ran back into years. No educational institution was ever given more loyal friends than we have had in the missionaries of The Brethren Church. If any group of men and women deserve a place among the honorary alumni, they do.

Then, when the seminary was launched in 1937, as many will recall, the first large gift to Grace Seminary came from a foreign missionary, Miss Estella Myers. Many of us can still feel the thrill that ran through the large audience of several hundred in the Presbyterian Church at Winona, when Dr. Bauman announced this gift of $1,000. Then later, when the seminary began its historical existence in the First Brethren Church of Ellet, O., Miss Myers was the first Brethren missionary on furlough to become a full time student in the seminary. I am sure that only eternity

Easter Message From Dr. Florence N. Gribble

Dear Ones Who Share With Us the Battle:

Your prayers are more and more appreciated as the battle becomes more intense, and our forces more nearly exhausted.

Ps. 37:24 has been continually on my mind during the month: "Though he fall, he shall not be utterly cast down, for the Lord upholdeth him with His Hand." The French rendering is: "S'll tombe, il ne sera pas entierement abattu, l'Eternal lus soutient la main." Literally translated, it reads: "Tho' he fall not be entirely cast down, for the Lord holds his hand." Hand in hand with our Lord, even though sometimes stumbling! Upheld by the hand of Jesus when we would otherwise lie prostrate before the enemy!

And why should it not be so? For He hath thus predestined, and he hath thus predetermined, that his hand should uphold us. Isa. 14:27 reads: "For the Lord of hosts hath purposed, and who shall disannul it, and His hand is stretched out and who shall turn it back"? I may stumble and fall; I shall not be utterly cast down, for before times eternal it hath been predetermined that He uphold me with His hand.

In Neh. 2:18 we read: "Then I told them of the hand of my God which was good upon me, also the king's words that he had spoken unto me." It is the beneficent hand of God which is upon me now, in spite of my failures; and that same good hand of beneficence shall follow me always, shall uphold me continually!

Alway? Continually? Yes, for our Savior Himself hath promised in Jn. 10:28,29: "And I give unto them eternal life and they shall never perish; neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand. My Father which gave them me, is greater than all, and no man is able to pluck them out of my Father's hand." Eternity of security—or if you will have it so, eternal security—for me, as my Father's hand upholds me. Not in my own faltering step, not in feeble clasp of my Father's hand is my eternal Security, but because the Lord upholds me with His own hand, that hand so determined, so beneficent, so eternal, so secure.

"But is that hand all powerful"? my feeble faith cries. "Can no unforeseen event, no bungling misstep, no fiery trial utterly cast me down from that position which might have been eternally secure in His predetermined beneficence"? No, for His hand is as omnipotent in my behalf, as his ear is omniscient. Isaiah, who only foresaw Him, to whom the blessed truths of the atonement, resurrection and ascension were not yet accomplished facts, thus prophesied in 59:1: "Behold the Lord's hand is not shortened that it cannot save, neither his ear heavy that it cannot hear." I may indeed rejoice that the hand which upholds me determinedly, beneficently, eternally securely, is no less than omnipotent in my behalf. Shall I look backward and deplore my weak failures? No, let me look upward, forward, rejoicing and exclaiming triumphantly: "Is anything too hard for the Lord"?

But there is so much from which I need to be sheltered. I am so exposed to the winds of temptation, to the stinging darts of the adversary, to the scathing rebukes of my friends who see me weak in points where they are strong. I who desire only God's glory have somehow sinned again. I have somehow come short again of that wondrous glory that I would reveal. Is there no shelter for me, who have let God's glory pass by, while I have dwadled with some paltry temptation? Even through Moses there come to me now the words of my God rebuking my slowness of heart, my unwillingness to receive, my inability to grasp, that glory passeth by, that I will put Thee in a clift of the rock and will cover Thee with my hand while I pass by."

Oh, the gracious shelter of His Hand, as in His predetermined beneficence He bestows upon me the shelter of His omnipotence as He upholds me with His hand. Truly I wrong Him by being cast down. Truly I should not look backward to my fall, but upward to the hand that upholds and shelters!

But my experience has been so very shallow. I have fallen through that very shallowness. I am cast down because of the very misery of my own poverty. I need greater depth. I thirst for deeper draughts of water of life, I would fain know the depths of His love, the heights of His restoring grace. Once more Isaiah comes to me with rebuking comfort (40:12): "Who hath measured the waters in the hollow of His hand, and meted out heaven with the span, and comprehended the dust of the earth in a measure, and weighted the mountains in scales, and the hills in a balance." Oh, the wondrous depth of the hollow of His hand! May I sink therein more deeply! May I thus become at once more obscure, and altogether secure against all the wiles of my adversary.

And there in the depths of hollow of the hand that was wounded for me, may I understand something of my Savior's suffering that He might uphold me and enfold me. Oh the shame and agony as I contemplate the words of Zech. 13:6: "And one shall say unto me, 'What are these wounds in my hands'? Then he shall answer, 'Those with I was wounded in the house of my friends'." Was it not enough that I wounded Him when I was His enemy?

But now that I have become His friend, must I

By MARTHA SNELL NICHOLSON

Sickened with slaughter and weary of war,
Torn by bereavement and pain,
Daily our eyes are searching the skies
For signs of His coming again.

Longing, we pray at the dawning of day,
"Lord, wilt Thou come before noon?"
Imploring Him yet in the fading sunset,
"O, blessed Lord Jesus, come soon!"

Sweet was the word which the ear of faith heard,
"Lo, I come quickly, My bride,
This longing of thine is not deeper than Mine
To have thee at last by My side!"

wound still? Oh, matchless grace that still upholds me, and that still preserves me from being utterly cast down, though I fall. Oh, determination of such a beneficence, the omnipotence that offers an eternal security, the shelter that He gives me continually in the depth of the hollow of His wounded hands!

Yet in love He chastens us and leads us to cry one to another as did Job (19:21). "Have pity upon me, have pity upon me, O ye my friends, for the hand of God hath touched me!" Let us then forebear one another, even as God hath for Christ's sake forgiven us! Let us explain as did Job (19:25): "I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that He shall stand at the latter day upon the earth."

Then, "why art thou cast down, O my soul, and why art thou disquieted in me? Hope thou in God" Ps. 42:5. We know not what to do, but let us keep our eyes upon Him (see II Chron. 20:12). He knows our foolishness, and our sins are not hid from Him (see Ps. 69:5). Our very times are in His Hand (see Ps. 31:15). Let us then, in the words of the Apostle Paul (Phil. 4:6-7), "be careful for nothing, but in everything by prayer and supplication, with thanksgiving, let our request be made unto God, and the peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall keep our hearts and minds through Christ Jesus."

Humbly and lovingly,

One of your missionaries,

—Florence N. Gribble.

EASTER MESSAGES

will reveal the profound and far-reaching influence her presence exerted in those early days. Furthermore, when the seminary looked over its first student body, we found that just one-third of the group were definitely committed to the work of foreign missions. Among these were the Maconaghys, the Dunnings, the Robert Williams, and Miss Snyder. The presence of these men and women established a still closer contact between the seminary and the workers on the field, and kept us constantly reminded of the final commission of our Lord.

At the present time Brother and Sister Morrill are at Winona while he completes his final seminary year. Spiritually, their presence has blessed us greatly. Bro. Morrill, in response to urgent requests, is teaching a class in the Sango trade language of Africa. Then we also have with us Brother and Sister Garner Hoyt, now taking their final year of preparation, fully approved for the African field, and getting their outfit together with the firm expectation of getting across the sea somehow to Africa. For the past two years Bro. Garner has conducted a class in missionary French here for prospective missionaries, a work of great value. Then there are Herman and Marguerite (Hoffman) Baerg, in their second year, and headed for Africa. Besides these there are seven or eight other students definitely interested in foreign missions, and fully willing to go wherever the Lord leads; some members of other churches. But we thank God for their presence and influence in the seminary.

But now what about the other side of the picture? What does Grace Seminary mean to missions and the missionaries? Perhaps at this point it would be better to let them speak for themselves—and if there were time we would let them do this very thing. But since Dr. Bauman's request for this article came too late to allow for this plan, I shall have to speak for them this once. I can say that I have heard everyone of them here speak of the ministry of the seminary with genuine appreciation. We have tried to inculcate in them such a deep and abiding faith in the Word of God, that no combination of adverse circumstances can ever turn them aside from the task to which God may call them; such a personal love for the Lord Jesus Christ Himself, that in the darkness of pagan fields they shall see Him instead of the filth and degradation of the people; and such a genuine prayer life, that they will be able to look to God with complete trust for the provision of all their need according to His riches in glory by Christ Jesus.

And it is the desire of the seminary, in the case of those who may not personally be training for foreign missionary service, to see these students go out into pastorates in the homeland with a passion for the lost, which will not only lead to evangelistic effort in their own home communities, but also lead to a great dedication of life and money in their churches for the carrying of the gospel message to Africa and South America.

AUTO TIRES FOR MINISTERS

Mr. Leon Henderson, administrator of the Office of Price Administration, has decreed that ministers of religion in these United States are to be included as a group eligible to purchase during the present war automobile tires under the rationing system. We quote his announcement here:

> "Clergymen in many communities, particularly where the population is scattered, are compelled to depend upon their cars to reach the bedside of the sick or dying, or to conduct services that are essential to the spiritual welfare of the public. As amended, the tire order will place the needs of clergymen on a par with those of doctors, nurses and other occupations and professions whose services are essential to public health and safety."

We have been in the midst of writing a book, soon to be published, on the subject of Russia, as that nation ("Gog") appears under the prophetic spotlight. Consequently we have been searching for authentic information as to spiritual conditions within the Russian Empire. With those conditions fresh in mind, Henderson's order was striking. If you have any knowledge of spiritual conditions within Russia, imagine, if you can, such an order in a time like this, being put out by the Russian Government. It is hardly exaggerating to say that if a clergyman in Russia were to even ask for an automobile tire, under similar war conditions, the reply would be a bullet. America still realizes the importance of keeping alive the spiritual and moral forces of the world, without which it wouldn't be worthwhile to win this war anyhow. Christians in America need to thank God that their lot was never cast in Russia. How fortunate we are just to be born in America. That alone should keep up from complaining, no matter what other material troubles should be ours. We still can kneel to pray instead of kneeling to be shot. It cannot be that we are outside of the will of God in giving every support to the "Stars and Stripes" in days like these, so long as our country does not demand that we act directly contrary to the revealed will of God. In fact, we believe Paul (Rom. 13) taught us that to do so is our Christian duty. Our country has sinned much, and is far from being what we would like to see her be. God may chasten her greatly for her transgressions. Nevertheless, as earthly nations go—thank God, we are Americans!

Baptized Paganism

"We Wait For Light, But Walk In Darkness"

By CLARENCE L. SICKEL

A number of years ago, the German Ambassador to Argentina made the remark, in a public address, that if you scratch an Argentine you will find a heathen. As you may well imagine this caused a great stir in religious Argentina, and the ambassador was recalled. I would venture more than he, however, and say that if you scratch the shell of Argentine Romanism, you will find paganism.

When, more than 400 years ago, the Spanish conquest brought political subjugation to that part of the western hemisphere, it brought the same enforced subjugation religiously; and even as in the days of Constantine, wholesale baptism was the sign and seal. The methods used brought no change of heart, but rather consisted of the superimposing upon the already existing Indian paganism of an empty ceremonial system, to which was added the extortionate requirements of a corrupt and immoral priesthood.

Today Roman Catholicism in Latin American countries is still paganism cloaked with the symbols of Christianity. This may sound like a gross exaggeration. I am fully aware of the fact that there will be many ready to dispute this statement. And yet it is a fact that the famous black image of the province of La Rioja, for many years the patron saint of the province, is the very image worshipped by the Indians in the days of the conquest. In recent years, a white copy has been made, which is now the official patron saint of the province, to please the European element. The black image is still worshipped, however, and still preferred by the natives.

South America has been rightly called the neglected continent. We have considered it as less needy than others, and have turned our attention elsewhere. This is because we have not known actual conditions. South America is as much in need of the gospel as any land on earth. She is not Christian but pagan at heart. In proof of this statement, let us consider her service of worship, her shrines and her attitude toward Christ.

In her service of worship any more than that of recognized pagan countries? Let us enter one of their cathedrals. Inside is semi-darkness. Worshipers, entering with us, dip their fingers in the holy water beside the door, cross themselves devoutly, and are off to kneel before a holy picture or image. Down the long depth of the nave stands the altar, the cross above it. Candles, scores of them, flicker uncertainly. Threads of incense scent the air with a heavy fragrance. Along the walls of the cathedral are pictures and images of the Virgin Mary and many saints of the church, with men, women and children kneeling in worship before them.

The service begins. Mass is said by richly gowned priests. Chants are intoned with the response of the worshipers. Bells ring, and the worshipers drop to their knees. Bells ring again, and the worshipers rise. There are more chants and responses, and the service is over. The worshipers depart, dipping their fingers again in the holy water as they go. Most of them have not understood one word of the chants or the prayers.

This is but a sample of church services throughout the land. There are not a score of sermons a year preached in the language of the people in the majority of the churches. There are no prayers said in the language which the common people understand. I ask, can a service of this kind bring any more spiritual help than the service of the heathen temple.

Is their image worship any different from that of recognized pagan countries? There are countless wonder-working saints and images in their many in their many shrines and cathedrals. Let us visit one of them in the little town of Reduccion, where thousands gather annually to worship a hideous figure of Christ on the cross. People make long journeys from all parts of the country, after having offered to pay for masses to be said before the image, provided they would be prospered in some business or healed of some disease. There are those who walk barefoot through the streets, who come on their knees from the edge of the town to the foot of the image, who bring of their wealth or their poverty. Bits of candle left at the front of the image are eagerly sought for. A piece of cotton rubbed over the toes of the image, as well as a ribbon placed around its body, are said to be of great value in any case of sickness. The priests sell these articles, together with the medals bearing the picture of "El Senor de la Buena Muerte" (The Lord of the Good Death) as it is called.

These people are afraid to come into God's presence in prayer. As one, who is a leader among the Catholic women of Rio Cuarto once said to us, "That would be a fearful thing to do. I am so unworthy. I must come to God through someone like me, who, by his virtuous life, has earned favour with God." And so we find millions of people who pray to the images of Mary and of the saints, just as we woud pray to Christ in the spirit. They actually talk to the images and expect to be heard by them. Is this not pagan?

Is the attitude of the adherents to Romanism

"El Senor de la Buena Muerte."
(The Lord of the Good Death)

towards Christ, the Light of the World, any different from that of those who are recognized pagans? Even as we gather in our churches in commemoration of the "Risen Lord" they will be commemorating a dead Christ in Argentina. In Rio Cuarto, as in all of the other towns, this dead Christ will be carried in procession through the streets. We have been told that in Rio Cuarto, so great is the emotional set-up, that as the dead Christ is taken down from the cross, on occasions women scream and faint and must be carried out.

Early in the afternoon the people will begin to gather by the hundreds in the streets and in the park in front of the cathedral; rich and poor; educated and ignorant; people from all walks of life. The procession forms in the church, headed by one or two city officials. There follows the band and several altar boys carrying lighted candles, and then the large glass casket containing the dead Christ. This is secured to two long poles and is carried down the streets on the shoulders of men. Old, young and middle-aged jostle and push one another aside for the privilege of supporting the casket a few feet. The band plays a funeral march, and they slowly make their way around the "plaza" and back to the church, where the image is placed in its accustomed place among the other images until next Easter. Is it any wonder that there are those in those lands who firmly believe that Christ is dead?

In the same procession the "Sorrowful Virgin" is carried along on the shoulders of devoted men, following several feet behind the glass casket. An interesting thing to note here is that the priests do not precede the casket with the dead Christ; but they march along immediately in front of the "Sorrowful Virgin," reciting the rosary, with the people within hearing distance responding. And it is she who receives the homage of the people after the dead Christ has been laid away.

The great mass of the people are lost in ignorance, superstition and idolatry—Christian in name, but pagan at heart. Oh, that our eyes might be opened to see our responsibility to these lands dominated by this most subtle enemy of the truth, the Church of Rome.

How I Became a Missionary

By MISS ELIZABETH TYSON

Ye have not chosen me but I have chosen you John 15:16.

Many of the missionaries who have gone forth to heathen lands received spectacular calls, but to me no such call came. When still but a child I attended a farewell missionary service, and was very much impressed by the message of one who was going forth. A call for volunteers was given; and I, in simple, child-like trust, yielded my life to the Master, promising that as He opened the way, I would obey and go with Him.

During the following years, all my plans were made with this one thought in view: "How best can I prepare myself for the field of service to which He would call me?" Through the advice of a godly missionary I decided to enter a Nurses' Training School, expecting to enter Bible School upon the completion of the former course.

After finishing the nurses' course a very strange experience came to me. I began to wonder whether I was really called, thinking that a special message or sign should be given. When these did not come, the enemy led me on to believe that I could stay at home and help send out others who had a startling call. For five long years I tried to make myself believe this until one night in my desperation, I said "Yes" to the whole will of God, willing to fill that place which He had for me! or, in other words, ready to obey His command to go. No longer was I content to help send others, but immediately began my Bible Training. Great peace again came to my heart, and an abundant joy was mine. Now I knew that in the sight of God no one could fill the place which the Lord had chosen for me, and I was ready to say, "Here am I, send me!"

Realizing that He had chosen me, my going forth was a matter of obedience to my Lord, and to His command of "Go ye and preach the gospel."

Bread Cast Upon Waters

By MISS ESTELLA MYERS

I praise the Lord for answered prayer and to know that the Word is not bound.

In 1921, just after we received permission to open the first mission station and Bro. Gribble was making preparations to that end, Dr. Gribble and Marguerite and I started down the river toward Brazzaville; for Doctor was going home with her child. We changed from our little boat to a larger one at Ouesso, a government post on the Congo. We were delayed there some time. We realized, as we saw the multitudes, that we were leaving them and going over into Oubangui-Chari. We prayed that they too might know their Lord and the way of salvation. How our hearts went out to them; but it seemed best to push toward the east and nearer Bangui for the first station.

Leaving Ouesso, we visited Mr. Bragg at Ikalemba where Sister Rollier is buried. He had just started work there, but was forced to leave for health reasons. The Brauns came to help him; but they, too, went over to Oubangui-Chari after their first term. However, their cook had accepted the gospel and loved the Lord.

Just recently, the Swedish Brethren, whose work is at Carnot, were passing by Ouesso to plant work there. The first evening, while setting up camp in the rest house, they heard singing. They went in search to find out where it was. They found Mrs. Braun's cook holding a service with about 700 natives. He was telling the story. Many had accepted the gospel.

We praise the Lord for answered prayer and the way He works. Truly the Word is living, and wherever preached it will win souls to the Lord. May it continue to be spread until no village is found where it has not been taken!

Maps, Maps, Maps!

Orville D. Jobson, Superintendent of our African work, spent much of his time while in Long Beach making a detailed up-to-date map of our African Mission Field. With the assistance of Mrs. Bessie Burch, who did the drawing, the Board today has a map of our mission field in Africa that probably cannot be excelled as a missionary map by any missionary map in the world. We have had a number of these maps made on very heavy paper. They are 4 ft. x 6 ft. in size. The Board is ready to furnish these maps to any church, organization, class or individual, for $3.00. This is probably a dollar less than its actual cost, but the Board is very anxious to have one at least of these maps in every church, and therefore is making the sacrifice on the price. Do you wish one? Better send your order today.

Carmen Navarro De Villada

By RICARDO E. WAGNER, Almafuerte, S.A.

We first became acquainted with this women in Almafuerte a short time after taking charge of the work there, through a visit to her home. One of the strangest and most interesting things about her is that she had heard the gospel for over 30 years before taking its message into her own heart.

Intellectually she is a well prepared person. She graduated from normal school, but never executed her teaching profession, probably because her family was in a good position financially. Her husband was converted many years ago, being a member of the Free Brethren denomination. Later he became affiliated with our church, together with three of his daughters who were converted, leaving a small daughter and two sons still unconverted. The conversion of her daughters had no good influence upon Mrs. Villada. She rather hardened her heart and tried to keep the others from following. But God put His hand upon that soul, leading her through hard trials, and later showing His mercy.

This time soon came. One of the converted daughters became ill mentally. Of course, the Roman Catholics took advantage of the situation to place the blame upon the gospel and fill the hearts of all who might be interested with fear. The girl was taken to an asylum for treatment. A short time after that, the family moved to Cordoba and later to Corralito, where we were able to visit them when we went to give out literature. Here ruin and suffering in the home was made felt even more keenly, for another of the converted daughters began to suffer from the same ailment, and had to be taken away for treatment. The poor mother was desperate. We tried to encourage her, and asked her to place her confidence in the Lord, promising to pray for the sick. I believe the Lord spoke wonderful words to this woman. I told her that her daughter would come back—to just trust the Lord. We left. As we had promised, we prayed, not only for the sick ones, but also for the healing and changing of the heart of the mother. Well, I believe that the first thing the Lord did was to heal the soul of the mother, as she later testified, when she said that she did not know why, but in that same hour she believed and felt certain that "Licha," her daughter, would return!

Since that time she has had a "new song" in her heart and upon her lips. "I have been rebellious too long," she said. She is so grateful to the God that has done so great things for them, for He brought back both daughters to the home, although one of them does not enjoy very good health.

Well, brethren, I cannot describe the joy in those hearts. Think how hard a heart can become refusing God's mercy throughout more than 30 years—and still it is possible for the Lord to soften it! How true that God is love! How true He is to all of His promises! And now the blessings in the life and home of Mrs. Villada are overflowing, for the younger daughter and one of her sons have been converted, as well as a son-in-law who lives in another town.

Mrs. Villada and her son were baptized here in Almafuerte on Nov. 11. Her favorite hymn is, "Ring the Bells of Heaven." She now remembers how she used to repeat her prayers, after she was married, so that no evil would befall them because her husband attended the Protestant meetings.

I wish to add a few lines more to solicit your prayers, brethren, for this family which lives isolated from the church and in the midst of a rebellious town. We do not have meetings there, and visit only when it is possible to do so; for the time doesn't reach even for the three towns where we have meetings. One of the girls, Alicia (Alice), is very pleasant and sociable; and I know it would be a great joy to her if she could exchange letters with some of our readers who read and write Spanish—or for those who do not, we gladly offer our services as translators.

Roberto Villada, Mrs. Villada Santiago Fissolo. The three who were baptized in November.

Gift

1. If I refuse to give anything to missions this year, I practically cast a ballot in favor of the recall of every missionary, both in the home and foreign fields.

2. If I give less than heretofore, I favor a reduction of the missionary forces proportionate to my reduced contribution.

3. If I give the same as formerly, I favor holding the ground already won, but I disregard any forward movement. My song is, "Hold the Fort!" forgetting that the Lord never intended that His army should take refuge in a fort. All of His soldiers are under marching orders always. They are commanded to "Go!"

4. If I advance my offering beyond former years, then I favor an advance movement in the conquest of new territory for Christ. Shall I not join this class?

Resolved: I do believe in greatly increasing the present number of missionaries, therefore I will increase my former offerings to missionary work.

Camilo Ubertelli --- Asti

By RICARDO E. WAGNER, Almafuerte, S.A.

Here we are, Jan. 15, in Berrotaran conducting the Vacation Bible School. We have classes in the morning and at night, but as it has been raining almost continually since yesterday afternoon, we have neither been able to have classes nor to visit. So I will take advantage of this time to write a while. I know that it has been a long time since I have done so, and I assure you that for a long time I have desired to do so.

The Lord has been very merciful to us, and you, brethren, have been very good to uphold us in your prayers. I know that you have done so, for we have felt it. Else, how would we have had the spiritual help and the blessings that we have received? The Lord has heard you and we thank Him as well as you.

I believe that the experience of one of our members here will be of interest to you. Since he does not write very well, I will try to remember and write what he has told me.

Camilo Ubertelli Asti, as he is called, is Italian, and like the majority of Italians, was Roman Catholic. He is married to a native woman, and has only one daughter, who is also married. For years and years he lived in what is called here "the religion of his fathers," Romanism. In all of that time his spirit never found rest.

He was very faithful and obedient to all of the precepts of his church and the orders of his confessor, whenever some penance was imposed upon him; for, as a good Roman Catholic, he confessed periodically. He lived as uprightly as he knew how. He never missed a mass, and says that "if there were seven masses in a day, I attended the seven." He did all that he could to please God according to his knowledge.

He sought and sought peace for his soul and wanted to draw closer, in fuller communion with the Lord. He thought that sacrifices would help him to this end. So he began placing his hands below his knees while repeating the rosary; made a trip of three leagues 9-10 miles on foot, with other companions, carrying a large cross with the image of Jesus. He took communion as often as eight days in succession after only one confession. To gain more indulgences he made rosaries out of olive seeds, and had to buy the olives that come in glass jars. On one occasion something happened which he considered a miracle; the jar contained exactly the number of large and small seeds that he needed for a rosary!

Someone told him that there was greater merit in confessing to the bishop. So he decided to make the trip on foot to Rio Cuarto (close to 50 miles), together with his son-in-law; but before reaching the city, they were so tired that they decided to take a ride in a truck that passed. He had his home decorated with the images of his favorite saints. He burned candles in great numbers (now he would like to have the money that he spent in that alone). He bought holy water 10 liters (little over 2 gallons) at a time, which did not last him very long; for every night he sprinkled some of it all through the rooms and over the beds after all the family had retired.

Not finding satisfaction in all that he was doing, he began to follow a man that lived in the hills, and who was practicing a religion of his own invention—a mixture of various rites of different religions, such as, Romanism, Spiritism, Seventh Day Adventism, quack doctoring, and even traces of the gospel! When he went into something, he did so with all sincerity and faithfulness. So one day this new leader said that all of his followers should dress themselves in red and follow him in procession all through the town. Don Camilo was ready to obey! But his companions did not care to go to that extreme, so the parade failed!

During this same time he began attending spiritist sessions that were being held on a farm. He declares that the spirit was already getting possession of him, but that his writing was still illegible. He was verily in the hands of Satan!

It was at this time that our work began in Berrotaran. Don Camilo received some tracts and began to read the Bible; but he was now so full of doubts about everything that it was hard for him to believe the truth. One of the first converts there took me to visit him. We talked, making clear the way of life. After many questions, he finally gave himself to the Lord, Whom he is now following and serving faithfully. In all of these towns we have no more faithful member than he. "Seek and ye shall find" says the Lord. Our brother has sought and has found the only One Who can give peace—the Prince of peace!

If the works of the unjust had any merit, this man should be canonized. Thanks to God that he is not canonized, but rather sanctified through the Holy Spirit; and this by the grace of God, and the desire that He has put in your hearts to send and support missionaries in this field which is so needy. May the Lord bless you; and may your hope be in a reward in heaven, and the joy of meeting there with the souls saved in this part of the world.

Some Reasons Why

By MRS. CLARENCE L. SICKEL

How often we hear the question, "Why send missionaries to South America? Is it not Christian?" Indeed, religious censuses include it, along with all other Catholic lands, as a part of the so-called Christian world. One needs, however, only to visit South America to learn how far from the actual truth is such a conception of the state of those lands.

It is true enough that the symbols of the gospel are established in South America. On the hills, along the roads, in countless shrines and churches and cathedrals, the holy emblems of the Christian faith have been erected. It is also true that there are evidences of religion on every hand. Worship, priests, regular services, bishops, nuns—the outward aspects are all there. In theory the fundamentals of religion are also there. But missionaries to such lands all testify to the fact that converts insist they had never caught the faintest ray of gospel light from the system to which they had adhered.

There are a hundred reasons why missionaries should go; why missionaries must be sent; why we, as a Brethren Church, should feel keenly our obligation to that great neglected continent of South America. Here are a few that occur to me as I face my own obligation at this Easter season; that of returning to Argentina for another term of service.

1. Christ is the only hope of individuals and of society. Roman Catholicism, the prevailing religion of South America, has crowded Him out and given His rightful place to another. The center of worship is not Christ but some saint. Their hope for eternity rests not on Christ but on the Virgin Mary. A study of facts show us that only a small percent of the people know anything about the most simple principles of Christ's teachings, or know anything but the barest facts about Him. About His real character they know nothing. Catholicism gives to the Virgin Mary titles and honors which rightfully belong to Jesus Christ alone, and so dishonors the Savior of the world. She asserts that no one can be saved apart from Mary. She teaches that the Virgin Mary is the mediatrix in heaven for sinners, that her intercessions are all-powerful, and that the Father and Son obey her slightest wish and prayer, whereas the Word says: "There is one Mediator between God and man, the man Christ Jesus."

The cross, the symbol of Christ is seen everywhere —on the roadside, in homes and churches—but Christ, the Life, the only Hope of mankind, is unknown. Are we not debtors to make Him known?

2. The Bible, the only Book which tells His story, is a closed Book. In our work of tract distribution, hundreds of people confess that they never heard of such a Book as the Bible. On the other hand, some who have heard of it declare that they do not want to waste their time reading a book that teaches a religion of such falsity as Roman Catholicism. The Roman Church forbids her people—many times under threat of eternal damnation—to read any Bible translated by Prostestants; and teaches that Protestants have wilfully mistranslated the Bible to further their own ends. They are allowed to buy—at excessive prices so the poor cannot and the rich do not—and read the Douay Version, but are pledged to interpret it "only according to that sense which our Holy Mother, the Church, has held and does hold" (Creed of Pius IV). This, in spite of Christ's admonition to search the Scriptures! She further teaches that the Bible must be accepted only in so far as it agrees with the teaching of the Roman Church, that is, the Pope and the Bishops. The all-important thing is that Romanists should believe the teaching of the Church; the teaching of the Scriptures is of less importance. Moreover, she affirms that the unwritten Word of God, tradition, is of equal value with the Inspired books of the Bible, and that it is a more safe guide and teacher than the written Word of God. Fr. Bruno writes in his book, "Catholic Belief" that tradition is to us more clear and safe than the written Word of God.

Is it any wonder that there is darkness in South America when the Light has been shut out? Can we deny to those poor deceived people the Lamp of life?

3. Roman Catholisicm, their only guide in spiritual things, belittles the great work of redemption wrought by our Lord Jesus Christ. She exacts money, penance and works from her adherents, as the means by which they obtain favor with God and salvation. She teaches that God must be appeased by these acts before He can forgive sins. What a privilege to give them the message of salvation by grace. With liberal promises of indulgences she bribes men to say prayers and attend mass, and threatens men with eternal punishment if they do not follow the teaching of the priests. Dare we hesitate to recognize our obligation to carry redemption's story to these people?

4. South America affords a field of incomparable vastness for missionary effort. There are great classes of people to whom religion is a thing of disgust, associated with all that they wish to avoid. The intellectual classes cannot support a religious organization, the teachings of which run counter to their own knowledge. The laboring classes, on the other hand, find the church standing against them in their struggle for greater industrial freedom; and as a result they are driven into hostility toward religion itself. These two classes in themselves constitute a vast field. Then there is a great territory which, perhaps, constitutes the largest region on earth untouched by evangilical Christianity. Multitudes have never heard the gospel, or, having heard it in the garbled form of Romanism, have turned away from it in unbelief.

Let us not forget that through the love of God and the sacrifice of others, the gospel came to us. Surely as we face the facts, we will not longer question our obligation, but will say, "Here am I, send my means or send me!"

Same Old Priests as Always

Mrs. Laura Larson Wagner has sent us an air mail etter dated Jan. 21, 1942. This will be news more than sually up to date. She reveals the fact that the oman Catholic priests are the some old priests as ney have been throughout the centuries. They hate rotestants. Doubtless they would still burn them t the stake if they dared. They do not hesitate to esignate "the sin of Luther" as the "sins of hell." ; is Roman Catholic opposition that makes Latin merica one of the most, if not the most, difficult eld in the world. Nevertheless, our command is to reach the gospel to every creature and leave the esults with the Lord. Whenever a soul in South merica renounces Roman Catholicism and all its aganish idolatries, a real victory for Christ has been on.

The Lord is certainly graciously and greatly using rother and Sister Wagner. The reports of their work re always encouraging. We are going to quote from ne letter just received, and also are presenting here- ith pictures of Mrs. Wagner's Daily Vacation Bible chools one at Almafuerte, and the other at Berro- aran. In the latter Mrs. Wagner herself appears. ook into the faces of these boys and girls, and then emember this, if it were not for our work being car- ed on by the Wagners, these boys and girls would e utterly without any spiritual advisers or instructors ave the vicious and immoral priesthood of South merica. Little better are they, if any, than the riests of the pagan temples of India. As Bro. Clar- nce L. Sickel's article on another page reveals, the oman Catholicism of South America is naught but aganism arrayed in the outward garb of Christianity -"wolves in sheep's clothing."

We quote from Mrs. Wagner's letter:

"We began the D.V.B.S. in Almafuerte in the early art of December, with an attendance that surpassed ur expectations. Ricardo went out each morning to ick up some of the children, and that helped to keep p the attendance average. The average attendance n all classes (three in the mornings for children, nd one at night for adults) was 14; and of the 63 nrolled, 45 received their notebooks. Antonio Ga- aarra and one of our local girls helped in the teach- ng.

"On Jan. 7 we came to Berrotaran to start the ropaganda for the D.V.B.S. here. We also took care f the regular meetings, returning to Almafuerte on aturday, to be on hand for the meetings there on Daily Vacation School at Almafuerte.

Daily Vacation Bible School in Berroteran.

Sunday. Ricardo had gone from house to house here inviting young and old to the classes, and was in high hopes of having a real good school. But the opening day was a big disappointment. Evidently someone had followed up Ricardo's invitations with threats; and when he went out in the car to gather up the children for the class, those who had seemed so pleased with his invitation, and had promised to come, ran and hid. So we have had the school with the group that always comes, and the children of the family that lives in another department of this house. Ten children will receive their notebooks, most of them with perfect attendance. About seven adults attend the night classes.

"There has developed a terrific and well organized opposition to the gospel of late. Last year the local priest had a dance floor made in the center of the plaza that lies directly in front of the Roman Catholic Church. This year beginning on Christmas Eve, they ran a 10-day festival of dancing, lottery, etc. That was not enough for them; so they are continuing on Saturday and Sunday every week until Carnival, which comes the third week in February.

"One of the latest developments is the opening of an athletic club on the corner. They have two loud speakers, that prove most annoying to us when we are trying to have meetings. We can't say absolutely that they have deliberately set themselves at the business of disturbing the meetings, but it is passing strange that the loud-speaker should always be put on full blast just at the time of our meetings. Today we had two classes for the children, one in the morning and the other in the afternoon; and both times, just as we began to sing, the loudspeaker was turned on. And tonight the class had no sooner come in and sat down until the racket started again. But we are thankful that it is not as bad as last night. I think they must have had both turned loose; for, no matter which door was opened, there was so much noise that Ricardo could scarcely be heard. And it was so hot that we couldn't keep everything closed tight. But I keep thinking: surely, surely, amongst these hundreds, there must be some souls that are yearning for the truth; and we keep praying that the Lord will lead us to them with the precious Word of life."

"Herein is My Father Glorified"

By J. PAUL DOWDY, Supt., Argentina Missions

When our Lord spoke these words recorded in Jn. 15, he was speaking of fruit-bearing. "Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit." That which glorifies our heavenly Father should be for us cause for rejoicing.

All of you who have given so generously for the work in Argentina will be very happy to know that, during the year just past, your gifts and your prayers have not been offered in vain. The good seed of the Word has borne fruit. 47 souls, young people and adults, have been saved during the year. To this number should be added more than 60 smaller children, who have come to know the Lord and have accepted Him as their own personal Savior. These latter are fruits of the Child Evangelism Fellowship classes and Daily Vacation Bible School.

While these results make our hearts rejoice, we do not feel that we have fulfilled the word of our Lord and borne much fruit. In fact, the results seem small when we look out on the thousands who have not been brought in, and the thousands who have not even been reached with the gospel. However, we really do have cause to rejoice, even though the number of the saved is not large. When one comes to realize how great is the cost of accepting the doctrine of salvation preached by the despised missionaries: how great the cost of trying to follow Christ, while living in a home where other members of the family adore the idols of saints and follow the vain teachings of the religion fo Rome; how great the cost of enduring the mocking, condemnation, and punishment, meted out to those who become Protestants; then one begins to appreciate the value of even one soul saved and truly converted in this land.

Accompanying this article are two photos. No. 1, will introduce to you six young people, who were saved and added to the congregation in Rio Cuarto last year; presenting, from left to right: Eduardo Tasaky, Nancy Tasaky, Hulda Martinez, Beryl Balloch, Orfilia Pepe, and Marjory Balloch. Eduardo and Nancy are students in the National College, and unusually intelligent. Eduardo hopes to go some day to Grace Seminary at Winona Lake to prepare for the ministry. Hulda works in her father's bakery and grocery store, and sews. Beryl is in school. Orfilia is a graduate of Normal College. Marjory is a graduate of an English school in Buenos Aires.

"Six saved at Rio Cuarto"—(Group No. 1).

No. 2, shows 13 young people and adults of the group saved in Laboulaye. There should be 19 in the picture, but six men were not able to be there when it was taken. The five girls seated, together with the two standing at the left of the photo and the one standing at the right, are fruits of the personal work of Mrs. Pereira, who went to be with the Lord in December.

In these fruits of the gospel our heavenly father is glorified. May our hearts be filled with rejoicing and thanksgiving, and may we be inspired to march on, work, and pray, that this ministry, yours and ours, here in Argentina may truly bring forth much fruit to the glory of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

"FRUITS AT LABONLAYE" — (GROUP No. 2)

A Group of Young People in the Church at Rio Cuarto. Study these faces. If our Lord shall tarry, who shall say that there is not a bright future for the work in South America—the Continent that will still be young when all the rest of them have grown old?

A NEW CREATION IN CHRIST

Testimony of a Rebellious Girl.

I am very young, only 15 years of age. I have been a girl of bad disposition, a fighter, always coming to blows with my companions in school. The teacher punished me much, but each time I was more rebellious. My parents became converted to the Lord, and sent me to Sunday School. But I did not want to go. When they told me to go, I left the house and went off somewhere else and stayed till night. They whipped me and shut me in a room alone as punishment.

After a time I began to go to Sunday School, where I had as my teacher, Mrs. Pereira, the wife of our pastor. She had much patience with me, because I behaved very badly and caused fights and rebellions in the class. The advice, the patience, and the exhortations of my teacher made me more serious and cultured, but my heart was not right. One day my teacher gave me a little booklet which spoke of the prodigal son. That booklet moved me, and one Sunday my teacher exhorted me to give myself to the Lord. I prayed to the Lord for pardon of my sins in the name of Jesus, and He gave me a new life. Today, it is my desire to serve my Savior and Lord Jesus Christ.

—Adelina Cacasse, Laboulaye.

FROM WINE, CARDS, AND BLASPHEMY TO FAITH AND SALVATION

My life in childhood was a disaster. I have been a great blasphemer against God, the Virgin Mary, and the saints, because I did not know any other religion than the Roman Catholic. When I married I was a libertine, and much given to wine and gambling. All the money from my work went for card games and drink. With a long knife that I used, I fought with my companions of vice while my children suffered for want of food and clothing. One day a man came to my house to buy vegetables from my garden, and he gave me a little paper to read which spoke of Christ. At first, I paid no attention to such things; but that man returned to talk with me about the gospel. He invited me one night to go to the meeting. After a long time I finally resolved one night to make a manifestation of faith. I had many struggles before I became firmly established in the faith.

Today, I thank God because He has given me light, and I have learned well the meaning of repentance and the significance of faith in Christ as Savior of my soul. My wife also has been saved, and we are very happy and contented because there is peace and salvation in our home. It is our desire to be faithful to the Lord to the end of our days.

—Sergio Maldonado, Laboulaye.

CHRIST RESCUED ME

I am a young man of 19 years, born of Italian parents, in a Catholic home. But to me the religion of Rome had no meaning.

My father was a victim of alcohol; and because of this vice my parents were separated, we lost all our possessions, and the children became scattered and confused.

Some friends invited me to accompany them to the Culto Evangelico. I went along with them several times just to pass the time, and to laugh and make fun of their songs and sermons. But one night I heard a sermon that made me think. The subject of that message was, "Where Will You Spend Eternity?" That message filled me with fear, and I began to understand that the gospel was no joke. After that, I went to the meetings with more respect. Finally, the pastor talked with me and told me what I ought to do. I decided to receive Christ as my Savior and Lord.

—Luis Tonello, Laboulaye.

I KNOW I HAVE BELIEVED

I am an Argentina woman, was born on the farm, and knew nothing of religion for many years. All I knew was the art of quack doctoring and things of

A Prison Group at Rio Cuarto. Note the Christian literature that our missionaries have placed in the hands of these men. For them also there is hope.

witches and fairies. We went to live in the town of Serrano in the Province of Cordoba. There are two convents in this small town, one of Franciscon monks, and the other of Carmelite nuns. I went to their churches, confessed to the priests, and did all they told me to do. But I never did know peace in my soul. Never was my conscience at rest. I left that religion and ceased to believe in anything.

Then we went to Laboulaye—the whole family—and we were invited to the meetings of the Protestants, as we called them. After two years I realized that I was a sinful woman and was condemned to hell. I confessed my sin, with tears, and asked God to pardon me, believing in Christ as my Savior.

I am an old lady now and soon must leave this world; but I have peace, because I can say with the Apostle Paul "I know whom I have believed." Christ is my Redeemer, the Lord of my life.

—Elena Rodriguez, Laboulaye.

MORE HOPE FOR THE FUTURE—Here is a future missionary for Argentina, trying desperately already to fill his daddy's shoes. We introduce Master James Paul Dowdy, Jr.

STILL MORE HOPE FOR THE FUTURE—Below are some of the children of our missionaries and national workers in Argentina. The board allows $100 per year to each North American missionary for each child up to the age of 12, and $150 per year from '2 to 18; but what about the children of our national pastors? The board feels that it is unable to make this same allowance for them. However, from time to time the board has afforded the national pastors substantial allowances to help in the care and education of their children. How about a gift this year to the South American Helper's Children's Fund? $_____(?) will support the child of one of our national pastors for one year. That gift also would be pleasing to the Lord.

YES OODLES OF HOPE FOR THE FUTURE—Only in Africa This Time. When the editor first saw this picture, he immediately exclaimed: THE PHILOSOPHERS OF THE MORROW.

Really, don't they look it? Those craniums are not empty. Who shall say that such as these are not worth saving, though their skins are of different hue from our own?

A Letter of Thanks

From ANTONIO GAMARRA, Rio Cuarto, Argentina

I am writing to tell you that, like the Apostle Paul, I feel that I am "debtor" (Rom. 1:14); debtor to all men, but especially to you Brethren, for the following reasons:

First, because you sent missionaries to this land bringing the good news of salvation, and I have been privileged to hear, and to accept Christ as my only Savior. Now, the blessings that I have received through having the Lord in my life are so many, that I am not able to number them. For this reason I feel myself a debtor to you, and say, "Thank you, brethren!"

In second place, I feel that I owe a debt to you, because during these last three years you have paid my way through the seminary in Buenos Aires. There I learned how to study systematically the Word of God. I reaped some of the fruits of the experience of consecrated servants of the Lord. I came to realize that a worker in the vineyard of the Lord needs to know how to handle many instruments in order to be efficient. Also I learned that while an intellectual knowledge of Christ is good, it is necessary to give to the Lord Himself His own proper place in the life. During these three years I have been able to comprehend more and more of the need of the gospel among our people. There are places where the gospel has never been proclaimed. There are large cities that have no testimony of the gospel. Seeing these urgent needs, my spirit was filled with enthusiasm to face all the problems there may be in the ministry and to carry forward the work of the Lord.

In the seminary I learned many things that I shall now be able to put into practice. Also I had to unlearn or lay aside many customs which were not fitting; ideas that would be injurious in my life as a minister. Now I do not think I know everything. I know that I lack much yet, much that I should know in order to be an efficient worker; but I am disposed to fight on in this world of darkness, and with the help of the Lord I know that the victory is sure.

In the third place, I am debtor to you because you are supporting our work with your offerings and prayers. Because you are doing this, I am able to dedicate my life and all my energies to preach the blessed gospel to sinners, knowing that it is the only remedy that can save them.

These motives, and others not enumerated here, are those which make me feel myself a debtor to you. Again, I wish to say: thank you brethren. "Your labor is not in vain in the Lord" (I Cor. 15:58). May the Lord bless you, is the sincere desire of your brother in Christ.

"I AM COUNTING ON THEM"

"Did you not suffer a great deal on the cross Master?" asked Michael.

"Yes," answered Jesus, simply.

"How many know of your dying for them on the cross?" asked Michael.

"The people of Jerusalem and Judea know of it," he said.

"But did you die for the whole world, Master, and how are they to hear about it?" asked Michael.

"Yes, I died for the world, and I have told Peter and Andrew, James and John, and the rest to go tell the world," said Jesus.

"But suppose, Master," inquired Michael, anxiously, "that Peter and Andrew and the rest will not go. Have you made any other arrangements?"

"No," said Jesus; "I am counting on them."

IN MEMORY OF MRS. MAXIMINO PEREIRA

By ELENA BONOMO de TISSERA, Laboulaye

December 13, 1941, after suffering a long and painful illness, our dear and beloved sister in Christ, the wife of our pastor Pereira, went to be with the Lord.

We shall not be able to express in these few lines the deep feeling and heartache which this separation has caused. The vacancy left in her home and in her place of service is great. We accept with complete resignation the will of God, because our departed sister herself said always, "The Lord's will be done, not ours."

Since the year 1937 when Dona Carmen, as we lovingly called her, came with her husband to take charge of our congregation, until the last day that she was with us, we could see reflected in her the power of God through her spirit of self-denial in the work to which the Lord Himself had called her. She inspired us with that same fervent enthusiasm and that unbreakable faith that characterized her own life, and shared in the persecutions and sorrows as well as in the happiness and joy of those around her. She was the spiritual stronghold of our women's society, presiding over the organization and its work with the maximum of ability and Christian love. She exhorted us always to keep our lives as shining lights in the midst of the gloomy darkness of this world of sin and vanity.

Christ, before going to occupy the heavenly throne, said: "I go to prepare a place for you . . . that where I am there you may be also." This promise, which we keep in our hearts, takes away the heartache and replaces it with the joy of knowing that where our sister has gone, we shall also go to enjoy the eternal life which is ours through the precious blood of the Lord Jesus.

We sincerely ask all our sisters in the Lord to take to the throne of grace the petition for consolation and strength for our pastor, in order that he may be able to continue in his ministry of evangelization.

"Indifference to missions means the forfeiture of Christ's favor and presence."

"A praying church will be a living church, a missionary church, a conquering church."

CONCERNING THE STEREOPTICAN LECTURES ON AFRICA

Hereafter, Brother Homer A. Kent, of Grace Theological Seminary, Winona Lake, Indiana, will be in charge of the loaning of the slides and lectures on our work in Africa. Any Church desiring to borrow them will please make application of Brother Kent.

Difficulties and Victories with African Women

By MRS. ORVILLE D. JOBSON

"Burden Bearers"

The African women may truly be called the "burden bearers," for indeed the heavy end of the load is theirs to bear. They work the gardens, carry the water, bring home the fire wood, care for their huts, prepare the food, and care for the family. There is little time for anything but work and labor. The old men of the village never cease to remind them that they are much inferior to them in every way. Especially is this true when they express their desires to learn to read the "white man's tattoo" (writing).

In the beginning days of the mission, the task of winning the women for Christ was very difficult because of this "inferior complex" developed thru the centuries. However, thru prayer and constant effort on the part of the missionaries, God has heard prayer; and now some of the "burden bearers" have had their burden of sin at least lifted by the great "Burden-bearer," our Lord Jesus Christ. True it is that many of the material burdens are still theirs; but what a different attitude prevails in their hearts. Many of them are learning to memorize the Word of God, and a large number have learned to read that Word.

Each Station conducts separate classes for the girls and women, where they can learn to read the Word of God. In the villages, as well, there are a number of classes for those who cannot attend at the stations. These classes, for the most part, are held either very early in the morning, or in the late afternoon, so that this work does not conflict with their garden hours.

The happy girl is the one whose fiance or husband is a Christian worker; for then she is encouraged to read the printed Scriptures, so as to be a good helpmeet for her lover. Philip, one of the native workers, was so anxious that his wife learn to read the Scriptures that he taught her himself. She is now able to help others who have not had the privilege of attending Bible Reading Classes.

At one of our African Bible Conferences, held at Bassai two years ago, we put on a reading test for the women. A middle aged woman, who had had very little opportunity to attend classes, but who put herself to the task of learning to read, read portions from the Word of God in two languages. She did not win the prize, but every one present at the contest was deeply impressed with her zeal to know the Word by reading it for herself. The Lord blessed her efforts, and she has had a great ministry among other women in the town where her husband is located as an evangelist. She had great odds to overcome, but she was faithful; and she is happy now that she too can read from God's Word.

Alice Madai, one of the faithful girls in her class, attended the reading classes when she was just a little tot. She grew to be a fluent reader. She married a young evangelist by the name of Etienne (this is the French for Stephen). Later God called them to preach the gospel at Bocaranga, a government post, about 75 miles from Bozoum. Before leaving the mission, the native Christians gave them a farewell service. In connection with the service there was a little shower. The women of the church gave enough money to buy Alice a new New Testament and some dishes. Before the close of the service the native pastor called on Alice for a few words. She stood timidly and said: "I am happy to be able to do the work of the Lord. I will try to teach the women there to read God's Word." Some months after, missionaries visiting Bocaranga found Alice busy at her work of teaching girls and women to read, and there were over 20 enrolled.

As we look back to the beginning days when the women were so slow, we do praise God that we did not give up. Today, because of God's faithfulness, we are seeing what our eyes longed to see—"Christian women reading the Scriptures in their own tongue." Is anything too hard for God? No, He always rewards with an "exceeding abundantly" as we work and pray. Pray that the women may continue to grow in grace, and in the knowledge of the Word which they can now read for themselves.

Enemy Bombs DROPPED WITHIN 500 MILES OF OUR MISSION IN FREE FRENCH AFRICA

By ORVILLE D. JOBSON

The following Associated Press dispatch from London appeared in a Salt Lake, Utah, paper on Jan. 23:

"FRENCH AFRICA AREA BOMBED"

"Free French Headquarters announced Friday night that an unidentified twin-engine aircraft bombed Fort Lamy, capital of the Cnad Territory, in French Equatorial Africa, shortly after noon Friday.

"The French statement said 12 German-made bombs were dropped.

'Considering the distance between Fort Lamy and the closest air base of the enemy in Libya,' the statement continued, 'the question arises whether the attacking aircraft did not have to refuel at an African airport controlled by the Vichy Government'."

The scene of this bombing is just about 500 miles from our mission work in Oubangui-Chari. This brings the possibilities of war closer than ever to our cherished African work. This news should be of intense interest to The Brethren Church, and should send us all to our knees in prayer that God will protect our representatives and the thousands of Christians that have been won to the Lord through their constant and consecrated efforts during the past 20 years.

These are hard and difficult days for the foreign mission program, but God will honor a church which will go forward and trust Him through the hardships. Many foreign boards are "just giving up" until better days can be seen ahead. But let us not become discouraged. God, can, and will work for us thru the every day events of these war-torn days. As long as our missionaries are willing to remain of the field, and as long as men and women come forward to hazard their lives in ocean crossings, certainly the church will not fail to stand behind them.

Several days ago I received a letter from our much loved native elder at Bozoum, Noel Gaiwaka. After telling of the many souls that have recently come to the Lord, and of the shortage of trained workers to cope with the needs of the infant church, he made one request, "Pastor, pray for me. I ask you only one thing, pastor; pray for me, that I may be found faithfully serving the Lord until He comes back again." And this is the request of every missionary to our African field. "Brethren, pray for us." This is the request of the missionaries on the field, who face the strain of possible separation from you because of travel and passport difficulties. This is the request of those of us at home on furolugh, who are only too wiling to return if only passage can be secured. This is the request of the newly approved missionaries, who are looking forward to getting to the field to help share the responsibilities of front line service.

You have all learned thru articles from Africa that your Africa missionaries have, for many years, observed the 15th day of each month as a definite day of prayer. This day is also observed by the native church. On several occasions the need has been so great that both missionaries and native Christians have made this day a day of "prayer and fasting." Why not join with them on the 15th of this month? Such a prayer meeting will be held in Long Beach on the 15th. In fact for several months now, some of the members of this church have been meeting on this date for definite prayer for the African work. The need of our African work at this crucial moment is prayer, and in this need every church can cooperate.

FREE FRENCH GOVERNMENT PROTECTS FRENCH EVANGELICAL MISSIONS

By ORVILLE D. JOBSON

Ernest Gordon, in his "Survey of Religious Life and Thought" in the Sunday School Times for Jan. 10, 1942, states that "General De Gaulle protects French Evangelical Missions in Africa, and a special credit has been asked for by the governor of the Gaboon for the help of missionaries in his territory."

This is just another token from the Lord that He will guide governments and nations to permit His servants to herald the gospel story to Africa's still unreached thousands, until His church is completed.

The particular mission here referred to is the French Evangelical Mission of the Gaboon, which, since the occupation of France, has no means of support, being cut off from its home base. The De Gaulle Government, recognizing the value of this mission's services, requests that support be given them. There are several other missions in Free French territory that are almost or entirely cut off from their home base. For example, the Swedish Missions in the Moyen-Congo and Oubangui-Chari colonies; also the Norwegian Mission in the Cameroun. We trust that these missions will also be given some financial aid.

The men who are leading the Free French Government are men who love liberty and freedom; and some of them recognize that the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ is a gospel of freedom. Before we left Africa last March, I called upon the governor of Oubangui-Chari to make our farewells; and as we stood on the steps of his home he said, "Tell the folks in America that there are still a few Frenchmen who are not willing to sign a disgraceful armistice with Germany." And then he added, "Aurevoir, have a good furlough and hurry back." With men of this type at the head of the French Colonial Government, our mission should enjoy a time of unparalleled favor from the authorities that be.

Robert Moffat, the African missionary, on being asked to write in an autograph album, penned the following lines:

"My album is in heathen breasts,
Where passions reign and darkness rests
Without one ray of light;
To write the name of Jesus there,
And point to the worlds all bright and fair,
And see the heathen bow in prayer,
Is all my soul's delight."

TENNYSON'S GREAT PROPHECY

About ninety years ago, Alfred Tennyson, Britain's great poet wrote Locksley Hall. In this work appear the following lines:

For I dipt into the future far as human eye could see,
Saw the vision of the world, and all the wonder that would be;
Saw the heavens fill with commerce, argosies of magic sails,
Pilots of the purple twilight, dropping down with costly bales;
Heard the heavens fill with shouting, and there rain'd a ghastly dew
From the nations' airy navies grappling in the central blue;
Far along the world-wide whisper of the south wind rushing warm,
With the standards of the peoples plunging thro' the thunder storm;
Till the war drum throbb'd no longer, and the battle flags were furl'd
In Parliament of man, the Federation of the world.

Alfred Tennyson must have been perusing the Scriptures. One thing sure, "the nations' airy navies" are "grappling in the central blue," and "the heavens" are filled "with shouting, and there rain'd a ghastly dew." The question that concerns the true believer in the Word, now is, will "the Parliament of man, the Federation of the world," follow the present rains of ghastly dew? Is so, the Scripture that cannot be broken, reveals the head of such a federation, and it will be none other than the Antichrist. No "Parliament of man," no "Federation of the world" will ever save this poor, old, sinful world. The sons of Adam must be born again before the ghastly dew will cease to fall. Just beyond the "Parliament of men, the Federation of the world" lies that glorious day when our Lord Jesus Christ shall return from the heaven, restore David's throne, and reign. Then, and not until then, will "sorrow and sighing flee away" (Isa. 35:10).

Why Not PRAY FOR SOULS! WORK FOR SOULS! EXPECT SOULS SAVED!

Grace Theological Seminary Association

President, REV. KENNETH ASHMAN

Sec'y REV. JOHN SQUIRES Treas., REV. DONALD CARTER

"For by grace are ye saved." How wonderful to know that the all-sufficient grace of our Lord Jesus Christ has been sufficient to save us from the condemnation and the guilt of sin. For this fact and assurance, every true Christian is greatly rejoiced. It is also true that a different "Grace" has saved many young men and women from the condemnation of falsehood and deceit. Were it not for Grace Seminary, many Brethren, as well as others, would be led into educational systems where the truth is a stranger and where the lies of the devil have a prominent place in the curriculum. We greatly rejoice because of the fact that we have a seminary where truth and understanding are joined in one purposeful effort—that of imparting the Word of God unto students who are anxious to hear and know.

Some of us have passed through the classes of Grace and are now on the field of service. We remember, with much thanksgiving, the wonderful blessings bestowed upon us while we were yet members of those classes. To those now attending Grace Seminary, we urge a devotion to study, a consecration to God, and a promotion to full time worship and service. To those who shall attend Grace Seminary in the years to come—to you we promise that, by the grace of Almighty God, there will continue to be a Grace Seminary, that there will continue to be God-fearing men there to teach you, that there will continue to be an ever-increasing group of saints of the Lord interested in your progress and making possible your preparation. This is the promise to which the Grace Theological Seminary Alumni Association has set itself to perform. A big promise! Yes, but we have every faith to believe that the God "Who hath begun a good work in you will be able to perform it" even unto the end.

Following are portions from a letter being sent to all former graduates or students of Grace Seminary. The letter, from John Squires, alumni secretary, is self explanatory. We urge you to read it; follow its instructions and appeals that the promise of the Alumni Association shall see its keeping begun at once.

To Former Students of Grace Theological Seminary:

"The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all."

We need your help. An opportunity to serve the school that has so effectively and efficiently served you has arisen. That which you received at Grace Seminary has brought untold blessing into your life. A fuller knowledge of the Word of God, a greater love for Christ, a richer experience through Christian fellowship have all been yours at Grace Seminary. Would you like to help in bringing these things to others? We are confident that you would. Therefore, we are inviting you to become a member of the Grace Alumni Association.

It is the purpose of the Alumni Association to undertake such projects for the Seminary as will promote its growth and spread its name. All former students will be glad for the opportunity to band themselves together in an organization, which will keep alive the spirit of fellowship that they knew among former classmates.

Would you like to become a charter member of the Alumni Association of Grace Theological Seminary? We are sure you would, therefore we are writing you to tell how it can be done. You will be interested to know that the first person to become a charter member of the Alumni Association is Robert A. Ashman of the class of '36, and now pastor of the First Brethren Church, Peru, Ind.

The Grace Seminary Alumni Association was organized at Winona Lake, Ind., on August 29, 1941, during the 52nd National Fellowship of Brethren Churches. Officers were chosen, and steps taken to bring the Alumni Association to the attention of all students who have been under the ministry of Dr. Alva J. McClain either prior to or after 1930.

It was decided to admit for membership in the Grace Alumni Association all former students and graduates who were under Dr. McClain in Ashland Seminary during the years 1930 to 1937. The reasons for the inclusion of Ashland Seminary graduates, 1930 to 1937, in the Grace Seminary Alumni Association are set forth in the following item from the pen of Dr. Alva R. McClain. Please don't fail to read his item carefully.

The Alumni Association has also extended the privilege of "Associate Membership" to any who have taken work in the classes of Dr. McClain at Ashland, either before or after 1930, and also to non-graduates who have taken work in any of the classes at Grace Seminary.

Classification of Members

1. All graduates, either by degree or diploma, from Grace Seminary or from Ashland Seminary during the years 1930 to 1937, shall become regular members of the Grace Alumni Association upon payment of not less than $1.00 per year dues. Please note we are not limiting regular members to $1.00.
2. All part-time non-grauates, who have taken work in any of the classes at Grace Seminary or in the classes of Dr. McClain at Ashland, either before or after 1930, shall become associate members upon the basis of a contribution of an undesignated amount. No set fee.
3. All friends of Grace Seminary, not having taken work of any kind in the Seminary may become honorary members by making a contribution or donation to the Alumni Association. No set dues. These members shall not be considered as regular or associate.

Yours because of Grace,

—John Squires, Sec'y.

Membership In The Alumni Association of Grace Theological Seminary

By Alva J. McClain

At the suggestion of many former students at Ashland Theological Seminary, the Alumni Association of Grace Theological Seminary has voted to admit as regular members of the Association all students who graduated from the former institution during the years 1930 to 1937. The reasons for this action are as follows:

1. When Grace Seminary was organized in 1937, its faculty included all the teachers from Ashland Seminary except ONE, and the dean of Ashland Seminary became president of the new institution.

2. In 1937 all except ONE of the Brethren students at Ashland Seminary transferred to Grace Seminary.

3. All except THREE of the Brethren alumni of Ashland Seminary, from its organization as a graduate school in 1930 to the year 1937, have transferred their support to Grace Seminary.

4. The doctrinal position, spiritual ideals, and curriculum plan, as established at Ashland Seminary in 1930 under the direction of Dr. Alva J. McClain, and repudiated in part by the Ashland College Board of Trustees in 1937, have been established and are now being carried on at Grace Theological Seminary under a Brethren Board of Trustees which is in complete sympathy with them.

5. The attitudes and policies of those now in control of Ashland College and Seminary indicate clearly a definite trend toward liberalism in theology and worldliness in life and conduct.

6. All attempts on the part of alumni to reverse this liberalistic trend have been rendered useless by means of ecclesiastical pressure, those in control not hesitating to excommunicate from their conferences any alumni who have the courage to criticize the present tendencies at Ashland.

For the above reasons, the friends of Grace Theological Seminary regard this school as the true successor of Ashland Theological Seminary as it existed from the date of its organization in 1930 to the year 1937, and its graduates during that period are cordially extended the privilege of regular membership in the Alumni Association of Grace Seminary.

The Alumni Association has also extended the privilege of "Associate Membership" to any who may have taken work in the classes of Dr. McClain at Ashland, either before or after 1930, and also to non-graduates who have taken work in any of the classes at Grace Seminary.

A WORD OF EXPLANATION

A further word of explanation is needed. The above articles set forth the purpose and plan of the Grace Alumni Association. To all who are eligible to become "regular" or "associate" members, letters containing the above information and a membership blanks are being forwared shortly by the secretary of the Association. To those who wish to become "honorary" members, we give the following instructions: (1) Fill out the blank below, giving all the information requested. (2) Send the completed blank, with as large a gift as you feel you desire to give, to the Association secretary, Rev. John Squires, 136 N. Market St., Wooster, O. There are no special privileges connected with "honorary" membership, other than a prior right to attend the Alumni gatherings which will be held in connection with Grace Seminary graduation exercises and the Annual Fellowship of Brethren Churches. Facilities for handling these gatherings are always limited. Your honorary membership will entitle you to a first consideration. Of more importance, your honorary membership gives you the distinction of being one of the many Brethren who are helpng to maintain a school with a testimony greatly needed in these evil times. It further makes certain the success of this, the most effective means of prospering and maintaining Grace Theological Seminary.

In closing, may we introduce you to our Association officers. Rev. John Squires, pastor of our mission church at Wooster, O., is our efficient secretary. Rev. Squires is a member of the class of 1939. Rev. Donald Carter, pastor of our church at La Verne, Calif., is our treasurer. Rev. Carter is a member of the class of 1934 (Ashland). The following are serving on temporary committees, which will report to the Association at the 53rd Annual Fellowship of Brethren Church at Winona Lake, Ind., Rules and Regulations; Rev. Norman Uphouse, chairman, Rev. Jack Simmons, Rev. Russell Williams; Program, Rev. Arnold Kriegbaum, chairman, Rev. Lew Grubb, Rev. Arthur Carey; Project, Rev. Robert Miller, chairman Rev. Arthur Malles, Rev. Tom Hammers.

A GOOD ANSWER

A New Hebrides chieftain sat peacefully reading the Bible, when he was interrupted by a French trader. "Bah," he said, in French, "why are you reading the Bible? I suppose the missionaries have got hold of you, you poor fool. Throw it away! The Bible never did anybody any good." Replied the chieftain, calmly, "If it wasn't for this Bible, you'd be in my kettle there by now!"—Ex.

Wouldn't it be embarassing to our children for missionaries to come from Africa to North America to preach the gospel because their forefathers failed to establish it here? You say, "That sounds foolish." No, it is not foolish when you read in church history that Africa had the gospel before America, but failed to do what we are now failing to do when we will not support missions. Neglecting missions is a very serious matter. Sel.

AN AFRICAN GRAVE

J. P. KLIEVER, Our C.E. Missionary

This is the story of one grave I saw, and there are many others like it in Africa.

Walking along a small trail we came to a mound resembling an ant hill, so common in Africa. On this mound is a presentation of household goods, a helmet, a beer kettle, a pair of shoes, a knife and numerous other things. This is a grave! There is a little marking post on the edge of it, but there is nothing written on it.

We ask whose grave this is. The answer is that it is the grave of the chief. He continues to say to us, "There was a paper with his picture on it tied to that post, but the goats ate it!" We don't laugh, because he didn't tell it to us to laugh at; nor is it anything to express sorrow at, because what matter if the goat ate the picture? Everyone knows they put the picture there, and he was telling this merely to let us know there was something we couldn't see any more.

The notives decorate their graves, some of them, not with flowers as we do, but with these things which are the things formerly cherished by the one buried there. It is also an expression of honor and a sign of mourning. They realize they have been seperated from their chief. They are grieving, and this is an expression of it.

Yes, separated! Some will be raised later to be reunited again in the sufferings of torment! As we think on this, we can't help but hate sin that is the cause of death and this coming doom, eternal separation from God.

But immediately our hearts lift in thanksgiving. Jesus came to take that away. "There is therefore now no condemnation to those who are in Christ Jesus." How happy that someone came and told us, and kept telling us until we too were led into that saving faith! Thankful that we were told in time!

Then comes the challenge. There need not be deaths like this—the separation that seals a later reunion with those who refused Christ, those who did not seek after God, to suffer the eternal condemnation and judgment of Satan.

Someone told us; therefore we must tell others also! We again pledge ourselves to go more zealously to the "telling of the story" that makes death a "doorway" into the glorious presence of God and eternal joys, and no longer the "clang" that closes the door to grace and seals unto the doom of the devil.

Will you not also pledge yourselves unto this work more fully and even more fully? Yes, give yourself to the Lord; yes, give of your means to the end that the gospel may go forth; but above all give yourselves to become another Epaphrus of Col. 4:12. In other words, become a prayer warrior to back up those on the front line of battle, at home and everywhere. God cannot refuse the heart-cry of his children; He has promised.

We give to you in parting our prayer request voiced in the words of II Thess. 3:1-5.

NEWS BRIEFS From Our Workers

Mention is made in a Southern California bulletin that BRO. W. A. OGDEN, pastor of the First Brethren Church of Los Angeles, has been taken quite seriously ill.

The last week in February was a busy one for BRO. R. E. GINGRICH, pastor at Ellet, O. He was engaged in a week of special services in the Loyal Oak Reformed Church from Sunday evening through Friday; and on Saturday night, he, with the young people's chorus, appeared in a district Slovak Baptist Young People's Rally.

The Brethren Young People's Rally of the EAST CENTRAL DISTRICT (formerly Northeast Ohio), to be held at the W. 10th St. Brethren Church in Ashland on Mar. 27, promises to be a good one. Bro. and Sister Curtis Morrill, now on furlough from Africa, and Bro. and Sister Garner Hoyt, missionary candidates who hope to be able to secure passage to Africa this year, will be present. Young people of this district are also looking forward to CAMP BUCKEYE, which is scheduled to convene this year from June 27-27. The America Back to God Quartette, well known radio quartette of Detroit, has agreed to be in camp all that week.

A series of message on the return of our Lord is being broadcast over WSLS, ROANOKE, VA., on Friday mornings at 8:30. The speaker is Bro. Herman Koontz, pastor of the Ghent Brethren Church, and the program is known as The Church on the Hill program.

The First Brethren Bible School of SAN DIEGO, CALIF., has set as its goal an attendance of 200 by Easter. If it fails to reach this goal, it won't be the fault of Mrs. Laughlin, Mrs. C. W. Smith, Mrs. Mary Remmerde, and Mrs. Mildred Galloway, four of its present members, who walked for four hours to canvass the Linda Vista district one afternoon recently.

The West 10th St. Brethren Church of ASHLAND, O., has started a primary church for the beginners and primaries of its Bible School. This enables both parents and children to really enjoy the worship services.

The Pike Brethren Church of MUNDY'S CORNERS, Pa., is using every possible means to have a large Easter offering. During February each family was given a bank to put on the table at home, and the plan was for each member to put in a love offering at least once a day, or better still, at each mealtime. All banks were returned to the church by Sunday evening, Mar. 1, and an award was presented to the family bringing the heaviest bank. During March all members of the Bible School, old or young, are endeavoring to see how many dimes they can put in their dimes collectors, which are to be turned in on Apr. 5th. Then, several weeks before Easter, the Easter offering envelopes for the final offering will be mailed to each family with some missionary literature. Where needed, more than one bank will be available to a family, or more than one dime collector to an individual. It is hoped that the above plan will enable the church to reach its $600 goal for foreign missions.

...Continents! One Bible!

The white and black portions of the two American Continents shown here were discovered and colonized at about the same time. Any difference of opportunity or of resources that may have existed between them was in favor of the southern Continent. However the northern land prospered greatly from the very beginning in all those things that make life worth while. The southern countries grovelled for four centuries, and still grovel, in almost universal destitution, illiteracy and illegitimacy. WHY? The answer is clear. The countries above the Rio Grand were given the Bible and the Protestant faith of the Pilgrim Fathers. Those to the south were given the sword of the Spaniard and the idols of the priests of Rome. The map tells the rest of the story!

Neglected Opportunity

The percentage shown for the countries north of the Rio Grande would be even lower were it not for Roman Catholic Quebec in Canada, and the foreign-born Romanists in the United States. The figures for the Latin American countries are, on the whole, approximate, due to the fact that some of the more backward nations down there do not keep careful records of vital statistics. However, the percentages given are those of the most conservative estimates from authoritative sources.

Poor "Neglected Continent!" But, if our Lord shall tarry—verily, LAND OF THE FUTURE! Shall we give her the Word of God?

OUR SISTER CONTINENT CALLS FOR A SAVIOUR!

SHALL WE ANSWER THE CALL?

SUGGESTIONS FOR PROGRAM

Posters for this meeting can be made very attractive with pictures of Chinese faces, either sketched or cut-outs. If invitations are sent out, they might be cut out in the form of a map of China. If you want a church which has a 100% W.M.C., you will have to make your work look interesting. Have you tried sending out special invitations to the women of your church who do not belong to the Council? Remember the slogan, "It Pays To Advertise," and get busy. Every wide-awake W.M.C. should have a poster up every meeting, not for the benefit of members but to create an interest in the work on the part of the women who do not belong. If you serve refreshments at your meeting, you might serve rice in some form, and tea, or perhaps some other Chinese dish.

STUDIES IN THE EPHESIANS VII

"The Walk of The Church In The World"

Ephesians 4:1-16

By HOMER A. KENT

Grace Theological Seminary

Beginning with chap. 4, we have the second main division of Ephesians. The first three chapters of the book are preeminently doctrinal in their tone. The last three chapters are practical. In the first three chapters the inspired apostle draws the portrait of the chuch. He presents it in its conception in the mind of God. He shows the material out of which the church is being built, namely, sinful men and women who by grace are made new creatures in Christ Jesus. He declares the remarkable fact that the church is constituted of Jew and Gentile who are brought together to form a new body.

Now we come to the practical part of the epistle. Correct doctrine leads to correct practice. That is what we have in this letter. First, there is presented the true doctrine of the church as to its origin and constitution. Second, there is shown the nature of the walk of the church in the world. In the first instance, we see the church as God looks upon it. In the second instance, we see the church as God wants the world to see it. Bishop Moule calls the second section of the book, "Holy Results of Heavenly Blessing."

In these days when there is so much tendency to discount the importance of Christian doctrine, we shall do well again to notice the order of presentation of material in the epistle to the Ephesians. The apostle first lays a strong foundation of doctrine. He then builds upon this foundation a holy life. This order dare not be reversed. What a man believes will determine what he will do. Faith comes first, then practice; the tree, then the fruit; the foundation, after that the superstructure.

In keeping with the plan of the epistle, the chapter before us opens with the exhortation, "I, therefore, ... beseech you that ye walk worthy of the vocation wherewith ye are called." In 4:1-16, the emphasis is upon the unity that should characterize the walk of the church upon earth. The true church of Christ is a united body bound together by the ties of Christ's blood and Spirit. In this connection note:

The Christian Virtues that Sustain Unity Among Christ's Followers (vs. 1-3).

Lowliness (v. 2). The Christian should never think of himself more highly than he ought to think. He belongs to Christ who humbled himself.

Meekness (v. 2). The Christian should accept God's dealings with him in the spirit of resignation. He should receive injuries from men patiently, realizing that often God permits them for our chastizement.

Longsuffering (v. 2). The Christian ought not be quick to take offense when others say or do things against him. How can he when he remembers Christ?

Forbearance (v. 2). The Christian has need to learn to bear with one another, especially with weaker brethren or babes in Christ.

Love (v. 2). Enough love will unite us all in the bonds of Christian fellowship.

Diligence (v. 3). "Endeavoring to keep the unity" means to give diligence to or attention to the matter of unity. Christian unity deserves some attention. It must be nurtured. It will not grow if neglected. Note again,

The Fundamental Unities Which Uurge Church Unity (vs. 4:6).

There are seven of them. Note them carefully:

One body (v. 4). The church is one body, not many. This argues for unity of operation. What happens in the physical body when one member becomes obstinate?

One Spirit (v. 4). The Holy Spirit resides in the entire body which is the church. He does not lead to disunity.

One hope (v. 4). The church is exhorted to be looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ (Tit. 2:13). This is a unifying hope.

One Lord (v. 5). He is our Head and from Him each member of the church is to receive instructions.

One Faith (v. 5). How does the rich man come to Christ? the poor man? the black man? the white man? Through faith in the Lord Jesus Christ.

One Baptism (v. 5). It is probably not water baptism that is referred to here, but rather that of which water baptism is the symbol. "For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body" (I Cor. 12:12).

One God and Father (v. 6). It is not one God for each congregation of believers, but the same God and Father is over us all. The church is therefore presented as a great family. It is a unity.

The Diversity of Gifts in the United Church (vs. 7-16).

Unity in the church does not mean that we all have the same gifts. Unity does not mean monotony. The church is one body but not every member of the body has the same function.

In vs. 7-11 we are given to see that the various members in the body of Christ have different gifts, different graces, different callings and responsibilities. Some are greater than others. All are for the edifying of the church. It is not for the individual to question the character of his grace, but rather to find out what it is and put it to the best possible use.

In vs. 12-16, the end and aim of the various gifts and graces among the members of the body of Christ are set forth. Why are these gifts bestowed upon the church? They are (1) for the perfecting of the saints, (2) for the work of the ministry, (3) for the edifying of the body of Christ, and (4) that we may grow up "into Him." The great purpose of each Christian life therefore is to glorify Christ.

"Open Doors" -

A MIGHTY HEART PREPARED BY GOD FOR CHINA

By MRS. ARTHUR CAREY

The life of J. Hudson Taylor is remarkable mainly because of his reliance upon God. He often remarked that God had to find someone small enough to carry on His work, and that God found him.

His early life was carefully guarded and protected by godly parents, who believed that a child brought up in the way he should go would not depart from it when he was old. He became converted through the reading of a tract. But it was soon revealed that his mother, some 80 miles away, had been praying definitely all afternoon for the salvation of her son. He was then about 16 years of age. He was weak physically as a child and a young man, but God was preparing a mighty heart for China. At the age of 17 he gave himself wholly to God for China. He had received his call and he had not failed to answer.

Unlike many Christians, he did not tell the Lord what to do. Many of us say, "Here I am, Lord, you prepare the way and do all the work and I'll take the glory." Instead, he immediately determined to know the Chinese language. With only a Gospel of Luke in Chinese, he learned the meaning of more than 600 characters simply by comparing verse with verse to the English copy. Also he realized that a missionary must know a great deal about the temporal needs of mankind, so he worked for quite some time in a doctor's office. Nor did he neglect the exercise of personal evangelism. Each Sunday afternoon was spent in preaching to those in the poorer parts of town. He began to realize what a refined and easy life he had; so determined to teach himself some of the hardships in life, thus preparing himself for the mission field. He moved to a poor section of town and schooled himself to do without many things, even sufficient food at times. Also the ministry of suffering was not lacking. His health frequently was a trial, and he was rejected as a lover because of his determination to serve God in China.

All through the story of his life in China, there runs the refrain of complete reliance on Christ. When money was needed he asked God instead of men, and then waited on God to supply it. God never failed to supply it when it was actually needed. When more missionaries were sorely needed, Mr. Taylor asked God for them; and the amazing thing is that God supplied the number that was asked for, seldom more, seldom less.

It was Mr. Taylor's vision to evangelize inland China.

Idols Worshipped by the Chinese

Three Chinese Converts

He felt that what he and others were doing was only touching the fringe. He felt led of God to adopt the Chinese dress and break his connection with the mission band he was with, and to press deeper inland, relying wholly on God for his support. He began to receive money from individuals in England, and several groups of native believers were formed under his guidance, and he felt the blessing of God on his life.

Many, however, were the trials and discouragements; but God kept reminding him that He is faithful, though all else fail. Some nights were spent in the streets, some days food was not plentiful, the heat and filth were unendurable except for the grace of God. But God was preparing his heart for a still greater ministry.

Ill health caused Mr. Taylor and his family to return to England in 1860, and for five long hidden years they lived in East London, apparently "on the shelf." But is was in these years that the great China Inland Mission was formed, first in the mind and heart of J. Hudson Taylor, then in others, and finally in 16 volunteers to go out in faith in God's promises. 24 was the number he had asked God for, but God saw fit to send 16 plus Taylor's four small children. What an undertaking for one man to assume, leaning wholly upon God. A Mr. Berger in London assumed the work at home, caring for the funds from friends and various denominations which had become interested during the formation years between 1860 and 1866 while Mr. Taylor was in London. Many were the gifts that were received—unasked except as they were asked of God. Mr. Taylor did not underestimate the burden that was his in 20 people relying upon him for support. Day by day he asked for faith to trust God for these necessary things of life.

Concerning his personal life, God gave J. Hudson Taylor loved ones and took away loved ones; but in all, each experience drew him to a deeper dependency on God and a realization that all things work together for good. The leadership of the mission he lay down in 1800, five years before his death. At that time there were 750 missionaries, and the income ran to $4,000,000. From 1900-1932 there were 1,285 missionaries. There has been none and is no debt. In answer to Mr. Taylor's prayers and deep desire, 700 Chinese workers were connected with the mission, and the converts baptized from the beginning numbered 13,000. In 1932, there were between 3,000 and 4,000 Chinese workers, and the baptisms alone since 1900 numbered 100,000.

May we, as Missionary Council women, realize that although we will not found a China Inland Mission, yet in our weak way, if we have willing hearts, God will prepare us mighty hearts—not for China perhaps, but for our families, our church, and perhaps even South America or Africa.

"How Beautiful are the Feet of Them That Preach the Gospel--"

YALOKE, F.E.A.
Oct. 4, 1941
By
Mrs. Harold Dunning

Dear Prayer Helpers:

Yaloke Station is preparing for a Junior Bible School. Registration is today. School is expected to run six weeks. It is for all cathechists or evangelists from this field who can come. They provide their own food and other necessities, and in this way many of those who are not really in earnest are weeded out. About 45 are expected to attend.

The purpose of this Bible School is two-fold: not only to teach them more of the Word and enable them to be better teachers in their own villages, but also to fit and prepare some for the Central Bible School at Bozoum next year if the Lord tarries. We are being made more and more conscious of the fact that here, just as there in the States, we must have more trained workers—those who are equipped spiritually and mentally to rightly divide the Word of God.

The Lord has answered prayer in permitting school to start on the planned time. Just a week ago a man was brought into the hospital, and he died a few minutes later with spinal meningitis. Dr. Taber had not yet returned from his evangelization trip in the Boda-M'baiki field (news of the sickness reached him through the administrator, and he returned that night), but a rigid quarantine was quickly established by Miss Tyson. She started us all, natives and missionaries alike, gargling and sniffing potassium permanganate at regular intervals during the day. Then she and Mr. Dunning went to a village where it was heard there was another case, found it to be the same thing, and put them under quarantine along with several intervening villages.

We prayed much not only for the safety of the people living on the station, but also that the quarantine might not be allowed to interfere with the beginning of Bible School. Many of the natives had already left their villages to come in, and would have been caught right in the midst of it. Our God again heard and answered prayer. Quarantine was lifted from the station yesterday, and from other places where no new cases had broken out.

For a long time the missionaries on Yaloke station have felt that the Sunday School needed a reorganization. That has taken place in the last month. There are six groups, each headed by a missionary with monitors to help. Dr. Taber has all the younger children, not only during Sunday School but also during church. Mrs. Taber has the unmarried girls, while Miss Tyson has all the married women—from brides to grandmothers. Mr. Dunning has the unmarried men or boys, and Voloungou has all the other men. I have the "strangers," or women who do not belong ot the Banou Tribe nor understand the language. The men "strangers" are in Mr. Dunning's class. There are short opening exercises as before, then the six different departments are scattered out over the station for the lesson and closing exercises. It makes for much better attention because they don't have to sit through three sermons, only two now: in Sango and Banou. Formerly the closing exercises lasted as long as the church service itself, frequently longer, as Voloungou taught the the S. S. lesson over again to every one.

We know you will praise the Lord with us at the opportunity the Lord has given us to get out into the "highways and byways" with the gospel. Dr. Taber and Voloungou were gone for four weeks in the "carryall," visiting many villages and chapel points where there are professing believers. He without doubt will be writing about his trip, so I will not "steal his thunder."

A few days before Dr. Taber left on his trip, Mr. Dunning and Voloungou returned from a ten day trip into the bush on their bikes. It has been several years since these places had had a visit from a white missionary. They found some Christians who had remained true to the Lord; but oh, so many who were walking the paths of sin again. It is not that the missionary can keep them on the right course, but that they don't have the Word which cleanses. The interval is so long between the times they hear the gospel that many of them actually forget "the old, old story" from one time to the next. Next time you sing, "Tell me the story often, for I forget so soon," don't sing without thinking what you are singing; but then and there lift up your hearts in prayer to God for those who, even if they remember a long time, forget the story before they can hear it again. Thank God for your privilege of being able to hear it and read it as often as you like.

They found those who had heard and forgotten, those who had never heard, and some who said, "I used to know how to read the Book of God, but I've forgotten." That seemed almost the saddest of all. It is a shame that many cannot or do not go far enough in school really to learn how to read. For centuries the African mind has been trained to memorize, not to learn. It is much easier for them to memorize the Gospel of John than to read it. They think they must learn to read every book; they cannot seem to grasp, in the beginning, that if they learn to read John, they should be able to read Mark also.

I THANK HIM

I thank the Lord He's made me see
The blessings He has given me:
A mind to clearly comprehend
That life on earth is not the end;
The Bible given as a guide
To which I only need abide;
The way He set's not hard to go—
Guess it's because I love Him so;
I feel His presence through the day;
He seems so near me when I pray;
He's wiped away so many tears,
That's why I know my prayer He hears;
He died upon the cross for me,
Suff'ring such pain and agony
So that for me there'd be no death
When last I take my earthly breath.
I don't know why He loves me so,
Yet, that He does, I know, I know.
The least that I myself can do
Is please my Lord my whole life through.

DON'T READ THIS IF MONEY TALK BOTHERS YOU!

A covetous man is no more saved than the drunkard, the thief, or the adulterer, yet how few there are that have ever confessed to the sin of covetousness.

1 Cor. 6:9-10, says, "Know ye not that the unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God? Be not deceived, neither fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, nor effeminate, nor abusers of theirselves with mankind, nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor extortioners, shall inherit the kingdom of God."

What Have You Done?

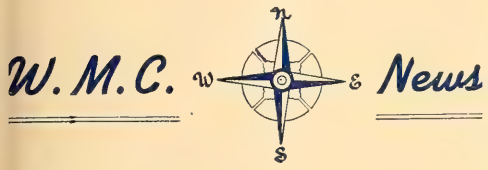
Objective III
LITERATURE SECRETARY
Mrs. Earl Virts

"Let us place a larger emphasis on soul-winning and personal testimony, using tracts wherever possible." This has been one of our W.M.C. goals for the year 1941.

"And they that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmanent; and they that turn many to righteousness, as the stars forever and ever." What a wonderful privilege "to turn many to righteousness!" And what a reward—"shall shine as the stars forever . . . !"

When our Lord Jesus left this earth and ascended into heaven to be with the heavenly Father, He left 12 disciples, to whom He had given the command, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." Had these men failed in their task of soul winning and personal testimony, we today would not have the joy of knowing the Lord Jesus.

We live in a world of unrighteousness and sin, a world of defeat and despair. As disciples of the Lord Jesus Christ, we have the wonderful privilege, through personal testimony, of introducing men to an eternity of satisfaction and blessedness by bringing them to the One Who is eternal life itself—Jesus Christ.



Soul-winning is witnessing faithfully to Christ. He has been and is being falsely judged by the world. We must be His witnesses. We must tell those who are groping in darkness and despair that "He saves, He keeps and He satisfies." What a reward will be ours to see faces become radiant and defeat transformed into victory! How wonderful it will be to greet Him at His appearing with these trophies of grace! No shame for empty hands then!

If we will be soul winners we must be born-again believers. We must know the power of God—that He can and does save. We must know His Word, for it is the word of power and cleansing.

Tracts are often a great help in soul-winning. We have heard it said by many women who are busy in the home that they do not have time nor opportunity to come in contact with the unsaved. Is this true? Aren't there men who read the gas, water and light meters? What about the man who delivers the milk? Who doesn't meet the "Fuller brush man" who wants a few minutes to display his goods, the census taker and the tax assessor? What about the book agent, magazine salesfolk and the countless others who come to our doors? Are they all God's children? Why, the woman of the house doesn't need to go after souls; they are constantly coming to her! Think of the opportunity to witness for Christ! Why not have a good supply of gospel tracts handy, and hand one to each one who comes to our doors? What a door of opportunity in our own homes!

Soul-winning is not alone for the preacher and the Bible School officers and teachers, but it is the business of every one of us who are Christians. Must we not "be about our Father's business"? Didn't Jesus say, " . . . as my Father has sent me, even so send I you?"

GREETINGS FROM JUNIATA, PA. W.M.C.

Greetings from the Juniata, Pa., Women's Missionary Council to our sister councils:

Since our group has subscribed almost 100% to The Brethren Missionary Herald we feel so much closer to you, and find it both interesting and inspirational to read of the activities of other councils.

Although our group is not large in numbers and hasn't gained much in membership over the last year, we feel that we are thriving spiritually; and great interest and faithfulness in attendance is noted at our meetings.

In October we elected the following officers for the year: Pres., Mrs. Elma Dively; Vice-Pres., Mrs. Beatrice Stevens; Sec'y, Mrs. Boyd Yohn; Pianist, Mrs. Edwin Kime; Treas. and Cor. Sec'y, Mrs. Marie Holmes.

At our October meeting we had our annual reconsecration service, held in the church with our retiring president, Mrs. Cecile Pine, in charge. Mrs. Robert Miller, wife of Rev. Robert Miller of Martinsburg, was our speaker. She gave us a very inspiring and helpful message. She also sang several selections.

Our meetings are held regularly on the third Thursday evening of each month. The program booklets are filled out for the entire year with the leader and hostess. We follow the suggested programs found in the Herald, using also the prayer requests as suggested by our National Prayer Chairman.

We like the idea of having a different leader each month, as the responsibility of the program does not fall entirely upon the president and it is good practice for all.

In December, apart from our regular meeting, we held a covered dish supper at the home of one of our members, at which time we packed a box of clothing for our Clayhole, Ky., mission.

We have been having fine response in our offerings, and know the Lord is blessing us spiritually because of the response financially.

Locally, we have remembered our sick on different occasions with cheering gifts, have had several stork showers for ladies in our midst, and otherwise try to show our affection and Christian love to each other.

Our Council is composed of women of all ages from young married ladies to the grandmothers, and we like very much the fellowship we have with each other in these meetings that we would not have otherwise.

We pray for our national work, for the officers, and that the goals may be met; and we covet the prayers of all our sister councils, that we may be found faithful in all things, and that by expecting great things from God, we may attempt great things for Him.

Yours because of Calvary,

—Mrs. Marie Holmes.

LOS ANGELES, CALIF.

Dear Editor:

The W.M.C. ladies of the 2d Brethren Church of Los Angeles held their January meeting in the evening, for the benefit of members who are employed and unable to attend our afternoon meetings; also with the aim to interest the younger women of our church.

We conducted our meeting as usual, with extra musical numbers from our ladies who are not able to attend regularly, thereby giving us all a treat.

Mrs. Pansy Runyon is our president. She is succeeding Mrs. Lily Monroe, who has been our most faithful president for 10 years.

Our meeting closed with motion pictures shown by Mr. Joe Hoffman, taken at conference last fall.

We are looking forward to our all-day meetings when we take up our mission study work. As yet, it has not been decided just what book we will study.

In His service,

—Mrs. Ethel Hay, Cor. Sec'y.

ASHLAND, OHIO

Greetings, fellow W.M.C. members, from the council of W. 10th St. at Ashland!

It is now over six months since our council was organized, and believe it is about time we write in and tell how the Lord has blessed our group.

Last July at our first meeting there were 15 on the roll, and now we have 37. Most of these members are active, while a few because of husbands working etc. cannot always attend meetings but are there in spirit.

Our meetings are the second Friday evening of each month, at which time we study the topics from The Brethren Missionary Herald. We also have our prayer circle, and quite often have a time for praise and testimony.

Since our beginning the Lord has so graciously supplied our needs that we have been able to send in a nice donation for each of the national objectives. Early in the fall we sent a large box of winter clothing to Clayhole, and some of our members have individually done Red Cross work. Also for our home project, our work committee is making clothes for some children who otherwise would not be able to come to Sunday School. Then, too, we are making plans for a "bundle basket" for the expected babies of some of our members.

We are planning on entertaining the District Rally in April, and might say we are fortunate in having our District President, Mrs. A. D. Cashman as one of our members; and she has been a wonderful help to our council as advisor. There were so many things we did not know when and how to do that we feel as though we could not have done without her help, and also the help of Mrs. Chas. Mayes, our pastor's wife.

If anyone were to ask us if the council has been a help to our members we certainly could answer a loud yes. It has helped us to know our Lord better through the study of His Word and our daily Bible reading. It has helped us to know and appreciate our missionaries. We have had the joy of giving our tithes for His great work; and last but not least, it has helped to fill the crying need in our church for the women to know each other better and to be strongly organized to his cause.

—Mrs. Dorothy Bigler.

What ARE WE DOING

ELLET, OHIO

A new junior society was organized in Ellet, O., on Jan. 16. There were 21 girls present for the first meeting. We will expect to hear great things from this group in the future.

LONG BEACH, SECOND

Greetings from the Second Brethren Sisterhood, Long Beach

Although we are a fairly new society, and haven't as large a membership as we would like, we are happy to be working for our Lord and Master. We feel indeed privileged to have as our president, Loraine Sickel..

During the past few months we have been dressing dolls, which are to be sent to the South American native pastors children. We have received a real blessing doing this work.

We have just sent our box to Kentucky, and are working hard to fulfil our other goals that we might be an honor society.

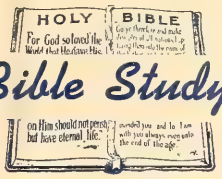
For our January meeting we met at the church for a pot-luck dinner, followed by the candle-light service. Mrs. Sickel conducted the meeting, which was greatly inspirational to all the girls present.

We all look forward to receiving the Herald each month, and enjoy all the letters about your different work in the Sisterhood.

Our prayer is that we all might live closer to our Savior each day of our lives.

Yours in Christ,
—Marceille Williams, Sec'y.

NO TIME FOR GOD?



No time for God?
What fools we are, to clutter up
Our lives with common things
And leave without heart's gate
The Lord of life and life itself—
Our God.

No time for God?
As soon to say, no time
To eat or sleep or love or die.
Take time for God
Or you shall dwarf your soul.
And when the angel Death
Comes knocking at your door,
A poor mishapen thing you'll be
To step into eternity.

No time for God?
That day when sickness comes
Or trouble finds you out
And you cry out for God,—
Will He have time for you?

No time for God?
Some day you'll lay aside
This mortal self and make your way
To worlds unknown,
And when you meet Him face to face,
Will He—should He—
Have time for you?

—Selected.

By FLO MELLICK

THE FIRST EPISTLE OF JOHN

It is a family love letter! This first letter, written by the disciple whom Jesus loved, is a very intimate one from the Father to His little children, His little "born ones."

Are you a "born again one?" Then every time John says, "My little children . . . " (an expression used at least seven times) the Lord has a message for you.

In the Gospel of John the Holy Spirit dwells upon the relationship of the Father and His Beloved Son; in this epistle, upon the Father and His beloved sons. The Gospel brings us to the Father; the epistle makes us at home with Him. John 3:16 is for the lost sinner; I John 1:9 for the Christian who has sinned against the Father and the rest of the family.

Key words found in both Gospel and epistle are whosoever, have, believe, light, life, and love (i.e. not mere emotion or sentimentalism, or just words, but love based on facts that result in action (cf. I Cor. 3).

John tells us that his central purpose in writing his Gospel is that we might believe in Christ and have eternal life (20:31). He writes his letter to those who now believe that they may know they have eternal life)5:13).

Did you ever hear anyone say, "We can't know we're saved until we die?" Notice the number of times the writer uses the word "know," especially 3:2, 4, 14; 13. 5:15, 18, 19, 20. It makes an interesting study, and is guaranteed to chase away all doubts.

It's a wonderful family to which we belong. We have a wonderful Father (cf. passages in I John beginning "God is . . . " et al.), Who has given us His Spirit, binding all the children together in love. We have a wonderful elder Brother, Jesus, who is our Savior (cf. John 19), our Advocate (cf. Heb. 7:25), our Propitiation (cf. Lev. 16:15-19; Luke 22:31-32), and our Life. And the false prophets (I John 4:3,5), the children of the devil, and the world are none of our relation!

Cf. Rev. 2:7, 11, 17, etc., with I John 5:4 and 4:4.

Our elder Brother is coming soon to take us home. Little children, let us keep ourselves from idols!

Can you give the content of each chapter in the Library Books we have considered thus far? Could you quote one important verse from each chapter?

NUMBER ONE

Bible is still Greatest Seller—Washington, Feb. 28—(U.P.)—The Bible, perrennial best seller, is still gaining in popularity. The Census Bureau said today that the output of fiction declined sharply during 1939, but the publication of Bibles and Testaments rose from 5,579,317 in 1937 to 7,927,848 in 1939.

Christ the Hope OF THE MOUNTAINEER

The southern mountaineer lives in the Southern Highlands. Parts of nine states are embraced in this region. From the Mason and Dixon Line of Pennsylvania down the western counties of Maryland, sections of Virginia and North Carolina, parts of northwestern South Caroline, northwestern Georgia, northeastern Alabama, eastern third of Tennessee and of Kentucky, and almost all of West Virginia, make up this area with its 6,000,000 people. This country was settled originally by German Protestants, Scotch-Irish, French Protestants, a great many English, some Welsh, and some Hollanders. All these came because of persecution in their various countries; and as they settled these regions, they were quite unwilling to make returns to this new government, and they thought they had plenty of reason to be suspicious of governments and of state churches.

Now let us, with these facts in mind, think of the mountaineer of our day. Pioneer ways carried over into the present, perhaps accounts for many difficulties. One little building for permanence, a homestead may be 100 years old and still look unfinished. Little desire is manifested for excellence. Another fact, a spirit of passive resignation pervades much of this region. This problem is beyond you and me—there is no solution outside of Christ and His power to "draw out and up," to bring a true vision to this highlander. The people of the mountains are most loveable, when you know them and they learn you. Their simple fellowship is gripping and challenging. The mountaineer is individualistic. If you want a boy to come to a meeting, ask him—not his sister "er his maw, er paw." They might not ask him. Jealousies are inbred. Just as every little creek and hill and hollow has its name and is as different from those a mile or so away, so is the mountaineer. This holds true in his religious life as well. In this field we have divisions and divisions. Many of these do not make for friendliness but make one contentious and suspicious. Edwin E. White in Highland Heritage says, "The message of the mountain church is mostly about the hereafter. The preaching of present salvation from sin, from selfishness and meanness and fear, to joyous and helpful Christian living, comes as a mystifying surprise to many mountain congregations. The religion offered by the average mountain church does not make men dissatisfied with ugliness, want and lack of opportunity. The vision of an abundant life here and now for men and communities simply is not part of the accepted religion."

Brethren young people, how would you live if you believed that "to sow wild oats was necessary" before you could join the church? Or that the time of death "was time to call for a preacher, and then you must pray and pray;" then possibly Christ would come to you, this amid a house full of people having meetings for you? Or if you knew that the church held no welcome for you until you had sown your wild oats and now had changed your mind? If all religious music were of a minor key and life itself was a struggle in the same key? How would you be convicted of your sin if the preacher preached, "What's goin' to be will be," or "salvation by works"? How could you respond to an invitational hymn of "Shake Hands with Mother Again," or some similar song where the hearse and graveyard are spoken of often instead of salvation in Christ? More often the doors of the church are thrown open by a preacher's hand shake instead of God's invitation to accept Christ. As a result, the word gets around, "There will be a baptism at such and such a place next meetin' day—so and so joined the church." Can you see why there is such a lack of power to discern and judge sin, and to live a separated life with a devotion and loyalty to the Person, Christ Jesus, the Hope of mountaineer and lowlander alike?

It is not uncommon to see several preachers at a meeting expecting to preach, and only one with a Bible or Testament. Many of these men are sincere and honest, and truly would serve God acceptably if they only knew how. One preacher had been preaching six years. His wife asked us for a Bible. We offered her one, and because the cover had "Holy Bible" she refused it, saying, "My husband wouldn't like that. He don't believe in snake handling." She thought a "Holy Bible" belonged to a certain sect.

The bright side of the picture is found where people have heard the gospel, the Spirit has spoken to them, and they in turn have responded. There are many such, even second and third generation Christians, giving their all for the sake of the Christ who calls and enpowers. What a real joy it is to worship with these, and what a challenge you and I have when we think of others—off up the hollows, back from the roads, in the hills, shut in to themselves and their own manner of living.

Christ, the Sin-bearer, the risen, living Savior is the only Hope of the mountaineer. If you know Him, what will you do with this challenge?

Juniors

Hello, Everybody!

I had a big surprise this past month. One of our new societies took time out at their regular meeting, for each girl present to write me a little personal note about herself and her society. The surprise came from Fremont, O., and did I have fun reading each little letter. Why, I almost feel I know each one of those girls, and I hope I get to meet them real soon —maybe at national conference.

Now is the time to do spring housecleaning, both in the society and at home. Oh, I don't mean to clean up the rolls and throw anybody out! But to give a general check-over to our goals and try to finish the most important ones before the month is gone.

Goal No. 1—If you have missed a meeting try having two in the next couple of months. Perhaps you can have a short make-up meeting before a regular church meeting on Sunday afternoon or prayer meeting night.

Goal No. 2—Now let's finish this. Shall we say that at least half of all our girls all over the good old U.S.A have read James through III John before Easter Sunday? Read in the morning and read at night. You'll be surprised how little time it takes.

Goal No. 3—This one seems hard to meet. Perhaps you can listen while a few chapters of a favorite mission study book is read at the meeting; or yau can get together one day to work on your scrap books and have someone read to you at that time; but, better yet, you can have a circulating library of several good books about missionaries, and each girl can do her reading at home where it is quiet and where she can enjoy "losing herself in Africa" or "traveling with the Indians."

Goal No. 4—Have you done anything interesting in order to get other girls to meet with you? And, by all means, have you invited every girl in your Sunday School to become a member?

Goal No. 5—Keep this in mind, and remind the secretary. Don't let her make the society miss this important goal.

Goal No. 6—Now for spring housecleaning at home.

CALVARY'S THREE CROSSES!

By L. L. GRUBB, pastor, Hagerstown, Md.

We invite you to open your Bibles with us to Luke 23:32,33. "And there were also two other, malefactors, led with him to be put to death. And when they were come to the place, which is called Calvary, there they crucified him, and the malefactors, one on the right hand, and the other on the left."

In our consideration of those mighty events which transpired at Calvary, we are sometimes inclined to forget that there were three crosses standing there on the brow of that historic hill. True, one of them was greater than the others by virtue of the fact that the blessed Son of God hung thereon, but each of these crosses has a distinct message for our hearts. It is our purpose to give you briefly that message of Calvary's three crosses tonight.

I. First, as we lift our eyes to that holy mound of rock and earth just outside the city of Jerusalem, we behold the painracked body of Jesus Christ, the Son of God hanging on the center cross. There in one brief glance we can see depicted the story of God and His relationship to the sinner and his sin.

Jesus Christ hangs on that accursed tree as the perfect testimony of God against all sin! God hates sin in any degree, in any person, and cannot look upon it with any allowance. This is the Father's one, perfect testimony against any disobedience of His holy law. Don't forget, God hates sin just as much today as He did 2,000 years ago.

The suffering Christ likewise gives us a graphic picture of what God will some day do to every unsaved sinner. Jesus was tortured in His blessed body and spirit; yet He was without sin, bearing our iniquities to the full. God has not indicated in His Word that every unsaved sinner will be crucified, but He has plainly informed us that He has prepared a place of torment where the worm dieth not and the fire is not quenched, where every Christ-objector must some day go for an eternal visit.

How beautiful is the other aspect of the picture, for as we look again, we see Christ hanging there as the potential Redeemer of all men. All men will never accept Him, but there is room in the grace of Christ for every lost sinner. So, as God testified against sin in the crucifixion of Christ, He also provided a way to escape its horrible judgment.

Turning to the other two crosses we see a double picture of what the world has done with the first cross.

According to Lk. 23:39 the thief on the second cross turned and reviled the Christ, challenging Him to use His power to save them all.

This criminal had not accepted God's decree against sin and did not realize his lost condition. He is like millions of others in the world today.

He had not the vision of faith. Because the world had apparently defeated Christ he had no confidence in Him. The world has a warped vision when it comes to Calvary, for there Christ Jesus won the greatest victory of all over sin and Satan.

So, in his definite rejection of Jesus Christ, the first thief gives us a picture of an unbelieving, Christ-rejecting world.

In the next few verses the second thief on the third cross assumes the opposite attitude, and he lifts his voice in an earnest plea to the Christ of the cross.

He realized his lost condition, and saw that justly he was under the condemnation of the law. No man can be saved until he first sees himself as a guilty, lost sinner before God, and under His eternal judgment. As in the case of the thieves, the wages of sin can only be death.

As a result the thief cried out, "Lord, remember me," and what precious words they are coming from the heart of a repentant sinner! Did he receive an answer to that petition? Indeed! the message of salvation came back immediately from the lips of the Son of God, "Today shalt thou be with me in Paradise," and that very moment the thief knew the joy and thrill of being a child of God. Millions have had that same experience since.

Sinner friend, wherever you are, you need this Savior! Will you open that sinful heart of yours and accept the Christ of Calvary as your Savior?

Try filling another box for Kentucky. It could be your benevolent work for Easter.

Goal No. 7—I know you remember this January. Now let's keep it before us so July won't find us asleep, and cause us to be on the bottom of the national list of banner societies.

Goal No. 8—If your dime calendar is filled, send it in. Don't wait until July. Maybe some sacrificing society might want to try for a second one. Every little bit helps, and it all goes for such a worthy cause.

Now for something new. We have ready for sale some Sisterhood paper and envelopes with a pretty green S.M.M. on each sheet and each envelope. Surely every society will want some to write its important letters on. And each girl will want some for her own use, too. Some of you might want to give a birthday present to a good Sisterhood friend, so we suggest you write to Eloise Christy at Geneva, Ind., R.R. 2, Box 194, and for 25 cents she will send you 12 sheets of paper and 12 envelopes. What a bargain in these days of paper shortage! And you had better get your supply early. It won't last forever.

May each one of you have a joyous Easter, remembering the wonderful Christ Who made Sisterhood possible by His death on the cross, and who also made it possible for all of us to spend eternity together by His resurrection. Praise Him daily by your living.

Looking for His blessed return,

—Aunt Mabel.

Amillennialism vs. Scripture

By ARNOLD KRIEGBAUM,
Pastor, Fillmore, Calif.

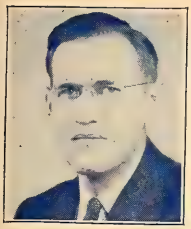
In a conversation with a gentleman several weeks ago, I was informed that he had at one time held to the premillennial viewpoint, but that after "much study" he has discovered that there is to be no millennium.

"Oh," we replied, "you are an Amillennialist!"

He stuttered for a moment, and then said "er-yes." That started me on the little study which is to be found in this article. From my conversation with this man, I discovered that I was the propagator of ingenious theological theories, and that my views could be sustained only by the free use of texts taken from the context, and as they were forced into a cunningly devised system of doctrine known as "dispensationalism." This "dispensationalism," he would have me to know, is but a fanciful interpretation of Scripture, based on the enthusiasm of speculation finding its source in the rabbinical annals of history.

Premillennialism Is Not Historical.—?

As nearly as possible, let us face the charges of the Amillennialist. The first charge which many Amillennialists make is to the intent that modern Premillennialism was not the standard teaching of the historic Christian church. They would contend that Premillennialism is only some 50 years old, having gained a foothold by modern propagandic methods. Such a contention must be confirmed before it can be accepted. The true evidence will prove contrariwise. History affirms that such a prerogative of denial is repugnant. It is indeed peculiar that such a contention should be placarded, for the majority of Premillennial opponents are coerced to acknowledge the prevalence of Premillennialism in the Apostolic and Ante-Nicene periods (75-300 A.D.) of the Christian Church. Dr. A. A. Hodge says, "It prevailed generally throughout the church from A.D. 150 to 250." In this we find an opponent of Premillennialism admitting its prevalence in the early church. In the first edition of Schaff-Herzog Encyclopaedia, appearing under an article captioned "Premillennialism" we discover the following: "It is commonly agreed by the best modern historians that from the death of the apostles till the time of Origen, Premillennialism was the general faith of those who were regarded as strictly orthodox Christians." The article then goes on to point out that if Premillennialism had some elements in common with the Jewish Chiliasm, yet it was far from being derived from it, but may have been regarded as a polemic against Judaism. It goes still further in stating that it was already received by Gentile Christians before the close of the first century, and that only Gnostics ignored it in the first half of the second century. The doctrine is found in a number of other writings; namely, the epistle of Barnabas (chapter 45), the Testament of the Twelve Patriarchs (Jud. 25, and Benj. 10), the Shepherd of Hermas, and it was taught by such men as Papias, Ireanaeus, and Tertullian. In the above mentioned encyclopaedia, information continues on this subject of Premillennialism: "The first recorded opponent of the doctrine was Cauis, a presbyter of Rome, about the beginning of the third century, from which time, through the opposition of the Montanist, who made Chiliasm a prominent article of their faith the dislike to the gross form in which some individuals presented the doctrine, and, still more, through the influence of Origen and the Alexandrian allegorizing school of interpretation, Chiliasm rapidly declined. In the third and the early part of the 4th century, however, some eminent men, as, e.g., Nepos, Cyprian, Methodius, and Lactantius (Inst., vii., et seq.) held the doctrine; but when, in Constantine, Christianity reached the throne of the Roman Empire, the church soon settled in the belief, shortly afterward confirmed by the weighty authority of Augustine, that the millennial reign, formerly expected to begin with the second advent, was really to be reckoned from the first, and was therefore a realized fact in the triumph of the church over the heathen state. That doctrine, with essential modifications, remained the universal faith of the church for a full 1000 years, during which Premillennialism can hardly be said to have existed. With the reformation of the 16th century, shortly reappeared the ancient chillastic hopes."



Premillennialism is the only viewpoint that can be proven by history to a date nearer than 200 A.D. The Premillennial view can be traced to 120 to 160 A.D., as set forth in the "Teaching of the Apostles," a manual used by the early church fathers for instructing new converts. While these early saints could have been misled, it is hardly feasible to concede that the whole church which was instructed of the apostles themselves could have misunderstood to the man. We also know that the apostles taught this clearly, as we find the truth set forth in the writings of the apostles. There can be no question but that Premillennialism was a part of the "faith" of the opostolic church.

THINK IT OVER

Have you ever tried to be what you think others should be?

Japan's Holy War

W. H. SCHAFFER, Pastor
Bethel Brethren Church, Berne, Ind.

Since the outbreak of this present war with Japan, the editorial columns of newspapers and magazines have been filled with facts and theories about Japan's motives in her treacherous declaration of war against the Allied powers.

There is an angle other than the political and economical which sheds considerable light on Japan's aggressiveness. To those who are students of the Bible, and especially of the prophecies dealing with the close of this dispensation, the following information is salient.

The Japanese have always been noted as a very polite people. We have heard in recent years from China how this politeness is but a cover for treacherousness. We have read how the Japanese armies invaded defenceless China, and after murdering thousands of unprotected Chinese civilians, outraged women, slaughtered babies, and with no conscience stepped back and politely bowed and said, "Excuse please."

Some years ago Ogden Nash expressed the idea of Japanese politeness in a bit of verse:

"How courteous is the Japanese!
He always says, "Excuse me, please,"
He climbs into his neighbor's garden,
And smiles and says, "I beg your pardon:"
He bows and grins a friendly grin,
And calls his hungry family in;
He grins, and bows a friendly bow;
"So sorry, this my garden now."

H. G. Andrews has written: "The Japs really suffer from an inferiority complex. They are little and they know it. They have monkey minds in that they are highly imitative. Being men, however, the Japs realize their own monkey traits, and in order to fool themselves they endeavor to play the role of lion. They worship their ancestors and their emperor—which is just another fashion of worshiping themselves. As a result of their peculiar form of worship, the Japs are essentially unmoral. They have the ethics of a hungry baby, which would, in appeasing its appetite, devour its own mother and coo while doing so." Editor Andrews of the Johnstown, Pa., Democrat wrote that five years ago.

Of course that could never happen to us! Evidently that's what some of the high ranking army and navy officials thought before the attack on Pearl Harbor. Knowing Editor Andrews personally, we cannot agree with all he writes; but 5 years ago this editorial made an impression on me, especially from the religious viewpoint. Further investigation resulted in our finding an article written by Willard Price on the religious beliefs and ideals of the Japanese people. Mr. Price has been a traveler for years in Japan and the author of numerous books based on his travels in the Orient. This article from which we quote was published in 1937 in The New Republic.

Mr. Price states that those who see Japan only in the role of a greedy, aggressive nation for material gains miss the real character of Japan. Her crusade is essentially religious and spiritual. Every child born in that empire is taught to believe with every fiber of his being that: Japan is the only divine land; Japan's emperor is the only divine emperor; Japan's people are the only divine people; therefore Japan must be the light of the world. "We shall build our capital all over the world, and make the whole world our dominion." So reads the rescript of the Emperor Jimmu, supposed to have been issued by him upon the founding of the Japanese Empire 2600 years ago.

Relative to this belief in the divine land, the Japanese claim that God did not merely create the islands of Japan—he begot them. The gods Izanagi and Izanami, uniting in marriage, gave birth to the Japanese islands. The islands themselves are divine beings, favored lands, totally different from the rest of the earth.

As to the emperor: the heavenly pair who begot the islands also gave birth to the Sun Goddess, Amaterasu, whose descendants ruled Japan. The name "emperor" is a misnomer. They refer to him as Tenno, the Heavenly King. He is not to be classed with any king or ruler of this world. This doctrine that he is heaven-descended, divine and sacred is repeated in all official statements, in histories, in text books on ethics; and all the philosophers, writers and lawyers preach this religion. While other faiths have been crumbling this one has grown stronger.

This Japanese divinity goes even further. Since the original inhabitants of Japan were gods all other mortals are of a lower order. And, quoting from Hirata, a Japanese scholar, "From the fact of the divine descent of the Japanese people, proceeds their immeasurable superiority to the natives of other countries in courage and intelligence." Now, if Japan is begotten of God, if her emperer is the only heavenly king on this planet, if her people are the elect of mankind, there comes, logically, this conclusion: Japan is sent to save the world, and world peace can come only through Japanese sovereignty. We are led to believe that Japan is a blood-thirsty people but she considers herself as a savior and a blessing.

History has taught us that the bloodiest wars of this world, the fiercest battles ever fought, have been religious wars. Men fired with a religious passion count their own lives worthless, hoping thereby to gain greater reward in glory. This belief is intensified in the Japanese theology, for state Shinto requires every Japanese to worship at military shrines, and thus reverence for the army as well as the emperor is inspired. The souls of dead soldiers—deified by the emperor himself in special ceremonies—are supposed to be fighting with the living today. The Japanese War Office declares "To bring together all the races of the world into one happy accord has been the ideal and the national aspiration of the Japanese since the very foundation of the empire. We deem this the great mission of the Japanese race. We also aspire to make a clean sweep of injustice and inequity from the earth, and to bring about everlasting happiness among mankind." We recall that Mahomet too believed that the sword is the key of heaven and hell!

We Christians shrink back in horror at the very thought of all this. But, has it ever occurred to you that some day the Lord may ask, "Did you go and teach all nations, like I commanded you, including Japan?" Most of us have been too comfortable at home, too self-satisfied with our own comforts and salvation. The money God gave us to use we wanted for selfish purposes rather than for the spreading of the gospel of the grace of God to lost men. Now we are working feverishly to produce a great war machine, and we are buying defense bonds and giving liberally to the Red Cross and other agencies for war purposes. When God asked us to give our money for the heralding of the gospel we wanted it too badly for ourselves Now we are giving up our tires and many of our automobiles. We are learning to do without a lot of the luxuries of life on which we have been lavishing our money for a supreme "all out" to fight the Axis powers.

We are not trying to discourage support of our government in this crisis. We should cooperate in everything a Christian can conscientiously perform in the defense of a nation which still grants to us the liberty and freedom of worship. It has been said that there is a great significance in the fact the Lord calls his children "sheep." If a sheep is not fleeced occasionally it will lose its wool. The undershepherds of the flock have not "fleeced" their sheep often enough for preaching of the gospel unto the uttermost part of the earth, and now their "wool" is going into that which cripples, kills, brings sorrow, suffering, heartaches and premature deaths.

It has always been cheaper to send our missionaries to foreign lands than to send our armies and navies. Verily we are guilty before God of insubordination to the command, "Go ye therefore and teach all nations."

WHICH KIND ARE YOU?

Tired Christians—Will work if coaxed to do so; but they complain so much while working, the joy is all taken out of service.

Retired Christians—These believe they have done their share and sit idly by. They are the spectators —usually the critics, too.

Rubbertired Christians—They demand a smooth road. Everything must be so-so or they refuse.

Flat-tired Christians—Once active and faithful, but they suffered a puncture and have never recovered their wind. They need to be refilled!—Exchange.

That Ye May Be One

By GENE FARRELL

The devil, as "an angel of light," has many ways of beguiling away the hours which God would have us use in prayer and soul winning.

"That you may know how to pray," is one of the most subtle of these. He constrains us to overdo the necessity to make our requests definite. The Spirit of God speaks with "still, small voice" to our hearts, warning us to keep silence and pray "in the Spirit," but it is so much easier to converse with a few of the select saints; for we can see them, and they will be so understanding, and of course will never breathe a word to any one else! And then there is that very acceptable loophole through which we may climb that our spiritual standing before them (the select saints) may not be lessened, or our conscience disturbed: "Of course you realize that I tell you all this for only one reason, 'that you may know how to pray.' Two can pray more effectively than one you know, for the Scripture says, 'If two of you shall agree,' etc., etc." —and thus two or three hours of the Lord's time have been wasted, and we leave with a sense of guilt, having missed forever that most blessed of all rewards which proceed from the Father "which seeth in secret."

All such temptations to speak about a brother could be overcome if we would rely upon the Holy Spirit. We glory in our discernment of another's faults, but we forget that the Holy Spirit has given us this ability. He never gives discernment that we might talk about a brother, that we might pray for him. If we feel that the brethren will not know how to pray concerning a certain brother who is overtaken in a fault, let us remember that the same mind ("the mind of the Spirit") abides in them. He, the Holy Spirit in them, can take our "unspoken request" and make it definite before God. They may not know what to pray for as they ought, but the Spirit maketh intercession for them with groanings which cannot be uttered. They may only have heard us say "unspoken request," but "He that searcheth the hearts knoweth what is the mind of the Spirit . . ." He knoweth! This excludes the seeming necessity to go into detail before the brethren, for He (the Omniscient Spirit in them) "maketh intercession for the saints according to the will of God."

3. Restoration of the one at fault—"Brethren, if a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual restore such an one in the spirit of meekness, considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted." (Gal. 6:1).

We know that Paul is speaking of a brother-in-Christ here, for we do not restore the unsaved, but give the gospel to them that they may be born again. Unsaved people are altogether at fault, for they do not know the will of God. They are "dead in trespasses and sins, walking according to the course of this world "

Dr. Rood, by way of paraphrase, gives the usual rendering of Gal. 6:1 after this manner: "'Brethren, if a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual' go to the telephone, call in your neighbors, write letters," etc. How true this is of the church! Most of its prayer energies are consumed in private conversation, which proves that we believe more in the efficacy of our tongues to right a situation than we do in the power of God.

If only we would obey this verse by going to our erring brother, and him only, what heartbreak might be avoided! He may not receive us very kindly, but at least we will have the witness that we have pleased God. How much better to obey His Word than to grant ourselves the liberty of speaking to others,

News from Brethren CHURCHES

DANVILLE, OHIO

Greetings in the name of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, from the First Brethren Church at Danville, O.:

It has been some time since you have heard from us through these columns, but the Lord has been blessing at Danville. Our average attendance at the various services has noticeably increased over that of a year ago, and our various offerings have been the highest in the history of the church.

We praise the Lord for the many special treats we have had in the past several months. In July Bro. R. Paul Miller held a two weeks meeting, which has been reported. Since that time we have had the following with us for one or two services: Brother and Sister Rempel, Brother and Sister Zimmerman, Brother and Sister Robert Williams and Brother and Sister Morrill. All of these services have added to the interest of our people in the mission work of the denomination.

The week of Jan. 19 we were privileged to have the "America Back to God" Quartet of Detroit with us. We were greatly blessed through these services and brought into closer fellowship with the Lord. Nine decisions were made during the week. The interest was fine and the church was filled each evening.

Perhaps the most unusual thing that has happened at Danville was the Union Week of Prayer, the first week in February. In these services the following churches united for a week of prayer: Disciples, Methodist, North Berne Church of the Brethren, Assembly of God, and Brethren. The pastors alternated in having charge of the service and bringing the message, using a different church each evening. This week proved to be very enlightening and beneficial.

Since that time a prayer group has been organized, meeting in the homes of the members living in or near Howard, about five miles from Danville. Already souls have been brought to the Lord through these meetings. This week another prayer group and a Bible Study class have been organized.

With all of these enumerated "ups" we would not have you think that there have been no "downs." You all know that the harder you work for the Lord the harder Satan tries to offset it. It is true of Danville as well as any place else, but we know that God is able. So we press forward, praying that we may be of greater service to the Lord, until He comes.

thereby crippling ourselves spiritually and giving occasion for roots of bitterness to spring up among the brethren. "Restore such an one . . : "—not talk about such an one. And if we are not surrendered sufficiently to go to the brother or sister who is "overtaken," then who are we that we should surrender our tongues to vain gossip?—seemingly harmless conversation at the time, but, in God's sight, very pernicious in its possibilities.

John the Baptist looked upon Jesus "as He walked," not as He talked, and said: "Behold, the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world!" The palsied man was not told to take up his bed and talk but to take up his bed and walk. It is by our walk that we are best identified with Christ, and men come to know that we have been with Jesus. If we learn that someone is talking about us falsely, let us not return evil with evil by seeking to vindicate ourselves. May we recall the verse in I Peter: "But if, when ye do well, and suffer for it, ye take it patiently, this is acceptable with God." Such conduct is in keeping with the character of God. It is His business to vindicate and take vengeance, never ours. "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." This is the life which Christ would manifest in our mortal flesh. Why? "That they may be one even as we are one." Oneness, unity, is ever the cardinal consideration. All else is secondary among brethren. We say, "But we must defend the Word." Does the Word say "Let your speech be always with salt, seasoned with grace?" Well, hardly, though we would like, many times, to have it so that our lack of love might be excused, and our sense of pride satisfied.

Finally, brethren, if a man be overtaken in a fault, let us at all cost be reticent before the brethren, except for an "unspoken request"—let us rely upon the Spirit, that the omnipotent, omniscient, omnipresent God may move upon our brother to repent—and let us restore such an one in the spirit of meekness, considering ourselves lest we also be tempted. And all this for one great purpose, that the church may be one, even as God and Christ are one—and that, as Christ said, "the love wherewith Thou hast loved me (and He sent Christ to Calvary) may be in them and I in them."

MUNDY'S CORNER, PA.

"The Pike Brethren Church, "GOD'S BEACON ON THE WILLIAM PENN,' continues to send forth the Light of the world at Mundy's Corners, Pa.

A successful year in every respect has been closed, and the program for the new year started with vigor and expectancy. Of special praise has been the ability of the congregation to clear all debts on all improvements and building projects to date. Plans are under way for the redecorating of the interior of the church, and the improvement of the church property surrounding. The cemetery, owned and operated by the congregation, is being enlarged and improved. The W.M.C. is sponsoring the construction of a much needed nursery.

Our bus makes regular Sunday morning trips to gather those without transportation to the services. Additional trips are made to other services here and away when advisable.

The Pike young people will be hosts to the WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA BRETHREN YOUNG PEOPLE'S RALLY on Tuesday, March 3d, 7:30 P.M. Dr. V. C. Kelford, Canadian Church news commentator, will be the speaker for the occasion. Dr. Kelford will continue at the Pike Church for a Bible conference from March 3-8 inclusive.

The Brethren Missionary Herald continues to bring blessing into many homes of our congregation. We hope soon to be 100% subscribers to the Herald.

—Rev. Kenneth Ashman, Pastor.

THE SECOND BRETHREN CHURCH OF LOS ANGELES

Greetings in the name of our precious Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ, from the Second Brethren Church of Los Angeles. Because the Lord has given us joy in service and kept His promises to us, we wish to share our blessings with you.

In the carrying on of our church program we have tried to keep others and their needs before us. Two recent offerings have been very gratifying and we do praise Him for answered prayer. Our home missions offering went over $1700 in cash and pledges; and our Grace Theological Seminary gift was $424.30.

Bro. Walter Lepp, our former assistant pastor and director of music, left in September to assume his duties as pastor of the Cleveland Brethren Church.

Mr. Donald Vasey, a graduate of Wheaton College who is now teaching part time in the Bible Institute of Los Angeles, came as the pastor's assistant and director of music. We appreciate the valuable help also of Mrs. Vasey, who last year was a member of the faculty of the music department at Wheaton and who is now teaching in Westmont College and the Bible Institute.

Three of our membership, Elmer Sacks, Mrs. Fred Wetzel, and James Beatty, are attending the Bible Institute, studying to show themselves approved unto God.

Our pastor divides his time between the church and the Bible Institute, where he is professor of Apologetics and Doctrine. Recently he had the privilege of appearing five times on the evening sessions of the Torrey Memorial Bible Conference in the Church of the Open Door. He gave lectures on Archaeology and the Bible, illustrating them with about 400 slides.

During the Christmas recess it was our privilege to have the Ambassadors of Grace from Grace Theological Seminary with us for two services. Bro. Mayer, captain of the team, is a member of our church.

We are rather proud of our record of students sent to Grace. Henry Rempel, now at Flora, Ind., was formerly our director of music. Ralph Rambo, now pastor of the Brethren Mission Church in Modesto, was a former superintendent of our Bible School. Herman Baerg and Harold Mayer are now students at Grace, looking forward to the mission field and the ministry respectively.

If the Lord tarries, we are looking forward to evangelistic services (two weeks) with the Polman trio (Leo, Leila and Elaine) from March 1-15. It is a home-coming for the Polmans, for it was from this church that the Lord called them into His service. We are anticipating their return with real joy.

We request the prayers of our brethren throughout the country that in these meetings the church may be awakened, backsliders restored, and sinners saved (Ps. 10:17).

—Mrs. Joseph Leffingwell.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.

The Philadelphia Third Church is still going forward for the Lord. At the present time we are preparing for a revival meeting which will begin Mar. 2 and extend to Mar. 15. Bro. William Clough of Uniontown, Pa., has been called as the evangelist.

Several weeks ago we had our Jewish Sunday. This year we gave our largest offering to the spreading of the gospel among Gods chosen people, the Jew. At this service we had several Jewish refugees present to give their testimony. It was a real thrill to hear how the Lord is dealing with the Jews in these last days.

Another splendid feature of our work this year was the Children's Evangelistic Campaign. Miss Rae H. Serio of near Scranton, Pa., was called in to conduct this crusade for souls. Miss Serio is a graduate of the Eastern Baptist Seminary of Philadelphia. She is a lover of souls and has a most unique manner of presenting the gospel so that children can understand and grasp the truth. During the 10 days Miss Serio was with us, 111 children confessed Christ for the first time and there were seven reconsecrations. Among the 111 there were Catholics and children which came from homes where parents do not attend anywhere. Besides enabling us to reach the many children, it is giving us a wonderful opportunity of going into homes where Christ is little thought of. Now our personal workers are entering these homes on a follow up system, getting things ready for the pastor and evangelist, Bro. Clough, to get in and talk to parents about their souls salvation.

We believe that other Brethren churches would do well to put on such a crusade in addition to their regular revival meeting. I heartily recommend Miss Serio, who is a talented young lady and who is willing to travel anywhere to present Christ to America's youth. I will be happy to pass her address on to any church which might be interested. Let us win our children to the Lord before they get out into a life of terrible sin.

After our revival we will look forward to Resurrection Day, at which time Brother and Sister Jobson will be with us.

The church here is in a splendid condition spiritually and in all other ways. God has been good to us, and we give Him all the praise and glory. We are now laboring in our 14th year with this people. May the Lord continue to guide each one of us in these trying days.

Yours because of Calvary,

—Wm. A. Steffler.

NEWS BRIEFS From Our Workers

Bro. Herman Baerg, Grace Seminary student, has been preaching at Pleasant View Community Church near Warsaw, Ind. For nine years this church has been without church services, although Sunday School has been held during this time. Bro. Baerg finds the ten or fifteen families who attend eager to hear the Word. There are about forty more families in the community who do not attend church anywhere.

Nine pound Peggy Shirleen recently arrived at the home of Bro. Mark Malles, pastor of the Sterling, O., church. Bro. Malles has just accepted a unanimous call to continue as pastor of this church for a second year, with an increase in salary.

One never knows how far-reaching the results will be when the gospel is presented to a child. Last fall eight year old Gene Klingler of Ashland, O., called together a number of his playmates and conducted a Bible class in a garage. The class sang songs, gave Scripture passages, etc. When cold weather came on, they moved into the home of Mrs. Margery Shults of the W. 10th St. Brethren church, who is now in charge of the work. The class now meets twice a week, and the attendance when last reported was 16. Surely this should encourage those who are working with children not to grow weary in well doing.

Bro. G. W. Kinzie, who has been pastor of the W. Kittanning, Pa., church for a number of years, has closed his pastorate at that place to become shepherd of the flock at Middlebranch, O.

Good reports have reached us of the revival conducted at the Bethel Brethren Church of Berne, Ind., by the new pastor, Bro. Wm. H. Schaffer. During the second week of the meetings alone, 28 members took a definite stand for reconsecration of life, or desired to make sure their salvation, or expressed willingness to do their part in promoting the unity of the congregation. Several also had accepted Christ as their Savior up to that point in the meetings.

Remember "People estimate Christianity by the lives of its professors."

FOR, LO, THE WINTER IS PAST...THE FLOWERS APPEAR ON EARTH; THE TIME OF THE SINGING OF BIRDS IS COME

Song of Solomon 2: 11-12

We Praise God For This Record

We are publishing in this issue the greatest home mission offering report in Brethren history. For the first time we are able to breathe easily because we can care for the work at hand without the fear of having to cut out some part of it. Each year before, something has had to suffer for lack of sufficient funds. We rejoice above all that the Brethren churches are now realizing the real importance of strong home missions if our other endeavors for Christ are to grow and multiply. The branches of the Brethren 'tree' of testimony throughout the earth will always be limited to the extent of its roots right here in America.

The directors of the Home Missions Council wish to thank the pastors for their splendid loyalty and support that have made this great offering possible. Amid a world of turmoil and distress, and in face of the fears of many quaking and pessimistic hearts within the church, our Brethern pastors have struck out with courage and foresight in sounding the greatest call for advance for Christ we have ever known. We praise God for laymen of the Brethren churches who are loyal and ready to follow their pastors in these great days of testing.

We urge all our pastors to mention this to their congregations, as cause for thanksgiving and praise to Him Who loved us and washed us from our sins in His own blood.

Pray for Great Easter Offering

The directors of The Brethren Home Missions Council are genuinely concerned for the success of the Easter offering for foreign missions. The progress of the gospel must be truly balanced in its operation or it will weaken and die. It is somewhat like a tight rope walker, whose success depends upon the exact weight hung on each end of his balancer. If one outweighs the other, both will fall. Foreign missions cannot live and grow without a strong and increasing home mission work to support it.

Furthermore, any home mission program that is not deeply concerned for the salvation of lost men in other lands will soon die of the dry rot of its own selfishness. So, the directors know that an ever-increasing foreign mission offering means that our home missions program is healthy and successful. That is why we pray for and urge for, a greater foreign mission offering at this Easter time.

BOOZE COMES FIRST TODAY—

An I.N.S. despatch from Sacramento, Calif., dated Feb. 19, states that the local tire rationing board rejected the appeal of a dairy for tires for distribution of milk, but granted all the tires a brewery applied for to distribute booze, declaring, "That's the way the federal government wants it done." How can the people of America expect God to answer their prayers and bless their land and their cause if this is the kind of purposes the nation has? Certainly the nation has been getting drunker and drunker. Liquor interests sit in the seat of the mighty. We have seen the booze trucks follow the troops to their camps. It has made our heart sick to see the way things have been going in our native land. And over the radio we hear the cry "Don't criticize the government no matter what they do." They don't criticize the government in Germany, or Russia, or Italy, that is sure. It appears that soon the forces of righteousness will become voiceless in America as elsewhere.

"The wicked shall be turned into hell and all the nations that forget God" (Ps. 9:17).

ALL MEN CHILDREN OF GOD?—

The Los Angeles Times, on Feb. 9, carried the following of a sermon by Rev. Albert D. Bell. Said he,

"Everyone accepts the doctrine of the Fatherhood of God. However, unless we do the will of God as revealed by Jesus, the less said about our paternity the better."

Such false statements cannot go unchallenged. One thing is certain: Jesus Christ did not accept the doctrine of the Fatherhood of God for all men. Said he to the unbelieving Jews who sought to kill Him,

"Ye are of your father the devil, and the lusts of your father ye will do" (Jn. 8:44).

In I Jn. 3:10 the apostle declared,

"In this the children of God are manifest, and the children of the devil."

Why did our Lord demand the new birth of all men who would see God, if all men are already born of God? If this world condition today is a sample of the works of the children of God, then there is certainly something wrong with the Bible! Well, there is nothing wrong with the Bible, but there is plenty wrong with this man's theology. It is such false teaching that undermines the preaching of the true gospel, which demands that men be made new creatures in Christ Jesus. God help us as Brethren to contend earnestly for the faith once for all delivered unto the saints. No matter what the temptations to use what is called "expediency," in order to avoid unnecessary criticism or disfavor with the powers that be, may we as true soldiers of the cross of Christ make our hand to "cleave to the sword."

"Fear none of those things which thou shalt suffer; behold the devil shall cast some of you into prison that ye may be tried; and ye shall have tribulation ten days: be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee the crown of life" (Rev. 2:10).

The writer wouldn't miss that day and hour for all the favors of earth.

IT SOUNDS LIKE FAILURE—

In talking to a minister some time ago, we asked him about his membership. "O, its about the same as last year. It never varies very much; I could tell you within one or two of what it is all the time." We wonder how a preacher uses his time and talent when his church stays the same size year after year. Such a preacher usually explains that he is deepening the life of his congregation rather than reaching new people for Christ. That is pretty thin. The best way to deepen any congregation's spiritual life is to keep them in the white heat of winning souls. The soul-winner grows into the deep things of God by leaps and bounds in a way that is unaccountable. Winning souls keeps the Christian pure in his own life; it keeps him on his knees in real prayer life; it makes him generous with his money for every work of God; it makes him willing to do any service however humble it be. The preacher who is content just to ride along and see no results to his ministry had better get down on his knees and ask God what is the matter with him. There is something seriously wrong, and it is in his own heart. The man who is afire for God and winning souls doesn't need to make apologies and excuses for a church that is standing still. If your town is dead spiritually, just start preaching on the street corner. So many preachers are afraid that they will make a spectacle of themselves, and will be criticized by the Pharisaical church members, that they sit and idle away their lives to escape persecution. You're listening to and fearing the wrong crowd, brother. The preacher that has assumed his deep piety because he sat around and did nothing, is just plain lazy or spiritually unconcerned. Brother, start an issue; break up the fallow ground; kick the sides out of this easy complacency, that is causing your congregation to allow men to sink down in sin to hell without doing something about it! But God help you not to be a failure.

DRIVE YOUR STAKES FOR GOD—

Nothing is more needed than that every preacher and every layman should make his first responsibility to God the winning of souls. A business man said to me in Washington, D.C., the other day, "My main business is witnessing for Christ. I'm just running this restaurant to meet expenses." That man is a real testimony for his Lord. Many preachers and laymen have never accomplished anything for Christ because they have never really committed themselves to any definite goal for their life. Moody, that peerless soul-winner, made a vow to God that he would speak to a soul about Christ every day of his life. That goal drove him to that mighty ministry that swept around the world. Brother, that is what you need to do; make a vow to speak to some soul about Christ every day of your life. Every preacher should do this—especially the fellow that has a dislike for soul-winning. It will become a passion with you as you continue. Nothing holds the thrills that soul-winning does. The soul-winning preacher needs no books of illustrations. He gets them out of life. That is the only place to get them. Other illustrations that are borrowed are dead, lifeless. Soul-winning keeps you on the firing line; it sets your heart afire; it makes preaching easy and full of power. Brother, drive your stakes for God. Make a goal to win souls and let nothing interfere with it. If you feel lifeless and need a sermon, go out and get into a conversation with a sinner about his salvation, and you will come back with your sermon all hot and ready. Begin today.

THE WORLD IS NOW AFLAME—

As we are writing these lines, the radio is screeching with reports of war with Japan. Our island possessions are being blasted by air bombs; hundreds of our service men have been killed; Japanese landing forces are advancing on Manila and other centers of population in the Philippines; indignation is had over the apparent unpreparedness of American forces to meet the issue; and bitterest anger is felt all over our nation against the dis-honorable and treacherous act of the Japanese in talking peace to our statesmen as a means to deceive us as to their warlike intention; and young men by the thousand are rushing to recruiting stations to volunteer for service in destroying Japan and avenging our national insult.

As all this is going on, our own heart is thinking of the sad blindness of the human heart. We have the enemy of sin in this land of ours, and in the hearts of every one—an enemy far more deadly than Japan or any other nation—and no one seems concerned about it. Would to God that our church members and others should get half as mad and indignant at this deadly enemy as they do at Japan. The armies of Japan can, at best, slay the body; but sin is slaying the souls of men for eternity, and no one seems to care anything about that! We can crush Japan to the dust forever, and yet the curse of sin will live on in the human heart to drag the whole world down to hell. If our people would only see what their real enemy is, and fight sin! Instead, Satan turns their minds entirely away from the real curse of the human heart by getting men to fight each other and forget eternity. What fiendish joy he must find in seeing millions of earth's finest young manhood being slain without Christ, and thus sending them to a hopeless eternity. Nothing serves Satan's purposes more thoroughly than war.

BILLIONS FOR NATIONAL DEFENSE, BUT NOT A CENT FOR SALVATION—

The way America rushes to defend her land with her money and with her lives is a marvel of spirit and achievement to the whole world. At first we were to spend $7,000,000,000 on defense, then it arose to $10,000,000,000, then to $20,000,000,000; and by that time all appreciation of the meaning of the cost was lost, and the costs began to soar to $50,000,000,000, $70,000,000,000, and then to $150,000,000,000, and on and on. No one knows where it will stop, if ever. Added to this are the millions of America's finest manhood going into the military service. Thousands are clamoring at the recruiting stations for a chance to go to war and blast the enemy. At the same time, many are cutting down their giving to the work of the gospel because they cannot afford it in view of the new taxes and high costs of living.

If ever there was a time when the voice of the gospel preacher was needed in this world aflame with war, it is now. If ever the church of Christ should arise to its greatest opportunity, it is now. With money in the hands of the people of the land in greater abundance than ever before, offerings for spreading the gospel should rise to the highest point in history. While the world is laying its billions down for destroying men, let the Christian people make their greatest sacrifices for saving men. Thousands of young men and women, whom we have not won to the service of Christ to save the lost, will now be swept into the business of war to destroy men. These facts should make many of us to experience a deep fear at our failure to turn these same young people to the service of Christ, when we could have and should have reached their young hearts for Christ, and for the preaching of the gospel.

RISE UP, CHRISTIAN, AND LIVE FOR CHRIST—

The magnificent devotion being manifest by American young men for their country's defense is stirring to the heart, to say the least. The way they can be moved to lay down their lives without a moment's hesitation, in the defense of our country, is a gripping thing. Nathan Hale, one of our earliest patriots in this nation's struggle for independence, was sent upon a very dangerous mission for information greatly needed by General Washington. In the effort, he was caught by the enemy and executed as a spy. Just before his death he wrote a letter to his mother, and one to his sweetheart, Alice Adams. Soon they led him out to be shot. He was calm and unafraid. Asked if he had anything to say, he replied, "My only regret is that I have but one life to give for my country." This utter devotion of this noble man has stirred my soul to its depths many a time.

Christian, child of God, as a witness for Christ you are needed today as never before. If ever the forces of hell were rampant over the world, it is now. If ever men needed to know that there is something better than this old world has to offer, it is now. But as never before, the scoffing and ridicule for the real gospel is on every side. The day may not be far away when, to speak the truth in Christ may cost you your life also. But dying men need to hear it now as they live under the shadow of death every day. Sin is rising like a tidal wave, taking opportunity of the reckless spirit that takes hold of men in war times. Now is the time to preach Christ. Now is the time to let men know that sin is the cause of all this war and sorrow. Men have forgotten God. America has been forgetting God and rolling in sin and unbelief. For the love of men's souls speak out! Your life is not your own if you belong truly to Christ. The Apostle Paul cried, "I die daily." "I am crucified with Christ, nevertheless I live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me" (Gal. 2:20). Jesus Christ can reach lost men through you if you will let Him. He is equal to the situation. But He needs your life as a medium. Let us reach men for Christ now. God give us great souls, in this day of tragedy and need, to nobly stand and say, "My only regret is that I have but one life to give for my Lord."

IRREPARABLE DAMAGE TO MISSIONS—

We have just been scanning the report of a large missionary board. It told of how they were compelled to bring back scores of missionaries and families from China. Hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of mission buildings have been wrecked, and the native Christians scattered. But the loss in material things, while great, is small when compared to the loss of respect, and the addition of prejudice and antagonism that shall be the result of the present warring over the world.

But none of these things should move us or discourage us. In the midst of wars and tribulations, our God can open up ways for us to reach the lost right under the nose of all the anti-christian dictators! The church of Christ has never seen such growth and strength as during the times of trouble, persecution, and distresses.

"When the enemy shall come in like a flood, the Lord will lift up a banner against him" (Isa. 59:19).

The greater the opposition, the greater the power of God to overcome it, and the greater glory to Him! Praise His name.

Across the Nation - - WITH OUR SECRETARY

Heading West—

It had been five years since the secretary had been on the west coast caring for the mission points out there. It is not possible to administer mission churches adequately by mail for any great length of time. We should have come out three years ago, but conditions made it impossible. But at last we got the chance to make the trip again. Before we started we had the length of the trip cut down by unexpected needs for attention before we left the east. We have six young churches under the care of the Council in California now. We did have seven, but Glendale has now gone independent and is doing a fine job of it.

Dallas, Texas—

Our first stop was at Dallas, where our Bro. Floyd Shiery has been finishing his work for a degree at the seminary there. We hope to be able to have him in a Brethren pastorate again before many months have passed. We preached in the church where he is now serving as pastor on Sunday morning. He has a very appreciative congregation who think the world of him, and who are mighty keen on the issues of faith in these tragic days. They look like they would all make mighty good Brethren if you ask me! We stayed with Brother and Sister Shiery overnight, and enjoyed their hospitality immensely. They have two sweet little girlies in their home, and one of them was down with measles and the other was just about to come down. We were fully exposed to them but didn't take worth a cent. We had the chance to call on some Brethren folks now located in that city while there. It has been a deep desire in our hearts to start a Brethren church in Texas for many years, and we would be glad to start in Dallas. May it soon be realized. We had 1500 miles to make from Sunday noon to Tuesday evening so we had to move right along. We hope to stop in Dallas on return and see if anything more can be done to this end.

A Narrow Escape—

About 15 miles east of El Paso, we noticed a car that looked like a 1935 model loaded with people. It began to drift slowly toward the left side of the road, heading straight for us. At once we knew what we had to face—a driver sound asleep. The entire incident took only about three seconds. We thought of plenty in a mighty short time. It looked like a head-on crash for sure. When the other car got off the pavement on rough ground the driver awoke, and true to experience he swung his car back across the road like a flash, almost upsetting it; and then he swung back and forth completely out of control. By the hand of God we slipped by him while he was on the opposite side of the road. It was all over so quickly that it made us dizzy. If it is possible to swallow your heart when you get scared, I got rid of mine half a dozen times in short order right then! It took a couple of hours to get over it. But once more we had cause for praise for the way "the angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear Him and delivereth them" (Ps. 34:7).

Revival At Fillmore—

After driving 550 miles that day, we began our campaign in the Fillmore church Tuesday evening. We had a good attendance that night, and a good spirit there. It was the first time we had held a meeting in that church. We found that Brother Kriegbaum had done a fine job of advertising. That is one of his strong points. He knows how to get attention from the community.

We found that the pastor stood high in the community and in the hearts of his people. They have every confidence that he will lead them out into a victory that they have prayed for for many years. We believe he will do so, under God. He certainly knows his community and is a tireless personal worker and visitor. He and his wife add tremendously to the services with their musical talent. We have seldom heard more favorable comments on a pastor's preaching than from this congregation.

The meetings were never at any time attended heavily. How much influence the war conditions at the present have on the situation is not easy to determine. Undoubtedly it has some real effect. As we write these lines in Glendale, Calf., the radio is shouting the reports of the submarine that shelled the coast at Santa Barbara, 100 miles from here, and of the wild night spent by this community last night when an airplane of unknown identity flew over Long Beach and other beach cities. So far as is now known, the plane was never seen, dropped no bombs at all, and was not struck by any anti-aircraft guns. But the resultant confusion to traffic and the excited advice over the radio could hardly have been greater if a whole flock of enemy planes had dropped bombs over the territory. Such times ought to drive people to get right with God, for there is no telling how soon a great tragedy may occur along this coast. But it remains to be seen if this war will inspire a great revival.

Our home while in Fillmore was with Brother and Sister LeBard. A happier home could not have been offered us. Both of these dear folks love the Lord with real delight. They are faithful and dependable in His service. We shall long cherish the memories of the days we spent there. To top it all off, we wound up there with a birthday party. It was all very good.

Our Fast Growing Mission

San Diego Is Alive For God—

From Compton we drove to San Diego, where we have what may prove to be our fastest growing mission point at present. If present growth continues, this work will be self-supporting in just four years. They have a beautiful structure in which to worship, and it is well designed. They now have a Sunday School of an average of 150, and a church membership of 110. Their weekly offerings run around $85. For a four year old church, that is certainly remarkable. They have a Sunday School bus that picks up about 60 children each Sunday morning. They have three other communities in which they hope to spread their testimony as quickly as possible. Right now

All Aboard!—and headed for their homes in San Diego their opportunities are coming faster than their workers to care for the possibilities. They need more workers. The army is taking some of their finest workers and they feel the loss tremendously.

A group of children leave the bus at their homes. Some are taking home their Sunday School papers

Bro. Flory, the able pastor, is doing a mighty fine job under God in this field. His people love him, and they work with him day and night in every angle of the task. He has been faithfully building up to a harvest time, when he hopes to reap hundreds of souls. A fine foundation is being laid for it.

We were with him for three services, and enjoyed every one of them although they were not so large in attendance. San Diego is the seat of the Navy on this coast; and the great Consolidated Aircraft works is there, employing perhaps 40,000 workers. This feverish war work has upset the home life and regularity of many of our families with the broken shift work. This affects our church attendance greatly, even on Sunday. We are glad to show a picture of the S.S. bus and its load of happy kiddies on their way to the service on Sunday morning.

Good Word From North Riverdale—

About all we get from North Riverdale is good news these days. We have just received word that the contract has been let for the erection of their new building. They have their financing arranged and are ready for the 'go-ahead'. They hope to have the building ready for dedication in 90 days. We hope so too, for they have been meeting in school buildings and store rooms ever since their start. They are now meeting in an auto sales room. It is not bad advertising, for all can see their service and it is good. It is on a busy thoroughfare—main street—and not far from their new location. Bro. Uphouse writes that they have had 10 additions to the work in the last few weeks. For pictures of this new work, see page 7 of this issue.

GROUND-BREAKING SERVICES—
(see Page 7)

Cleveland News—

More good news comes from our Cleveland church. A Men's Brotherhood was recently organized with 31 in attendance, which is a goodly number for any mission point. Brother Frank Griffin was elected president of the new organization.

At baptismal services two weeks ago, a family of four was received into the church, making a dozen additions since Jan. 1. Let's continue to remember Brother Lepp and his Cleveland group in prayer.

Compton Church—

This church has been without a pastor for a couple of months, and Brother and Sister Hathaway, returned missionaries from Africa, have been acting as supply leaders for the work until a permanent man could be secured for the field. Bro. Hathaway is a faithful soul-winner, and wherever he goes is trying to win men for Christ. This is a marvelous field at Compton in which to win souls. May we soon be able to rise up and take it before the Lord returns. We spent two days at Compton.

My Testimony

By

MISS GLADYS RUSSELL

Clayhole, Ky.

"Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest.

I praise God that he was able to save me from my sin. I also praise Him because He has remembered us here in the Kentucky hills.

I have attended Sunday School ever since I was a small girl. I enjoyed hearing the Word of God, but when I would start to accept Christ as my Savior something would hold me back. But at last I was converted when a Gospel Team from Grace Seminary was at Clayhole during the Christmas vacation in 1940.

After I became a Christian I had many conflicts. Some that I thought were my friends scoffed at the idea of me being a Christian. I am thankful that He has carried me through. He means more to me than my false friends. I want to win them for the Lord also.

Since I became a Christian I have become treasurer of the Clayhole Christian Endeavor. I have received many blessings from this office.

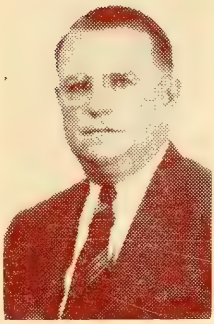
I pray that I may live a brighter life for Christ each day and that through my life His name may be glorified.

NEVER BEFORE

By MARTHA SNELL NICHOLSON

Never before such a sad world as this,
Never before;
Tumult and bloodshed, confusion and fear,
Nations at war.
Kingdoms are tottering, famine draws near,
And pestilence sore.

Daily the blessed hope brightens—more dear,
Hourly more dear!
Never before was His coming so near,
Never so near,
Never a time when the signs were so clear,
Never more clear.



Earth's long night is ending—O glorious dawn
Of ineffable day!
Scarce can our waiting hearts bear His delay
"No longer delay, Come quickly, Lord Jesus, come quickly!"
we pray—
Sobbing, we pray.

"No Man Careth for My Soul"

II Cor. 5;10-11.

By REV. WM. CLOUGH

Pastor, Uniontown, Pa.

This message breathes the passion for lost souls, and is a sample of what hundreds are hearing from him in Sunday afternoon broadcasts. It reveals the secret of his success in winning men to Christ. God give us more—hundreds more—preachers with this mighty passion for souls.—The Editor.

When multitudes of men and women and children in every direction around you are plunging into hell, how can you, who call yourself a Christian, sit down, fold your arms, and be at ease? Yet all too many are doing this today. We are told of the zeal, enthusiasm, and real concern the disciples of Christ had for the lost. They banded themselves together, and in love they made an effort to reach men and women and win them for God. In a few short years that little group shook a Roman world to its very foundation with the gospel. They went everywhere preaching the Word. The one great need today is Personal Soul winning.

When Christ called the twelve, He sent them out to preach. When Christ called the seventy, He organized them into groups of twos and sent them from house to house preaching the Word. The gospel spread quickly, and the church grew rapidly. Everyone was interested and had the work at heart. Andrew was saved and he went after his brother and brought him to Jesus. Philip got saved and he went after Nathaniel and brought him to Jesus. Nicodemus met Jesus and the testimony of that man and his experience has lived through the centuries. The woman of Samaria was saved, and she went home and led a whole city to Jesus. Peter, who was brought to Jesus by his brother, stood one day and preached a sermon that won 3000 to Christ.

The gospel of Christ which these men preached has not lost its power. The gospel is the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth, and Jesus Christ is the same, yesterday and today and forever. God is still on his throne, and when men will preach this gospel they will reach men and men will be saved. The message of Christ will produce the same results today as it did when Peter was here and preached it, or when Martin Luther was here and preached it, and when Moody and others were here and preached it. God wants men, Christian men, consecrated men, trained men, Spirit-filled men, who have a burden for souls, who will dare preach Christ today. When Christ stood on the shores of Galilee and said, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel," He meant that every one should go; he also meant there should be no let up even in war times. All too many have lost this vision, and that's why so many are hell-bound today. Brethren, many of the members of our churches have left the impression on the world that we do not care."

Is it nothing to you, Christian friend, that in your city there are hundreds who wait for some man's tears, some man's hand, some man's invitation to come to Christ? When Jesus stood by Jerusalem and knew what was before it, its doom, and the death of those in it, He wept. But you and I call ourselves Christian today, and we stand by our cities, we stand by and see multitudes of men and women far greater than the number that lived in Jerusalem that day, and we know they are lost, and doomed, we know they are dying, we know they are going to hell—but where are the tears. Like it was said of some who lived when Jeremiah lived and prophesied, and when he called them to God, to repent and to have faith in the almighty God of Heaven—it is said they are a people "who cannot blush." Oh, beloved, with our nation at war, with practically the whole wide world at war, with such a state of confusion and dread as the world never knew at any time before—today, what responsibility rests upon us as Christians!

The Bible plainly says, "We must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ." This is our warning—I mean the plain statement of fact to the Christian soul—we must all appear, meaning the blood-bought, blood-washed, born-again ones. A double L—all, means every one must appear before Christ. Some of you may laugh, but beloved this is no laughing matter; it is serious, serious business; there is a judgment involved. When we stand before Christ, we stand before His judgment seat. This should cause some careless-minded living Christians today to shudder. There will be a day of accounting. I'm not talking about a judgment for your past—for your sins of the past—but just because it is not a matter of condemnation, death and hell and the lake of fire, am I to pass over it lightly? Ah, never! I read on: "We must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ, that every one may receive the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad." God wants you to know that it is mighty important how you live as a Christian; and that, even though this judgment is not the great white throne judgment before which the wicked stand and are judged, yet is a judgment throne; and that every word and work of your life since the day you were born again will come before you and be brought into judgment on that great day. It certainly does matter how a man lives as a Christian. If it were not for the fact God wants you to live as His witness in this world and work to win others for Him I don't believe anyone would be allowed to live a single day after the day of his conversion. What miserable failures some of us have made in the past! Some of you who read these lines know you have not won a single soul to Jesus Christ in all your life. Perhaps some of you, when you began the Christian life, were thrilled; you were interested and you worked for Christ; but, old man devil came your way with discouragement, and in a general disgust you gave up. You have slipped back so far, that to reach you, some dear one would have to reach way down to touch you, because of your backsliding.

Christian friend, can you look at that vast multitude out there in the world, that crowd whom you know is doomed and certain for hell, and not be concerned? After Paul had said, "We must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ," he added, "Knowing therefore the terror of the Lord, we persuade men." "But," cries someone today, "No man careth for my soul."

I was converted in Philadelphia back in 1924 in a real revival. Before I was converted, I rode to work each day, for several years, back and forth on the street cars and the buses and the ferry boats. And Philadelphia has always been thought of as the city with many Christian workers, and fundamental churches, and gospel preachers. But no one ever spoke to me about Jesus. I worked with folks who claimed to be Christians, they belonged to churches, they sang in church choirs, and they served in church work; but not one of them ever talked to me about my soul! Had it not been that one day, as I stepped from a street car on my way home, I saw a Great Revival sign which attracted my attention, hanging over the front door of a Brethren church in North Philadelphia, I might even myself today be in hell—saying the least, still on my road to hell. That night I went to that church—the first time I had been in church for many a year—and three nights after I was converted. But not a single individual in all Philadelphia asked me if I was a Christian! I have a man in my church who told me, some time ago, that when I visited his home and invited him to take Christ as His Savior and invited him to church, "That was the first time anyone ever invited us to Christ," and soon after that he and his whole family were saved and became members of the church.

Only a few days ago my telephone rang. Some lady was speaking, "Reverend, my brother is in the hospital. He is very sick. I want you to go see him." I said, "What is your name?" She told me, and I said, "Do I know you?" She said, "No, you have never seen me. But I have listened to you over the radio for months, and my brother needs God. Will you go see Him?" I said, "I'll be there in a few minutes." I went to the bedside of that man. He was very sick; he was very honest too. I talked to him about Christ and asked him if he was ready to meet Him. He said "I am not, but I would like to be." I then said, "Will you accept Him as your personal Savior today? I explained what that meant. He said, "I will accept Him now," and He did, and we prayed together; and His last words were, "I am ready now for anything that may come." Two weeks later, I called on the same man. He said, "I am trusting Christ," and he lifted his hand with a Bible in it and said, "This is what I am reading."

This world needs Christ. Knowing therefore the terror of the Lord, we persuade men. Conditions in this world, with war and turmoil and confusion, and with everybody busy working time—overtime—and even Sunday—it is having, as one missionary board put it, "a very sad effect upon the spiritual lives of our churches." People are becoming so taken up with world affairs that they are forgetting the responsibility of winning the lost. This is sad indeed but its true! All too many have lost the vision. And where there is no vision the people perish. I would to God that all of us would be stirred to a sense of our duty. It will be a terrible thing to meet God empty-handed. It will be even worse to meet Him with shamefacedness, and the Bible says there will be both. I never had when I was privileged to attend the Great Appelman

Have you done as much to take the gospel to others as other folks did to bring it to you? Be a witness today! ! !

anything touch me in my life like last Thursday night Revival campaign in Town Hall on North Broad Street in Philadelphia. There were 4,000 people there that night and over 100 came forward to accept Christ. That was a thrill to see them come from every corner of that wonderful building down the aisles, down to the front, and there kneel in prayer. But the greatest thrill came to me, when I looked over the audience that night, and when the preacher was speaking on the power of the blood of Christ to save men—and when he spoke of my Lord's life on earth, and how they crucified Him, and how they mangled His precious body, I thought "And God permitted all of that for Me." I wept, and when I turned I could see hundreds weeping with me. My friends, a few more tears would help some today. This world needs Christ, but that's not all; without Christ this world is lost and will perish. Christ is all this world needs, but "No man careth for my soul."

And you and I have Him! we have His precious gospel! Before us they are as fields, and they are whitened fields ready for the harvest—multitudes, and they are all lost!" For all have sinned and come short of the glory of God." Tomorrow will find some of them in eternity, and Christian friend we will have to answer to God! What will your answer be? They are going, but where are they going? They are going down—and this may be plain but its true: they are going to a sinner's hell. When the Lord said to that group who were following Him after the crowd had turned back and walked no more with Him, "Will you also go away?" I remember the man Peter who had been brought to Jesus by His brother Andrew said, "Lord, to whom shall we go, Thou hast the words of eternal Life." There is none other, for neither is there salvation in any other—for "without the shedding of blood there is no remission." But with all of that, still our indifference and our attitude toward them compel them to say, "No man careth for my soul."

Just this word: "We must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ, and knowing the terror of the Lord we persuade men." May the spirit of the living God convict us as Christians, and cause us to yield up our lives to Christ today. May He be able to use us, so that in that great day of His glorious appearing which is ahead, no one will be able to say "No man careth for my soul." Beloved, we need more love; and we need to show more love toward one another, and toward those for whom our Lord died. How many Christians today, who feel down deep in their hearts that they have been a failure and have just been marking time, will say, "Lord, from this day on, henceforth and forever" (Like General Booth one time said) "God shall have all there is of me?" We have the Holy Spirit; we are indwelt by the Holy Spirit but does the Holy Spirit have all of us! If not, then I urge you to give yourself up completely to Him today. Amen.

WHO IS TO DRINK IT?

This is the report of an actual dialogue which took place between two American citizens—one of them a business man, and the other a clergyman, to whom the business man spoke frankly, as one does to a good friend:

"Well," said the layman, with an air of finality, "prohibition is a failure, and we must get used to the idea of making America wet once again."

"But who is to drink the liquor?" queried his friend. "Will you?"

"Why, no," he replied. "You know I am a teetotaler."

"Will your son drink it?"

"No, that shall not be!"

"Would you want it to come back for the sake of your clerks?"

"No, it is my practice to discharge any clerks who drink liquor?'

"Do you want your customers to drink it?"

"No, I would much rather not; I am sure that those who use strong drink will not buy so much from me nor pay their bills so promptly."

"Will you want the engineer on your train to use it?"

"No, I admit I don't want to ride on a drunkard's train."

"Ah, then, you want this liquor for the men whom you meet driving cars on the public highway?"

"No, of course not; that is a danger to everybody."

"Well, then, who is to drink this liquor in America, pray tell me?"

"I am not so sure that anybody should drink it. I guess we're much better off without it."—The American Issue.

"Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise."—Prov. 20:1.

Demas Hath Forsaken Me

By ARNOLD R. Kriegbaum, Pastor, Filimore, Calif.

Just as Mexico had yielded under the hand of Cortez with a small company of brave followers so Pizarro thought that a similar experience might be repeated in a conquest of Peru, a country of whose fabulous wealth he had heard such glowing reports. But Pizarro and his troops were called upon to suffer such indescribable hardships that his soldiers were about to desert him, and already ships from the homeland had arrived to carry them back to Spain.

Pizarro told them plainly that they might go back if they were afraid to go on. Then he drew his sword and traced a line from east to west on the sand and pointing towards the south he said, "Men, before you lies toil and hunger, drenching storms, disease, and possibly death; but there is also victory, plus great wealth and glory. Behind you is ease and pleasure and safety. On that side lies Peru with its peril; on this side is Spain with its comfort, but eternal disgrace. Now, men, choose whether you will go back to Spain or whether you will go on to Peru. As for me, I will go on."

He stepped across the line he had drawn. In a moment his faithful lieutenant was by his side, saying, "I, too." And then came another and another and another, until the whole of his brave little band was at his side; and with them Pizarro swept on to a conquest which has ever been one of the marvels to succeeding generations.

So it was with Paul. Undoubtedly Paul had talked with Demas; and we can easily imagine him saying, "Demas, before us is Rome with its hardships, its dangers, its perils, its sword, its prison. Behind us is Thessalonica with its comfort, security and rest. Now, Demas, if you prefer to turn back, that is your privilege, but as for me," said Paul, "I will go on."

Demas Retrogresses

The story of Demas has a fine prologue but a very poor epilogue. When Paul was imprisoned in Rome the first time, Demas was with him (Col. 4:14; Philemon 24). Without doubt, Demas must have demonstrated the same passion and zeal which always characterized the warrior for Christ, Paul. Demas without question had spent much time in prayer with the faithful apostle. Demas probably "gave approval" to the preaching of Paul. All things seemed favorable for Demas to become a great help to Paul in the work for God.

We could only speculate why Demas first followed Paul. The name Demas means "popular," and it might be that Demas wanted to be something in the "eyes of the world," and thought that following Paul would prove beneficial. Regardless of what his motives were, Demas supposedly became a follower of Christ. He worked with Paul, and traveled with him from place to place. In these journeys Paul left Ephesus and hurried to Miletus whence, it is possible, he sailed for Corinth, on his way from that city to Spain. There is no record as to when he reached Spain, but it is indicative that he met trouble almost as soon as he landed. He was soon arrested and taken back to Rome, a prisoner of Nero. In chains, Paul was being taken back to that damp and deserted dungeon. Things ahead looked dark! The immediate future had not the halo of glory and prestige! Demas forsakes!

Why? A thousand times we might ask, Why? Why did Demas forsake Paul? Ah, listen, let us ask another question, Why do people today forsake Christ? If this can be answered, then we will know why Demas forsook Paul.

In these hours of discord, disorder, and disquietude, we are alarmed at the disinterest in eternal things. The reason people are falling from the faith is because:

(1) They have an Imperfect Knowledge of Christ. "They on the rock are they, which, when they hear, receive the word with joy; and these have no root, which for a while believe, and in time of temptation fall away which, when they have heard, go forth, and are choked with cares and riches and pleasures of this life, and bring no fruit to perfection" (Lk. 8:13-14).

A man was crossing the Mississippi on the ice, and fearing it was too thin, began to crawl over on his hands and knees in great terror. Before he gained the opposite shore, all worn out, another man drove past him gayly, sitting upon a sled loaded with pig iron. Ah, say, that is the way most Christians are headed toward the heavenly Canaan, trembling at each step lest a promise of God should break beneath them. The man had an imperfect knowledge of the ice. Many there are who have an imperfect knowledge of Jesus Christ.

What kind of a Christ do we have? We must attribute to Christ the greatness that is His. Christ is: (A) Eternal, being identified as "The everlasting Father" (Isa. 9:6), or more literally the "Father of the ages." Before the world was, Christ is (Jn. 1:1-3). (B) Unchangeable, being the "same yesterday and today, and forever" (Heb. 13:8). Praise God, we have an unchanging Christ in a changing world. (C) Omnipresent, i.e., He is always with us (Matt. 28:20). Oh, how thankful we need be that though all forsake, Christ is faithful. All the friends of Paul may have forsaken him as he headed for the Roman dungeon; but the peace of God flooded his soul, and he had no fear of the flashing blade which was to sever his head from his scarred body, for he knew Christ was with him. (D) Omniscient, i.e., our Lord knoweth all things. He knows our heartaches, weaknesses, problems and trials, for He knows what is in man (Jn. 2:24-25). Thank God! (E) Omnipotent, i.e., Christ is able to do the impossible. Power to heal (Lk. 4:39), raise the dead (Lk. 7:14-15), and control nature (Matt. 8:26-27) are evidences of His power. These give a partial picture of the greatness of our Lord.

(2) They have Permitted a Moral Lapse. This is exactly what happened to those mentioned in Heb. 6:4-6. These were once enlightened (cp. Eph. 1:18) and had literally tasted of the heavenly gift, the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come, even as Christ tasted of death; yet they fell into a moral lapse of fruitlessness for Christ. The first step to a moral lapse is failure to read the "Old Book" and to spend time in prayer.

A woman said not long ago, "I have just been so busy this past month that I didn't have time to read my Bible." Tragic; yea, pathetic! Christians who have not time to read and pray are too busy for their own good. Prayerlessness is the first step into carelessness. Carelessness is the first step into worldliness, which brings us to the next point.

(3) They are Being Immuned to Worldliness. How many times I have heard this statement, "I don't see anything wrong in that." So many fail to realize that before Satan can be victorious, he must make us blind. A blind man doesn't see the Grand canyon toward which he is walking either. So, many fail to see the dangers of worldliness until after they have hit the bottom. It has been said by another, "Compromise is the devil's crowbar." If somehow, we can be immuned to worldliness and come to the place where we say, as one young man said to me not long ago, "They all do it," then Satan not only has us blinded, but has given us the initial shot of immunity which will finally bring a spiritual calamity.

Dr. J. W. Chapman relates the following story. A miner in one of the Western mining districts, who had been most successful in his operations, invited all his friends to a house-warming; and in the midst of his sumptuous feast, thinking of something that he wanted which was not on the table but in the cellar, called an attendant and ordered him to procure it. Taking a lighted candle the servant descended the steps into the cellar, and soon returned with the article but without the candle. "Where is the candle?" asked the master, and the careless answer was, "I left it sticking in a barrel of sand." The master of the house rose instantly, walked quietly to the cellar door, and when it was closed after him, sprang down the steps and hurried across the cellar floor to snatch the candle which was flickering, not in a barrel of sand but of blasting powder. A minute more and an explosion would have occurred which would have shaken the very foundations of the mountain. Feasting on worldliness is much like this. It may settle the question of eternity, and the next compromise may sever and snap the cord that ends in a catastrophy. Ah, yes, "Demas hath forsaken me, having loved this present world."

(4) They are Forsaking Worship and Spiritual Living. "Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is; but exhorting one another; and so much the more, as ye see the day approaching" (Heb. 10:25). There is a tendency today on the part of professing believers to feel that they have fulfilled a responsibility if they attend "at least" one service on the Lord's day. Prayer meeting is for the old and decrepit, the business meeting is for those who want an office, and communion is for those who don't know any better. Such an attitude is only found in a heart that is permeated, saturated and dominated by sin.

A baby cries for food because he has a desire for it. The working man wants food because he has a desire for it. The born again child of God wants the "bread of heaven" because he has an inborn desire for it, whereby he cries Abba, Father (Rom. 8:15). Sitting at home in a rocking chair listening to a saint of God preach the Word is a blessing for a sickly, elderly saint of God, or perhaps a sinner; but one who professes to be a child of God and is able-bodied enough to eat three square meals a day, take a drive on Sunday afternoon, and attend sport and social functions, is not too weak to sit for one hour in God's house on God's day and hear God's Word. If the seat is too hard,, take a pillow with you. Forsaking God's house and Gods' people, and merely coming to church enough to keep your name on the roll, is a disgrace to the blessed name of Jesus Christ, and an evidence of little love for the things of Christ. Oh, God, help us to grow in Thy grace that we might love Thee as thou didst first love us. Grant that we might go on to perfection in Christ Jesus, not forsaking the source of our peace, hope, joy, comfort and love.

Why Not?

Take someone to church next Sunday. Don't waste gasoline hauling an empty seat to church. Fill it!

Mark Progresses

The story of Mark is the antithesis to the story of Demas, in that it has a poor prologue but a fine epilogue. Mark was the cause for the unhappy separation of Barnabas and Paul. Mark was rejected by Paul as unworthy to accompany him because he had previously abandoned the work of the gospel out of timidity or indolence. But there is cause for rejoicing to find Mark later ministering patiently and obediently to the very apostle who had formerly repudiated his services; still more, to know that he persevered and progressed even unto the end, and was sent for by Paul to encourage him in his dying hours. What a contrast! Demas forsakes Paul and the gospel and turns back to the world. Mark forsakes the world and turns to Paul and the ministry of the gospel. Mark was a mature saint of God with a ripe, Christian character, in which all the Christian virtues and graces had become fixed and solidified into permanence. The testimony of Mark came from a heart that had been changed by the grace of God.

"A new heart will I give unto you; and a new spirit will I put within you; and I will take away the stony heart out of you and I will give you an heart of flesh" (Ezek. 36:26). The story is told by a missionary to the Red Indians in our Canadian territories how it felt to be in the grip of the death-freeze. It was 70° below zero, and as the traces of the dogs that carried the sleigh across the black wastes got broken, he jumped off to repair them. Perspiring with the exertion, he felt his garments suddenly stiffen, and a chill such as he had never before felt in his experiences in these high latitudes seemed to creep to his very bones. It was intensely cold, "and all at once," he said, "music such as I had never before heard, seemed to descend from the skies. Oh, it was rapturous music! Can the angels, with their heavenly harps, equal what I heard? The snow began to appear as if covered with jewels that deck the city, and the twigs of the frozen trees seemed all kinds of colors. It was just fairy-land. A sensuous delight, a physical pleasure, began to steal over the whole body. The marks of the Indian attendants who had gone before, the tracks left by their snow, got transformed into beautiful couches; and a voice said, 'Lie down and rest, and listen to the music.' I was looking round to choose the couch upon which I should rest, when I heard a soft voice say, 'Stop! you are freezing to death.' I had only time to take the rope that bound my dogs to the sleigh and bind it around me, attaching myself to the sleigh, and to say in the Canadian French to the dogs, 'March!' They started and dragged me unconscious through the snow, battered and bruised, but safe." Ah, man! to freeze is sometimes just delicious. The devil takes care that the cold heart should never feel cold. He tells the birds to sing, and the flowers to bloom, and the demons to transform music. There is many a soul just freezing to death amid the pleasures of a sensuous religiosity that will only damn him forever. The human heart is a stone until God warms it and regenerates it. "For Demas hath forsaken me, having loved this present world. . . " (II Tim. 4:10).

NEWS BRIEFS From Our Workers

The following item comes from Bro Phillip J. Simmons, Pastor at FREMONT, O.:

"The Fremont mission church, which has just seen its second birthday last Sunday, enjoyed its largest attendance of any regular service. On Sunday morning 113 people filled the chapel until chairs were placed in the aisles. This is the third time since the beginning of the year that the attendance has reached the 100 mark, in spite of three epidemics in our community. The building fund offering Sunday only missed $40 by a few cents, and has averaged $29.12 since the beginning of the year. On Feb. 18, the state approved the building plans for our church, and the people are eager to get started on the building in the next few weeks. Pray earnestly for this, and for the unsaved that are ministered to in this new field."

To stimulate a greater attendance during the revival conducted by Bro. R. Paul Miller, the GLENDALE, CALIF. church presented a Scofield New Testament and Psalms to the person who was responsible for bringing the greatest number of others out to their services. In addition, on one Sunday evening, a bouquet of roses was given to the largest family representation present, which might include all relatives by blood marriage or adoption. The Junior High C.E. did its part to encourage attendance among its members by sponsoring their own inter-society contest for attendance at the services. One of the features of the campaign was a Sunday afternoon singspiration, which was preceded by a basket lunch at the church, and which delegations from many other churches in the district attended.

The bulletin of the First Brethren Church of PHILADELPHIA, PA., carried this item: "'Forgetting Those Things Which Are Behind' was the closing appeal of the message last Sunday; and when the congregation was asked to take a stand on the command as thus presented by the verses in Philiippians, not a member present failed to arise immediately to his or her feet, pledging to forget the sins, the misunderstandings, and the differences of the past, and pledging anew to press forward toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. There is no question but that those present meant business. The spirit manifested and the manner in which the response came left no doubt about that." The Evangelistic Committee of this church had previously decided to postpone the annual revival until the members showed evidence that they were ready to support one with their prayers and attendance. Since that time, there has been an increasing burden of prayer for a revival. The prayer meetings have been given over almost entirely to prayer, prefaced only by a short devotional service, a brief Scripture reading ,and the taking of the prayer requests.

The Second Brethren Church of LOS ANGELES has been especially active lately in efforts to evangelize the children nearby. First was a week's meetings following school, conducted by Prof. and Mrs. Mills, in which there were 123 decisions for Christ. Besides the children from 13 different religious groups which attended, there were a large number who had been receiving no religious instruction at all. These meetings were climaxed by a Sunday evening service conducted by Prof. and Mrs. Mills, in which the children participated. Then, a week later, in conjunction with evangelistic meetings conducted nightly by Bro. Leo Polman, children's meetings were again conducted during the afternoon. In the week intervening, to connect the two meetings, a Wednesday afternoon children's meeting was conducted, with a fine program and a special gift for each boy and girl attending.

The numerical results of the revival conducted at the Bethel Church of BERNE, IND., conducted by the pastor, Bro. Wm. Schaffer, were as follows: confessions of Christ, 3; rededications of life, 44; presentation of life for service as the Lord may lead, 2; baptized and received into membership, 5; average attendance for all meetings, 133; lowest attendance 69; highest attendance 207.

Bro. Arnold Kreigbaum, pastor at FILLMORE, CALIF., writes: "The First Brethren Church of Fillmore, Calif., held a prophetic Bible conference Mar. 1-3 with Rev. H. B. Centz and Rev. A. B. Machlin as the speakers. Both are converted Jews, and their messages were both timely and instructive. An offering of nearly $80 was raised through this Jewish conference for our Jewish mission in Los Angeles, where Rev. Elias Zimmerman, our missionary to the Jews, is laboring. The conference was a great blessing to our church, and many expressed the desire that the conference might go on."

To emphasize the importance of victory through Christ during the Victory Revival conducted by Bro. C. H. Ashman at the PERU, IND., church, every "v" in the church calendar except one was a capital—that one in the word "devil."

News from Brethren CHURCHES

VICTORY REVIVAL AT JOHNSTOWN, PA.

"In all kinds of weather" was literally true during the victory revival at the First Brethren Church in Johnstown, Pa. "The worst three weeks of the winter" was the verdict. Snow, wind, ice, blizzards, rain, slush, zero, etc. Fully three-fourths of the time old man winter held sway. But "we all worked together to see what could be done," and the Lord gave marvelous victories for which we praise His holy name.

There were 98 public confessions, everyone of which was personal and definite, not a mass movement. The call and challenge given was pointed, plain, and personal. The decisions were out-and-out, clean-cut, and Scriptural. 29 of these were members of the church seeking a closer relationship with the Lord or restoration from lost favor or presenting themselves for complete surrender. 69 were not members of the church. Two baptismal services had already been held ere the meetings closed, and many more had indicated their purpose to become members of the church. The numerical results that were visible were most gratifying, and gave cause for rejoicing and praise to the Lord.

The fellowship was wonderful! Invitations for meals were numerous! There were many foretastes and foregleams of heaven! We were accorded the best of accomodations. After an absence of six years following a pastorate of 14 years, we found many of the "faithfuls" and many "new recruits," indicating a healthy condition within the church. Bro. Lynn was a Christian fellow-laborer in the fullest sense of the term. His standing in the church and city is of the highest order. The Lord is using him in a great way for fundamental, evangelistic testimony.

The attendance was not exceptional at any time. No sensational methods were employed to secure large crowds. But there was a sustained average of 242, with 133 the lowest and 377 the highest. The volunteer choir averaged 40 and there was a choir every night. The music was the best we ever heard during a three weeks' series of meetings.

All in all, we count thist revival a "Real Victory Revival!" In spite of much sickness, increased hours in the industrial field, the the distractions of this war-hysteria period, and every conceivable type of opposition which the devil could inspire, the Lord gave victory to His Word. The days of sane and Scriptural evangelism are not past! The church must put forth three times the effort to secure the same results as accomplished 10 years ago, but the church that is willing to do this can and will have a revival. The Johnstown church is one of our outstanding churches and is to be counted among those loyal to Biblical Brethrenism.

Our ministry was enlarged during the last week by radio broadcasts each morning for the six weeks days. During these we spoke on these subjects, Spiritual Stratasphere Christians, Spiritual Bomb Proof Shelters, The Perfect Defense Weapon, Ships Made Safe at Sea, Victory over Four Spiritual Axis Foes, and Christians Decorated for Faithfulness and Valor. Anyone interested enough to write for them will be given the Scriptures used for these messages.

The first few nights of the victory revival at Peru have been most encouraging. The Triple As, Dad Ashman, Bob Ashman, and Ken Ashman, are the evangelistic team.

—Charles H. Ashman, evangelist.

LONG BEACH, CALIF.

If you ever want a real work done among the children of your community, just call on the Polmans—Leo, Leila and Elaine.

The way all the young folks flock to their daily, after-school meetings, you'd think they were featuring a bag of gum drops or a Walt Disney comedy.

When we saw them getting ready to leave after the concluding service of a two weeks' campaign last night, we wondered that they had so much left to pack, so many good things had been given away while they were here. And when we say "good" we are not thinking of MATERIAL things, but the GOOD THINGS OF THE GOSPEL.

Getting children into a meeting usually takes a little time, but this trio had well over 200 right from the start—and they came in from homes all over the city of Long Beach. When you see the Polmans in action, however, you cease to marvel at the remarkable results obtained. Their power to attract and win has its origin in a well-planned and prayed-over program, together with a good, practical understanding of the heart and mind of the child.

The Polmans have departed, but the blessings received from the Word through their ministry are indelibly engraved upon the fleshly tables of hundreds of young hearts.

Ever hear of Dawson Trotman's Bible Club work If not, make an especial effort to find out about this movement which, for many years, has been gaining great favor among young people and service men. It may be just the remedy for your young people's problem. We now have 12 boys and six girls of high school age in these clubs—only about one-sixth of our total enrollment, but how much better it is to have 16 who are really reading and memorizing God's Word daily, than 96 whose only touch with God came during the Sunday School hour Young people must learn that growth in grace can only come through the daily communion; otherwise, the inspirational message on Sunday is just something to be forgotten on Monday. Better to have 16 who are fellowshipping daily with God than 116 who are fellowshipping once a week with one another. In the past we have had our eyes on numbers. Now we have our eyes on a willing few, whose spiritual growth will do more for the attendance than anything else ever could, to say nothing of the testimony which these few can bear among those of their own age. One spiritually-minded and consecrated young person is of more value in a group than any teacher, as those who work with young people will readily testify.

Not much further to add at this time except for the fact that our Men's Magnify" is answering an ever-increasing number of calls for meetings in this district, besides all of the regular assignments which they meet weekly in the jails, prison camps, etc. In one of the camps where the men have been holding services, it is reported that about a dozen of the converted prisoners have a prayer meeting under the stars every night. Truly, the fire is falling upon this camp, for which we lift our hearts in jubilant thanksgiving to Christ.

Please remember in prayer the many thousands of defense workers who are pouring into this area. Our responsibility is great as we seek to reach them with the Word. Col. 2:5.

—Gene Farrell.

GLENDALE, CALIF.

Here is a fairly complete list of things that happened at our church during the year of 1941:

There were nine first confessions of Christ as personal Savior, 14 rededications, 16 baptisms, and 21 received into church membership.

Among the 19 special speakers or groups occupying the pulpit were Dr. R. E. Neighbor, the J. Keith Altig family, Dr. John Hubbard, the Eureka Jubilee Singers, the Biola Girls Glee Club, the Goose Creek Quartette, the Los Angeles City Jail Workers, Rev. B. Davidson and Mr. Raymond Joyce both of India, Rev. H. M. Griffin of the China Inland Mission, Rev. John Hathaway and Rev. C. B. Sheldon both our own missionaries on furlough from Africa, and Dr. Arthur U. Michelson. In addition to these speakers in regular Sunday services, the Men's Magnify Brotherhood was privileged to hear Dr. J. E. Conant on several occasions, and also Rev. Roy L. Laurin and Dr. Paul R. Bauman. At the most recent men's meeting one man accepted Christ as his Savior.

The W.M.C. spent a very busy year making baby quilts for the Navajo babies, rolling bandages, and collecting clothing for Kentucky. We are trying hard to meet all the goals. We think they are fine ones to endeavor to attain.

The Adult Christian Endeavor met their projects almost 100%. Each six months we try to add another missionary to our list. The Lord always blesses an organization that is interested in sending forth the gospel.

We are proud of our Children's Missionary Band led by Mrs. O. J. Hammer. Last week there were 20 children other than those that belong to our Bible School, for which we praise the Lord. They are studying China, and have taken a very good collection for the starving children in war-torn China, to be sent through Dr. L. S. Bauman.

Representatives from our church have faithfully filled the following appointments: Lincoln Heights jail, two groups being led by Ernest Harrison and Sam Toy, Jr., every Thursday night at the City Mission in Los Angeles; alternate Sunday nights in County Road Camp No. 5; Monday nights in Garden Chapel Mission. Occasionally Mr. Toy has spoken in Saturday night street meetings. Until closed, a group went to Elias Zimmermans mission to the Jews once a month.

Special weekly prayer meetings have been held faithfully by the women Thursday mornings, and by the men Saturday nights.

New subscribers have been added to The Brethren Missionary Herald, and there are more to come. We are well pleased with our Brethren publication.

We are looking forward to our revival meetings with R. Paul Miller. We have a prayer clock, and of course our prayer is for many souls in Glendale to find the Lord Jesus as their Savior.

Yours in Christ Jesus,

—Gladys Stivers.

AFTER THE WAR—WHAT?

One of the most remarkable aspects of the present war has been largely overlooked. It is the curious fact that a very large number of influential men seem to be more concerned about the character of the post-war world than they are about the business of winning the war. In spite of the desperate peril of the present hour, even the leaders of our own government too often appear to be acting with an eye to the possible fate of their political notions and careers, instead of striving to get the immediate task accomplished. Very learned books have already been written to set forth the blue-prints of the world which is to be after the war, as the authors conceive it, or perhaps we ought to say, as they desire it. Church leaders, who long ago repudiated the theological creeds of their churches, are now engaged in writing economic and social creeds for the new post-war world to be.

In commenting upon this strange fancy which leads men to spend their energies upon an imaginary world, the first thing that ought to be said is that if more time and hard work is not put into the immediate business of winning the war, what is left after the war may not be worth talking about. While the starry-eyed reformers are talking about the world to be after the war, the Japanese generals with 6,000,000 of trained soldiers, and a nation of 70,000,000 working without thought of hours or wages standing behind them, are devoting their full attention to the war itself.

In the second place, it may be said confidently that, after we have won the war, the kind of a world we shall have will depend on the kind of principles which guide the men who lead in the work of reconstruction. Looking at the matter from this standpoint, the outlook is not very encouraging. Listen to the words of the noted Roscoe Pound. Certainly no "fundamentalist" in his religious views, he nevertheless says, "The fashionable social and political philosophies of today are of another type. Far from being creative, they are either destructive or obstructive. . . . When I think of current modes of thought in the science of politics and the science of law, and reflect on what is likely to come from them in the reconstruction of the world, I confess I shudder."

There is not much hope in these gloomy words, either for the present world or that world which men wishfully imagine for the future. But blessed is the man whose hope is in the Lord. For all those who know the Lord and His eternal plan for the ages, there is neither uncertainty nor despair. The ancient prayer of the saints, "Thy will be done on earth," will be answered one of these days. Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly.

PRAY FOR THIS MOVEMENT

In the mind of the general public, as expressed by the newspapers and magazines, there are three main religious bodies in the United States: Roman Catholics, Protestants, and Jews. The Catholics have their definite organization which speaks for the group. Likewise, the Jews have their organization. And for the Protestants, the Federal Council assumes to speak, and is generally recognized. These three divisions are recognized by the great radio broadcasting chains, and time is granted to each. To the general public, no other comparable religious group exists.

Now it is a lamentable fact, well known to many thoughtful observers, that this is not at all a complete picture of the situation in America. The picture not only is incomplete but actually misrepresents the facts. For there exists in this country, both inside the denominations and outside, a very large group of Protestants whose faith differs more radically from that of the Federal Council than historical Protestantism differs from Roman Catholicism. This group numbers millions of individuals ,and they support hundreds of churches and organizations. Yet this tremendous group has practically no recognition in this country so far as national opinion and affairs are concerned. If one of their number wishes to broadcast the faith held in common by the group, it generally must be paid for just as any commercial concern must pay. Often it is difficult to get the time on chain broadcasts, even if the money is available. Again, if in some large city there is a project to include religious education in the public school program, the Federal Council steps in to represent the whole of Protestantism. If the evangelicals do not wish to support the Federal program, then they have no voice.

Such a situation is neither democratic nor fair. Furthermore, because of the tendency of government toward wider control over all departments of human life, it becomes a matter of tremendous urgency for the evangelicals to work out some plan of cooperation which will enable them to make some demands for recognition in proportion to their numbers and importance in the religious life of America.

Entered as second class matter at the post office at Cleveland, Ohio, February 9, 1939, under the act of March 3, 1879.

There is now a movement in progress which aims to bring together representatives of all evangelical churches and groups and organizations, to discuss the feasibility of plans for some form of association which would include and truly represent all such believers. Named the "Temporary Committee for United Action Among Evangelicals," and supported by the signatures of a large number of well known pastors, teachers, and leaders, this preliminary committee has issued a call for a nation-wide conference to be held on Apr. 7-9 at the Hotel Coronado, St. Louis, Mo.

The purpose of the conference is for frank discussion and exploration. No rigid plan or organization has been established in advance. However, certain tentative principles have been suggested: (1) The association shall be purely voluntary and operated democratically. (2) It shall in no wise conflict with nor interfere with the rights and prerogatives of member bodies. (3) Membership will be on a basis of the traditionally accepted evangelical position. (4) It shall be an association consisting of member bodies —churches or groups of churches, evangelical organizations, denominations, with provision for conditional membership as may appear advisable. (5) A basis of representation shall be established. (6) Representatives shall not represent themselves but the organization designating each of them, and in this sense will be the bearers of the views of their organization. (7) Fields of cooperative endeavor shall be designed, among which are the following needed at the present time: (a) Relations with government. (b) National use of radio. (c) Public relations. (d) Evangelism. (e) Preservation of the principle of separation of church and state. (f) Freedom for home and foreign missions. (g) United efforts of evangelical churches within local communities. (h) Christian education.

I am sure that the above tentative program needs no defense, and I trust that all readers of the Herald will read it with care. It seems to present a great opportunity for united testimony. Too long has the Federal Council assumed to speak for Protestantism. Let us pray earnestly for the Lord's guidance for this fine proposal.

The Practical Ministry of the Seminary

While the academic schedule of the seminary is heavy, both faculty members and students find time to minister in various places outside the class rooms. One of the most remarkable evidences of God's favor upon the present location of the school appears in the wonderful way that He has opened up preaching opportunities for the students. As I recall, no less than three little churches have called seminary students since the first of the year, one as far away as the town of Three Oaks, Mich. As an example of how these calls take place, the following story is characteristic: Through a contact made through Bro. Russell Williams, one of the students was called to the Galena Christian Church at Heston, Ind.; and after some time there he learned of another little church at Three Oaks, Mich., that needed a pastor. Another student went up there, and is now preaching at Three Oaks. For the information of the many friends of Grace Seminary, this issue of the Herald is giving considerable space to brief accounts of the work of the students in these various churches. At my request, they have written the accounts in the first person. I trust that our friends, having read of the work being carried on, will put these student pastors and their churches on their prayer lists. The testimony of God's grace is greatly needed in some of these communities, and often the students work under real handicaps. Last week, for example, we had a severe blizzard which made driving Sunday night very dangerous. Some were snowbound, and one was bumped into a ditch; but all were back at the seminary safely when classes began. Pray that the Lord will continue to guard these pastors and the gospel teams as they drive the hundreds of miles which they cover every week, and bless their testimony.

COMMUNITY BIBLE CLASS AT HUNTINGTON

At the request of a group of Brethren and other Christians at Huntington, Ind., the seminary faculty has organized a Community Bible Class which meets there each week on Friday night. A very fine room was secured at the Huntington Public Library, and the local paper has cooperated in carrying announcements of the class. Huntington is a city of around 17,000 people, and there is plenty of room for work of this kind. Four members of the seminary faculty carry the work of teaching. The interest in the Word is good, and we feel that the class will grow into something very fine.

A REQUEST FOR UNITED PRAYER

Pray for Bro. Walter Miekley, senior in the seminary, who has been suffering from a severe eye infection, that he might be fully restored and enabled to go on with his studies. Pray also for Mrs. Miekley who has not been well.

THE GOSPEL TEAM MINISTRY

Due to the fact that many of the students have churches, we have not sent out as many teams this year as we have in the past. However, gospel teams have visited churches in Ohio, Indiana and Michigan. Some of these teams have traveled as much as 500 miles over the week-end.

Since September our teams have visited 17 churches, traveling a total of 3,060 miles to do so. Thirty-five services were held; and there were 4 decisions, 2 first time confessions, and 2 rededications.

Among the students who participated in the gospel team work are Gordon Cook, John Balyo, Nile Fisher, Wayne Beaver, Lawrence Lawlor, Jack Shaffer, Mary Edith Harris, Violet Mingle, Ruby Kuhn, Flo Melick, Mr. and Mrs. Irwin Wehye, and Mr. and Mrs. Herman Baerg.

Our jail work has been faithfully carried on by Bro. Peter Bury. Bro. Bury has gone to the county jail at Warsaw every Sunday morning since Sept. 21. God has greatly blessed this work of our brother with 27 first time confessions and 9 rededications. One Sunday morning an old man of 70 years of age, who had never heard the gospel story before, accepted Christ as his Savior, and the same morning a lad of 15 heard the good news and came into the fold. Bro. Bury speaks to each man individually, dealing with each one's own problems. Truly we can praise the Lord for such a report as this.

—Harold O. Mayer, Gospel Team Chr.

THE CALIFORNIA GOSPEL TEAM TRIP

Sunday morning, Dec. 21, 1941, the Ambassadors of Grace from Grace Theological Seminary left Winona Lake, Ind., for a tour of the Brethren Churches in the Southern California district. The members of the team were J. Keith Altig (saxophone), Lawrence Lawlor (saxophone), Garner Hoyt (trombone), and Harold Mayer (leader). Driving steadily, we arrived in Los Angeles and there met Eldon Hoyt, a pre-seminary student and trombone player, who helped to fill the musical department of our team.

Although there was much talk of blackouts and war, the services were well attended. We were able to visit all of our churches from Modesto to San Diego.

We left Southern California about midnight Wed., Jan. 7, and arrived home safely about 1:30 A.M. the following Sunday.

God was very gracious to us granting us a safe journey, for we traveled 6,652 miles in 21 days with only one flat tire. We had the privilege to speak to approximately 1,512 people, having 3 first time confessions, 22 rededications and 14 requests for prayer. Many tracts were distributed along the way, and we rest secure in His promise, "My Word will not return unto Me void."

—Harold O. Mayer, Gospel Team Chr.

ANKENYTOWN, O.

The last Sunday of December I began my third year as pastor of the Brethren Church of Ankenytown, O. The Ankenytown church is one of the oldest in the denomination, organized long before the division from the Dunkard Church which formed our denomination. It is strictly a rural church. Until I became pastor a little over two years ago it had never had preaching services oftener than every other Sunday, though a weekly Sunday School has always been maintained. The attendance over the last two years has been a little over 60, and this average has been increased in spite of the loss of several members to the organization of the new church at Mansfield.

I teach a Sunday School class, and preach twice every Sunday, in addition to teaching a young peoples Bible class every other Saturday night. The story of a typical week-end would be something like the following: Catch the 11:30 A.M. train from Winona Lake Saturday; arrive at Mansfield, O., 187 miles away, at 4:20 P.M.; catch the 5:20 bus for Fredericktown (near Ankenytown) 17 miles away; spend Saturday night in the hospitable home of Mrs. Edna Guthrie and her son Wayne at Fredericktown (if the Bible class or a call doesn't call me away); teach my class in Sunday School next morning; preach at 11:00; take dinner in the home of some member of the church (and the Ankenytown people feed their pastor well); make from one to six pastoral calls in the afternoon; be present at C.E. at 7:00 P.M.; conduct the evening service at 8:00 P.M.; then go to my bed, and in the morning travel to Mansfield and catch the 7:35 train for Winona and arrive home at about 11:00 Monday morning. I usually travel about 500 miles each week-end.

In the past two years I have conducted three funerals and performed three weddings. In the same time I have baptized about 20. The Lord has given us much joy in this work. He has blessed His Word with the salvation of precious souls. We look forward prayerfully to the future.

—Robert D. Culver.

THREE OAKS, MICH.

"And ye shall be witnesses unto me."

To be a witness unto Christ is a peculiarly happy opportunity and responsibility. Therefore I count it a high privilege, and so it is, to proclaim His blessed name in the little town of Three Oaks, Mich.

The church, located in the center of this town of about 1300 inhabitants, is one of the many Christian (the name here refers to the denomination) churches found in this area, and has been in existence over 50 years. But for many months this little church, composed for the most part of people earnestly desiring the true gospel and interested in seeing souls saved, was without a pastor. They prayed for a pastor. I prayed for a church. God answered both. And on Jan. 18, 1942, I journeyed to Three Oaks, Mich., to begin a ministry which has been the source of great personal spiritual blessing as I have fellowshipped with those of "like precious faith."

Happily our attendance varies but little, 40 or 50 being the usual number present. Not a few of this number are children and young people, so I endeavor each Sunday to bring a "little sermon" (object lesson in which I often ask for assistance from the little folks) which immediately precedes the regular message.

Decisions for Christ have been made by three of our young people, and we are praying that God will continue to abundantly bless the work which He has begun.

—John G. Balyo.

PLEASANT VIEW COMMUNITY CHURCH

On the first Sunday of November 1941, my wife and I drove out about six miles into the country to call upon the parents of one of our jail converts. Not finding them at home, we explored a side road, and found a little country church, called the Pleasant View Community Church. Upon investigation we discovered that they had been having Sunday School for nine years with only an occasional preaching service, and that they had been discussing the call of a part-time pastor. We candidated for the church and received a call. There are about 35 in Sunday School and the same number in church. The community is well populated and many are unchurched. We travel about 25 miles to and from the church and in visitation. So far there have been no visible results, but we feel the Lord is working in the hearts of many. We count it a real privilege to serve the Lord in this community, and our prayer is that souls might be saved and Christians strengthened.

—Herman Baerg.

CALIFORNIA, MICH.

The Superintendent of Missions of the Second Synod of the United Presbyterian Church informed me in April, 1940, that I was to go to California, Mich., for the summer as a student-supply. Since that time I have continued there, working in a rural congregation of some 40 to 50 members. That number has been decreased by one death and increased by three accessions, with a few possibilities of imminent decisions. I teach a Sunday School class, preach in the morning, advise the young people's meeting in the evening, and conduct a brief worship service immediately following. My wife also teaches a class in the morning. Our calling is all done in the afternoon on the Lord's day. The total number of miles per Sunday would be about 220. It has been a privilege and a blessing to serve the Lord in this place; and we earnestly request your prayers for our witness there, that it might be faithful and fearless, for His Name's sake.

—Gene Allen.

BREMEN, IND.

My pastorate is at the First Fundamental Church of Bremen, Ind. This is an independent congregation which has maintained a good testimony in that community. The average attendance at the morning worship service is about 40, at the evening service 45, about the same number at Sunday School, and 20 at the weekly prayer meeting. The church membership is 44. I preach at the two services on Sunday, and conduct the weekly Bible study and prayer meeting. I have been the pastor here only two weeks, and am praising God for the opportunity to serve Him thus.

—Irwin Weyhe.

CANTON, O.

I have been receiving a rich blessing from serving the First Brethren Church of Canton, O., as student pastor. The task is difficult, but the joy of the Lord is my strength. Each Sunday I conduct morning and evening services and teach a young married people's Sunday School class. Approximately 540 miles are covered each week in caring for the church. The average Sunday School attendance for the year has been about 150. We have had 33 decisions for Christ during the past year.

I was called to the church at the beginning of last summer vacation, and at my graduation in May, will take over the work as regular pastor. There is a great field in Canton, and we are praying that many precious souls will be won for Him through the ministry of this church.

—Glenn O'Neal.

MONON, IND.

It has been just about a year since the Lord opened up a place of service for my wife and myself at Monon, Ind. We drive well over 200 miles each week-end, for our country church is about 90 miles from Winona Lake. We have two churches, one in the country, the Milroy Community Church, and one in Monon, the Monon Presbyterian Church.

The Lord began about 16 years ago to open the country church for our services. My pastor, Rev. C. J. Pugh of Akron, O., preached there one summer while attending seminary at Chicago. Last February he had his first opportunity to go back, only to discover their need of a pastor. So the Lord saw fit to call us there, and in a month or two opened the Presbyterian Church also, which for a number of years had been threatening to close.

The Lord has blessed our work in the country. We held two weeks of services at the opening of school last fall, and the Lord blessed with about 20 conversions, most of them young people. Since then He has continued to bless with more, and with the dedication of a few lives to Him. We have now around 50 in Sunday School and church, whereas we only had about half that number to begin with. The Presbyterian church has the problem of no young people and thus is not progressive. We have, however, started a children's work there on Saturday afternoons. There have been some 40 different children come and a number have accepted Christ as their Savior.

On Saturday evenings we have prayer meeting at the church in town. On Sunday morning we have combined services at both churches, thus allowing a preaching service at both. My wife and I also both teach a Sunday School class. In the evening we have young people's service as well as an evening service in the country.

We both praise the Lord for the privilege of being His ambassadors.

—Donald J. Hare.

OSCEOLA, IND.

In April of 1940, I was called to be the pastor of the Bethel Brethren Church of Osceola, Ind. During the last two years the Lord has blessed the work and at the present time the Sunday School is averaging 50 every Sunday. We are expecting great things during the coming year. In the church, there have been a number of decisions that have blessed the congregation. Besides the work at Osceola, I have been teaching a community Bible class in the Public Library at Pierceton, Ind. The class has been growing and has had as many as 35 out to the meetings. With these engagements, I would say that I travel at least 130 miles each week. It has been a great blessing to preach the Word, and I know that in the future there will be even greater blessings.

—Robert W. Hill.

TALMA, IND.

Talma Christian Church of Talma, Ind., is located approximately twenty miles from Grace Seminary. Our congregation averages between 40 and 50. The Sunday School attendance average is between 35 and 50. Services at the church include Sunday School, morning and evening services, and a Wednesday evening prayer meeting. Responsibilities given to me as a pastor are, leading the song service at Sunday School, teaching a Sunday School class, preaching in the morning and evening, and visiting the homes in the surrounding territory. The total number of miles traveled weekly are about 90. I received a call to this church following the ministry of a fellow-student who had opened the work. As to decisions, there have been one for salvation, two definite re-dedications, and several other decisions of the Christian life. One of the most encouraging things is to see the rapid growth of several young men recently saved. The Lord has greatly blessed me in providing the opportunity of practical training along with the blessings of Grace Seminary.

INBODY UNION CHURCH

This is my second year as pastor of the Inbody Union Church, which is a little country church near Goshen, Ind., about 25 miles north of Winona Lake.

The church was built about 53 years ago, and many of those who were present at the dedication of the building still live near enough to attend the annual home coming services, and some occasionally attend the regular services.

We have a Sunday School of between 30 and 50, all of whom stay for the preaching services as a rule. Then in the evening we have young peoples' service and a preaching service again. I find plenty to do in teaching a class, preaching both services, and conducting all of the opening exercises for Sunday School and church.

This is an inter-denominational church, but most of those who come have some denominational background. However, this does not prevent us all from working together for the salvation of souls and the advancement of the cause of Christ.

We have many friends in the community who attend other churches, but who join us in any special services, and on these occasions the building is crowded.

The faculty of Grace Seminary suggested me as one who would be available to fill the pulpit when the former pastor was called to another field of service, and we have been greatly blessed in our ministry there. One of the greatest blessings has been our contact with the people in the homes. We have had time now to witness definite spiritual growth in many of the lives, not only of the young people, but of the fathers and mothers as well. The Lord has also given us five or six first time confessions and many dedications of life in the last few months of our work there.

HESTON, IND.

In May 1940 we received a call from the Galena Christian Church, Heston, Ind., a rural church about 12 miles north of La Porte, Ind. (also 15 miles east of Michigan City, Ind., and five miles southwest of Three Oaks, Mich). This church was originally connected with the Disciples; but due to the lack of interest in the community the church had, for the most part, been abandoned by the denomination. Three years previous to our call there had been no preaching services, but a few faithful ones had kept the Sunday School functioning. Throughout the winter months the attendance has been running between 35 and 45, although the actual church roll scarcely totals 25 baptized members. The mid-week prayer service is fairly well attended. It is conducted in the homes and without the presence oft he pastor. the homes and without the presence of the pastor. teaching the adult Sunday School class and presiding over each of the worship services, while Mrs. Umbaugh conducts a young people's meeting each Sunday night.

An average of 225 miles is traveled each week-end. Bro. Russell Williams, pastor of the New Troy Church, was responsible for our coming to this work at the end of our first year at Grace Seminary. In the past year there have been approximately 19 first time confessions, 11 dedications of life, and five of these have definitely committed themselves to lifetime service. Another evidence of the Lord's blessing has been the spirit of giving among the people. One of the great blessings to me has been to see how God can work in the hearts and lives of men and women when all human efforts have failed.

—Earl Umbaugh.

WEST ETNA, IND.

I am pastor of the West Etna Community Church, an independent group located 20 miles northeast of Warsaw, Ind. We have an average attendance of 35 for both the Sunday School and church service. I teach a class every Sunday, but preach only every other Sunday. Bro. Earl Umbaugh was formerly pastor of this group. At that time he served two churches, this one and one at Heston, Ind. Upon being called to fill the pulpit every Sunday at Heston, he turned this work over to me. Although we have had no visible results the attendance is steady, and we are praying that in time they will want services every Sunday.

The Outside Ministry of Faculty Members

Among the preaching and lecturing engagements of Pres. McClain were the following: an address before the annual convention of Baptist Churches of this area of Indiana held at Huntington; a six-day Bible Conference with Bro. Kenneth Ashman at the Pike Brethren Church in Pennsylvania; a five-day Bible Conference with Bro. Orville Lorenz at the First Brethren Church of Myersdale, Pa.; three days as one of the Bible teachers at the annual Missionary Conference held by the Gospel Church of Cleveland, O.; the annual Thanksgiving sermon at a union service of the churches in South Whitley, Ind.; an address before the annual George Washington Banquet of the Otterbein Brotherhood of the First United Brethren Church of Warsaw, Ind.; and supplying the pulpit over Sunday at the Grace Brethren Church of Flora, Ind., in the absence of the pastor, Bro. Henry Rempel.

In addition to his busy schedule at the seminary, Prof. Homer A. Kent has found time to minister the Word in various ways and places since the opening of the school year last September. A number of calls have come to minister in the vicinity of the seminary. He has preached at the First Presbyterian Church of Warsaw, and delivered an illustrated message on the Holy Land at the First Baptist church of the same city. On two occasions he was called to teach a Bible class at the First Methodist church in Warsaw. In Winona he has taught the Men's Bible Class of the Presbyterian church on several occasions, and shortly before Christmas addressed the Winona Men's Club. Recently he gave an illustrated message on the 23rd Psalm at the class meeting of the Alligo class of the Presbyterian church.

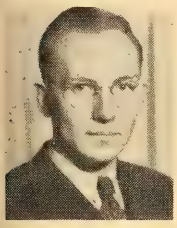
Last October Prof. Kent attended the 4th East Central District Conference of Brethren Churches at Ellet, O., where he delivered seven addresses. Following this conference, he remained over the week-end to be present for Grace Seminary Day at the First Brethren Church of Ellet, where he spoke at both the morning and evening services to splendid audiences.

At the Christmas holiday season several engagements were fulfilled also in Ohio. He spent New Year's Eve with Rev. Phillip Simmons and his loyal group at Fremont. A fellowship service was held from eight o'clock till after the New Year had been ushered in, during which Prof. Kent spoke with the use of scenes of the Holy Land.

New Year's evening was spent at the Akron Bible Institute, where he addressed the student body of that institution on the subject, "The Testimony of Archaeology to the Truthfulness of the Scriptures." A number of former students of Grace Seminary are now teaching in this school.

One Sunday during the holidays was spent at the First Brethren Church of Canton, O., where he preached morning and evening in the absence of the pastor, Glenn O'Neal, who was in the state of Washington visiting his people. Another Sunday was spent at the Emmanuel Baptist Church of Akron, O., where Rev. Cloyce Pugh, a former student of Grace Seminary, is the pastor.

Prof. Kent has also several times served as teacher of the Community Bible Class at Huntington, Ind., which meets each Friday night at the City Library. For the past several weeks he has been preaching at the Palestilne, Ind., Christian Church, due to the illness of the pastor, Walter Miekeley, who is a student of the seminary.



During the past several months the services of Prof. Herman A. Hoyt have been used both inside and outside the denomination. He was the speaker at the opening of a Bible conference in the First Brethren Church at Dayton, O., Sept. 21-22. In October he supplied the pulpit of the Gospel Center in Grand Rapids, Mich., of which Dr. Pietsch was the former

The First Easter Message

By J. KEITH ALTIG, Pastor of Imbody Church near Goshen, Ind.

Millions,, yes, I mean millions, of Easter sermons have been delivered in the course of history of the church. If there were an average of 1500 ministers who preached an Easter message every year of the history of the church on earth, there would be well over 2,000,000 such sermons; but with all of these there has never been a better one, nor a more unusual, than the first one.

Rev. Altig

The preacher was unusual. He was an angel. Not many churches have an angel for a preacher. The place was unusual: before the open door of an empty tomb. The time was unusual: just before dawn on Sunday morning. The congregation was unusual: a few frightened women standing amidst a group of soldiers who had fainted from terror. The length of the message was unusual: 64 words in the English version, but only 48 in the language in which it was actually delivered as recorded by Matthew.

This first Easter message is to be found in Matt. 28:5-7. It was a wonderful message which could dry the tears from the eyes and hearts of these frightened women, and could send them running to tell others its glad tidings. Is there anything in it which could do the same thing for those of us who live today?

We notice that it is a message of comfort. "Fear not," said the angel; and certainly many of God's people today need a message such as this. This was not addressed to the soldiers. They were like dead men on the ground, insensible to what was going on around them. This message was not addressed to the rabble, who three days before had cried out for the crucifixion of the Lord. They were probably all home in bed, sleeping soundly, as unaware of what was taking place in the garden as they had been of the real significance of what took place on Calvary's hill.

But there were some who were in a condition to hear and benefit from a message like this. Although the future seems hopeless, although our dreams and expectations lie in ruins around our feet, yet there comes to us, born on the winks of the morning, the heart-stirring message, "Fear not!" The Lord Jesus Christ is not dead, He is alive! He is not here in the tomb, He is risen! Even in the midst of a burning, bleeding world, this message comes clear and sweet, a message of comfort to all those who love Him and seek Him, "Fear not!"

This message also contains a call. Come and see," said the angel with a welcoming wave of his hand. "Come, see the place where the Lord lay."

One great reason why so many Christians are living defeated, impoverished lives, is because they have never proven to their own satisfaction that the place where the Lord lay is empty. By that I mean that they don't believe, really believe, that Jesus rose from the dead. Can one who is absolutely convinced that our Lord rose from the dead go about worrying and fretting over the affairs of this life? Can one, who believes that His Lord is no longer dead but living, continue living selfishly, narrowly, with no concern for the lost condition of so many millions of his fellow men?

The wife of Martin Luther is said to have appeared one day, dressed in the clothes of a mourner. Her husband asked her the reason for the peculiar costume. She replied, "Why, haven't you heard? God is dead." "God is dead! What do you mean?" "Well," she replied, "God certainly must be dead or you wouldn't be worrying so much."

There is another lesson which we might learn from this call, and that is that Christianity has nothing to fear from investigation. There are no mystic "deep things" from which the uninitiated are barred. The record of all the facts is open and available to anyone who desires to study them. The microscope of an honest and fair investigation, and the blazing light of a detailed and accurate criticism, have never revealed a flaw, nor discovered a blemish in the character of our Lord or in the record of His life on earth.

"Come and see," defeated, discouraged Christian; and having seen that the Lord has risen, go from the empty tomb with hope renewed and courage strengthened. "Come and see," doubting unbeliever; and having seen that Jesus Christ ever lives in the power of an endless life, bow your head in humble submission and allegiance. In the cool hush of the early morning the voice of an angel preacher rings out, inviting all who will, to come and see the place where the Lord lay.

But hallowed though this spot is, and though we would fain linger in its blessing and glory for awhile, yet the message is not finished. It also contains a commission: "Go and tell." Yes, a message like this must be told! There are discouraged disciples who must be inspired with its message of hope. There are frightened disciples huddling in an upper room who must be stimulated to great deeds of faith and courage. There are unbelieving disciples who must be convinced. There is a lost and dying world which must hear if there is to be any salvation for them; and how can they hear if there is no preacher? Never forget for a moment this commission. The "go and tell" is just as important as the "fear not." The great failure of the church is that she has not been so ready to "go and tell" as she has been to "come and see."

Can you think of a better message for a 20th century world than this first century Easter sermon? The need of the world has not changed, except that now perhaps it is greater. Sin is still with us, blighting and ruining the lives of millions of people. After nearly 2,000 years of hearing this message the world is still as outspoken in its rejection of Jesus as Lord as it was three days before this message was proclaimed.

Here in the homeland, as well as out in the regions beyond, are the multiplied millions of darkened souls, men and women who will never know the blessings of salvation, and the joy of knowing the Lord unless we, many of us, fear not to go and tell them to come and see, and seeing believe.

We have heard the following definition for a "Modernist": A modernist is a theologian or preacher who doubts if there ever was or not; and if there was, or when; and if so, why? His usual theme is "The Whyness Of The What." And haven't we all heard 'em? —Bulletin, First Church, Long Beach.

No Strings Attached

By J. E. PATTERSON, Pastor, Mountain View Brethren Church, Hollins, Va.

Sometime ago I received from Bro. Polman a request that I write a brief article for the Herald; and as this article was to be published in the issue of the Herald just preceding Apr. 1, suggested the following topic, "No Strings Attached." Now I do not know just why Bro. Polman thought of this particular topic unless he has been guilty of playing pranks on others; or perhaps like so many of us, he too has attempted to pick up some valuable looking package seen lying on the street, to find that there was a string attached to said package, and it was quickly withdrawn from his reach.

Now we find this same thing true in many walks of life—in social life, in business and in political life we find that there are many strings attached, and that when we think we are in easy reach of our goal we see that for which we have been striving suddenly disappear.

Certainly this was true of the rich fool of which our Lord speaks in the parable recorded in Luke 12:16-20. We note here that our Lord does not condemn this man because he had been a successful farmer, but rather because he had neglected the most important things. Therefore, our Lord asked the question in Matt. 16:26, "For what is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world, and love his own soul?" Also in Matt. 6:19 He warns against laying up treasures upon earth, saying, "Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal." Again in Matt. 6:33, our Lord instructs us as to what should have first place in our lives, saying, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you."

Now it seems to me that we too often fail to discover that there is a great difference in the value of things temporal and things which are eternal. We fail to realize that while the things of the world—its wealth, its pleasures, its glory—all seem so attractive and so important in our daily living, all have strings attached and may quickly disappear. In I Jn. 2:15-17 we read, "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eye, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world. And the world passeth away, and the lust thereof; but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever."

Now let us think of some of the things which have no strings attached and which are ours if we will only accept them.

First, God's love (Jn. 3:16), "For God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life." Now if we are willing to believe that God really loved us and gave His son to die in our stead, that we might have eternal life, let us believe the words of our Lord recorded in Jn. 5:24, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that heareth My word, and believeth on Him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unto life."

Second, this eternal life is ours with no strings attached when we are willing to rest in the finished work of our blessed Lord. But someone will say, "How may I know that I am saved?" First, you must decide in whom you believe, in whom are you trusting for your salvation. If you are trusting in your own works to save you in your own righteousness, to give you a standing before God, certainly you cannot be sure of salvation, because you are not saved. But if you can say with Paul in II Tim. 1:12, "For I know Whom I have believed, and an persuaded that He is able to keep that which I have committed unto Him against that day," then you are no longer trusting self but trusting in the shed blood of Jesus Christ, our blessed Lord. Therefore, trusting Him as our Savior, we believe His Word is true when He says in Jn. 10:9, "I am the Door: by Me if any man enter in, he shall be saved." Again Jn. 10:28, "And I give unto them eternal life; and they shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of My hand."

Now if we really believe that we are saved, not by any works of our own, but entirely through the finished work of our Lord, surely we must know that He Who saves will also keep; and to strengthen our faith He says in Jn. 10:29, "My Father, which gave them Me, is greater than all; and no man is able to pluck them out of My Father's hand." Therefore, Paul declares in Rom. 8:38-39, "For I am persuaded that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord."

Again, when the Philippian jailer said, "Sir, what must I do to be saved?" Paul said, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." Now then Paul declares in Rom. 5:8, "But God commendeth his love toward us, in that, while we were yet sincere, Christ died for us. V. 9: Much more then, being now justified by His blood, we shall be saved from wrath through Him." V. 10: "For if, when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of His Son, much more, being reconciled, we shall be saved by His life."

Now in closing, let me say that I believe in a Christ Who not only saves me but keeps me saved, not through any efforts of my own, but only through faith in the blood of Christ. So in the words of the Apostle Peter in I Pet. 1:3-5 I would say, "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, Which according to His abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, to an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you, who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation ready to be revealed in the last time."

Also I Jn. 5:12, "He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life."

Don't Be Fooled

By GEORGE M. RICHARDSON, Pastor Glendale, California

A young man was once asked when he first trusted in Christ and was saved. His answer was, "When the bee stung mother." Noticing the startled look that flashed across the face of his questioner, he hastened to explain the incident that prompted his unusual reply. One day when he was but a little boy he was playing just outside the kitchen door. His mother was working just inside. Suddenly a bee came buzzing around his head. Thinking only of his safety and a place of refuge, he ran into the house, followed by the bee, and hid behind his mother. The bee fastened on her bare arm and stung her. Ignoring the pain, she turned around, to her little boy and showed him her arm. There was the place where she was stung, there was the stinger, and there was the bee slowly crawling up her arm.

"You need not fear the bee now, son," she said, "For it has no sting. It cannot hurt you. It's sting is here."

Being a true Christian mother, and anxious to take every opportunity to impress upon her boy's mind the great truths of the Word of God, she took him upon her knee and used the incident as an example of how Christ died upon the cross and substituted Himself there for us. She told him how the sinner, pursued by sin, can find no shelter but in the cross of Christ; how into that spotless One Who hung there was plunged the fatal sting; to Him was meted out the wrath, the stripes, the bruises, the wounds, which were the sinners due. She told him that death has been made harmless for the saved one because all of its sting has been exhausted in Christ, all its dark waters dried up in Him. "Christ also sufferend for sins once, the Righteous for the unrighteous, that He might bring us to God."

We have had many acts of substitution, one man taking the place of another man, recorded in the history of human affairs. During the Civil War it was not an uncommon thing for men to hire substitutes in military service. One of the never to be forgotten incidents of World War I was that of a doughboy from the hills of Tennessee who begged to go in the writer's place when he had been chosen for a special duty that meant almost certain death. I have never forgotten that man because he offered himself for me, his body for my body, his life for my life.

There are five outstanding terms in the Bible used to describe the sacrificial work of Christ—atonement, reconciliation, propitiation, redemption, and substitution—each one of these presenting a particular and peculiar phase of the work of Christ in providing for our salvation. Substitution is not a Biblical word, as the others, but it is a Scriptural idea. It means that one person or thing is put in or takes the place of another person or thing. Thus Christ took the place of sinners and paid the penalty for sin, which is the death that they deserved. Let it never be forgotten that Christ died for our sins, and thus we need not die for them if we accept His sacrifice and by faith become identified with Him in His death and resurrection.

We are now living in a world system that is so surfeited with the philosophies of both metaphysical idealism and materialism, that it seems that the vast majority of men have forgotten the great spiritual values of life, one of which is so vividly set forth in Col. 1:17, "And by Him all things consist." Wave after wave of nationalistic philosophy, like an invading army, has swept through the nations until men have staked their all on their own particular political philosophy. Churches depend upon the instruction and guidance of religious leaders in denominationalism rather than the revealed will of God as set forth in His Word. Individuals in their gross egotism have the insulting presumtuousness to cry out, "We are our own god! We are our own savior! We will build our own eternity!" One of two things must happen: either men in the midst of their shattered and crumpled "toys," and the realization of their miserable failure to work things out for themselves, will cast themselves upon the mercy of God in Christ Jesus, or they will sink down into the hopelessness and despair as they try to quench their thirst at the empty cisterns which they have dug with the spade of their own resourcefulness and self-reliance. Man cannot forsake God and escape the penalty of his sin. Man cannot find salvation and that peace that his heart so longs for apart from Christ and the cross. The last intersection on the broad highway of life divides at the cross. The one road leads to heaven and life eternal, the other to death and hell. There are no detours around the cross by which a man can get to heaven. There is no substitute for Christ.

The world offers many substitutes for truth. There is the cotton-filled bon bon of false cults and isms—beautiful to look at but so unsatisfactory in experience. I can well remember when as a little lad I used to stand and gaze at a beautiful apple upon my mother's dressing table. Day after day I looked longingly at it. Oh, how I longed to set my little teeth into it. Surely a thing so beautiful must be good to eat. My mother had often told me not to touch it, that it wasn't good to eat; but surely my mother must be wrong because it was so pretty, much prettier than the apples in the bin in the cellar. One day when mother was occupied in another part of the house the temptation became so strong that I bit into it, and to my surprise it was not as delectable as I thought it must be, for it was filled with cotton and sawdust. Result: one ruined ornamental pin cushion, an administration of judgment on the part of my mother with a poor little disillusioned boy as the recipient. So it is with the false religions and the gaudy baubles and glistening tinsels of the world—pretty to look upon but unsatisfactory in the laboratory of human experience.

Man has tried to substitute the aquisition of material possessions for the yearning of his heart after God, only to find that when he comes to the end of life it is just as unsatisfactory as the practical jokers billfold last April Fool's Day. It looked good—but it was empty.

Don't be fooled by the things that satan offers as substitutes for the blessings of God. Whenever anything, regardless of what it is, such as business, position, fame, family, pleasure, organizations, take the place of the living Christ and the living organism, the Church, in your life—then that thing becomes an idol and you become an idolator. No man can substitute buttons for his tithe and expect to lay up treasure in heaven, unless his thinking is like that of the little boy who questioned his father on the way home from church, where he had keenly observed the taking of an offering for the heathen. "Daddy," he said as they walked along, "Do the heathen wear clothes?" "No, son" answered the father, "whatever prompted you to ask such a question?" "I only wondered," said the boy, "Why you put a button in the collection bag today?"

Don't be fooled into thinking that the love of money can take the place of love to God. A pastor was one time talking to a man of his duty to follow Christ, both for his own sake and that he might bring up his two children in the fear of the Lord. "I know it," the young man replied, "I know it is the thing to do, but I cannot." "I do not believe that you wish to state it as strongly as that," the pastor continued, "You mean that you are not yet ready to." "No, I mean just what I say. For years all my thought, night and day, has been to make money. I went to church once when I was going with the girl who is now my wife, and the preacher said that a person must yield everything to God if he would be saved. I said to myself, 'Well, I cannot yield my dollars to Him. I must have them for myself and my family in the future.' From that time on I stayed away from church; and now I can't think about religion. No matter how much I try, my mind at once wanders off toward making money. And that's not the worst of it, I can't see anyone else making money without coveting it for myself. It's no use talking religion to me."

Don't be fooled, my friend, with all of the devil's claptrap. God in Christ Jesus has provide for our every need, spiritual, physical, and material. Trust yourself to Him and accept no substitutes.

"I need oil," said a man, and planted an olive tree. "Lord," he prayed, "It needs rain that its roots may drink and spread out; send a shower." And the Lord did so. "Lord," he continued, "My tree needs sunshine," and the sun shone, gilding the dripping clouds. "Now frost, Lord, that its wood may get hardened." The frost came, but sometime later the tree died. The man went to a neighbor and told him of his strange experience. The latter said: "I also have planted a tree and it is doing very well. But I gave my tree over into the care of God. He Who made it knows better than I what it needs. I prayed that the Lord would send what it needed, storm, sunshine, wind, rain, or frost. You made it, Lord, and can best take care of it." Let us with perfect confidence take our hand off of the wheel and our foot off the throttle, and trust Him. Don't be fooled with any substitute for His love, His grace, and His mercy.

pastor. In connection with his services at the Pennsylvania District Conference, he also held short conferences in the Brethren Churches of Uniontown and Listie.

During the week of Oct. 26-Nov. 2, Prof. Hoyt ministered in the First Presbyterian Church of Albion, Ind., where one of this year's seniors, William F. Kerr, a Presbyterian from Atlantic City, N. J., now serves as student pastor. And during the thanksgiving vacation he ministered in his home church, Dallas Center, Ia. This was followed with a ten-day Bible conference in the new Brethren Church of Sharpsville, Ind., where Rev. Vern Stuber serves.

From time to time it has been the privilege of Prof. Hoyt to minister in various places on special occasions. On Nov. 9, he was the guest speaker at the Grace Brethren Church in Flora, Ind., in the interest of home missions. On Nov. 16 he was with Eugene Allen, senior in the seminary, and a United Presbyterian, from Washington, D. C., who ministers in the United Presbyterian Church at California, Mich. In the evening of that day he was the guest speaker of a Sunday School convention assembling there. On New Year's evening he brought a message at the dedication of the new chapel in the First Brethren Church of Fort Wayne, of which church Rev. John Aeby is the pastor. Recently he has ministered in the Presbyterian Church of Warsaw, Ind., the Baptist Church of Kewanna, Ind., and in the Sunday School of the United Brethren Church of Warsaw, Ind.

Taking his turn with the other faculty members, he has brought several expository messages to the Community Bible Class recently organized and meeting in the City Library in Huntington, Ind.

A MODERN MIRACLE

A Brethren pastor in a thriving congregation says that when funds get low for their local expenses and his salary, they then drain their pockets and the local church treasury for a missionary offering. Then in a short while thereafter, they suddenly find the wherewithal coming in for all their other needs. He says: "We do not attempt to explain it—we only accept it." Yea verily, in God's economy it is those who impoverish themselves for others who find a wonderfully providing God supplying their needs in a truly miraculous way. It works!—La Verne (Cal.) Calendar.

LEAN HARD

Child of My love, lean hard
And let Me feel the pressure of thy care.
I know thy burden, child; I shaped it;
Poised it in My own hand; made no proportion
In its weight, to thy unaided strength.
Before I ever laid it on, I said,
"This burden shall be Mine, not yours;
So shall I keep my child within the circling arms
Of Mine own love." Here, lay it down, nor fear
To impose it on a shoulder which upholds
The government of worlds. Yet closer come;
Thou art not near enough; I would embrace thy care,
So might I feel My child reposing on My heart.
Then loving Me—lean hard!—Selected.

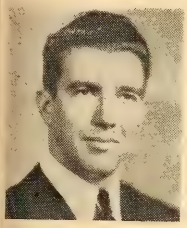
THINK IT OVER

IT ISN'T FAIR



to claim membership in a church and then seldom darken its doorways. It isn't fair to claim membership in a church and then not support it financially. You can't belong to any earthly organization and treat it like that.

Don't Be a Fool

By GLENN O'NEAL, Pastor, Canton, O.

The word, "fool," has come to be so commonly used when speaking of the witty or humorous person that there is grave danger of losing the force of the word as it is used by our Lord. Christ applies the word to six classes of people, using three different Greek words. You may be certain that the one Christ would label as a fool is guilty of serious error. In contrast to the common meaning of "wit," one of the Scripture meanings is "witless," or, "void of understanding," and in several usages it carries the idea of condemnation.

Rev. O'Neal

I believe we may look with profit to the six passages where men are called "fools," and gain therefrom lessons for our own hearts.

A fool is a man who builds his life on any other foundation than the Word of God.

In Matt. 7:26,27, we read, "And every one that heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, which built his house upon the sand: and the rains descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house: and it fell and great was the fall of it."

Men do things in matters of religion which they would never think of doing in other affairs of life. Who would ever think that a man would be foolish enough to build in the situation here described. Yet every day men are building lives and determining destinies on the flimsy foundations of the traditions of men, trusting in personal righteousness, and many other things which are utterly baseless when tested by the Word of God. Don't be a fool! Build your foundation upon the Rock, Christ Jesus; and what is built thereon will abide for eternity.

A fool is a man who is rich toward himself instead of toward God.

Christ, speaking in the parable of the rich fool, says, in Lk. 12:20,21, "Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee: then whose shall those things be, which thou hast provided? So is he that layeth up treasure for himself and is not rich toward God."

It is a reason for sorrow when we see men seeking for peace and rest through worldly gain. This man believed that when he had obtained wealth and was able to retire, he would find the enjoyment which he desired. Christ says that true joy doesn't come that way, but that only a fool would try to obtain it thus. True peace comes by being rich oward God in money, service and devotion. Don't be a fool! Make a fortune which will last for eternity.

A fool is one who places more importance upon outward formality than inward morality.

Christ gives the Pharisees a stern rebuke in Lk. 11:39,40, as he states, "Now do ye Pharisees make clean the outside of the cup and the platter; but your inward part is full of ravening and wickedness. Ye fools, did not He that made that which is without make that which is within also?"

We would look with disdain upon a hostess who would hand us a cup which was perfectly clean on the outside but on the inside there would be dirt, cobwebs and filth. If that is repulsive to us, how much more would God abhor the man who puts on the cloak of profession but inwardly is filled with spitefulness, wickedness and hatred. Don't be a fool! Make it your primary purpose to have a pure heart in the sight of God.

A fool is a man who is more concerned about trivialities than finalities.

In Matt. 23:13-24, Christ speaks of the Pharisees' mistaken ideas in regard to the temple, twice calling them fools, and concludes with the statement, "Ye blind guides, which strain at a gnat and swallow a camel."

The Pharisee, in his minute attention on the letter, missed the spirit of the law, which was much more important. Such a tendency is prevalent today. Religious rites are practiced without requiring the new birth. Communion with man is placed before communion with God. Don't be a fool! Put first things first.

A fool is one who doubts the fulfillment of the prophecies of God's Word.

Christ, in speaking to the disciples who were doubting His resurrection, admonishes in Lk. 24:25, "O fools, and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken."

The word here used for "fool," is more gentle, and has the meaning of "thoughtlessness." The person who today can look at the prophecies which have been fulfilled and are being fulfilled before our very eyes, and is still rejecting the truth of the prophetic Word, must be just as the term implies—thoughtless.

In an article written by Brewer Eddy, dated Feb. 7, 1942, he admits, in speaking of the present war, "It is not too much to say that all we have believed and hoped concerning God's kingdom of righteousness, is assailed in the conflict ahead." This is the result of prophecy based of man's achievements rather than God's Word.

As Christ looked with kind pity upon those disciples who didn't believe all the prophets had spoken, so we can look with just such pity upon our professedly more intelligent "brethren" who have no faith in the prophetic word of God. Don't be a fool! Trust in the prophecies of God's Word.

A fool is a man who is not ready for the coming of Christ.

The final reference to fools is found in the parable of the ten virgins recorded in Matt. 25:1-13, in which five are foolish because they "took their lamps, and took no oil with them:" In the conclusion of this parable in v. 13, we read, "Watch therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of Man cometh," thus making the application of the fact that the five foolish virgins who took no oil were not ready to meet the Lord.

Every Christian ought to live each moment in readiness for the coming of Christ. The closing prayer of the Bible should be constantly on our lips—"Even so come, Lord Jesus."

Conclusion:

If Christ could come, and give but one admonition to the church today, I believe that He could choose no more appropriate words than "Don't be a fool!"

"The doctrine of grace humbles a man without degrading him and exalts him without inflating Him!"

Amillenialism vs. Scripture

By ARNOLD R. KRIEGBAUM, Pastor, Fillmore, Calif.

Answering the Charges of the Amillennialist

THE KINGDOM WAS NOT LITERAL

Amillennialists will claim that when Christ came at the first advent, He made no effort to carry out a literal program of the kingdom; and for this reason He was rejected and crucified. Neither is it unusual for them to claim that all quotations of the Old Testament prophecies, either by our Lord or His apostles, were always invested with a higher spiritual meaning, and always applied to the gospel age. Naturally, they deny that there was ever a reference to the future age or millennium, in which these Old Testament prophecies will be finally and fully fulfilled. According to them, the Premillenarian has simply substituted an earthly political program in the place of a quiet, peaceable, spiritual reign of the Messiah, which is the essence of the gospel.

Did Christ present a literal kingdom at His first coming? Three things are necessary for a kingdom: a land, a people, and a king. Did they have a land? Yes! Did they have a people? Yes, Israel! What about the king? A king and his kingdom are inseparable. The Lord Jesus Christ literally and officially offered Himself to Israel as their king according to the word of the prophet Zech. 9:9-10 as recorded in Lk. 19:27-28.

What kind of a kingdom did Christ offer to Israel? The kingdom which Christ offered to Israel was identical with the kingdom of Old Testament prophecy. (Compare Matt. 4:12-17 with Isa. 9:1-2; Matt. 12:15-21 with Isa. 42:1; and Matt. 3:3 with Isa. 40:3).

The aspects of the kingdom of Old Testament prophecy which are also found in the kingdom which Christ presented to Israel as the first advent were, that it should be: (1) A Spiritual Kingdom. The prophets set forth such a phase in their prophetic kingdom. In Jer. 31:34, the last part of the verse, we learn that in the kingdom iniquity shall be forgiven. Again in Ezek. 36:26-28 the promise is given of the Lord that in the future kingdom, Israel shall be given a new heart and a new spirit. In Isa. 35:10, the prophet speaks of a restoration of joy in human life at the regathering of Israel. Now the question is: Did Christ present a spiritual program to Israel at the first coming? If we turn to Jn. 3:3-5 we soon discover that Christ demanded that entrance into the kingdom was only for those who had been born again of the Spirit of God. (2) An Ethical Kingdom. In Jer. 31:30 it was prophesied that in the kingdom, only the guilty will suffer for his own iniquity. This is not true today; e.a., the Axis dictators have led their people and the world into war, but who suffers? Not the dictators, but the world populace. Who would suffer in God's kingdom? The guilty dictators who instigate the mania. Did Christ present to Israel such a kingdom? One needs but turn to Matt. 5:19-21,27 and the answer is found. (3) A Social Kingdom. Isa. 65:21-22 informs us that the time will come when "they shall build houses and inhabit them; and they shall plant vineyards, and eat the fruit of them." In other words, every man shall possess what he produces, and thus there will be social justice for all as is stated in Ps. 72:1-4. Did Christ present such an order in the kingdom He offered to Israel? Simply read Lk. 6:20-21 and Matt. 13:41-43. (4) A Physical Kingdom. During the kingdom as set forth by the prophets, physical hazards shall be removed (Isa. 65:23); long life shall be restored (Isa. 65:20-21); and there will be the elimination of physical ills (Isa. 35:4-6). Did Christ offer a physical kingdom to Israel nearly 2,000 years ago? Read Matt. 9:35; 10:5-8. (5) An Ecclesiastical Kingdom. What does Ezek. 43:1-7 speak of but the great temple of the millennial period, serving as a central sanctuary on the earth (Ezek. 37:26-28) where worship will be rendered unto Him Who is both King and Priest (Ps. 110); thus there will be universal worship of God (Isa. 66:23). Did Christ demand such a kingdom when He offered it to Israel? Read Matt. 11:15-18. (6) A Political Kingdom. Once the prophetic kingdom is established, there will be security for Israel (Isa. 32:18), and she shall not be plucked up out of her land (Amos 9:14-15). Israel shall then be made just one nation, no longer dispersed, holding her place in state (Ezek. 37:1-24). Did Christ offer such a kingdom to Israel? Yes, but He was rejected, but when He returns He will come in His glory to sit on the throne (Matt. 25:31).

This is the literal kingdom that Jesus Christ offered to Israel, stressing above all else the spiritual and ethical aspects, because it was these that Israel as a nation had failed to observe and look for. Although Christ offered the literal kingdom of Old Testament prophecy, it was rejected, and He was rejected, because: (1) the essential requirement for entrance into His kingdom was on too high a spiritual scale (Jn. 3:3-5); (2) while Israel was ready for a literal kingdom to be established, she was interested only in a social and political kingdom, which was but partial in character of the kingdom Christ was to establish; and unless she would accept the kingdom in its completeness, she could not receive any of its benefits (Lk. 12:13-14); (3) Christ demanded equality with God the Father (Jn. 5:16-18), which caused them to desire to kill Him.

In view of this rejection by Israel, Christ began to teach His disciples that He must needs go to Calvary (Matt. 4:17; 17:22; 20:17-19, 20-22; 21:33-43). Knowing that his weak disciples would need assurance, He taught them of His soon coming crucifixion and resurrection; and then to spur them on in the "blessed hope," He told them He would eventually establish His kingdom by returning to earth in His glorious person as King of kings and Lord of lords, thus to manifest the literal nature of His kingdom (Matt. 16:27; 17:8). He is also careful to prepare his disciples for the deferment of its establishment (Lk. 19:11-27). Praise God, He is coming back. It reminds me of a book which I saw some time ago entitled, "Scriptures to Prove the Postmillennial and Amillennial Views" When I opened the book I found nothing but blank pages. How true! Christ is coming in clouds to "call out" His bride unto Himself. and we shall be with Him for eternity! Yea, bless His name, we are to sit in judgment with Christ (Matt. 19:28). "Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, when He shall appear, we shall be like Him; for we shall see Him as He is" (I John 3:2). As He is glorified (v. 2); as He is pure (v. 3); as He is righteous (v. 7). even so shall we be in His kingdom.

News from Brethren CHURCHES

KITTANNING, PENNSYLVANIA

It has been quite some time since we have reported our work in Kittanning. We enjoy reading of the progress being made in other parts of the brotherhood; but when one is busy, it is easy to postpone writing of the work in our particular field, that others may know something of what the Lord is doing for us.

Last Dec. 29 marked the 5th anniversary of our arrival in Kittanning, to make this our place of residence for a time. During this period, many blessed and highly enjoyable experiences have been ours—as well as also some disappointments.

Not all was accomplished, during this period, that we had hoped for—not all that should have been realized, with proper co-operation. All in all, however, we rejoice that our blessed Lord has been pleased to use us, as pastor and people, to bring about the results achieved.

During our ministry in Kittanning, we have had the privilege of receiving a grand total of 287 decisions (as decisions appear to be counted these days). Of this number, 129 were reconsecrations; 94 were received into the membership of The Brethren Church by baptism, letter or statement; 39 were children, whose parents objected to their reception into the church; 25 seemed unwilling to unite with the church. We were happy to have received three young ladies into the membership of the church just recently, by profession of faith and baptism.

In addition to the numerical results, the church became a full time pastorate; after having received assistance from the District Mission Board for about 25 years, the church has become self-supporting; it is in the best financial condition in its history (with several hundred dollars in the treasury at the time we resigned); and has purchased two extra large lots on which the congregation expects soon to build a new church edifice.

Besides his work in the local congregation, the writer had opportunity of serving in other capacities in the community, having served as Pastor-Counsellor of the Armstrong County Christian Endeavor Union for two years; and more particularly having had opportunity to teach a Bible class in the Kittanning high school. This Bible class afforded us one of the very greatest opportunities we have ever had.

MIDDLEBRANCH, OHIO

Having received a call from the Middlebranch church, we closed our pastorate in the Kittanning church the first of March, and are now in Middlebranch. It is just a bit early to have much to say as yet, in regard to this field. But, if first impressions are an accurate indication of what the future holds in store for us, we shall have a most prosperous and happy ministry with the Brethren in Middlebranch. Never, in all our ministry, do we remember having received such a royal welcome as has been accorded us by the brethren here.

Due to the fact that the church here has purchased a parsonage, and that it will not be available until June, our family will still remain in Kittanning until that time. This will enable our son, Paul, to graduate from the Kittanning high school class of '42.

Brethren, pray for us.

G. W. Kinzie.

CANTON OHIO FIRST BRETHREN CHURCH

"O, how I praise Thee, Lord, for saving me" was a prayer at a recent prayer meeting. It came from the lips of one who heard the Saviour call and surrendered her life to Him, accepting Him as her personal Savior at the victory revival held in the First Brethren Church of Canton, O. the last two weeks of January, with Bro. Chas. Ashman of Whittier, Calif., as the evangelist, and Bro. Walter Lepp of Cleveland, as song leader.

The visible results of the soul-searching messages were 15 first time confessions, a renewal in fellowship and the consecration of the lives of the church members with a willingness to go forward in unity and faithfulness as our Lord leads us. Eleven have been baptized and added to the church membership.

We enjoyed during the meetings the fellowship of the Brethren from Rittman, Middle-branch, Ellet, and Cleveland, O., and hope they will all come again.

God has surely been good to us here in Canton. Of course, we have had our share of sorrows and disappointments as well as our joys and blessings, but through it all we see Him working and are thankful for the many promises of His Word. Thereby we know that He holds us in the way, and only permits to come to pass those things which are for our good and His glory. May we never cease to praise Him for the afflictions, discipline, and chastisements, as well as for the blessings; for by all things He draws us unto a closer fellowship with Him.

Under the leadership of our student-pastor, Glenn O'Neal who will become our full-time pastor after this spring from Grace Seminary, we are looking forward to the coming of "Mickey" Walsh of Philadelphia, Pa., who will be the evangelist for two weeks of meetings in May.

We ask your prayers on our behalf, that we might be surrendered unto Him so that others will see Christ living in us. May we be faithful servants until He comes.

Mrs. Carl Knop, church cor. sec'y.

WATERLOO, IOWA

On Aug. 11, 1941, Dr. J. C. Beal returned to us as regular pastor. He had served for a short period of time in the earlier days of our organization, and returned upon receiving a unanimous call in July.

We have indeed been blessed with wonderful messages from the Word, on the Lord's day, and on Wednesday evenings, when we meet for a study of the Bible. This is an intensive study on Bible climaxes, each person having his outline to follow. This class has been attended by some outstanding Bible students from other denominations, as well as by a goodly number of our own people. The pastor has just concluded a series of messages in Daniel, and next week will begin a series in Revelation. The Sunday morning messages recently have been from I John.

Dr. Beal has made many calls in the homes of members as well as in homes reached by the church school, including those where the parents are not Christian. The men of the congregation have for some time been calling in these homes for personal work under the direction of the pastor. The ladies do their group calling on Tuesday afternoons, establishing and maintaining contact with the childrens' mothers, inviting them to services, doing personal work, obtaining cradle roll members, etc.

Early in September we extended a call to Miss Ruth Bergert of Canton, O., a Moody Bible Institute student, to be with us as a full time worker. She directs the choirs, both adult and childrens', takes charge of the young peoples work, has a story hour for children after school one day a week, and recently organized a boy's group that meets twice a month. These boys have Bible study for half the period, then handwork for the latter part of the time. They are making wood plaques or mottoes that are very attractive, and will serve as silent witnesses in many an otherwise unreached home. The Junior Sisterhood girls have a similar program under Miss Bergert's direction.

The young people are making plans again to conduct street meetings in nearby towns as they did last summer. They use the church school bus for transportation to these meetings. They have done considerable calling and personal work, also some singing in homes of shut-ins. The childrens' choir had a major part in the Christmas music, thus attracting many parents and friends to the service, which was a program of old hymns and Scripture selections illustrative of still pictures of the life of Christ. It is a joy to see these little folks in their white robes and to hear their sweet voices raised to the Savior. Both choirs are now busy preparing the Easter music. Our pastor and other pastors of fundamental churches of the city have made plans for the union early morning service on Easter Sunday.

We should not fail to mention one part of Miss Bergert's ministry among us, that of her own contribution to the music. She gives beautiful contralto solos, plays the flute, the saw, and the bottles. Truly we are blessed in many ways.

One evening not long ago the men of the congregation assembled for the purpose of finishing a partition in the basement, which makes it possible to have the intermediate classes meet as a group. We are slowly but surely moving toward the completion of the building. The W M C and the Willing Volunteers class have jointly furnished book racks for the main auditorium, and it is surprising how much they improve the appearance of the room, at the same time caring for the books.

We are privileged to have Rev. and Mrs. Robert Williams with us to speak one evening since their rescue from the torpedoed ZamZam. Brother and Sister Jobson were also with us for a full day of blessing, Bro. Jobson speaking before good audiences both morning and evening, and Mrs. Jobson bringing messages to the different departments of the church school. A time of fellowship was enjoyed at noon at picnic dinner. Since these visits we feel more acquainted with these particular servants of the Lord, and missionary prayers and efforts in general are more personal than before.

Our mission offerings during the past 12 months have been the best in the history of the organization, and we are looking forward to a good offering at Easter time.

At the beginning of his pastorate, Dr. Beal was invited to teach a class in the Waterloo Bible Institute, but did not feel it wise at that time to do so. Recently he had again been approached on the subject, and has begn teaching a class in Isaiah.

There is to be a rally of the young people of Iowa in our building this month. We are praying for a

Immortal Money

(Please Don't Read this if money talk bothers you.)

"A man cannot carry his money with him into the better country. It will not pass as curency there. But he may exchange it for the coin of the spiritual realm.

"And what is that coin of life? Money that is invested in the welfare of immortal lives becomes thereby immortal. Money that goes into the making of character—the shaping of destinies—money that gives men hope and spells opportunity and lengthens days and wipes away tears, does not 'pass away.'

"The money that has been invested in the training of boys and girls, white or black or yellow or brown, who are today good as forces for righteousness in the communities in which they reside, is immortal money. There is, therefore, no reason why a man must leave his money behind him. The aspiring man plans to take it with him and make it as immortal as his soul."

good enrollment from over the state, that much good may come from it. Plans will be made for a young people's camp to be held in the summer.

The W. M. C has a good membership and attendance at meetings each month. The national goals have been stressed throughout the year. We use the suggested programs, with the leader adding an original number at each meeting. In addition to contributing to the national work, we have bought three units of cupboards for our kitchen, also dishes, etc.; but at present are not finishing the kitchen, rather using these funds for things considered more necessary.

The Senior Sisterhood is showing a nice growth, having regular meetings and doing all possible in the way of spiritual help to its members. New homes are reached in this group and many new contacts made.

Last summer, the young women of the Fidelis Class furnished the study with a rug, lamps, desk, chair and drapes. This class was also responsible for furnishing the nursery, which functions each Sunday morning during church service. Their newest project is that of installing a curtain in front of the baptistry. They have a Christian flag ready to present to the church next Sunday, when the ladies of the D. U. V. of the city present us a United States flag. We are glad to have these flags new for use in the Vacation Bible School, which is a high point in the year's activity.

Before mailing this letter on Sunday afternoon, we must tell that the church school bus carried 43 children this morning, which is the largest number so far as I know, that it has ever carried. They are "fighting for fifty" children in the bus, according to the posters in the bus. Praise the Lord.

We ask the prayers of the brotherhood, that success, as God judges, will crown the efforts put forth by His servant and people in this place.

In His Name,
—Jesse Bontrager, Sec'y.

PERU (Ind.) REVIVAL

Thorough and spiritual preparation had been made for this victory revival. Many prayer meetings were held. Excellent publicity had been given concerning it. "Bob", the pastor, knows how to display the "good news" in an attractive way. The church and the community were ready for the opening of the two weeks of meetings which gave promise of bringing victory to both sinner and saint.

We found the active membership united around the pastor. This church has been attacked from without and betrayed from within. The suit brought against it by the Ashland College controlled Missionary Board is still pending. But the faithful brethren have drawn closer together and are winning souls, edifying the church, paying the church debt; and have been knitted together in the Lord as a spiritual church, bearing a strong testimony in the city for fundamental, evangelistic Christianity.

Our son, "Ken", was with us for the first week as song director. He did a good job of it. His work with the children was also much appreciated. The "Happy Hour" conducted twice a week attracted an average of 106 for the four meetings. This is a great work which the church has instituted and carries on regularly once a week. Each Thursday afternoon the children are transported from the schools of the city to the church for this "Happy Hour" of spiritual worship and instuction.

The Lord gave victory in many ways during the two weeks of our united effort with the Peru church. The attendance was good and regular, keeping a fair level every night. There were many visitors in attendance. Three prayer meetings were conducted each night before services, and they were well attended. The volunteer choir was in its place each night and a good average was maintained by its members. The music was most inspiring and varied. The fellowship of the services and in the homes was a foretaste of that which is to be. There were 50 public confessions, over half of which were first time confessions of Christ. Sixteen were baptized on the last Sunday night of the revival. We held the standard high and insisted on clean-cut, out-and-out, definite decisions. The grand old book and the grand old faith still wins souls! We praise Him for each and every victory won in the power of the Bible and through the power of the Holy Spirit. The weather was fine until the closing Sunday. Then there came a regular March blizzard? It gave us everything all in one day: rain, sleet, snow, wind, etc. But the Lord also gave a great day of victory with 31 decisions on this last day, and the day was climaxed with a beautiful and impressive baptismal service in which the 16 were baptized. The entire congregation stayed for it too.

Charles H. Ashman, Evangelist.

REVIVAL AT GRAFTON, WEST VA.

On Sunday, Jan. 18, our church at Grafton, began its series of special meetings and continued for a period of two weeks, closing on Monday night, Feb. 2, with our communion service. The revival meetings, however, closed officially on Sunday night of Feb. 1.

The Lord richly blessed this special effort in winning the lost to Christ. The meetings opened on Sunday night of Jan. 18 with a very fine attendance, which was maintained all through the meetings. We were surprised and abundantly blessed in having the pastor to be (Rev. Randall Rossman) and his family, with us on Monday and Tuesday evening of the opening nights. Bro. Rossman brought a very fine and timely message on Monday evening.

This series of special meetings has done much for our people in Grafton. The saints have been edified and strengthened, and the seed of conviction has been sown in the hearts of many, we are told. There is one young couple in particular with whom the Holy Spirit is striving. The Lord knows who they are. Pray for them with us that they will yield their hearts and lives to Christ soon. Let us give all the praise and the glory to our wonderful Savior and Lord.

There is one outstanding characteristic which deserves honorable mention, which evidenced the sincerity and devotion to Christ of all our Grafton folk. It was the way in which they gathered each evening in our pre-prayer service. People were praying everywhere in the auditorium. Childish voices were raised to the throne of grace in behalf of their fathers, mothers, brothers, neighbors, friends and relatives. How wonderful it was to hear the prayers of children mixed with the voices of adults that souls might be won to Christ and His church. Our preprayer services were well attended with children and young people, as well as adults.

There were eight first time confessions. Four of these were baptized and received into the church.

Our Grafton field presents itself rich and fertile, and our people are ready to follow a good strong leadership. Pray for this work and the faithful ones who are working, longing and looking for His coming.

Just a word of thanks and appreciation for all the kindness shown their pastor-evangelist. In Grafton you will always find our Brethren most hospitable and kind. They surely know how to plan for your comfort and welfare. We received a very fine offering and a most splendid gift (a suit of clothes). This was from the men's class. May God richly bless our many friends there. Thank you one and all.

We solicit the prayers of the brotherhood for a GREATER WORK THAN EVER IN Grafton, West Va.

S. F. Hauser, Pastor-Evangelist.

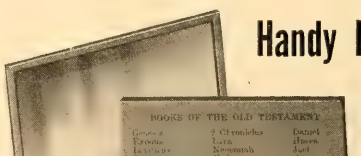
NEWS BRIEFS From Our Workers

On his 26th birthday, BRO. JAMES R. HAYDEN, a member of the First Brethren Church of Long Beach, Calif., was ordained by his pastor and the associate pastor, Dr. L. S. Bauman and Bro. Alan S. Pearce, to the Christian ministry. Bro. Hayden, a graduate of Moody Bible Institute, is superintendent of the Floating Society of Christian Endeavor at San Deigo, Calif., and is making Christ known to the men of the army and navy. In approving his ordination, there was not one dissenting voice in the church, nor in the Ministerial Examining Board, nor on the part of anyone who knows him. At the close of the morning church service, in which he was ordained, his seven month's old son was dedicated to the Lord.

The LaVERNE, CALIF., church bulletin reports that a real blessing was received by those who attended the service for the soldiers, conducted recently at the fair grounds by their pastor, Bro. Donald Carter. About 50 soldiers attended, and formed a splendid, attentive audience.

The Choral Ensemble from the Bible Institute of Los Angeles—an organization of 32 mixed voices, singing a complete program of sacred music, recently appeared at the Second Brethren Church of LOS ANGELES. The ensemble has in its personnel the Biola Mixed Quartet, the Male Octet, the String Ensemble, and the Trombone Trio, each of which presented numbers during the evening's program. The Choral Ensemble is directed by Mrs. Helen Rich, a graduate of the Los Angeles Conservatory of Music and Arts, who has also studied in Paris and has been on the faculty of a girl's college in Egypt. Dr. Herbert Tovey, head of the Department of Music at the Bible Institute, was present with the group at the service.

The First Brethren Church of WINCHESTER, VA., of which Bro. Paul Dick is pastor, has been awarding gold crosses to those who learn five new verses of Scripture during the week and repeat them on Sunday night. Among those who have received a cross were two small children.



A little band in NORTH HOLLYWOOD, CALIF., where Bro. Donald Carter has been conducting a Bible class, is anxious to start a Brethren Church. A lady in the community, who had heard of the plan to locate such a church there, was heard to say, "I wonder if they are the sort of people who have a prayer meeting? If they do, I want to attend!" Bro. Carter remarks, "How thankful were we that we could say, 'Yes, the Brethren people believe in and practice prayer'."

BRO. ORVILLE JOBSON, on furlough from Africa, wrote Bro. Crees, pastor at Waynesboro, Pa., "I have not forgotten you in our rush to get everything in order for sailing. Clipper now appears to be out of the question, but boat hopeful." BRO. AND SISTER ROBERT WILLIAMS, Zamzam survivors, are also packed ready to leave for Africa on short notice. Continue to pray that transportation may soon be provided for these missionaries, who are needed so much on the field.

The WAYNESBORO, PA., church reports, as the result of the meetings recently conducted by Bro. J. L. Gingrich of Allentown, Pa., that the church has been revived, almost the entire membership coming in reconsecration in one service. There were besides this 10 first confessions of Christ and 19 reconsecrations.

DON'T FORGET, if you are planning special meetings, to notify The Brethren Missionary Herald at least three weeks in advance, so mention can be made of them in the Herald. A number of such items have reached us too late to announce ahead of time.

BRO. DONALD CARTER recently had the privilege of speaking to the soldiers at one of the army camps—which reminds us to remind you to pray for every effort being made to win these boys for Christ. From various sources we have heard encouraging reports concerning such work. The following excerpt from the letter of a mother, concerning the activities of her Christian son in the army, shows the possibilities there are for a Christian soldier to testify for his Lord: "He has been quartered along with from 80 to 150 other officers in a beautiful mansion. He has really been witnessing for the Lord. He read the Bible to them and they read out of his Bible much. He explained and commented as he read. They seemed to enjoy it much. He told of a beautiful baby grand piano, and no one could play but he. He refused to play anything but hymns. They sat around moaning and groaning, then one by one they came to the piano and listened. Then they began to sing, and then asked for altar call hymns; and they all sang and many wept. He said the toughest fellow there (and they were so tough, even the officers hardened)—this fellow asked for "Nearer My God to Thee." Many broke down and could not sing. Then at last he played softly, "Tell Mother I'll Be There," and many wept audibly and no one sang. He said constantly there were wonderful opportunities to testify for the Lord. And they were so grand to him and respected him so much more for doing so. So the Lord can use us no matter where we are, if we are willing."

BLACK BABIES

By ALLEN L. BENNETT

A little kinky headed babe
Of Congo's darkened lands.
With baby teeth and shining eyes,
And little chubby hands.
A little heart beneath the breast,
A little soul within.
A little life that might know God,
And love that saves from sin.

★ A happy home beyond the seas,
Where Christ as Lord is known.
A knowledge of the pleading call,
Of those who died
alone.
A few short days of pleasure,
Until life's race is run
Perhaps a bit of sad regret,
For babes
we might have won.

"GO YE!"

At last, the American government seems to have found the right type of a man to take command of its forces and to win this war. And, what type of a man is he? If I have "the right slant" on Gen. Douglas MacArthur, he is a "go ye" man!

This World War, from its very beginning, seems to have been commanded by "sit ye" men. The first "go ye" man in this war was Adolf Hitler. He went from the very beginning, and therefore—well, that story does not need to be repeated. The second "go ye" man seems to have been the Jap, and consequently! We sat at home, and with Premier Chamberlain, Senator Walsh, and some others perched upon the home roost, cackled about "defense" and "peace."

Led by a lot of modernistic idealists, most Americans talked about reform, science, progress, culture, improvement, "march of intellect," eugenics, socialism, and what not. The idea of a lot of our professors, and teachers, and preachers, was to "sit ye" and crow about how far we had gotten past the "horse and buggy" age. Ignoring the prophets of God who warned us about the "wars and rumors of war" that should be to the end of man's unregenerate cosmos, our idealistic social gospelists continued to roost and prate about the "warless world" and earthly "paradise" that man would build.

We prepared for no offense, and little defense, against the type of man that the Scriptures warned us would certainly creep into the saddles in the last days. The devil, at least, has sense enough to know that peace in an unregenerate world is a fool's dream. Therefore, he saw to it that his principal agents, Hitler, Stalin, Mussolini, and Hirohito, prepared for a great assault on the freedom that grants the right to worship God without hindrance or dictation. And, the devil put "go ye" men in the saddles.

Gen. MacArthur has always been a "go ye" man. Ten years ago, he stood before a Congressional Appropriation Sub-committee, and warned of the military strides of other nations, and declared he was "unalterably opposed" to the military program of that time, which left us without the weapons of adequate defense, saying nothing of offensive warfare. If England had had a MacArthur in 1933, and had listened to him, Hitler would not have beaten her to every post in Europe. He would probably be posing ere now as "The Thinker" on a lonely isle "somewhere" in the middle of the briny deep!

All of which reminds us that our Lord was the original "go ye" man. Centruries before the days of Carey, Morrison, and Judson, His voice rang gorth: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." Ignoring the marching orders of their Lord, Christians sat at home, saying that they did not believe in foreign missions.

"We have enough to do at home!" How often was that spoken.

Therefore, since we did not go to the enemy, the enemy has now come to us. The curse of our country today is the foreign philosophies that have come to our shores, and threaten to destroy the great citadel of religious liberty—America. Our land is filled with snaky foes of old fashioned Americanism —Communism, Bolshevism, Fascism, Socialism, and Modernism. They can crawl through the crevices into the feminine quarters of the White House itself. Remember Eve! America, wake up!

"Go ye! GO YE! GO YE!" How the command of our Lord rings down through the centuries to every good soldier of Jesus Christ. Wars are never won by merely defensive action. Follow MacArthur! Follow Jesus of Nazareth! Take the offensive!

Brethren! The church seems to have plenty of money and men for defensive actions. What about more money and more men for offensive action? God give the church of Jesus Christ ears to hear the command of the greatest of all leaders—"GO YE!" God give the church of Jesus Christ more MacArthurs! Then there will be hope!

FORWARD!

The present calamity in Europe must be regarded as a call to a more eager and sustained evangelism at home and abroad. The chief concern of missionary societies must be to carry on the work which God has given them to do. To keep on loyally with the constructive task of the Christian enterprise, at a time when destructive forces have been let loose, is the highest service they can render.

In a world where everything else is insecure, there is one thing that can be counted upon. If missionary societies go straight ahead with their positive task of evangelism, God will take care of their work. With courage and resourcefulness, this calamity can be turned into a great Christian advance, at home and abroad. Even the wrath of man can be made to praise God.

MOVED TO PRAY

A letter to the editor from Mrs. Alice Larkins Day of the Whittier, Calif., church relates something of interest. She says: "I want to tell you of an instance in connection with the sinking of the Zamzam. Our daughter was sick in the hospital. At midnight she could not sleep and felt she must pray for someone on a German raider. She spent the rest of the night in prayer, and every day after that till we heard of the sinking of the Zamzam. Counting the difference in the time, we find that just as they were being fired upon was the time that she was impressed to pray for them. She went home to be with the Lord on July 29th."

Prayer puts the arm of God into action. It is certainly marvelous to know that when it is necessary to put that mighty arm into action, the Spirit of God should impress upon some saint somewhere to pray. In the next world it will be more fully revealed to us just how much prayer had to do with the fact that no missionary on board that ship was harmed.

OF COURSE WE ARE INTERESTED

A wedding of more than usual interest to us missionary-minded folks took place in Sunnyside on the evening of March 6, 1942. We tried to secure a writeup of this wedding from the pastor who performed the ceremony. However, since the pastor was the father of the bride, perhaps he preferred for someone else to speak of it.

At this long distance all we can say is that Miss Lucile Reed, daughter of Rev. Earl Reed, our pastor in Sunnyside, Wash., became the bride of Mr. Arthur Nickel.

This wedding is of unusual interest to us, inasmuch as Brother and Sister Nickel (both members of our church in Sunnyside), God willing, expect to be missionaries on our African field. And, from the editor's personal knowledge of them, he feels that they are called of God to this splendid work. We know of few on whom we could lay our hands with more confidence that God has called them than these two splendid young people.

Arthur Nickel will graduate on May 22 from the Multnomah School of The Bible of Portland, Oregon. We understand from Brother McClain that he has made application to enter Grace Theological Seminary this Fall. We believe that information is correct. Upon their completion of the work in the Seminary, if our Lord shall tarry, they will be off for the field.

Arthur Nickel was formerly a member of the Mennonite Church of Salem, Ore. What a fine testimony it is that the church from which he came to us esteems this young man so highly that they, even though they are not affiliated with our denomination yet, request the privilege of supporting him, not only in school but when he goes to the African Field. They want to feel that he is their personal representative on the field in making Christ known to those who have never heard the story of redeeming love. It was the editor's privilege to have fellowship with Arthur Nickel during his evangelistic campaign in Sunnyside last October. To say that we feel a fine addition has been made to the mission of the Brethren Church is to express it mildly. May the Lord richly bless these splendid young people to whom we extend our heartiest congratulations. Let us pray that the Draft Board will not call him before he boards the boat for Africa's Land.

1,600 POUNDS OF BANDAGES ! !

The following message came to our office in Long Beach, just as we were about to air mail to Cleveland the very last items for this issue of the Herald:

> "Am visiting southeast churches while waiting for definite word concerning sailing. Shipped 1600 pounds of bandages on boat Saturday. Notify W.M.C. and S.M.M. through Easter Herald and urge them to continue.—Orville D. Jobson."

Think of that! 1600 pounds of bandages on the way to Africa right now. Sisters, keep up the good work! Africa has a lot of wounds to heal. Stanley declared that in his journey of 7,000 miles across Africa, he did not find a single person who had ever heard the Gospel. On the stone erected to the memory of David Livingstone in Westminster Abbey, are the memorable words that were written by Livingstone precisely a year before his death:

> "All I can add in my loneliness is, may Heaven's rich blessing come down on every one—American, English, or Turk—who will help to heal the open sore of the world."

Verily, the blessing of God shall rest upon the heads of our sisters in the W.M.C. and the S.M.M. who have with their own hands prepared nearly a ton of bandages now on the way for the binding up of the physical sores of Africa. These bandages in the hands of our African soul winners pave the way for that greater healing—the healing of the spiritual sores of that great dark continent for which Jesus died. God bless you sisters of the W.M.C. and the S.M.M.

Miss Crawford Arrives In U. S.

A telegram announcing the safe arrival in the United States of Miss Mabel Crawford, from Africa reached us just as this issue of the Missionary Herald went to press. The telegram, sent from Fall River, Mass., to Dr. Bauman in Long Beach, said:

"Psalm 91 still tried and true. Please cable Africa—Mabel."

NEW MAP OF AFRICAN MISSION FIELD

A new map of the Brethren mission field in French Equatorial Africa, especially prepared under the direction of Superintendent Orville D. Jobson, is now available.

No missionary-minded Brethren Church, Sunday School, C.E. Society, or W.M.C., will be without one. THEY ARE GOING FAST!

Easter Greetings

A LAST CALL FOR EASTER

By A. V. KIMMELL, President of the Foreign Mission Board

Then Peter opened his mouth and said, Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons: But in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted of him (Acts 10:34,35).

Rev. Kimmell

This is about the last call for the Easter foreign mission offering. Perhaps your mind is made up as to the amount you are going to give or have laid aside for that purpose. If that is what the Lord would have you do, you will receive a definite blessing; but should you not be thinking of giving all that He would have you give, let this appeal cause you to go over the matter again with Him in prayer.

The great work of taking the gospel to every kindred and tribe must go on. We must go forward. The command of Christ is an imperative "go." There are no exceptions to this order. Distance from home, cost of opening and maintaining the work, difficulties involved, or the dangers of travel, are not mentioned in the marching orders when Christ said, "go." As believers we are under orders from our great Commander-in-chief, and He said "go."

Few will question the part the devil is taking in this present World war, and at this moment no one can foresee the situation in which the nations will find themselves when it is over; but this one fact is evident to Christian and non-christian alike: this war is playing havoc with the cause of foreign missions at home and abroad until the devil is rejoicing in unholy glee. Shortages of this or that, rationing of this or the other, the long working hours, working on the Lord's day, heavy taxes, and similar situations, are slowing up the church at home; and about the first place it strikes is the mission field. Transportation is difficult, passports are hard to get, everything is uncertain; but humanly speaking none of these things are impossible, and since we know that with God all things are possible, there is no excuse for us to stand by and wait until the war is over.

The Jobsons may book passage any day. Ships are sailing. A few are being lost; many are crossing safely. The Jobsons have counted the cost and they say, "we are ready." The Williams have counted the cost and they say, "we are ready." Several others are waiting with the same answer. Mabel Crawford has just arrived safely in spite of the dangers. The only people who seem inclined to quit on this job are those of us who sit at home in comparative ease, and complacently decide to wait until it is all over. Is such your stand? No! No! No! ! seems to come the answer from all parts of the home land. Well, that is just the sort of response we expect from the Brethren.

Now here are some facts. It is true that there are many missionaries at home; but do you know it costs far more to have a missionary at home than it does when he is on the field? The missionaries who are holding themselves ready to go at a moment's notice cannot do very much toward their own support, though they are perfectly willing. The missionary allowance has not been increased; perhaps it ought to be; but the supplies that are sent to the field have increased as you all well know. No member of the Board is as well able to stress this as the writer, for he sees much of the supplies sent to the field and he knows the great additional costs. Ask Bro. Bauman how transportation costs pyrimid these days; and let those who think that not so much is needed this year change their minds, for more is needed than before.

But my God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus (Phil. 4:19). Our God desires to use you in this cause so dear to His heart.

WHAT KIND OF MONEY COUNTS?

By R. D. BARNARD, Pastor, Dayton, Ohio

"Will my nickel count, if I give it to Him?" Such was the question of a little girl, as she came to her pastor following a missionary address. She had the nickel all wrapped in a small envelope. The pastor replied, "Bless your heart, your nickel is the only kind of money that really does count." The child's nickel, as the widow's mite, was perfumed with sacrificial love. It was truly a love-gift to the infinite God. A nickel will not be thus perfumed if we have used many times that amount for ourselves, and the nickel is just feeding God on crumbs. Our prayer is that in this Easter season the gift of The Brethren Church to foreign missions will be a love-perfumed gift. If it is, it will be a sufficient, even an abundant gift.

Rev. Barnard

What kind of service counts? One day as a missionary went from the village, his dog stayed behind. He whistled, and the dog came running at top speed. An old native standing by the roadside watched with admiration, and then cried out, "Dog yours, ear is only," that is, "Your dog is all ears, he is obedient." The only kind of service that pleases our Lord is "ear-is-only" service. Every missionary worthy of the name is that kind of a servant. Every Christian, earnest in his profession, is that kind of a Christian. In this whole matter of our gifts to foreign missions, it is the Lord's to direct, and ours to give. Pray God that we will be tender to His voice!

"The field is the world"—so says the Word of God. How big the world is! Here in America there is one ordained minister for every 546 people. In the non-Christian world there is only one ordained minister for every 183,675 people. Six people are born in the world for every one born into the kingdom of God.

There is no hope of a converted world in this age, and no promise of it. But there is this: we are under instructions to preach the gospel to every creature. As long as there are the untold millions in this sorry world, we have an imperative work to do.

Native Christians are doing their part. A returned missionary was once asked: "How many missionaries have you on your station?" "3,000" was the reply. "No," said the first speaker, "I did not ask the number of converts, but the number of missionaries." Again the answer was "3,000." "For," said the missionary, "every convert is a missionary." And, this should always be true.

Missionaries are doing their part! One cannot know these dear friends personally and then believe otherwise. Their bodies may be kept in America for a while by the government restrictions, but their hearts are in the distant land. God bless the missionaries!

But, will we be doing our part? Dr. Leon Tucker told of a great street demonstration in New York City. 12,000 people marched. In the motor cars in the procession were crowded men, women and children. A judge of the Court of Appeals was there. A ragged boy of the street was there. What was the occasion? Well, an explanation was on placards on the sides of the cars. They read, "These people have all been saved from burning buildings by the New York firemen." Back of the cars marched the men who had saved them. They were wearing medals, and the thousands of people lining the streets cheered most hilariously.

Have we, I wonder, rescued any souls from the burning? Have we made our full gift, as the Lord as directed, that missionaries in the distant lands may "rescue the perishing?" We will not do it for the praises of men, but one thing is sure: no service for Jesus Christ will ever go unrewarded. Would to God we all had the soul-winner's crown. Speak your testimony; give your money that the lost may know of Jesus Christ.

TIME IS SHORT

By R. PAUL MILLER, Sec'y of The Brethren Home Missions Council

The world has never presented a more powerful appeal to Christian people to support foreign missions than it is doing today. One glimpse at this present world tragedy is enough to make every Christian leap to the task as never before. The world is now paying an awful price for its attitude toward Jesus Christ. The present wars are born in the selfishness and hatreds which would have been destroyed through faith in Christ.

Rev. Miller

The time is short in which to work. While the twilight hours of the harvest time slip steadily by, souls in heathen darkness can be won as well as ever. We must not slacken the pace. while the world is giving billions for war, we must make our greatest sacrifices for bringing men to Christ. The display of devotion and bravery by our missionaries, in recent months, constitutes a call to us all to make a magnificent offering to "keep them preaching" over there.

Hold That Line

DR. E. STANLEY JONES, New York, N. Y.

There is one thin, red line being held throughout the world. It is the line of Christian missions. Into that line has gone the manhood and the womanhood of our nation and other nations. That line is the hope of the world. For it says that God cares about the world. At the moment of the resurgance of national and sectional interests, that line says that God thinks in terms of the world. It also says that some people still think in terms of the world. It says that they are not being swept off their feet by the sectional and local slogans of the day. That line still has its marching orders, and those orders come out of eternity, not out of the changing scenes of time. It is therefore holding white other lines are crumbling. We were not commissioned by man, and our commissions cannot be revoked by man. Therefore the orders are: Hold that line!

If that line gives way amid the confusion of things, then what is left to remind us of our world solidarity and that we are of one blood? And what is to remind us that we have no national or sectional faith, but a faith that is world-compassing in its view and in its affection? What is there left to redeem men from ignorance and superstition and the pathetic meaninglessness of life? Moreover, if the church allows this line to be wiped out, then what of its own life? Where have the lighthouses of the world gone? She has let those lights die, and she is left with a tiny, sectional faith that isn't big enough to fit the facts of life. For the future will demand not a smaller faith but a bigger one, and if we meet the future with a shrunken faith, then we will be unable to meet it with adequacy. The very life of the church depends upon our holding that line.

That line is the one line of goodwill holding amid a world of hate. It says that the answer to life is not hate but love. Some day men will return to sanity. And when they do, it will mean everything if they can see one line holding through the night, firm and unshaken.

Hold that line, for that insignificant looking line will one day hold you!

A CRY FROM AFRICA

In one of his missionary tours, Peter Cameron Scott, missionary to Africa, gives a most touching description of what was accomplished after having preached Jesus for nearly two hours or more. A very old heathen man, having most attentively listened, came tottering up to where he stood; and after asking a few most searching questions, became somewhat satisfied that the blood of Jesus could even cleanse away his sins: and while opening his heart to the Savior, he closed his conversation by asking with deep pathos, in trembling tones (while the tears were glistening in his eyes), "Why didn't you tell us the story sooner: why didn't you let us know?"—Roanoke Bulletin.

BIBLES IN CHINA

When a Truck Load of Bibles rolled into a Chinese river recently, the pages were dried by being turned one by one before egg-packing house drying fans. The demand was so great that every one of these Bibles was sold!—Christian Readers Digest.

Work, Wine & Wool

By R. I. HUMBERD

God has ordained that harvest follow sowing; that reward be given for labor, and fruit for service. God is no exception. He expects work from His saved ones, wine from His vineyard, and wool from His sheep.

WORK

Henry Ford made an automobile. That car was his workmanship, made to do himself good service.

God has saved us, and we are His workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good work" (Eph. 2:10). That is, Christ expects us to produce good works, even though at best we are but "unprofitable servants" (Lk. 17:10).

WINE

It takes grapes to make wine. God brought a vine out of Egypt and planted it in Canaan, but it brought forth "wild grapes" (Isa. 5, Ps. 80). But out of a choice root there came forth a Branch. Christ said, "I am the vine, ye are the branches—and my Father is the husbandman" (Jn. 15). "Every branch that beareth fruit, he purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit" (v. 2). God is tremendously interested in "fruit" and "more fruit;" and when He finds a branch that is likely to bring forth fruit He will prune it, for He knows that the trial of our faith is "much more precious than of gold that perisheth" (I Pet. 1:7).

Times are better and jobs are plenty, and no doubt many members of The Brethren Church should give at least $100 to foreign missions this year.

"Oh," cries a timid one," I cannot give $100 to foreign missions." But beware what you say. "Suffer not thy mouth to cause thy flesh to sin; neither say thou before the angel that it was an error; wherefore should God be angry at thy voice, and destroy the work of thine hands" (Eccles.5:6).

Just what these words may mean I am not sure, but might there not be a recording angel to take down our every word? And might not that angel be ready to avenge an error in our words?

Say not thou before the angel:

"I haven't $100 to give to foreign missions"; "If I had more money, I would give $100"; "If I give $100, God will give me back $200." Let us consider these errors separately.

Do not say that you cannot give $100 to foreign missions, for the angel may write it down against you.

There is pain and fever; there are hospital bills; there are doctors to pay; and, lo, $250 is totaled against you. You could not give $100 to foreign missions; but where did you get the $250? The trouble is you are not willing to go without some things in order to pay your debt to the Lord, even though He would give you joy in your sacrifice for Him.

Although I have never received a large salary, yet eight times have we won a life member's certificate in the foreign mission society, and no amount of money could purchase the satisfaction we have had in this opportunity to serve the Lord.

A few days ago I figured that we have probably used 200 barrels of milk in our family during the past years. We only drank a glassfull at a time, but little things count up. And so it is with the average family—a few cents a day are spent on luxuries that could easily total $100 a year. So don't say before the angel that you do not have the money. Probably 1000 members of the Brethren church would give $100 this year if they would watch the pennies.

And let no one say before the angel that they would give $100 if they had more money, for twice in my life have I seen such come to grief.

I was in the barn with a member of my church. "If beans go up, I will give $100 to foreign missions," he said. Beans went up, but he "forgot." Next spring I went to his sale. He lost his farm; and out of the money from his live stock and implements, he gave me a $100 check for foreign missions—but a year late!

Another member had sold a farm and it came back on him. "I will give $100 to foreign missions if I can sell that farm," he said. And all things to the contrary, he sold the farm; but alas, he also "forgot." Next spring he came to the house and said: "Wife, I dont' believe we were ever so hard up as we are right now. I wonder why?" His wife reminded him, and when we opened his envelope it contained five $20 bills for foreign missions—but he also was a year late.

Verily, our Lord is interested in "fruit" and "more fruit" from the branches of His vine.

Let no one say that God will give you back $200 if you give $100 to foreign missions. Rather might it work the other way, as God would test your faith and purge His vine to bring forth "more fruit." At any rate, it seemed to work thus for us.

It was probably 25 years ago that I, a young Indiana farmer, began to tithe. The people of the church were startled when I gave my first gift to foreign missions that made me a life member of the Society. But the Lord greatly blessed my efforts to tithe and a banker said I made more money than anyone else.

Some 10 years later found me pastor of a small church and with a large family. God had greatly blessed us financially in giving the one tenth. Might it be His will for us to give two tenths? We put out our "fleece" by sealing a statement that for six months we would give two tithes and see if God wished us to continue.

I had never been able to hold a meetong outside my own church although I had longed to do so; but almost immediately calls began to come, and I traveled from coast to coast with my Bible Chart Lectures, until my health gave way.

God had blessed in giving the one tithe; He had made us a blessing in giving two tithes. Might He wish us to give three tithes? We wanted all He wished us to do, so we sealed a statement and dated it from March 1 to Sept. 1.

When Job purposed to serve God fully, God permitted Satan to test him; and I believe some such thing must have happened, for things began to happen. A daughter got a very dangerous sore throat; I broke my nose; our house caught fire; I fell into great distress as I took my wife for an operation. We had saved $100 for foreign missions, but I knew

Pondo Sees The Light

BOYS' AND GIRLS' CORNER

A continued story written especially for our boys and girls by

MISS MARY EMMERT, one of our missionaries in Africa.

Chapter I

Pondo first saw the light of day in a dark little grass hut, one of a long row of houses in the village of Kodro, somewhere far in the interior of Africa. The hut was dark because there were no windows, and because the old women, who were seated on the dirt floor awaiting his arrival, were mostly between him and the wedge light coming through the one low opening, which served as a door.

Pondo

It was a stuffy, little round hut that looked, from the outside, like a small hay stack with a protruding tunnel-like mouth. Inside, the low rounded ceiling, blackened by the smoke of the daily camp fire, bent oppressively over the dusky little group.

"He neither cries, nor sneezes," said a toothless old woman with grizzly hair.

"Oh my mother!" moaned the young woman. "Is it another death? Two are lost out of my hands already. Is this one dead, also?"

Suddenly another shriveled old woman showered a mouthful of cold water upon the tiny baby. She had quickly taken a drink from the water jar standing near the wall, and as quickly spit it out on the new born baby. He sneezed and began to cry.

"He lives; he is breathing," laughed the toothless old woman; and, extending her long bony arm, she clapped the hand of the one who had thought of the cold water trick. You have a beautiful boy baby, Nana," she continued, addressing the mother.

Nana's black face lit up with a joyful smile. "My heart is very glad," she said.

Although Nana and Koly, her husband, both had the darkest of walnut brown skins, yet the new-born babe was very light and rosy colored just like any white baby. Only by his kinky hair could you have told that he would later have a Hershey complexion.

First of all, Pondo was given a bath in peanut oil, and was soon glistening from head to foot. Then the shriveled old woman gave him a drink she had mixed up in a dirty gourd. She had no bottle from which to give it to him, so she dipped her hand in the water and let it drip off her fingers into the baby's mouth. This witch's brew was made from the juice of the papaya tree, a bit of vegetable salt, some dirty water, and what-not.

Poor little baby! His nurses knew nothing about the dangers of dirt and germs. It was a wonder that he lived at all. When Nana's first baby had died, everyone had consoled her by saying: "Do not mourn it, the first baby dies for nothing. You must expect it." Her heart had hurt her nevertheless, and especially when the second one had died, too.

Now, as she sat by the smoking camp fire in the middle of her home, she was given her son to hold. The very first thing she did, you would be surprised to know, was to hold the baby up to her face, and blow first in one ear and then in the other. This was her way of kissing him. How happy she was that he was alive!

The next morning Nana was up at sunrise, and was soon giving Pondo a bath by splashing water on him with her hands. He struggled and screamed, for the cool morning air made the ordeal unpleasant. It is true that she had heated the water for this first bath, but in a few days this would be considered unnecessary, and Pondo would have cold water dashed on his naked little body.

There was no towel with which to dry him, so she held him in the sun for a few moments until he was dry. Since no soap had been used, it did not take long for the water to run off. As he had no clothes to put on, he was soon ready for his first meal, of which he partook greedily.

An admiring group of neighbors had gathered around to see the baby by this time. "Where is Koly?" asked someone.

"He has gone to get food for the mother of the

I would need it now. However, I hurried home from the hospital and sent it in for foreign missions. Then debts began to mount high.

Our great source of encouragement was in our "fleece" which was dated Sept. 1, and with this confidence we went to national conference at Winona Lake. But, alas! our little daughter became sick; and in terrible distress, we took her to Warsaw for an operation. The clouds indeed were dark, and I was almost to the breaking point. Why should I try to serve God fully when He treated me thus? Why not ease up and get along like other people?

Wife and I slipped in a back seat in the auditorium. A woman, well known in woman's work, had charge of devotions. "I always read a passage dealing with woman's work," she said. "But somehow I feel I should read another this time."

She must have been greatly puzzled at her own words, for she repeated them and then read, "Every branch that beareth fruit, he purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit." Those words were wafted with great force to our hearts, for we realized that they were for us. "Depend On God" . . .

By GARNER E. HOYT

(A Biography)

At the earnest request of Dr. Bauman, I am including in this article some varied experiences that the Lord has brought into my life. That they may bring glory to our Lord and Savior is my earnest prayer.

Garner E. Hoyt

On Jan. 28, 1916, I was born in the little town of Dallas Center, Ia., where I lived until the age of 12. It was in that little town, during the ministry of Bro. Earl Studebaker that I began to attend the Brethren Church and to realize the great joy of fellowship and work with Christian people. I received my first Bible training from my own brother, Herman, who was teacher of the Sunday School class to which I belonged. A short time later, while Bro. Cashman was pastor at Dallas Center, I, together with the other boys of my class, accepted the Lord Jesus as my personal Savior one Sunday morning during the Sunday School hour. From that time until I entered college, I enjoyed an active part in Sunday School and Christian Endeavor work. My Christian activities during my years at college consisted mainly of gospel Team work.

In May of 1928, our family moved to Ashland, O., where I took the junior and senior high school work and three years of college. It was during my senior year of high school that the Lord spoke to my heart about going into His service. That meant go to college and to seminary, and perhaps take some further training in some other field. So if I were to do all that, I knew that it would take a considerable amount of money. What could I do? Where could I get a job so that I could earn sufficient money to go to college? I needed a job at once, for I needed money.

Then it was that Satan came along in the person of a dance orchestra conductor. Satan takes advantage of every opportunity, and here was his beautiful opportunity to work with me. During my high school years I was playing string bass in the high school orchestra. It is needless to say that the string bass is a necessary instrument in the modern dance orchestra. The leader came to me and said: "You're just the one we need in our orchestra. Will you come and play with us? There is good money in it, you know." I thought it over for a day or so, and Satan had me that time. I had my eyes on the money. Just think, $5 or $10 an evening! That really looked good to me. So I told him that I would play with them. On that Saturday evening, I went to what was my first dance as a member of a dance orchestra.

I want to tell you that I've never spent a more miserable evening in all my life. I knew that just as sure as I was a foot high, I was getting into the wrong place. It was a miserable evening in more than one way. It was not long until I realized that I was not playing in the high school orchestra, for there we seldom played more than one hour at a time; but in a dance band they play five or six hours at the minimum. I began the evening by plucking those gentle strings with the proper finger. That finger soon became more tender than the string, for I had worn a blister on it. Oh, how happy I was that I had another finger to use! But it was not long until I had blisters on that finger too. Then I went to the next, and finally to the last finger; and I was so glad that the evening finished before I had to use the sixth finger! That is just one of the little experiences that helps me to not forget, but well remember, that miserable evening.

At the close of the evening, the orchestra leader came around to pay off his help. When he came to me he said, "Now, of course, we cant' pay you just as much as the rest, for this is only your first night; but you stick right to it, take courage, and it won't be long until you'll be making good money." By that time I began to wonder just what was going to happen. I held out my hand with all its blisters so as to work upon whatever sympathy he might have had. With the greatest of ease he dropped my evening's wages into the palm of my hand. Fifty cents!!! It isn't necessary to say how I felt about that time! Immediately I said to myself, "I've played two nights in a dance orchestra, the first and the last."

Friends, I want to tell you that I have praised the Lord ever since for the 50 cents that I earned that night; and I am sure you understand what I mean. If that had been a $5 or $10 bill, who knows but what I would be playing in a dance band right now, rather than using my life to witness for my precious Lord and Savior, Who bought me with His own precious blood and washed my sins away? That is the reason I say that that was the most valuable 50 cent piece I have ever earned.

I was taught a very important lesson in that experience. I learned that God does not need to depend upon worldly organizations to supply the needs of His children. I had learned my lesson. I said, 'Lord I've made a bad mistake; I'm willing to follow Thee now, and live my life according to Thy will. Show me what I should do to earn this money I need."

I graduated from high school that spring, and set out to find a job; and do you know, I went through that entire summer without a job! Here it was one week before college was to start, and I had only $6 in my pocket! What was I to do? I actually began to think that the Lord did not want me to go to school.

But "Jesus never fails." The Saturday before college, of course," was the answer. "There he comes now."

Up walked Koly with a basket of cassava flour and a piece of dried meat. Usually his wives had to hunt for food, but this was a special occasion, and he came to say that college was to start, Bro. Paul Dowdy, one of our South American missionaries, who was in seminary at the time, called me on the phone and asked me if I wanted a job. Before he had time to finish his sentence, I said "I surely would. I'll be down right away." He was being transferred to another job so he said that I might have his if I wished. I immediately accepted

"Why I'm Going to Africa" . .

By MRS. GARNER E. HOYT

(A Biography)

In a small town in the province of Alberta, Canada, on March 31, 1917, I came to live in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin A. Morrill. While I was yet very small, our family returned to the States, and eventually made its home in Pomona Valley near La Verne, Cal.

Mrs. Garner E. Hoyt

During the several years at La Verne, we attended the La Verne Brethren church, where we received a firm foundation in the Word of God. Although I made a public profession and became a member of this church, I did not yet have the assurance of salvation at this early age.

At the age of 12 our family moved to a rural community in northern California. There was very little Christian activity in the decaying churches of this section; therefore, besides our regular church activities, we spent a great deal of time in the rural Sunday School work. This work was the greatest Christian influence I had, aside from our home, during my high school days.

It was in this Sunday School work that I came to realize that I did not have the assurance of salvation. During a rural Sunday School revival campaign conducted by Rev. David Schmidt of Los Angeles, I heard the gracious words of Jesus. "Him that cometh unto Me I will in no wise cast out." As I bowed my head, I realized for the first time that the Lord had blotted out my sins.

At the close of my high school days, I was encouraged by my folks to continue my education. I entered college, and after I had completed two years I enrolled in Grace Theological Seminary. This spring I will graduate from the two year Christian Education course.

As I look forward to the mission field, I ask myself, "What is it that gives me the desire to go to Africa?" Some missionaries go to foreign lands for the purpose of bringing a higher civilization to the natives. This would not persuade me to cross 6,000 miles of danger. Neither am I going with the impression that the Lord could not accomplish His work without me; for the Lord can raise up stones to proclaim Him King and Savior. Others have gone because of compassion for the suffering pagan world, but compassion alone would not move me to go to the mission field. While I was yet in high school, I saw some colored slides on the life of Africa. The last picture showed the face of an African woman who had leprosy. All the woe of the pagan world was written upon her face. And as I saw her misery, I told the Lord that I would go to help her; but my heart soon forgot her scarred face.

Why, then, am I going? As I consider this, I realize that I am going because the Lord of the harvest has saved me, has called me, and is sending me. As I feel Him standing near me, the terrors of the African night fade away, and the perils of land and sea are only shadows. The all-knowing, all-powerful Lord is near. Then, the need of the unsaved natives looms up before me, and the face of the African woman comes back to me, and I can say I am willing to go.

A short time ago, a missionary related an experience of a native Christian widow of west Africa. Following the death of her husband, a polygamous brother-in-law demanded her as his inherited possession. Her refusal brought threatenings and beatings. Finally, she was given a last chance to grant his request. Steadfast to her Christian stand, she refused his request. Immediately he hurled his spear through her body. As she lay dying, the women of the village gathered about her, weeping. But she whispered to them before she died, "Don't cry for me, but cry for those who do not know Jesus."

As I look upon this scene, I realize that all any of us give to missions is worth while. And I bow my head in His presence, believing that by the grace of God there will be some black Pandita Ramabai to lead her sisters to the light. Or perhaps there will be some unloved leprous woman who will say to her people, "Don't cry for me. Cry for those who do not know Jesus."

"DEPEND ON GOD"

the job, and offered up a prayer of thanksgiving unto my heavenly Father for supplying that need. When school was ready to begin, $6 was all the money I had, but $6 and the Lord is always sufficient. The Lord gave me that job, and it was by that job that I worked my way through college.

Very early in my college days, the Lord spoke to me again; and this time He spoke to me about the foreign missionary field. I remember the first time that that thought came into my mind. It was in the spring of '35. Early one morning, I, together with a number of others, went to Mansfield, O., to see Bro. and Sister Morrill off, as they took the train for Philadelphia and would then leave on their voyage to Africa. I remember that as I stood there in an inconspicuous place at the back of the crowd, I watched them board the train. Just as they were stepping up into the train, something within me said very quietly and seriously, "I'm going to do that some day." I believe it was that morning that the Lord spoke to me for the first time about the foreign field, and turned my eyes toward Africa. And it is with a great joy down deep in my heart, when I say that never since that time has He permitted the vision of that field to become dimmed before me. Rather, with every succeeding event, every conversation with missionaries, every missionary contact, He has caused that deep longing to grow and become more evident and sure.

With this new outlook in my life of service for my Savior, I quickly realized that not only was my college and seminary training a necessary part of my preparation, but an intensive and serious study of the French language was imperative. So I began my study of the French language in my sophomore year, the fall of 1935.

Through various events that took place, and various conversations with missionaries, I felt led of the Lord to spend my senior year in France for further study of the language, and to obtain the necessary diplomas for teaching French in the French colonies. How much money would be necessary for such a project I had no idea. I did know that it took considerable money to travel and study abroad. But I had learned also that the Lord is able to supply the needs of His children, so I simply left all things in His hands.

At the close of my junior year, I immediately went out in search of a job, for there was no time to lose in saving for the trip to Europe. One whole month of that summer went by and I found no job. Yet "Jesus never fails," and He opened up a job for me in northern California. I worked there until conference time, when I returned to the east, where the Lord opened another job. I worked at this position until two days before I was to sail for France.

By that time I had saved up sufficient money to get me to Paris, and keep me for two or three months. Many of my friends knew of my plans then, and they knew that I had not yet obtained enough money for my stay in Europe and my return home.

Finally, when they saw that I was serious about the matter, and was making my final preparations for leaving, I remember that so many of them looked at me in a certain tone of voice. You know what I mean. They didn't say anything, but they might just as well have, for I knew what they were thinking. They were saying to themselves, "There is something wrong with his upstairs." That didnt' bother me very much, though, because I felt sure in my heart that the Lord was leading me.

This was not a boyish adventure of a week-end's planning. I had been praying about the matter for one year and a half, and had been planning during all that time. I had discussed the matter with the college officials. I had obtained necessary information from the United States Department of Education concerning the transfer of credits back to this country. I had sought counsel and advice from no less than six different missionaries. And finally I had presented the plan before our foreign missionary board for approval. Upon receiving a favorable response in every instance, I had no doubt in my mind, and do not to this day, but that my plans were in accordance with the will of God.

Was I to remain at home until I had every cent of the money which I needed? So far as I am concerned, that is not going forth on faith. God had put His stamp of approval on my plans in many ways, and then He had supplied enough money for a wonderful start; but praise His name, He had left plenty of room for real faith on my part. I knew the Lord had supplied the money up to that point, and I knew that He could supply the rest. The Lord was in France just as well as in the United States. The Lord could supply my needs there just as well as here. There was only one thing to do, that was to go.

I sent the money for my boat ticket to one of the missionaries in Philadelphia, and two days later I joined the party there and we left for New York, took our boat, and after seven more days we got off in France. We took a train for Paris and soon were settled in comfortable living quarters.

The third day we were in Paris, we went down to the Alliance Francaise, where we were to take our language study. We registered in the proper manner and the bill was laid on the desk before us. I must say that up to that moment I had not given a serious thought to what it was going to cost me to go to school in France, which was probably a good thing. I was thinking of going to France to study, and that is all. But the Lord, Who never fails, knew just how much money I had in my pocket and had things all arranged in advance. For the nine months training that we took in that school, it only cost us some thirty odd dollars. I learned then that the Lord has many ways of answering prayers and supplying the needs of His children. If I need $25 the Lord can easily supply that amount, but He can take care of it in another way too. He can lower the price of the article. That is exactly what He did for me this time.

At the end of my nine months training at the school, I felt that I still needed some practical experience in the French language. I immediately wrote to the Bible Institute at Nogent sur Marne in the suburbs of Paris, asking them what the requirements were for spending some time there to obtain some practical experience in conversational French. I received a letter back right away and they said, "You're just the person we need now. If you would be willing to take care of the odd jobs, run the errands, and fire the furnace in winter, we'll be glad to have you come, and you may take any of the courses that you can arrange with your work. The Lord had supplied another need. It was not money that I needed then; it was simply an opportunity for the every day conversational French, and that is exactly what He gave me.

After eight months there at the Bible Institute, I felt led of the Lord to return then to the States that I might enter seminary to get my Bible training. I looked into my pocket and found about 300 francs; but dont' get excited about that, for the franc was worth about 3 cents at that time. I wasn't rich. However I had sufficient money to get to the seaport. I packed my belongings and took the train for Le Havre. Upon arriving I asked the Lord to guide as to what I should do. Soon after that I found myself in the office of the American consul. I said, "Here I am; I've been here in France studying the language for a year and a half; I've finished my study; I am ready to go home, but I havent' any money." Then I said, "Now I dont' want you to give me anything. I'm willing to work for everything I get. If you could intercede in getting a job for me on a boat, I will be very grateful to you." Then I wondered what would happen. Without one word of questioning or discussion, he replied, "Very well, wait around here for a few days, and I will get you a job on an American boat." What a joy filled my heart as I heard those words. My heart went back down to its proper location, and then all I did was wait for my boat to come in.

After 10 days wait, I was taken on board the ocean liner, "President Roosevelt"; and seven days later I was in New York harbor. Soon after we had docked, I noticed the sailors going up on deck, so I followed them up and noticed they were in line along the deck. It appeared to be a bread line, but it wasn't. They were passing by a table where there was a gentleman seated, who was handing out slips of paper. As I came nearer I noticed that they were checks. Then I thought to myself, "Now I'm in the wrong place." After being given a way home, here I am in line to receive more money." There was nothing I could do then. I had gone through embarrassing moments before, so I guessed I could do it again. But to my surprise, when I approached the table, the gentleman read out my name and likewise handed me a slip of paper. With no discussion or disagreement on my part, I took the slip, put it in my pocket, and went on. As soon as I had enough courage, I pulled it out to see what it was all about; and sure enough a check for some $25.

Here the Lord saw that I needed a way home to the States and He gave it to me; but after I had reached New York, He felt that I was still in need, so he gave me a $25 check. He saved me 100 dollars by giving me a job on a boat, and then threw in $25 more at the end! That is the first time in my life that I have ever earned $125 in one week!

When I reached home I had more money in my pocket than when I left Paris! That is the way God keeps books for His children.

All these experiences that I have related are simply illustrations of one little verse in the Bible. "But my God shall supply all your need according to His riches in glory by Christ Jesus" (Phil. 4:19). I know that God keeps His promises.

Upon returning to the States, I moved with our family to Winona Lake in order to take up my Bible training at Grace Theological Seminary.

At the close of my first year at seminary, Miss Myna Morrill and I were married. We had met at college and were engaged before I left for France. Myna and I have continued on in our studies together, and will graduate together from the seminary in May. During the past few years we have been praying, planning and preparing for the time when the Lord would send us forth to the foreign field. We believe that the time is almost here, and therefore we are busy now gathering together the many needed items that make up a missionary outfit. Pray for us in these final days of preparation.

"PONDO SEES THE LIGHT"

must show how much he appreciated his new son. He did not dare to ask Kogara, his other wife, to prepare the meal in honor of the baby, as the two wives were not on good terms. So Nana's mother cooked the meal.

The first serving was given to Koly, who invited his men neighbors to eat with him. The dish of food, which he had set on the ground, was immediately surrounded by a half dozen men, who made short work of its contents. The women then ate in a group by themselves. No words were wasted, for speed alone counted when it came to eating. When the food was gone, they licked off their fingers, or wiped them on the porch post or their hair.

As the days passed by, Pondo grew into a darling roly-poly black baby—all smiles and dimples, except when he received his cold shower every morning and evening. Then he screamed and kicked as hard as he could.

Pondo's only cradle was his parents' arms, or sometimes a bark-cloth sling carried either on Nana's back or under one arm. Never could he be put down to sleep by himself for fear of ants, scorpions or snakes. Always someone must hold the baby. If Nana had to go to the large flat rock to beat cassava roots into flour, then her little sister, Yadoly, must keep the baby.

Koly was very fond of holding his son and of playing with him, too, when he was at home.

"I don't like the way Kogara is acting about the baby," Nana told him one day when he had sat down to play with Pondo.

"Why, what does she do?" he asked.

"It is the way she looks at him and at me," said Nana. "Then she makes remarks about him, too. She said his ears were too large."

"Oh, well, she is just jealous because she has no children. Do not think about her," consoled her husband.

"At least, I do not need to run errands for her any more, do I?" asked Nana.

"No, that is finished, now that you have a baby. You are no longer her slave, although she is my first wife," answered her husband.

The next day, Nana went joyfully to the stream to put cassava roots to soak, as they must remain in the water three days before they could be dried and beaten up into flour. Before she left the house, she counseled her small sister, Yadoly, about the baby.

"Do not hold his head in the sun," she told her. "If you do go outside with him, hold a gourd over his head to keep the sun off. If he cries very much, bring him to me at the stream."

It was not very long before Nana saw Yadoly coming with the baby. One glance at his ashy face, and Nana cried: "Oh, what is the matter? What have you done to my baby?"

"Nothing I held him all the while, until Kogara came out of her house and wanted to hold him," said the girl.

"Kogara held the baby!" exclaimed the frightened mother. "What did she do to him?"

"Nothing. She just held him a while, looked at him sort of sad like, then she gave him back and walked away."

"Was the baby sick then?"

"No, he was all right. After a while he began to cry and I brought him to you."

"But see how pale he is. He is a very sick child. He doesn't even seem hungry." Nana was greatly worried as she walked rapidly back to the house, leaving the little girl to bring the empty basket after her.

Fear clutched her heart. Had Kogara dared to harm the baby, or was it the long trip in the hot sun? What should she do? Oh, her precious baby!

A Show Substituted for the Power of the Resurrection

By REV. CHAS. LUKESH, Missionary to His Native Land, Czechoslovakia

The Easter celebration is one of the most impressive in the Christian calendar. Therefore, it is also one of the most apt to be spoiled by spurious carrying on, far from the spirit of the occasion. Many are the recollections of the Easter week, which seemed impressive in my childhood; but, now, not only do I realize their emptiness, but also the deception, robbing one of the real experience that the Lord intended us to have.

The Easter week started for us children with a vacation beginning Wednesday; and already that afternoon the chanting of the "Passion" began. Several priests chanted in turns, in queer humdrum voices, presumably in some antique way. But I never knew what, because it was in Latin. Thursday was a distasteful day, because of the greens usually served. Why a green Thursday, I still do not know.

Good Friday was not merely a working day, but a fast day, although children were not held so strictly to it. In the church, however, much was to be seen and heard. The sanctuary—so-called—was covered up. The priests had special robes; and during one of the services, a large crucifix was laid upon a prepared black cloth, in the side hall. An artificial rock tomb was there also, into which the body of Christ was shoved.

On the black cloth before the tomb was the great crucifix, around which two acolytes always knelt in supposedly praying attitude. Sometimes two men with drawn swords also kept guard. The faithful ones, of course, kept up the stream of devoted worshippers, always ending the devotion by sliding upon their knees around the crucifix, kissing the red blood marks on the hands, the feet, the head and the side of the figure. To us children it was good sport to pass around several times during the day in this manner. The imitation tomb, in almost complete darkness, lit by a few candles and a few colored glasses with lights behind them, gave the scene a weird, enchanting appearance.

The Saturday morning event was the "burning of Judas," i. e., the holy oils used for anointing during the year were put on pieces of cotton and burned. The ashes were kept for the following "Ash Wednesday," to be put on the forehead of the pious, many of whom came drunk from the last night of the carnival.

On Saturday evening, when the resurrection was celebrated, we boys did not trouble to go to church, for there was more fun out in the open in the darkness, when the procession, in torchlight, marched around the public square. Since it was a general celebration, most of the townspeople were crowding the public square arrayed in their Easter finery. It was the style those days to carry a walking stick under the arm which gave mischevious boys an opportunity to work havoc by carrying blackened sticks, which they rubbed on the precious finery of men and ladies alike—to be discovered the next day, much to the dismay of the owners.

In the capital city, Prague, is a monastery with some special privileges, one of which is the staging of the resurrection. Of course, there is much ado of ceremonies, singing, chanting, much burning of incense, etc. The incense is offered first before the altar, three times; then before the chief of the monastery, three times; next before the vice regents, twice; and last, before the ordinary members, once. During this time people sit around the altar and in the aisles on both sides. Finally three genuflections with the censor are spent on the whole congregation. All is done in order? ? ?

When the ceremony is advanced to the point of the resurrection act, the procession goes in proper ranks to the side of the church where the tomb is located. There is always a great throng of people accompanying the celebration, performing the ceremonies. Again, much ado and genuflections, until finally the figure on the cross raises to an upright position and slowly raises up and disappears through the ceiling, while the crowd gasps at the annually repeated trick, and says: "We saw the resurrection!" Of course, everyone knows that it is merely a mechanical trick, yet this mummery cheats them of the actual realization of the resurrection fact and the blessing derived from it.

WHAT MISSIONS REALLY ARE

1. Missions are a matter of common honesty. We are trustees of the gospel we hold and embezzlers if we withhold it from others.

2. Missions are a matter of simple obedience. Whatever the world says of missionaries or converts, our duty is plain—to obey Christ, Who unquestionably commanded us to evangelize the world.

3. Missons are a matter of national self-interest. Where we have evangelized, there we have prospered, where we have been false to our trust, trouble has befallen us.—The Missionary Review of the World.

Two weeks before Easter Sunday I began to wonder how I could present the lesson so that it would impress my pupils best. I wanted a new way of presenting life eternal to them. I chose my own lessons, since this is a community class that meets at my home and is connected with no organized Sunday-chool. I wanted to get close to the hearts of those children and while they could comprehend that "now is Christ risen from the dead"—at the same time, I must have new approach. Knowing how well these children recognized the fact of death I wanted to lead them through that knowledge to the assurance that their bodies live after death.

Ours is a suburban settlement ten miles out of the city, bordering upon farm lands, the richest soil imaginable; cotton, corn, oats, wheat, alfalfa, and potatoes are raised, and these children are familiar with farm life, some of them rising with the sun, so that they may do their share of plowing before school time. They comprehend the thought that if a grain of corn falls into the earth it will live in renewed beauty.

The proprietor of a seed house in the city was generous in his donations of wheat, oats, yellow corn, and feterita seed, putting them up in small paper envelopes. Out of my own yard I dug up a jonquil bulb, a wee maple sprout, cut off a spray of rose leaves, and salvaged from another planting some sunflower seed. I filled two shallow pans from my kitchen with garden soil. These, with a sharp knife, a glass jar, and a couple of towels to hide my pharaphernalia from sight until the right moment, constituted my object lesson from which I should teach the Easter truths. Near by was a tall lily in full blossom. And, when the lesson hour arrived, this was the way in which I taught the beauty of the resurrection:

"Here is a field" (removing a towel from the tray). "I have prepared my soil and I am going to plant the field, for I want a bumper crop this autumn. Yesterday the seed house man gave me my seed" (opening the envelopes), "but see here! He has not given me all seed corn; there are some oats, wheat, and feterita, as well as corn. Oh, well, I shall plant it. Who knows but what it will make just as fine a corn crop as if I planted all corn?" (A murmur of suppressed chuckles ran across the room; they did not want me to know they were laughing at my ignorance.) "What is the matter? You say I am mistaken?" (My plan was working—I had made them talk!) "What is this? Whatever I plant it will come up the same thing? How do you know it?

"Long, long ago there was a man who thought as you did. I find your thought in God's Word, and I shall read it to you after a while. First, I want to plant my rose garden in this other tray. I don't suppose your plan will work the same way with flowers, and as I have but one rose, I shall plant this jonquil bulb, these sunflower seeds, and this maple sprout—maybe they will be roses some day. What? You say they will not be roses, but will come up each one like the seeds I have planted? There will be no chance? Why do we plant these things, anyway? Why let this beautiful grain of yellow corn rot in the ground? I would rather keep it in this jar if I must have more corn, and watch it grow. You say it must be laid in the dark, cold earth? Will this bulb come up a jonquil? If I plant my corn in the earth will a great stalk of corn come up the next day with leaves and ears of corn on it? Oh, two green leaves will come out of the ground? But I want corn. How oddly you talk! A stalk comes next, you say, and then the ear? A whole big stalk of corn with waving leaves and ears full of yellow grains from this one tiny grain of corn? I don't see all of that—why is it that all of this will come from a single grain? Oh, you say because there is life in it!

"But wait—this lovely yellow husk is going to rot and die in the ground. What is that? Now I understand—the life, you tell me, is in the heart! And that will not die. Do you know that a man said in God's Book very long ago, 'First the blade, then the ear, after that the full corn in the ear'?" (Mark 4:28). "He knew about corn, didn't he? Now tell me this: May I believe what you say, and how am I to know it is true? You have seen this? You are sure?

"Well, I want to see that glory of waving leaves and brown silk and ears full of grains. If it is in the heart of this grain I shall take this knife and find them" (cut the grain up—find the tender heart of it). "I do not see them—where is the life? What is it, anyway? You say it is hidden, that I can't see it, but that I must believe it because it has been proved that the life in which the corn lives is there.

"Why isn't that like our believing what is in the Bible? The Bible says God gives us eternal life, doesn't it? Who put the life in the grain of corn, and who brings up the stalk of corn? Yes, our heavenly Father. 'The life is in the heart,' you say. Doesn't God give us life? What does He give us that this corn doesn't have? Yes, he gives us 'souls that can never die.' So you are teaching me a lesson today, instead of my teaching you.

"Now, I have cut into four pieces this one grain. If I plant them, will I have four cornstalks? Oh! Only the piece that has the life in it will make a cornstalk. Now then, is there any way in which I can make this a whole grain of corn once more? So I can destroy it, can kill the life, but only God can make a grain of corn and put life into it? Why is it that some grains will sprout and others will not, and how may I know which grains to plant? Suppose a worm has eaten the heart out? You tell me it is of no use—to throw it away. Well, isn't that sad! No use to test that grain of corn—I want good grains. I shall put these whole grains between damp blotting paper and sprinkle it every day, and if they sprout I will know that the rest of my corn is good seed corn.

"Once there was a man named Paul; he wrote many letters, and you will find them in God's Word—the Bible. In I Cor. 6:14-20 he tells us that the body of those who believe on Christ is the temple God has made and that His Holy Spirit will dwell there. But Paul also said in Rom. 6:23 that when we sin we are paid, and our wages is death. What is death? You tell me it is the life leaving the body. What do we do with that body? Oh, then we have cemeteries for bodies. But what becomes of the soul? It goes to God? Then would you say death is our friend? Our enemy? Why need we fear it? Does death belong to God? Where, then, did it first come into this world? So death and sin came together?

"Let us say, then, that sin is a worm that eats out the heart of the grain of corn. What becomes of our bodies when we die? Yes, they go back to dust. our bodies when we die? Yes, they go back to dust. and some day He will raise them, so that our souls may live in them in His heavenly city. And God knows where our bodies are, no matter whether we drown in the ocean, or are burned up. The stalk of corn is the same grain that I put away in the earth. God is going to change our bodies in the same way, and our heavenly body will be far more beautiful than this body we live in now, but it will be the same body changed. Is God greater than Satan? Then, although we must die, God watches over our bodies. Suppose you lost an arm in battle, would God raise that arm? Well, He always does everything the very best way, doesn't He?

"How may we know that our bodies will live again, as well as our souls? I want to read you I Cor. 15:39, 42, 44, 49, 51, 52. Paul also said in vs. 36-38: 'Thou fool, that which thou sowest is not quickened, except it die: and that which thou sowest, thou sowest not that body that shall be, but bare grain, it may chance of wheat, or of some other grain: but God giveth it a body as it hath pleased Him, and to every seed His own body.' Don't you think we should make our lives prove that we believe our Lord really rose from the dead and will raise our bodies from the dead forevermore to live with Him? Jesus said, 'Because I live, ye shall live also.' We find in I Cor. 15:54-57 that the Lord Jesus will overcome death some day. How may we be sure that our souls, our bodies will live in heaven? Yes, we must let Jesus Christ enter into our lives and transform them. We must believe on Him. If we die before He returns to this earth, when He comes back He will call and our bodies will be raised and we shall meet Him in the air (I Cor. 15:51,52). This lily is not a bulb, but it was once inside a brown bulb. So, God will raise the same bodies we now have, but he will give them new beauty, because, 'when He shall appear, we shall be like Him' (I Jn. 3:2)."—The Sunday School Times.

HOW MUCH I OWE!

"Thine eyes shall see the King in His beauty."
When I stand before the throne
Dressed in beauty not my own;
When I see Thee as Thou art,
Love Thee with unsinning heart;
Then, Lord, shall I fully know,
Not till then—how much I owe!

NEWS BRIEFS From Our Workers

The devotional period of the mid-week prayer meetings at the Bethel Brethren Church of BERNE, IND., is being conducted in turn by the various classes of the Bible School. The method is proving both interesting and helpful, and some of the classes have backed up their program by a 100% attendance.

Another Brethren broadcast may now be heard every Saturday night. The name: "The Voice in the Night;" the station. WHIO (1290 kilocycles), DAYTON, O.; the time: 11:30-12:00 P.M., EWT.; the purpose: to so present Jesus Christ as the living, loving, Son of God, that lost men and women will want to believe on Him, and receive the gift of eternal life; the sponsor: The First Brethren Church of Dayton, O. Their program of spiritual hope, encouragement, joy and meditation is under the direction of the pastor, Rev. Russell D. Barnard, and is sure to bring a blessing to all who tune in.

Some of the results of the WAYNESBORO, PA., revival conducted by Bro. J. L. Gingrich of ALLENTOWN, PA., are: The first Sunday approximately 75 took a stand for a closer walk with the Lord. 29 special decisions were made. The church was quickened and deepened in spiritual life, and rich friendships were made. As an expression of appreciation of the work of the evangelist, the Friendship Bible Class donated him with a new Parker fountain pen, and also gave his wife a large grocery shower.

The HAGERSTOWN, MD., church, whose building program was delayed because of the present emergency, is rejoicing that they have been able tho resume building operations again.

Building seems to be the order of the day among a number of our churches. The First Brethren Church of LOS ANGELES has sold the building in which they have been worshipping for many years; and on Mar. 15 the groundbreaking service was conducted at the new location, 85th St. and Byrd Ave., where they plan to erect a beautiful new building. Following this service, those present returned to the old location, where the cornerstone was formally opened and the contents displayed. Until their new building is completed, the services of the church are being conducted in the auditorium of one of the Better Food Markets of the city. Excavation for the new building was to have begun the day following the groundbreaking.

The TRACY, CALIF., church, where Bro. Tom Mammers is pastor, is among the churches which has placed The Brethren Missionary Herald in every home in their Bible School, the expense being borne by the Bible School. The CLEVELAND, O., church, which sent the Herald to every home in their church last year, has done the same for 1942. On the same day that the Cleveland subscriptions were received, the Herald office also received 124 subscriptions from WAYNESBORO, PA., another church which was on the 100% list for last year.

After having removed the indebtedness on the church building just a few months ago, the First Brethren Church of DAYTON, O., has now burned the note representing the indebtedness on the parsonage. The Bible School of this church has been making some substantial gains in attendance, several classes and departments either meeting or passing their attendance goals.

The basement, which has been under construction at the W. 10th St. Brethren Church of ASHLAND, O., for some weeks, has so nearly reached completion that the Primary, Junior and Junior High departments, with a total of 22 classes, have moved into it. New tables have been provided, with screens between classes and a piano for each department. This basement has been made possible by the donation of hundreds of days of labor by the men of the church and in order to hurry the completion of the finishing touches on the new unit, the Junior High Department has undertaken the painting of their own room. Necessary articles to outfit the kitchen—which the church has made clear is for the fellowship and convience of the classes and auxiliaries, and not for the sale of any meals to raise money—were donated in a kitchen shower on a week night following the moving of the departments into the basement.

Gleaned from MISSIONARIES Letters

Letters from mission fields these days, especially those within the war-torn areas, are nearly always greatly delayed. Sometimes they never reach their destination. Rather, they go to the bottom of the seas. Sometimes they lie for weeks and months piled up in censors' offices, awaiting their turn. Once in awhile they come through "on time". However, we wish our readers to have, just as soon as possible, any news of interest from the fields that they are so loyally supporting. We give here extracts from letters that have come into our hands since our last report.

Klievers rest a while with the Fosters. Fosters' report is that the Klievers are not lazy, to say the least:

"We have had Bro. and Sister Kliever with us for a two weeks' vacation. This is the first one that they have had since they left the homeland, and they both needed it. They both work like horses, and don't know when to rest. Jake really does the work of three ordinary men. It might be all right at home, but surely not in Africa."

J. H. Foster, Acting Field Superintendent, in another letter says:

"The decisions made by the Field Council in placing the missionaries were made with the belief that they would soon be with us. But since the tragedy of the ZamZam has delayed them, naturally we are very disappointed. However, not 'upset' as you say. We are 'setup,' ready for anything that now comes! But how we praise the Lord that they are all safe in America; since the Lord did not see fit to permit them to come on at that time. We know that He will bring them forth in His time; therefore we are simply resting and waiting for Him to work.

"We are very glad that our missionaries are willing to return at any cost. However, we feel that precaution should be taken; especially as to the cargo of a boat, and naturally with the permission of the government. For what they do, they try to do for the citizens' good.

"Even though our personnel may be reduced by three more, or I should say three less, the beginning of 1942, we take courage when we read how the Lord reduced Gideon's army to such a small number, yet worked miracles through the few. We refuse to be discouraged, for it is the Lord's work that we are engaged in. . . .

Foster furlough: "If the Lord so wills, we are not expecting to go home until 'the rough ways shall be made smooth,' and that will probably not be until the war is over. If the Lord soon returns, we will not need a furlough."

In a letter to Bro. Foster last year, we expressed to him a fear that the board might have to undergo some criticism for continuing to help missionaries in the homeland, whose furloughs were up but who are left stranded because neither passage nor passports could be secured. It should be apparent to anyone that this abnormal condition is not the fault of either the board or the missionaries. The world never before passed through a time when all of its seas were more dangerous than at the present time. But it isn't the dangers of the seas that is keeping missionaries at home, or compelling them to remain on the field long after their furloughs are due. Our missionaries are ready to face the dangers; but we cannot compel steamship companies to give passage, nor all-powerful governments to give passports. In the meantime, we believe that the members of the Foreign Missionary Society of The Brethren Church, and the churches themselves, certainly approve the board in standing by the stranded missionaries, whether they are in the homeland or upon the fields.

It costs more, in the way of living expenses, to care for a missionary in the homeland than it does upon the field, but the missionaries who are stranded in the homeland have certainly done all they can to relieve the board of the extra expenses. And yet, they have to keep themselves in readiness to act instantly in case they can secure passage and government approval for their travel to the field.

The Morrills are in Grace Seminary, and are not drawing their allowance at present. The Williamses are caring for our church at Udell, Ia. Bro. Sickel continues his work as a very successful and greatly beloved pastor of our church in North Long Beach. The Jobsons are in deputation work. However, they are doing this work in the East, and are working "tooth and toenail" to secure passports and find passage of any sort that will get them back to the field where he is desperately needed.

The board will pursue its policy to take good care of its missionaries in these troublous times. In view of our expression of possible fear of such criticism, Bro. Joseph H. Foster wrote:

"We cannot see how any of the churches could possibly criticize any one, especially in the face of the terrible experience that six of our number so recently suffered. Should criticism come, suggest that the criticizers make the trip. I think conditions at the present time should arouse Christians to give more than ever before, and be willing to continue the support of those who cannot return to the field of labor, where their hearts really desire to be. Jehovah-Jireh still liveth!"

Miss Estella Myers, one of our faithful missionaries at Bassai station, has been spending as much of her time as possible in the translation of the New Testament into the Karre language. This translation has been completed since the time that Miss Myers wrote the following to the Secretary-Treasurer:

"After church every Sunday I meet with some Christians to talk over some of the verses translated. We have been talking of the words used and their meanings. We have the New Testament here in the Sango language; but the ones who have read it claim that they do not understand it like they would their own language. The commercial language they feel is not enough. Naturally, those seeking to know what the Word says will get its meaning better from the Word in their own language. However, the Sango has been a great blessing, for there are many tribes in Oubangui-Chari in whose language no Scriptures have been translated. Women and children do not know the Sango as the men. . . .

"I am sorry that I do not write oftener. It just seems that every minute that I am not praying or preaching must be spent with the translations."

Little Anne Kliever seems to have inherited the same missionary spirit of her daddy and her mother. Miss Myers cared for the Kliever children during the time that their parents were moving from Bekoro station to Bozoum, and she relates the following incident which took place at that time:

"One day . . . little Anne took her clothes out of the suitcase and put them on a cot where little Donna was sitting. She said: "Donna, we have arrived in this village, and we are going to stay until all the people here know about Jesus."

What Have You Done? For Grace Seminary?

Note: We are ready now to concentrate upon our third major offering (objective 4). March, April and May are the months which your Executive Board set aside for the time in which you were to lift your love offering for Grace Seminary. At no other time in her history has The Brethren Church needed a seminary, like ours, more than she does now. Let us make this the greatest offering in our history as a Council.

This month we are happy to have a word from our president, Dr. Alva J. McClain, and from Rev. A. V. Kimmell, president of the Board of Trustees of Grace Seminary.

What Grace Seminary Thinks of the W.M.C.

By ALVA J. McCLAIN, President of Grace Theological Seminary

The Women's Missionary Council editor, Mrs. R. E. Gingrich, asked me some time ago to write a brief article on some phase of the seminary that would be of interest to the members of that organization. To do this properly, of course, I must needs deal with some activity of the seminary. And since the main activity of an educational institution is supposed to be thinking, it occurred to me that the W.M.C. might be interested in what we think about them.

In evaluating the worth of the W.M.C. in relation not only to the seminary but also to the entire Brethren Church, I can think of no better words than the Apostle Paul once used to describe a valued helper of his. The inspired description of this woman is found in Rom. 16:1-2, as follows: "I commend unto you Phoebe our sister, which is a servant of the church which is at Cenchrea: that ye receive her in the Lord, as becometh saints, and that ye assist her in whatsoever business she hath need of you: for she hath been a succourer of many, and of myself also." Reflecting upon the past few years, and also the present situation among our churches with their various tasks, it seems to me that this woman from Cenchrea may well represent the W.M.C. women of our Brethren churches from Philadelphia to San Diego.

In the first place, consider her name. "Phoebe" means literally "bright" and "radiant." And I think these very adjectives are not inappropriate when applied to the women's organization. You cannot regard what they have done and are doing without being impressed by the radiance of their faith and works. If you feel at times that not everything is as bright as it ought to be in our various church projects and activities, you will find it helpful to consider the W.M.C. There is brightness here that cannot be hid under a bushel, a brightness that spreads encouragement as to the future. If there is any feeling of dark pessimism among these women, I have not seen it.

Again, Phoebe is spoken of as a "servant of the church." The church doubtless needs leaders, as we are reminded unceasingly, but she also needs some who are willing to be called "servants." The Greek term is the one from which we get our words "deacon" and "deaconess." Our Lord was not ashamed to apply the word to His own ministry when He said that He came not to be ministered unto, but to minister and give His life a ransom for many (Matt. 20:28). It describes, therefore, a service which is forgetful of self in the interest of others.

Now it seems to me that this sort of service has been very characteristic of the women of the W.M.C. Many times they have had no voice in the starting of projects, and they asked for none; yet when a need arose in those projects we found these "servants of the church" standing ready to help. If problems arose, they did not ask who made the plans which went amiss, but without complaint they put their hands to the task. Human nature on the whole is rather touchy about receiving due credit for service rendered, but I think there is less of this among the women than anywhere else. Not always recognized for its true worth here and now, such unselfish ser-

Women's Prayers and Gifts Aid Grace Theological Seminary

By A. V. KIMMELL, President of the Seminary Board of Trustees

But when the fulness of the time was come, God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law, To redeem them that were under the law, that they might receive the adoption of sons (Gal. 4:4,5).

Rev. Kimmell

In the time appointed by the Father, there was found a woman who was fully yielded to the will of God, in order that God might be made manifest in the flesh; and so God dwelt among us. In a time of great stress there always has been a woman or a group of women who would pay whatever price was required to be used of the Lord.

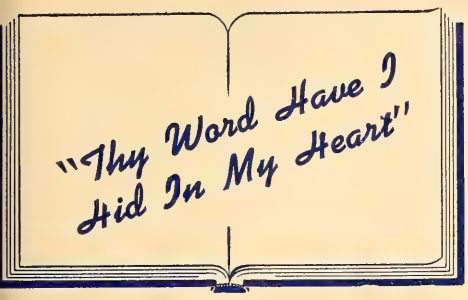
In responding to the invitation to write a few words for the Women's Seminary Number of The Brethren Missionary Herald we take the opportunity of offering a sincere tribute of praise to the women of the church who have helped so definitely in this vital undertaking.

The men who were used of God in launching Grace Theological Seminary did so without the promise of a dollar or without the assurance of a single substantial gift. Most certainly this was walking entirely by faith. To engage a faculty, to find a place to accommodate a school and secure a modest library, were just a few of the important steps that had to be taken, while thus walking by faith, although money for operating the new seminary did begin to come in just as soon as the decision to found Grace Seminary had been announced.

In this critical hour the women of the brotherhood never hesitated. The call to prayer found its first and most loyal support among the women. This institution was literally prayed into being; it never could have made such miraculous progress without prevailing prayer; and of this the women did more than their share, and they are continuing in this greatly needed virtue. Second, the women helped mightily in answering prayer by the gifts, which poured in so splendidly. When that first public offering was taken in the Presbyterian Church at Winona Lake, Ind., the women were not one whit behind the men in sending up their gifts. Thus it has been in every Rally held annually. Nor is this all, for as soon as The Brethren Women's Missionary Council was organized, Grace Theological Seminary became the object of the prayers and the gifts. The women have not lost their enthusiasm; rather it has grown, and with the presentation of the appeal for funds to meet the desired goal at this time of the year, the faculty and the board are ready to say "Thank you" in advance, for you never fail us.

Let every Council keep the seminary on the prayer calendar. As the institution grows other members must be added to the faculty. Thus far the selection of the men has been eminently successful. No mistakes have been made, so pray that wisdom may be given in future moves. Pray for guidance in the matter of our own buildings. The present facilities are very satisfactory, but the owners of the building we now use may need the space we occupy; then what will we do? We must look ahead and be prepared when the time comes. The Lord so graciously has provided a place for meeting both at Ellet, O., and Winona Lake, Ind., that we trust Him in future moves, but we ask you to pray that wisdom from above will direct the board in this matter.

Then last of all, ask the Lord to send the right people to the seminary as students. Those who have already gone out as pastors and missionaries are fine testimonies of the type of work being done, but the faculty must have the right material with which to work to bring glory to the Lord and His church. Here is one of our greatest problems. Pray that those whom the Lord is directing to Grace Theological Seminary may find a way to make all necessary preparation, financially, educationally, and spiritually, so that they may graduate with high honors and go out adequately equipped to preach the riches of grace in Christ Jesus to the saving of the lost and the growth of the saints.



DR. McCLAIN'S ARTICLE

vice will at last receive the "commendation" of the Lord.

Third, the apostle speaks of Phoebe as "a succourer of many." The American Revised Version renders it "a helper of many." Here again the parallel runs true. The W.M.C. is about the only organization in The Brethren Church that helps everybody. Most of the other organizations in the church are set up for one purpose, and devote their entire effort to that cause. And thus sometimes those of us who are active in such organizations become a bit narrow in our interests—we can see only our own particular cause, and become callous to the need of others. But the women seemed to have escaped this narrow provincialism. They are the true cosmopolitans of the church, seeing the need afar off as well as that which is near. If the Bible Coach in South America needs support, the W.M.C. provides the funds. If Africa needs help to make Bible conferences possible for native workers, the women are ready with the money. If The Brethren Missionary Herald cannot pay its own way, the women cheerfully contribute more than their share. If the seminary needs another teacher, the W.M.C. volunteers to increase their educational gifts. If Kentucky needs a parsonage, the women pledge to raise the money. If Bro. Claude Pearson's worthy ministry among the seamen faces serious need, the women step into the breach. If money is needed to print tracts for various purposes, the women hand over the dollars. Certainly, the W.M.C. can qualify as "a helper of many."

I think this evaluation of the women's organization should be closed by asking all our churches and pastors to follow Paul's instruction to the church at Rome as to their attitude toward the W.M.C.—"that ye assist her in whatsoever business she hath need of you." Too often the men pay little or no attention to the women's work until they need their help. Nothing could be more short-sighted. Assistance rendered to the W.M.C. will pay rich dividends to any pastor, congregation, or other national organization. It is literally bread cast upon the waters. We here at Grace Seminary "commend unto you" this fine organization of Brethren women, which has proven its value as "a servant of the church."

STUDIES IN THE EPHESIANS VIII

"THE BELIEVER'S WALK OF SEPARATION"

HOMER A. KENT, Grace Theological Seminary

"That man must have been in the army or in a military school," Mr. Moody said to a friend who was by his side on one occasion.

"Yes," was the response; "how do you know?"

"By the way he walks," replied Moody.

There ought to be something about the walk of the Christian that will testify to the world that he belongs to Christ. In the first three chapters of Ephesians the writer gives the doctrinal basis for Christian faith. He shows us what the church is in the mind of God. Its nature and plan are there outlined. In those first three chapters the church is presented as God sees it "in Christ.' It is a marvelous presentation. Looking at the church through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus, it is a perfect structure. In chapters four through six, the church is presented as the world ought to see it. The walk of the believer in his pilgrimage this side of heaven is emphasized.

In the section of this study, Eph. 4:17-32, some very definite characteristics of the believer's walk are set forth. Let us concern ourselves with a consideration of several of them.

It should be a distinctive walk vs. 17-19)

"Walk not as other Gentiles walk," etc. Those who have been called from darkness to light, who have been raised from spiritual deadness, are expected to walk as the children of light and as those who have been raised from the dead. If the life of the Christian is not different from the life of the worldling, what evidence is there that the individual is truly a Christian? One of the glaring failures of the church of the 4th and 5th centuries, the time when large numbers were admitted into fellowship, was the gradual inclusion of the practices and forms of paganism. Thus the church became weakened in its spiritual power. And so it ever is. The walk of the believer must be apart from the world, else it will lose its influence. To walk with God means a walk of separation.

It should be a transformed walk (vs. 20-24).

"And be renewed in the spirit of your mind" (23). Becoming a Christian is shown, in the passage before us, to be like putting off an old garment and putting on a new one. Walk out into the forest in winter, and occasionally you will see an old oak tree which has kept its foliage of the previous summer. The winds and snows and cold have failed to disrobe the mighty oak of its dead garments. But wait a few weeks. Spring arrives. New life come forth from the roots as the result of the drawing power of the sun. This new life goes out through all the branches and twigs of the tree. Then the old dead leaves begin to fall off, the green buds begin to open, and soon the tree is dressed in new garments. What the winter's blasts failed to do the vital forces of the new life have fully accomplished.

When the life of Christ possesses the heart of man, the old garments of sin and unloveliness are exchanged for the garments of "righteousness and true holiness" (24). No doubt the Apostle Paul had something of this in mind when he made the statement of II Cor. 5:17, "Therefore, if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature; old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new." In view of this fact the Christian is always to keep himself unspotted from the world, and to reckon himself "to be dead indeed unto sin, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord" (Rom. 6:11).

It should be a walk devoid of lying (v. 25).

Lying is to be put away from the Christian's life like one puts away a filthy garment. Falsehood, deception, undue exaggeration, and the like, have no place in the believer's walk. The Scripture before us shows that lying not only hurts one's self; it also hurts the individual to whom the lie is told, for we are members one of another. We are the body of Christ.

It should be a walk that does not harbor anger (vs. 26-27).

There are times when it is right for a Christian to become angry. We read of Christ's anger in Mk. 3:5. But anger is to be controlled. It must not be allowed to develop into the spirit of revenge. We must not let it grow into a hatred for the individual who is guilty. There is a difference between being angry at sin and angry at the sinner. By continuing in "wrath" it gives an opportunity for the devil to spoil the believer's testimony.

It should be a walk characterized by thriftiness (v. 28).

The Christian's life relates to every phase of daily experience. The Christian is not to be a parasite upon society. He is expected to contribute something to labor. See II Thess. 3:10. He ought to be industrious.

It should be a walk expressing itself in pure conversation (vs. 29-31).

A person's character is often clearly manifested through his casual conversation. We express ourselves through the vehicle of words. The utterances of the Christian, in whatever form they may be, should be seasoned with the love of Christ. What is the best test of conversation? Perhaps this question can best be answered by asking another, viz., does the conversation edify? We need to question ourselves more often concerning our speech. What about the stories we tell? what we say of our neighbors? some of the cheap slang we use? Does it edify? Is it kind? Is it useful? V. 30 seems to indicate that the Holy Spirit is sometimes grieved in this very respect. Some folks have been robbed of their spiritual power because of carelessness with the tongue. Let us beware.

Finally, the walk of the Christian should be a demonstration of godly kindness (v. 32).

In view of the kindness of Calvary, how can the Christian show any other than a kindly spirit toward those for whom Christ died, especially toward those of the household of faith?

"THE BLOOD OF MARTYRS—THE SEED OF THE CHURCH"

(John and Betty Stam)

By MRS. JOSEPH GINGRICH

In Dec. 1934, the Christian world was horrified when we learned of the slaughter of John and Betty Stam by the Reds in China. Many who were not too vitally interested in missions might have said, "What a waste! There are two young lives (they were just 27 and 28 years of age) wonderfully talented and trained, given so soon after reaching their chosen field." But we hear a triumph song, sung in heaven. It is one of joy and praise sung by the redeemed, many of whom came from the furnace of affliction, stoning, crucifixion, or other forms of torture.

The Christian's sorrows and sufferings become fruitful in blessings to others. The enemy is unable to stay the triumph of truth though he seeks to quench it in blood.

When Patrick Hamilton was burned in Scotland, someone dared to say to his persecutors, "If you are going to burn any more, you had better do it in a cellar, for the smoke of Hamilton's burning has opened the eyes of hundreds."

Spurgeon says, "It is always so, suffering saints are living seed."

Such seed, through the experiences of John and Betty Stam, has been sown the wide world over. When word of their supreme sacrifice reached Moody Bible Institute, a memorial service was held. At the close of the service, a call for definite service to any field to which the God would lead was given. Seven hundred students answered this call. Our own Brother and Sister Dunning were there. They said this was the most impressive and serious moment in their lives. In this one place 700 lives were offered because two were sacrificed.

The story of the lives of these two consecrated people of God is both fascinating and inspirational to young people. John was trained in a simple Christian Holland family. They had good books, music—a family orchestra but no radio, for as Father Stam said, "We have seen too much of children drinking in what, to them, is poison!" All loved to read the Word of God and all helped in the evangelistic work in the "Star of Hope Mission" in Paterson, N. J., of which Mr. Stam was founder.

When the call came to John to give himself to the cause of missions, he readily accepted but the field was uncertain. He was now in Moody. His father had hoped he would become a leader in the "Star of Hope Mission." His brother Jacob was in French Equatorial Africa. His father wrote, "Why think of China or India, when there are other countries more open?" Would it not seem more in keeping with the Lord's will to go where work can be unhindered, rather than where life is always in danger and there is such opposition?" But nine months later he wrote, "May the Lord richly bless you and guide you by His Holy Spirit to do His will. We must pray that more men may go to China." Conditions were bad in China at the time because of the Communists; but this did not deter John, even though he was not quite certain if called to China.

Although quite different in surroundings from the Stam home in New Jersey, there was another beautiful home in far-away China where Elizabeth Alden Scott was reared. She was a direct descendant of John and Priscilla Alden of the Mayflower. Her parents were missionaries in China under the Presbyterian Board. Her father, after a brilliant University career, accepted the call for evangelistic work and Bible teaching in China.

When Betty was 17 and ready for college, Dr. Scott's furlough was due, so all the family came home. All five children expected to return as missionaries to China after completing their education. Betty entered college at Chambersburg, Pa. After two years she decided to enter Moody for more practical Bible training. She wanted to learn how to win souls to Christ instead of just talking about it. The prison and street meetings, which her sensitive spirit dreaded, turned out to be a help and real joy. Her many beautiful poems portray in a real way her deep and earnest prayer life.

A year later John appeared among the students. He met Betty at the prayer meetings. What a wonderful place to meet life companions! Although both had had many friendships before, neither had ever felt the deep love and devotion each felt for the other. They were one in devotion to God and His call for service.

The time came for Betty to sail to China under the China Inland Mission. The parting was hard, but both felt God is first and friends and loved ones second.

Eight months later John completed his work in Chicago. His heart was burdened for the non-Christian world. Chosen by his fellow-students to give the class address at the graduation exercises, the preparation of his theme was prefaced by much prayer and meditation. The class motto was "Bearing Precious Seed." He connected this with the Lord's own words, "The field is the world." He was deeply impressed that a million a month in China pass into Christless graves. In closing, he said, "Our way is plain. We must not retrench in any work which we are sure is in His will and for His glory. We dare not turn back because the way looks dark. We must go forward in the face of the impossible, even if we only know the next step. God is our Captain! With such a Leader, Who never lost a battle, who would not accept the challenge to go forward, "bearing precious seed?"

In July 1932 John sailed for China under the China Inland Mission. Through a number of circumstances used by God, he met Betty again at Shanghai. They were engaged. They were separated again, going to different fields, and never saw each other until the eve of their marriage a year later.

They were married in the tennis court converted into an outdoor chapel in the yard of her parents home. Of the 200 guests, 140 were Chinese Christians.

They left immediately for their field of labor. The next year they were blessed with a lovely baby, Helen Priscilla. They then went to Tsingteh (the town where Betty had grown up). They were happy to be situated in a house of their own with a Christian maid and cook. Their ambition was to introduce Christ to these darkened people by seeing Jesus in them and their Christian home.

On the floor of the home a little later were found the following lines, written by Betty on a crumpled piece of paper which portrays their desire:

Open my eyes, that I may see
This one and that one needing Thee,
Hearts that are dumb, unsatisfied,
Lives that are dead, for whom Christ died.

Open my eyes in sympathy,
Clear into man's deep soul to see;
Wise with Thy wisdom to discern,
And with Thy heart of love to yearn.

Open my eyes in faith, I pray;
Give me the strength to speak today,
Someone to bring, dear Lord, to Thee:
Use me, O Lord, use even me.

This happy period was short. One morning as Betty was bathing Helen, the first messenger came to warn them of the approach of the Red Army. Another and another quickly followed. Soon firing was heard.

Then John and Betty knelt in prayer with their faithful servants. They were calm and composed; and when the Reds thundered on the door they received them courteously. They tried to satisfy them with goods and money, and Betty served them tea and cakes, but to no avail. John was bound and taken to the Communistic headquarters. They soon returned for Betty and the baby. The cook and maid pleaded to go with them, and were only deterred when told they would be shot at once.

The army of 2,000 Communists soon increased to 6,000. They took their prisoners, including the Stams, to Misodheo, a village 12 miles away. John was walking, carrving little Helen, not quite three months old; and Betty rode horseback part of the way. Their captors discussed killing the infant to save trouble, and would have done so had not an old man come forward to plead for the infant.

"Then it's your life for hers," was the angry retort.

"I am willin~" replied the farmer. He was killed immediately.

When they arrived in Miaosheo, where they had labored before and had many friends, the postmaster said, "Where are you going?" John answered, "We do not know where they are going, but we are going to heaven."

They never uttered a word of self-pity or fear. Those who witnessed the tragedy that followed, marvelled at the calmness with which John and Betty faced their misguided enemies. Theirs was a moral and spiritual triumph.

During the night John was tightly bound with ropes to a bed post. He was unable to move through those long cold winter hours. Betty was allowed to move in the courtyard under heavy guard to care for the baby.

When the crucial hour came, they were painfully bound with ropes. Their hands behind them, stripped of outer garments, and John barefooted (he had given his socks to Betty), they passed down the familiar streets before many who knew them. They were taken to a hill outside the village. As John plead for the release of a Christian doctor, who was to suffer death because he had pleaded for the Stams, he himself was told to kneel and was killed before the eyes of his loving wife. Though bound, she quickly knelt beside his body with her head across his wound, and was slain with the executioner's axe. Two more martyrs were added to the already long list.

The "miracle baby" was tenderly and lovingly cared for by Mrs. Lo, a Chinese mother. She is being cared for by gifts from all over United States. At a memorial service at Wilson College, Betty's Alma Mater, Pres Wakefield claimed the baby for Wilson College. Her higher education is insured. The students gave $100 for the baby's immediate expenses.

Besides the 700 students who volunteered their lives to definite service, others have been influenced. Betty's own sister Mrs. Gordon Maby, her husband, the Dean of Witherspoon College, Ky., have heard the call of God to China. Truly the blood of martyrs is the seed of the church.

May God release to the whole church new power through this tragedy, a deeper consecration, and more faithful witness to the wonderful cause of Christ, for which true followers since the inception of the church have been ready to offer the supreme sacrifice. They held their life not too dear for Him.

"As it is written, for Thy sake we are killed all the day long; we are accounted as sheep for the slaughter."—"Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee the crown of life" (Rom. 8:36; Rev. 2:10).

Russian Events and Bible Prophecy

By LOUIS S. BAUMAN, D.D.

Russia has come boldly into the picture since Dr. Bauman's "Light On Bible Prophecy" started on its meteoric career, in which many thousands of copies have been published. Following the same line in his treatment of Russia, Dr. Bauman, according to his own words, "sticks to the Word of God, no matter though its prophecies may at the time seem to man impossible of fulfillment." In his new study he answers such questions as: In the prophecy of Ezekiel is Russia the nation in view? If so, who are the allies? Is the great nothern conference now in formation? He also treats such subjects as Gog and Magog Prepared for Battle, The Cause of the Conflict, Forces God will Use to Overthrow Gog, Gog's Doom, The Bonepile in Palestine, The End of Communism, etc. A book every Christian should read and ponder today. Price $1.00 cloth.

"How Beautiful are the Feet of Them That Preach the Gospel--"

It takes constant reminding and working with the children and newest monitors in the vernacular classes to get them to read words by syllables and not by location on the page or board. One day shortly after I had started having charge of these classes, one the monitors wanted to show me how well his class could read their lesson out of Syllabaire for that day. I listened while they stood, turned their backs to the board, and "read" in unison from that same board! When shown the same syllables in the book, they could not read them unless I pointed to the first one and took the rest in order. This was a first year class and a new monitor—to say nothing of a green missionary in charge. The ones who stick with it through both years not only learn to read, but get a little of the other two "R's" as well. The best of them go on to French School.

Mrs. Dunning

I would appreciate your prayers for the Friday morning assemblies when I have all the "vernaculars" gathered in the church. There I explain the gospel again and again to them, using a different Scripture verse each time, but one that is connected with some song or chorus they love to sing. You know, of course, how the negroes love to sing, but I've discovered they sometimes pay no more attention to the thought back of the words than some of us white people do!

On his trip Mr. Dunning had a variety of new experiences, too numerous to mention them all here. Just a short distance brought them into Bayaland, and even though there is no love lost between the Bayas and Banous, Voloungou was found to be a beloved one in every village. The natives were willing to listen to him because all knew "his feet walked the same way his mouth talked."

It is rather wild and rough country through there, in two senses of the word. Some have called it "outlaw country" because it is under two administrations. When one administrator visits, the "bad men" are in the other section, and vice versa. The administrators don't visit as often as in some sections because it is not accessible by auto. The path is bad with rocks and hills, so Mr. Dunning walked a good third of the distance. The bridges across streams and rivers were usually thin poles. One time when coming to one stream that was too deep to wheel the bike through, and the bridge was too slender to ride across, he had to pack the bike on his back and walk across tight rope fashion! The porters were all quite far behind him, and Voloungou had stayed at a village to preach while he went on to the next one.

This is high grass season, and at times the grass was so tall that it was over his head even when he stood on his bike pedals! The path was so narrow at times that it would be almost obliterated as the grass waved and nodded back and forth across it.

In most places he found a welcome by the chief and his village; but in one place the chief refused to give food for the natives, or wood and water. They all had prayer about it, then Mr. Dunning went and requested (?) with more vehemence for these things, which were then supplied.

At times when it was impossible to get a good crowd together for a service in some of the villages, he and Voloungou went into the cotton fields and preached to them at their work.

It was a real thrill for us several Sundays ago, when after church we all went down to the river. (I still want to call it a stream!) There Voloungou entered the water and baptized 35 adults and children. There are many others in the converts' class being taught the significance and place of baptism in the believer's life. They, too, will soon be baptized and received into the Yaloke church, even as they have been into the church, the building of Christ.

Yours in our wonderful Savior,

—Marguerite G. Dunning.

CONEMAUGH SENIOR W.M.C.

Greetings to the Herald readers from the Conemaugh Senior W.M.C.:

The leadership of Brother and Sister Schaffer has been greatly missed since they left our midst, for they were much interested in the work and were of great help. We pray God's blessing on them in their work at Berne, Ind., that they may be used of the Lord to bring many souls to the Lord Jesus Christ.

Since the Lord has sent us Brother and Sister Lantz as our leaders, we feel we are going to love them and we are bound to go forward in the work of the Master. --- are somewhat hindered yet, due to the fact that the parsonage is not quite finished, after being completely remodeled into a good looking home. Brother and Sister Lantz have been living at the Capitol Hotel in Johnstown, which is very inconvenient for them, but will be in their new home in a very short time; and we know they will be happy in their new field.

The first meeting which Mrs. Lantz attended, shortly after she arrived, was a joint meeting of the Jr. and Sr. W.M.C.s for the work of Grace Seminary. She gave us a very inspiring talk, which made us love her from the beginning.

We elected her vice-president of the Sr. Council to fill the unexpired term vacated by Mrs. Schaffer. From her messages in song and testimony for the Lord, we know she will be an inspiration to us to press forward to that "high calling" of the Lord Jesus Christ, and will help us to be more earnest in the work of saving souls for Him.

Our prayer is that we all may be brought closer together in love for one another, to be able to serve the Lord and do His work, and that we praise Him and glorify His name.

Yours in His Service until He comes,

—Mrs. Charles Sigg (President).

CHRIST OUR HOPE IN SERVICE

By HELEN FRAZEE BOWER

Pehaps there is no verse in Scripture more fraught with meaning for the child of God than that portion of Col. 1:27 which gives us "Christ in you the hope of glory." God Himself refers to it as a "mystery," but not a mystery intended to mystify, but rather one which He desires to "make known" to the saints. The manifest implication of the verse is that our hope of an eternity in glory rests solely with Christ; but this only touches a fringe of the truth hidden there. When Christ was upon earth, He spoke of a different kind of glory when He said in Jn. 17:4, "I have glorified Thee on the earth: I have finished the work which Thou gavest me to do.' Christ was speaking of an earthly, visible ministry, which was a glory to God. Later on He speaks of sending His followers into the world even as God had sent Him. The purpose, manifestly, is that they also might glorify God in service. The first responsibility and the first privilege of the Christian is that he might do just that. And yet how we draw back at the knowledge of our own unfitness for such a task! How can my poor unworthy life get any glory for God? The answer is: it cannot—here, as always, "Christ in you" is the only "hope of glory." If the Christian is to render effective service, he must realize that Christ is the beginning and the end of that service—as well as all that goes between. He is the motive for service, the means in service, and the manifestation of service.

Christ the Motive for Service

All service which will glorify God must be motivated by Christ. It hardly seems necessary to make such a statement, since the desire to serve God at all is a desire which only Christ can put into the heart. And yet, after one becomes a Christian—after the heart, in gratitude for salvation, cries out, "What shall I render unto the Lord for all His benefits toward me?" (Psa. 116:12), and steps out into service—the motive to continue such service may become a mixed one. The work which began with an eye single to Christ may continue for other reasons. The desire to be "the voice of one crying in the wilderness," the adulation of other Christians, the hope of material reward, may all become conflicting motives in service. When such transpires, a service "in the flesh" results, and from such God derives no glory. Christ, and Christ alone, is the only legitimate motive for service.

Christ The Means In Service

Just as Christ is the only One Who can properly motivate service, He is the only One who can properly carry it out. No soul was ever won, no saint was ever edified, except as Christ, through the Holy Spirit, performed the service. In Christian work there is no such thing as a "natural qualification." To be sure, God may use our human best when put into His hands; but then it ceases to be a "natural qualification" and becomes divine equipment. Its effectiveness lies not in its own intrinsic value, but in the "splendor of God" which it has borrowed from the presence of the indwelling Christ. Let no man flatter himself that he has gifts which would be invaluable to God. There is only one thing of value to God, and that is a yielded heart. We have no means with which to labor effectively. Christ, and Christ alone, is the means in service. The sooner we move out of the picture and let Him take over, the sooner our service will count for something.

Christ The Manifestation of Service

Christ, Who is both the motive and the means in service, is also the proper manifestation of service. Labor as earnestly as you may, if the fruit of your service is a church debt paid off, a beautiful building dedicated, a pipe organ installed, or any other manifestation taking precedence over Christ made real to a hungry people, your labor has been in vain. As Christ is the beginning of all service, He must be the end of all. To a world, broken and bruised and bleeding, what service can we render except we bring them Christ? They don't need philosophies, sanctuaries, or programs: they need Christ. And the wonderful thing is that the more we manifest Him to others, the more real He becomes in our own lives! so that as we labor to bless, we in turn are blessed. The gracious fruits of the Spirit unfold within, as they are bestowed without, until Christ becomes "all in all." He who said, "I am Alpha and Omega, the first and the last" (Rev. 1:11) is the Christian's only "hope in service.'

II and III John

Have you ever wondered why the Holy Spirit chose to place II and III John, two very short, personal, and precious letters written by the beloved apostle, in our library?

Perhaps it was because they so vividly portray a pastors interest in his flock (cf. I Pet. 5:1-4). He loves his people (II Jn. 1, III Jn. 1). He is interested in both the spiritual and physical welfare of all (III Jn. 2). He is interested in their Christian walk, and points out to them the pathway of truth and love. It is his greatest joy when they walk worthy of their high calling (II Jn. 4, III Jn. 4).

It makes our pastors rejoice, girls, if we are living separated Christian lives according to the Word of God. And well it should! That which we do reflects upon the pastor and the church (II Jn. 8).

The pastor also desires that his people be both hospitable and helpful to those who are laboring in the Lord's work (III Jn. 5-8); but he doesn't want them to be either to those who do not teach in truth the Word, but rather are deceivers, for he that even biddeth such a one God speed is partaker of his evil deeds (II Jn. 9-11).

One mark of these deceivers is that they confess not that Christ is come in the flesh (II Jn. 7). According to the Greek, this should read, "is coming in the flesh." Here they deny that Christ, in the flesh, is coming again; while in I Jn. 4:2, the deceivers deny that He "has come (the effects of which coming remains always), in the flesh." This refers to Christ's first coming. For further study cf. II Tim., II Peter, with II Jn. in regard to false teachers.

II and III John are similar to I John and the Gospel. Compare the words used, the expressions, and topics discussed. Especially outstanding is the Word "truth." Cf. Jn. 18:37-38; 14:6; 17:17.

There are four men, including the apostle, in the drama of III Jn. They make an interesting character study.

John uses a fascinating phrase in describing the Christian workers, (III Jn. 7), "for His name's sake they went forth." Not for wages or for pleasure, or for fame; but in behalf of His great name they went forth (cf. Rev. 2:3). For His name's sake our sins are forgiven (I Jn. 2:12), For His name's sake, or on account of His great reputation, He leads us in the paths of righteousness (Ps. 23:3). And one day every knee shall bow, every tongue shall confess, and we shall praise that great name throughout eternity, and . . .

Until then, girls, for His name's sake, our prayers are heard. Our prayers are needed. Let's pray!

DON'T READ THIS

Unless you have done that "spring house-cleaning" of which we spoke last month. Have all the goals been checked? Is the Bible reading completed? Has the box for Kentucky been sent? If so, now you are ready to relax and enjoy the spring weather and fun. So, let's test our memory and ability to find Bible truths quickly.

1. Is the Homer of Lev. 27:16 a great author?
2. Was the Almon in Josh. 21:18 a good nut to eat?
3. Was Beulah a good little girl in Isa. 62:4?
4. Did they use the Bow in Ps. 78:57 to tie their hair?
5. Was the Cab of II Ki. 6:25 a taxi?
6. Was the Buz of Jer. 25:23 the sound of a bee?
7. Are the Coos of Acts 21:1 the call of the doves?
8. Was the Dial of Isa. 38:8 an instrument on the first radio?
9. What modern means of travel was used in II Sam. 19:18?
10. Could you eat the Ham of Gen. 5:32?

Perhaps, at your meeting, you would like to play the game of Bible Men: Someone mentions a name, such as Paul. Then the next person must give a name which begins with the last letter of the former name, such as Lazarus, using the last letter of Paul—L— to begin the first of Lazarus. You can go around your circle indefinitely, just as long as someone can think of enough names. You may also play this with Bible Women, Bible Places, etc.

All I ask is that you have a good time fellowshipping together, in order to get in good shape for the final round of events and check-ups before national conference.

In His Name,

—Aunt Mabel.

What ARE WE DOING

IN THE PENNSYLVANIA DISTRICT

Dear Lorraine and Sisterhood Girls:

We thought perhaps you might be interested in hearing about The Sisterhood of Mary and Martha of the District of Pennsylvania.

In the past few months we have sent to each church represented in our district a business reply card, seeking information regarding the different Sisterhood organizations within the district.

We have received replys from only 10 churches. Nine yet unheard from. We find we have eight Senior Sisterhoods and four Junior Sisterhoods in the churches from which we have had a reply. There is one church that reports no Sisterhood organization. There are 117 girls in the Senior groups and 74 girls in the Junior groups in these 10 churches. The First Church of Johnstown, Pa., is represented with the most girls in their Senior and Junior organizations. This church has 64 girls enrolled.

The churches from which we have not received any reply as yet are: Allentown, Altoona, Conemaugh, Juniata, McKee, Meyersdale, Philadelphia 1st and 3rd, and Grafton, W. Va. How about a reply from some of you Sisterhood organizations in these churches?

Let us think over the following suggestions offered by the various organizations we have heard from: Sisterhood organizations to work together, visit each other and get new ideas; contest between Pennsylvania Societies and a state contest with another state; S.M.M. organizations hear from the district officers; write about our District in the Herald; write to girls of different districts; and a Sisterhood rally.

Let us remember in our prayers the new Senior Sisterhood group recently organized at Leamersville, Pa., where Rev. Clair Gartland is the pastor. Ten girls from the First Church, Johnstown, drove over to Leamersville Church, Feb. 24, and held a meeting in the church there with 11 girls from the church there present. The girls appointed Mrs. Florine Diehl as patroness, and definite plans were made for their meeting, to be held Mar. 5, to elect officers. The girls from the First Church found these girls eager for a Sisterhood group and eager to do their Lord's will. We hope to hear big things in the Lord from these girls in the near future.

Now let us hear more from the Sisterhood groups in our district. Write us and we will in turn write you. Write us news about your Sisterhood groups.

In His Service,

Mrs. Kenneth Ashman, Potroness
Miss Ruth Snyder, President
Mrs. June Blough, Sec'y-Treasurer
Pennsylvania District Officers

LOS ANGELES FIRST

Dear Sisters in Christ:

The Sisterhood of Mary and Martha, of the First Brethren Church of Los Angeles, is progressing well. Our scrap books are coming along fine. Every girl is cooperating nicely.

We are trying to meet all of our goals, and every girl is living up to the standards of Sisterhood.

With the exception of a few girls, our Bible reading is completed. I am sure that every one of us has received a blessing from it.

Our society is having a membership drive and it seems to be working well. We have on the average of 17 at every meeting.

We have a wonderful Sisterhood, and we pray that many more may be started.

Your Sister in Christ,
—Cherrie Snyder, Sec'y.

WATERLOO, IOWA

Dear Secretary:

We are glad to report that our Sisterhood is growing, if not so much in numbers, spiritually. For the past three meetings we have had really heart-searching topics taken from the Herald, and have really found them a great help.

We have grown some in numbers too. At the beginning of the year we were seeing about 10 as an average at our meetings. Now for the last three meetings we have been having an average of about 15, and some of these additions are unsaved girls, which is truly an answer to prayer. Our officers are a fine group of girls and are making every devotional and social meeting a success. Our patroness, Mrs. Vernon Schrock, is a wonderful spiritual leader, and we have all learned to love her in the Lord and praise Him for sending her to us.

The girls are really doing a grand job of their Bible reading. At the last meeting all but two people out of 14 had read some of the required reading. They are realizing more and more that without His Word hid in our hearts it is hard to testify and tell others about Him.

Some of the girls have been working on scrap books and have some really nice ideas.

Our group would appreciate hearing from some of the other Sisterhood girls groups and exchanging ideas on meetings.

Yours in His Service,
Waterloo Sisterhood girls of Grace Brethren Church.
—Anna Mae Deits, Secretary.

Church Members I Have Met

Once I knew a Brethren,
He had a pious look.
He had been totally immersed—
Except his pocketbook.

He'd put a nickel on the plate,
And then, with might and main,
He'd sing, "When we assunder part,
It gives us inward pain."

I also knew a Methodist
Who couldn't sin, he said.
He'd holler "Glory" loud enough
To almost raise the dead.

But as to his apportionment,
Though his barns were waxing fat,
His shouting wasn't loud enough
To ever quite raise that.

Amillennialism vs. Scripture

ARNOLD R. KRIEGBAUM, Pastor Fillmore, California

THERE IS NO RAPTURE OF THE SAINTS

As the word "Amillennial" signifies, the Amillennialist denies the millennial period as being taught in the Scriptures. The parable of the tares (Matt. 13:36-43) is their proof text. However, by their attempting to prove a doctrine by basing it on a parable, the primary rule of Biblical interpretation is violated. Using this "proof text" they protest the teaching of a millennium, arguing that good and evil will develop together until Christ comes and establishes the ultimate state. They refuse to accept the clear, simple, unadulterated teaching of God's Word regarding the kingdom. They utterly disregard the teaching concerning the mediatorial kingdom of the Old Testament; that is, the kingdom out of the heavens which involved the rule of God through divinely chosen representatives, members of the human race such as Moses, Joshua, Judges, Samuel, Saul, David and Solomon, who spoke and acted for God. They fail to see the character of the mediatorial kingdom in the New Testament that was announced by our Lord to be identical with that of the Old Testament; and that as believers we enter this kingdom prior to its manifestation. "For our citizenship is in heaven;" (Phil. 3:20 A.R.V.). This kingdom will be fully realized by the New Testament Saints when Christ returns with his saints (Rev. 19:7-16) to establish a millennial kingdom which after 1,000 years will blend into the eternal kingdom.

The gentleman mentioned in the first installment of this article cited Jn. 5:28-29; 6:39, 40, 44, 54 to prove that Jesus declared He would resurrect the righteous and unrighteous "at the last day." By this interpretation the millennium and the rapture are denied. Dr. Alva J. McClain gives the most logical and convincing answer to this erroneous interpretation. (1) It ignores the contextual meaning of the word "hour" in Jn. 5:25-29; (2) This argument ignores the vast extent of the "last days" (II Pet. 3:18-13); (3) It ignores the order of the resurrection (I Cor. 15:23-24); (4) It ignores the plain teaching of Rev. 20:4-5; (5) It ignores the great Biblical motive for being a Christian (Phil. 3:11).

There was a young man one night walking up and down the street all night in front of the residence of the governor of the state in the city of Trenton, N. J. When the morning light was breaking, a messenger came to the door and said, "The governor is dead." This young man went to the police station and delivered himself up, self-accused of having taken the life of the governor of that state. He did not mean to kill him, but he had killed him. He was a clerk in a drug store; and he had placed a wrong ingredient in a prescription, through ignorance or carelessness, and that killed the governor of New Jersey. What is one man's medicine is another man's poison.

Oh, for a Bible-centered church! for a people who are able to commence at the same Scripture, not to preach poison, but to preach unto men Jesus, the Savior of the lost world!—a Savior Who is coming His chosen bride to claim, "For the Lord Himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with these words. (I Thess. 4:16-18).

Radio Messages from Brethren Broadcasts

POWER FOR SERVICE

(Acts 1 and 2)

By MARK MALLES

(Message preached on the Akron Haven of Rest Mission program over station WAKR, Akron.)

We would like to have you turn in your Bible to the first chapter of Acts. Some time ago the Lord laid a burden on our heart because of the evident powerlessness of the life and testimony of so many Christians today. And as we thought on this matter we were led to turn to the few chapters of the book of Acts, there to read of the mighty power which was manifested in and through the early church; and we would pass on to you this morning, and I would to God we could give to all Christians everywhere, the message God laid on our heart at that time.

You will remember how that, following His resurrection and just prior to His ascension, our Lord had gathered the disciples to Him; and as we read in Acts 1:4, "He commanded them that they should not depart from Jerusalem, but wait for the promise of the Father, which, saith He, ye have heard of me. For John truly baptised with water;; but ye shall be baptised with the Holy Ghost not many days hence." Now Jesus had many times mentioned the coming of the Holy Spirit to the disciples. On one occasion (Jn. 14:17), Jesus told them that the Holy Spirit was with them but that later on He should be in them. And so the time has come now for this great event to take place, and Jesus instructs His followers to go to Jerusalem and wait.

Now the question might have come to their minds—"Why, with all the work there is to do, with such a need at hand of our going to all the world with the gospel message, why does He tell us to wait?" But as we look into the previous experiences of these disciples of Christ, we see why it was that Jesus said that they should wait for the promise of the Father. It was just a very short while before this that all the disciples had forsaken their Lord, fearing to stand with Him and bear the maltreatment of the Jewish mobs. And even more recently, yes, even after the resurrection, we hear Peter saying to the rest, "I go afishing"—thinking the work for Christ all done, he was about to go back to his old trade to take up where he had left off when Jesus had called him to follow Him. And all the rest were ready to go back too.

Yes, before Christ can perform the work He plans to do through these followers, they must receive power, as we read in v. 8, through the Holy Spirit before they shall be able to proclaim effectively the gospel through all the earth. And to receive the Holy Spirit they must obey the Lord, even though to obey meant to wait.

Now then, today it is just as essential that we as Christians serve the Lord, not in our own strength, but in the power of the Holy Spirit. Of course, the Word teaches that since Pentecost every believer, every one who has accepted Jesus Christ as his personal Savior, is indwelt by the Holy Spirit. In fact Rom. 8:9 states, "If any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of His." But the desire of God is not that the Spirit should just indwell the believer, but that He should infill each and every Christian. Eph. 5:18 says, "Be not drunk with wine wherein is excess, but be filled with the Spirit." That's the will of God for you, Christian; and until you are willing to wait often upon God for this filling, you will not have the power to do the work God has for you to do.

We are so taken up with plans and methods and programs that we are prone to forget the necessity of working and preaching and teaching in the power of the Holy Spirit. The filling of the Spirit does not come from running to and fro in much serving, but through quietly waiting upon God in prayer, completely yielding oneself unto Him. We need to heed more the message, "Be still and know that I am God."

Now let us take a look at the results of this time of waiting by the disciples. Acts 2:1-3: "And when the day of Pentecost was fully come, they were all with one accord in one place. And suddenly there came a sound from heaven as of a rushing mighty wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting. And there appeared unto them cloven tongues like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them." Now there in v. 3 is the coming of the Holy Spirit to indwell them; and in v. 4 they were all filled with the Holy Spirit and began to speak in other tongues; and in v. 6 we read that every man heard them speak in his own language.

Today the Spirit doesn't need to cause men to speak in unknown tongues in order to get people to believe the gospel. He has the written Word of God which He uses in dealing with men. But the outstanding thing we want to notice is the fact that every man heard the message of the disciples in his own tongue. This was the result of the filling of the Spirit. Dear Christians, today we are dealing with the unsaved who are foreigners, so to speak, alienated from God and from things spiritual, and they cannot of their own selves understand the language of the Christians who speak to them of spiritual things. "The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God." But—and remember this—when you are yielded to God and filled with the Spirit the Spirit causes your language, your testimony, to be understood by the unsaved you deal with. And even as a great multitude were saved in that day due to the working of the Spirit through a few, so today, if we may see even a few among the preachers and among the laymen opening themselves completely to the Spirit of God and allowing Him to fill them, we too shall see many, many souls won to Christ, to the glory of our God.

Lord, take my life, and make it wholly Thine:
Fill my poor heart with Thy great love divine;
Take all my will, my passion, self and pride;
I now surrender: Lord, in me abide.

O Holy Ghost, revival comes from Thee:
Send a revival—start the work in me:
Thy Word declares Thou wilt supply our need:
For blessing now, O Lord, I humbly plead.

Christian Endeavor € Department €

RENEWED MISSIONARY EMPHASIS— WE MUST HAVE IT!

The Brethren National Christian Endeavor Union is meeting a great need among the young people of The Brethren Churches. For some years we have felt free to co-operate with the interdenominational societies, unions and state organizations. However, of recent years these interdenominational organizations have lost their appeal for our Brethren young people. The reason is quite evident. Though they still proclaim their motto, "For Christ and His Church," their conception of the person of Christ has been so reduced and their vision of the work of the church so obscured, that they have degenerated into nothing more than an organized social effort without just cause for existence. To the enlightened mind of our Christian young people, their appeals are empty and their efforts without purpose or effect. They have fully lost their missionary appeal and emphasis, without which Christian Endeavor is a useless thing.

The Brethren National Christian Endeavor Union was organized and is functioning to offset this sorrowful condition. District C. E. Unions are being enlivened in turn, local societies are beginning to see the wisdom of breaking relations with that which does not honor the Lord. There is a growing Brethren C. E. work over all our denomination. It is regaining the missionary emphasis which was all but lost. Strong district unions are being forged that shall do much in this field, examples of which are: Southern California, Western Pennsylvania, Southeast District, and others.

If these new efforts are to prosper and are to avoid the error from which they have so recently departed, they must place an ever-increasing emphasis upon the missionary activities of their societies. A careful reading of the aims of the missionary department section of the Standard Christian Endeavor Manual, obtainable from The Brethren Missionary Herald Co., will acquaint all missionary leaders of our aims and of their responsibilities. We urge all local and state leaders to know these aims and duties and to make sure they are being met in the sphere of your responsibility.

The work of the Brethren Student Life Volunteers has been united with the Brethren National Christian Endeavor Union. In reality, the B.S.L.V. has become the missionary department of the Union. It is hoped that there will be a B.S.L.V. Supt. in every local, state, and district society before the close of the present C. E. year. Though the C. E. has been active in the missionary field, supporting "C. E." Kliever and Ann Celeste, supplying hymn books and communion sets in home mission churches, and supporting the Jewish mission interests of our church; yet there is something important yet to be accomplished. Missionaries and ministers are needed if the fields, now white unto the harvest, are going to be reaped for the Lord. The B.S.L.V. is our answer to this challenge. Out of every society we want to band together those who have dedicated their lives for full time service. These will be the nucleus from which will come the soul winners of the local church, the ministers for the care of the future work of the Lord in the home land, and the missionaries who will carry the gospel unto the uttermost parts of the earth. In truth, the missionary work of the local and national C. E., under the leadership of those fully consecrated unto the Lord, becomes the vital force that makes C. E. a power unto God.

Therefore in our newly formed unions and societies, let us make certain that the missionary department receives its proper place and emphasis. Without this emphasis and spirit, we will die. Let us make C. E. a living force for Christ and the church.

—Kenneth Ashman.

Greetings through Jesus Christ our Redeemer from the Christian Endeavor of the First Brethren Church at Modesto, Calif.

The Lord has been blessing our Christian Endeavor so richly that we just can't thank Him enough. We now have three societies. We have an Adult, a Young People's and an Intermediate society. The Lord is blessing all. The young people go out each Sunday afternoon and pass out tracts from door to door and also on main streets down town.

We will start having street meetings each Sunday evening as soon as the weather permits. We held them last fall and were richly blessed. We also sang at a convalescent home. We have held several meetings at the Preston School of Industry at Ione (a school where boys are put who disobey the law). It is located about 60 miles from here. We were there last Jan. 11, at which time two boys accepted Christ. There are more of them that have accepted Him already and can give fine testimonies. We are so thankful that we had the privilege of going up there and witnessing for Christ before them.

The Lord will certainly open the doors for us if we will just humble ourselves. "A busy Christian is the happiest Christian." Isn't that statement true? I have found it very true in my life.

Yours in Him,

—Louis Cover, Pres. Y.P.C.E.

The Young People's C. E. of the First Brethren Church, Johnstown, Pa., held a loyalty contest during the evangelistic campaign conducted by Rev. C. H. Ashman of the Whittier, Calif. church from Feb. 2-22 inclusive. The penalty of the losing team was to treat the winners to a banquet. It proved to be a victory for the losing team as well as the winning team because of the achievements attained by each. Almost every member of both teams entered into the spirit of the contest with unusual interest and enthusiasm. The result of the contest speaks volumes.

Between courses, choruses were sung by the group. News flashes concerning individuals present interrupted the program.

At each cover there was a diploma-like song sheet, and favors were in the form of flags which served as name cards. All the decorations were patriotic.

Our guest speaker of the evening was Rev. Ord Gehman of the Vinco Grace Brethren Church. The theme of his message was: "Flee—worldly lusts; follow—closer to the Lord Jesus; fight—the good fight of faith." The program follows:

Duet—Ruby and Fern Ringler
Saxophone Solo—Bill Urban

News from Brethren

WAYNESBORO, PA.

We can never thank the Lord enough for the period of refreshing from Him our church here recently enjoyed under the leadership of Rev. J. L. Gingrich of Allentown, Pa. In January I had labored with Bro. Gingrich in an evangelistic effort in Allentown. Then he came to Waynesboro for a two weeks meeting, Feb. 16-Mar. 1.

We had good attendance in spite of the increasing handicaps of night and overtime work in the shops. For two weeks preceding the meeting, our members visited in the homes of many prospects, inviting them to the revival, and talking of Christ when opportunity afforded. We also made contacts through direct mail advertising and through the newspaper. During the meeting Bro. L. L. Grubb of our Hagerstown mission church had Bro. Gingrich speak over his regular Friday radio program, and advertised our meeting.

We found Bro. Gingrich an able and willing worker, preaching and hitting hard from the pulpit, and engaging in a strenuous campaign of visitation. We appreciated his two delegations from Allentown; the two delegations from Hagerstown, Md. with Rev. L. L. Grubb, their pastor; the group that came from Winchester, Va., with Rev. Paul Dick; and the presence of Rev. Stanley Hauser and family in the audience one evening.

We are sure the church has been strengthened and helped. The first Sunday morning almost the entire membership present came forward in reconsecration. At a high school C. E. meeting, the entire group of 21 young people stepped forward for rededication. The remaining visible results were 29 public decisions, of which 10 were first time confessions and 19 were reconsecrations. Seven have already been received into church membership through baptism. Brethren, pray for us.

—R. D. Crees, Pastor.

God works in a mysterious way His wonders to perform. Last year God called Rev. Robert Crees to conduct a two weeks revival in the First Brethren Church in Allentown, Pa., and our Lord won a decided victory. Simultaneously the writer was called to assist in directing the revival efforts in a two weeks meeting in the Brethren Church of Waynesboro, Pa. There too, we feel the Lord won the battle.

For two solid weeks (solid is the exact word to use), the pastor and evangelist labored together under the guidance of the Holy Spirit. Morning, afternoon, and even near midnight, this pair was out on the offensive. We knew the Lord and His Word could care for the defensive. We took the battle to the enemy. Never have I labored so hard to break down the devil's stronghold and line of defense. But we did break it down—thank God! There were no letups. There were no intermissions. We preached seven nights a week. Gradually the church adjusted herself. One by one the members were willing to resign to the Father's will. Souls were saved and saints were edified. Consequently we feel the church is ready to testify and witness more effectively to the glory of God.

We had the privilege to welcome many Brethren delegations with their pastors from quite a distance. They were an inspiration to the evangelist. The fellowship was sweet.

Much should be said, if space permitted, relative to the hospitality of those good people. Our headquarters were at the parsonage. Bro. and Sister Crees with their fine daughters did all they could to make our stay with them comfortable and pleasant. Many of our meals, when we were not invited out, were taken at the Dr. Hoover home. We felt free to ask them for what we wanted and we got it. That is Scriptural—"Ask and ye shall receive." Dr. Hoover even opened up his heart to allow me to buy some of his prize fat hens. Then was our heart glad when we saw those hens. Each home tried to excel in entertaining the pastor and evangelist. God will richly bless such a church. The spirit was wonderful.

The evangelist's wife was not forgotten. The Friendship Bible Class presented Mrs. Gingrich with a $10 grocery shower. God knew and told them we needed that, I am sure. The same class presented the evangelist with a new Parker pen with his name imprinted in gold. Parting from such expressed appreciation was difficult, but all good things must come to an end—except the sweet fellowship with our Lord . He abides for ever. We are told that those who love the Lord never see each other for the last time. The evangelist received one of the largest love offerings which was ever given to him for any meeting. Who was that person who said, "The cream has left and they live on skimmed milk?" Well, the testing of the pudding is the eating thereof. Please pass the pudding—or is it ice cream?

A final word of appreciation of the pastor is in order. Bob is one of the hardest working pastors that I know—unless it might be the writer. What a pair and what results the Lord witnessed! We praise Him and give Him all the glory. Yes, the pastor worked us both hard, but his heart softened and He gave us an hour off on Saturday for a bath. That was to pep us up for the added work of the Lord's day. Bro. Crees is greatly loved by all his flock—and why not? He is a faithful shepherd. This was the third time we worked together as pastor and evangelist, and we feel each time was better than the last.

Back home again Mar. 2, with a carload of meat bought at wholesale prices, eggs, groceries, cider (fresh), a great love offering, and an abiding consciousness that we have done our best—and angels could do no better. Loved ones were waiting for us on Wednesday night, and so the fellowship continues. Please pray for the Allentown work. Only prayer and a faithful presentation of His Word will defeat the devil and build up His church.

Fraternally yours in His matchless service,

—Jos. L. Gingrich.

FIRST BRETHREN CHURCH OF LOS ANGELES

We were delighted recently to see in the Herald pictures of the ground-breaking services for the new church at North Riverdale, Dayton, O. We congratulate the brethren there, and join with them in their prayers for a great testimony in this new location.

Not caring to enter into competition with Bro. Uphouse or Bro. Barnard as to the proper method of handling a shovel, or of our ability to lift a good load of earth, we are keeping all such pictures of our own similar services here on the Pacific coast. However, we are sharing with the readers of the Herald the architect's drawing of our new home. We do not expect you to be as enthusiastic about it as we are, but though you would like to see what we are doing. As we write this, the concrete is being poured for the foundation of the left wing, including the tower. We hope to be able also to include the right wing, which is the auditorium, and have a completed building by mid-summer. The auditorium and balcony will seat 400. The Sunday School plant will accommodate from 400 to 500. There will be a beautiful chapel, seating 70 or more. The Fellowship Hall is on the second floor, and runs 60 feet in length across the rear of the building. Our communion services will be held in this "Upper Room".

The building we are leaving is a fine structure built in 1920, during the early part of the ministry of Bro. N. W. Jennings. Since that time there has been a general exodus of our people from the community, while the negroes have moved in and now occupy the greater number of homes around the church. The property has been sold to the Second African Methodist Episcopal Church. We believe they have the finest church of any group of their denomination in the city, and are sure they will do a fine work there among their own race.

Our new location is in the south west section of the city. In fact it is within the city limits of Inglewood in a fine new district called Morningside Park. We have lots of encouragement from Christian people of other churches who are glad to see our church come into this district. With faithful work and earnest prayer for God's blessings, we should be able to reach several hundred pupils here for our Bible School and church program.

First Church has been blessed through the years with a faithful membership, many of whom have been willing to drive 10 to 15 miles each Lord's day to attend the services. The majority of our teachers and officers live out in the surrounding towns, and have been coming in for the church work for many years. We wish to testify to their faithfulness in this respect, and to say that we seriously doubt that there is another congregation in the brotherhood that can equal their good record. Our move will not help us a great deal in bringing the church closer to our own people, but it will be a great blessing in placing us in a missionary field where we can reach new persons for the Lord.

We held our ground-breaking services on Sunday, Mar. 15. A large crowd, including visitors from several neighboring churches, was present at that time. Bro. Elias White, pastor at South Gate, and Bro. and Sister Leo Polman of Fort Wayne, Ind., assisted in the service. Closing or farewell services were held in the old church on the same day. A very interesting feature of this closing day was the opening of the cornerstone, the contents of which were displayed during the evening church service. The day was closed with testimonies from the members and friends as to the blessings God had sent into their lives through the ministry of the church, and then a season of prayer for those who would follow us, and for ourselves as we undertake our work anew in another field. We are meeting in a very comfortable auditorium, built in connection with a large market, and this will serve us well until our new building is ready about July 1.

—W. A. Ogden.

NEWS BRIEFS FROM OUR WORKERS

The First Brethren Church of PHILADELPHIA, PA., announces that tent meetings are being planned again this summer at the beautiful site on which they hope soon to be able to construct the new church. The half acre tract is large enough to accommodate a tent, even when the new building is under construction.

The North Riverdale Brethren Church of DAYTON, O., has recently moved to a new location in a vacant store room on N. Main St.

Among the improvements which have been made at the GRAFTON, W. VA. church, where Bro. Stanley Hauser is supply pastor are the addition of a piano, a rug for the floor, a gas furnace, velvet curtains, curtains separating eight Sunday School rooms, the painting of the floor and of the interior of the church, the graining of the seats, and the purchase of a new parsonage.

The SAN DIEGO, CALIF. congregation is busy finishing the basement of their church. After this is complete, they are looking forward to doing some work on the outside.

As the two weeks' revival conducted by Bro. Wm Clough at the Third Brethren Church of PHILADELPHIA was nearing a close, 21 public decisions had been made. The meetings were well attended, with occasional delegations from other congregations. Upon Bro. Clough's return home, the prayer meeting group of his church in UNIONTOWN, PA., attempted to exceed their previous high record of 100 at prayer meeting in the following way: as many young people as adults present and as many adults as young people (40 each), plus half as many Juniors (20). (Their young people often outnumber the adults and the Juniors also have a good turn-out.) This 100, with the pastor's presence, would have passed the goal with 101, but a downpour of rain prevented their reaching the goal. Nevertheless, a good meeting was reported. Bro. Clough writes concerning his first Sunday after his return, "There was a wonderful crowd at the church last night. Four were saved, all adults. One man we had been praying for for five years." Bro. Clough requests prayer for the meetings which are now in progress in his church.

INVITATION TO N. RIVERDALE!

The erection of the church building in North Riverdale (Dayton), has progressed to the point of laying the cornerstone. This service will be conducted on Sunday, April 12, at 2:30 p. m. A WISE LAYMAN—

A layman at one of our mission churches said: "I have some money to put into this new church. If I don't give it to God while I have it, who knows but what some new taxes, or some dictator, or some other kind of national seizure or distress, will come along and take it. I would rather have it working for God. If I can't have it, I would rather that God would have it for His church." How well we recall a man who is a member of The Brethren Church. It was during the depression, and he had just lost several thousand dollars through a bank failure. Said he, "If I just had that bunch of money I lost, I would give you half of it." I asked him, "If you felt that way about it, why didn't you give it when you had it? Giving God the money you held till you lost it isn't worth much in the scales of God." There is no use in holding back life today, for war may take it. No use holding back money and property, for the powers that be may seize it. Give both, and live grandly for Christ! God give us more men like Barnabas, who sold all he had and gave to the work of the gospel, and then laid down his own life on the altar with it. Little wonder the early church made a great light in the world, for its blaze was fed with the sacrifices of true Christians who gave their all for Christ.

"What shall it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" (Mark 8:36).

THE REAL CAUSE OF THE WAR—

How often the question is asked among groups, "What is the real cause of Germany's attitude? What has made her so warlike for so long?" It is not the form of government that has made the German people warlike and domineering. Under the kaiser, Germany was a monarchy. It was a most generous life that the kaiser gave to his people. Yet under the kaiser, Germany attacked Serbia and set the world on fire. She was the aggressor. She has never fought on her own soil. The world was drenched in blood 28 years ago as a result of the ambitions of the German warlords. Brought to their knees then, they did not change: but under the most difficult circumstances built up another war machine, which by all means is the most hellish thing the world has ever seen. Again the entire world has learned war from Germany and is being drenched in rivers of blood. Germany is not now under a monarch, but under a dictator who has completely socialized the nation. The change of the form of government has not changed the spirit of the nation. Why should these people have this fiery, unquenchable spirit of world domination; that they are the world's superiors; that the rest of the world should realize this and submit to whatever they should desire to do to them?

The answer will be found in the teaching of the hell-born idea of evolution. For the last two generations German peoples have been nurtured on the godless evolutionary teachings of Karl Marx and Prof. Neitsche. They have been schooled constantly in the ideas that war is a necessary part of the course to the ideal world, and that the German peoples are destined by fate to rule the world. To this end no bowing to sympathy for those crushed dare be entertained. As Goebels, Nazi propaganda minister recently declared, "Christianity stands for love, mercy, sympathy and peace. Therefore we are against Christianity." In other words, might is right, and to be strong entitles one to the world. Morality, justice, consideration for the weaker, nor any other evidence of concern for others are allowed. In Hitler's famous speech recently delivered, he revealed the very heart and foundation of all his bloody and tyrannous way when he said, "It is the essence of life that again and again the fittest will survive, and what is ripe for death should not be preserved." Therefore to crush the weak is virtuous, to rob the helpless is good, to glut on the milk of babes is the glory of the conqueror, and to rape conquered women and make slaves of their men enhances the splendor of the victor. What can be expected of a nation that has been converted to such hell-born teachings? The shades of Antichrist are casting their shadows across the world already. And we recall that this is the land that under Martin Luther led the great Reformation, that brought about the mightiest era of world enlightenment through the free preaching of the gospel of Christ that mankind has ever known. Luther, under God, led the great deliverance from the tyranny and the crimes of the Roman heirarchy against the people of God; but today we have to face a world-wide system of Christ-hate a thousand times more vicious and deadly than Rome ever was, from which the only escape is in the return of our glorious Christ, the Son of God, King of kings, Who will break these tyrants "with a rod of iron, and dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel."

But it was back in the days when German teachers departed from the gospel of Christ, and turned to the materialism of evolution, that this present world holocaust began. For years those who warned of the dangers of evolution were scoffed at and ridiculed in America, as was the great patriot William Jennings Bryan who died in his greatest battle against it. Today, we see the harvest of such teaching in Germany. It yet remains to be seen what it has accomplished in America.

"As we said before, so say I now again, If any man preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed" (Gal. 1:9).

"IF SATAN CAST OUT SATAN"—

When Jesus gave His wonderful message on the nature of the unpardonable sin in Matt. 12, He said, "A house divided against itself cannot stand." If ever there were two princes in the house of Satan, Hitler and Stalin are the men. Both of them are dead set against Jesus Christ and all His people, and have crushed the Christian church wherever they hold sway.

Now we see these two powerful princes slashing away at each other's throats. It certainly appears that Satan is casting out Satan, and as Jesus asked, "How then can his kingdom stand?" We are aware of the fact that the Scriptures teach us in Ezek. 38 and Dan. 11, the world will be divided into four great armed camps, before the Battle of Armageddon. All of these will be under anti-Christian leaders. They will fight each other to the death. "There is no peace, saith my God to the wicked" (Isa. 57:21). Satan will surely have a divided house before the end time. The evil mind cannot be controlled even by the devil. He cannot keep his own house in peace. It is also just as true that neither will his house stand. The house of Satan is flourishing today, but its collapse is very near. Praise His dear name, Our Lord is about ready to "take over." Satan's house will fall apart at Armageddon, and then, "Jesus shall reign where'er the sun doth His successive journeys run."

IF STALIN CONQUERS—THEN WHAT?

Since our nation and Britain have, in their extremity, turned to Russia for help in their struggle against Hitler, many thoughtful American minds are asking, "What then?" Hitler has won all the rounds up to now. But the struggle is not over. It is likely just beginning. Russia is far from overwhelmed. She has endless resources even if she should lose Moscow, Leningrad, all the western wheat fields, and the industrial sections of the Donets Basin.

If this winter should prove Hitler's military undoing, and the Russians begin to overwhelm him (which is very possible, for he evidently has not prepared his armies for a winter in Russia), and the Russian bear sweeps on to the Rhine as H. G. Wells prophesied several years ago, if Stalin's hordes overrun Europe as mighty conquerors, then what? That is something to think about. What will it mean for Europe? What will it mean for England, and America? Will Europe fare better under Stalin than Hitler? What will a Communistic victory mean for the principles of democracy, "the way of life," we have known?

Then democracy, as England and America have known it, with full liberties of speech, press, enterprise, assembly, self-government and worship of Christ, will have to cope with a conquering dictatorship that has denied them all. Communism will then be recognized as a mightier force than the democracies, for it was able to stem the tide of Facism which they seemed unable to do. With thousands of American college professors and government officials already devoted to communistic principals, it is not hard to foresee the test that "our way of life" will face if Hitler is conquered.

How will the Christian faith have to battle for its life then against the power of Russia and Russian philosophy? Does any sober person for a moment feel that Stalin hordes will then withdraw from the avowed plan to Sovietize the world? With as many friends as Communism has in influential circles in this land, does it seem possible that America could withdraw her hand of friendship from God? Will America then be able to prevent the spread of the philosophy which slaughtered millions of Christians in Russia, destroyed thousands of churches and shouted, "Down with the church—down with the Bible, down with Christ, down with God?" Our democracies have made common cause with Russia. How can we release ourselves when the time comes—if it comes. Will we be like the fellow who grabbed a handful of hair protruding from the top of a hollow trunk and at once found it to be the tail of a bear? He heard a growl from inside the stump and near the ground. The bear's teeth were reaching for his shin. If he let go, the bear would grab him, and he couldn't hold on forever, so he began to yell, "Somebody come help me let go of this bear." God save America from falling into the embrace of the Communistic bear that would crush the Christian church of America. We wonder what it may cost America to get the military help of the Russian Bear.

How precarious may yet be the position of the Christian church is known only to God. May we make the most of our privileges while we can.

Is Your Church On His List?

Brother Elias Zimmerman, our missionary to the Jews in Los Angeles, has consented to make another tour of the middle western and eastern churches this summer. So many requests have come in from those who had him last year and those who were unable to have him in the past summer that he feels led of the Lord to attempt this trip in spite of conditions that prevail due to the war. This will likely be the last trip however, for the duration.

Letters have been sent out to all pastors; but for such churches as have no pastors right now, send a card at once to REV. ELIAS ZIMMERMAN, 2914 COLORADO BLVD., LOS ANGELES, CALIF. Be sure and state what date will be most acceptable for your church. He will try to reach you as close to such time as he can.

But by all means do not fail to hear the story of the wonderful work God is now doing through our Los Angeles mission in the saving of Jewish young men.

He will start on this trip in May, and it will be essential that all requests reach him before he starts.

PEACE

We Christians know the Master cares
And understands our earnest prayers.
Although discouragements come our way,
We know they cannot always stay.
Our faith in Christ has made us whole;
His precious blood has saved our soul;
We weary of this world of toil.
Planted in Christ, the fertile soil,
Brings peace that only He can give—
Eternal peace that e'er will live.

Across the Nation - - WITH OUR SECRETARY

Glendale—

The trip to San Diego was all too short for such a wonderful field. But our time was limited and we had to start a meeting in Glendale on the night of Sunday, Feb. 22nd. We found a good crowd out for the first service, and a good interest. Several rededicated themselves the first night. Bro. Richardson had done mighty good work in preparing for the meetings through prayer and advertising.

The music during these services was simply superb. No campaign could have had finer. The three Gates sisters made a wonderful team of singers and musicians. Their instruments were piano, Marimba, Xylophone, Guitar, Mandolin and Piccolo. They sing as a trio, as a duet, or when another is added, as a quartet. Their fine spiritual life and testimony for Christ was a real contribution to the meeting. They were completely lacking in a professional spirit or manner. Their whole impression was that they sought to glorify their Lord through the talent they had received of Him. We never expect to have finer musical support in any meeting anywhere. We shall never forget them.

On the second night of the meeting, a Japanese submarine shelled the coast of Santa Barbara, and on the next night we had the great air raid scare with a five hour blackout. What that did to our attendance was not hard to imagine. Parents who could not bring their children felt that they could not risk leaving them at home if a blackout came, which might prevent them for hours in getting home. The children would be left at home in utter darkness. Others had long distances to come, and in case of blackout they would have to remain in the church or by the side of the highway till the "all clear" sounded, no matter how long it lasted. Ordinarily that house would have been jammed to the doors night after night. It was just one more of those things that hinder the gospel in these difficult days.

Within the Glendale congregation are some mighty fine laymen, who very evidently will become most influential in our Brethren Churches. Bro. Richardson is standing out for a real life of separation from the world, and The Brethren Church is known in this city for its position. So many churches in this city that once stood for the fundamentals of the faith have gone to pieces or compromised with the truth and the world, that the work is hard for those who preach the real gospel. Glendale is now an independent church, and will make real strides as soon as they get their new program in operation.

RIGHT: Rev. and Mrs. Rambo.

It was a real pleasure to fellowship with this pastor and people once more. The last time we worked with Bro. Richardson was in Tracy. This made the third meeting we have held in Glendale. May our Father God abundantly bless this people and the true testimony they are bearing in this needy place. Our home was with Brother and Sister Jim Martin during the meetings, and a more pleasant place to stay could not be asked.

Modesto Ready to Build—

After the close of the Glendale meeting we drove to Modesto for one week of meetings. Things have surely taken on a wonderful spirit in this field. Brother and Sister Rambo are doing a wonderful work under God. We have seldom observed a better spirit of unity and optimism among a people in a new field. During the last few months the membership has been more than doubled, and some very fine people have joined hands and hearts with this work to establish a strong testimony for Jesus Christ there. The strong stand that Bro. Rambo has taken for the gospel of grace has brought real believing Christians to his services. Legalism, the social gospel, and formalism are soon forsaken by those who know what it means to be born again. In every community there are some souls who have had a real experience with the Lord and are not satisfied with forms and observances. Many of these are coming into his work, and also there are unsaved men and women coming to the meetings. The community is beginning to feel that here is one real group of Christians who really believe the Bible and who love lost souls.

There is a most unusual spirit of optimism among the folks, and they are united and eager to enter into a building program at once. During the time we were there we did not hear one word of criticism, nor one note of discouragement. God is wonderfully blessing these people. They have found the key to His blessing, and that is to not live for themselves. With all the heavy costs of purchasing their lots and building their church ahead of them, they gave over $400 in their Thanksgiving offering in order that others might have the gospel. They have put others first. Little wonder then that when they came to seeking a site for their new church home, the Lord gave them the choicest of all in a section where many other churches had sought to enter without success. In no other place have we been more conscious of the direct working of the Spirit of God in locating a new church than here. The place where the new Modesto church will likely be located is the beautiful La Loma district, where hundreds of homes have been erected during the last couple of years. On the last day of our meetings there, many of the members and friends drove out to the grounds and we had a time of prayer and dedication that Sunday afternoon. The enthusiasm was so great that expressions were freely made on every side that we should begin to build at once. As a group they all heartily approved of the site and were confident that the finances would be provided not only for the ground but also for a building.

Already this new field has yielded a preacher of the gospel. Bro. Marvin Goodman, who has recently come into our work, has yielded his life to preach the gospel. He has already sold his home and is disposing of other property, and plans to resign his position and enter Grace seminary this fall. We believe that he will make a fine addition to our Brethren ministry. At a time like the present when we need strong men to work the new fields God is giving us, this is most welcome word.

The meetings were not designed as a soul-winning effort first of all, for they were too short. The purpose was to encourage and strengthen the members of the congregation. This they seemed to accomplish, for which we praise God. As a result there will undoubtedly be a new Brethren church standing in Modesto before very long.

Bro. Ralph Rambo is already greatly loved by the people. They have every confidence in his ability to lead them on to real victories for Christ. Scores of people who are not yet members of the church are attending and finding blessing in the services. Our home was with Brother and Sister Rambo. She is not only a blessing to the congregation, but a mighty fine hostess. We can testify to that. But God is blessing them both in His service in Modesto.

Modesto is a fine, growing city in Central California and is a most promising field to be taken for the whole gospel. May the hand of our Father God be upon them for good. There will be many good reports from Modesto during the next few years.

San Jose Next?

While at Modesto, Bro. Rambo went with us to this fine city of about 75,000 people to look it over for a new field for The Brethren Church. This was the home town of the secretary of the Council when he was a mere lad. But the town has doubled its size about four times since those days. Bro. Rambo lived in this town for a year and a half just before entering Grace Seminary, and learned to know many fine people who believe the Word and who long for a church that really preaches the whole gospel. We were privileged to meet some of them that day. We would have met more of them had it not been that one of the worst wind and rain storms we ever saw raged at us all day long. Nevertheless we stuck to it and looked over some wonderful sections of the city, where there are hundreds of homes with no church work at all. We returned by way of Sunol, where the sister of the secretary lives, to enjoy an exquisite meal in her lovely home.

Tracy, California—

Leaving Sunol, we drove to Tracy for one service. We wanted to see the congregation and fellowship with them once again. However, the rain kept pouring down, and a very small attendance was had which was not unexpected. We had a real supper with Brother and Sister Tom Hammers while the rain and wind played tattoo on the windows. We pray that soon there shall come a real awakening in this city and the harvest that we have prayed for so long in Tracy shall come.

New Bus for Kentucky—

The old bus that has served our Kentucky field for many faithful years has at last gone to pieces. It did well and was a real factor in establishing our new field at Clayhole. Now it has become necessary to obtain another. We have been without a bus at all for several months waiting for a bus to buy, and for money to buy it with. Through the generosity of our National Sisterhood and Brother and Sister Irvin W. Masters of Glendale, and the faithful little group at Clayhole, a new bus (that is a new second hand bus) is now being purchased for that field. This will make it possible for many from a distance to get to the meetings now. The secretary plans to hold a campaign there in a few weeks, and the bus will then be very necessary for reaching the people. We praise God for this answer to prayer.

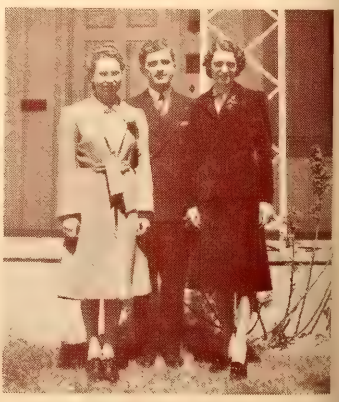
Hagerstown Forging Right Ahead—

We are rejoicing over the answer to prayer for this new field. At a time when it appears that loans for churches are about to be curtailed by the government, and after so long in waiting, our Hagerstown people have obtained the money they need from a bank just outside the city of Hagerstown. The building is going right ahead at rapid pace, and we hope to dedicate this new structure to Jesus Christ in 90 days or less. Bro. Grubb has labored tirelessly with great faith and courage to lead his people through these trying days. God has a way out for those who believe in praying and working at the same time. Bro. Grubb labors right along with his men at every point where he is needed. This new church is simply another evidence of our faith in Jesus Christ, erected at a time when most people are losing their faith entirely. Pray for this pastor and people.

Ernest Pine Accepts Chaplaincy in U. S. Army—

The first of our Brethren preachers to accept service with the United States forces is Bro. Ernest Pine. He has been pastor in Juniata, Pa., for several years, but has now felt led into this new and surely needy field of bringing Christ and comfort to the hearts of boys far from home and its good influences. May our brother be the succourer of many a lad who will never see home again. Pray for Bro. Pine that he may be a real blessing to thousands of army men.

North Riverdale's Building Going Up—



After innumerable delays due to the inability of finding funds with which to go ahead, our new North Riverdale congregation is now building their church with speed.

North Hollywood Ready to Build—

No, we are not going into the movies by any means. This field is not a movie colony at all. It is made up of folks as common as any folks in any community. They work in airplane factories, shipyards, and almost every other kind of work. This section of Los Angeles has simply sprung up almost overnight with thousands of homes of the stable class of people. We already have lots purchased in a fine section of the territory and on a good corner. Brother J. R. Dunn advanced the money for the lots, which cost $2500. We hardly know what we would do without some of our fine laymen who come to the help of our mission boards when they have opportunities and no money to care for them The local District Mission Board holds the deed. But this new group already have their plans drawn for their building and they have much of the material purchased and on hand ready for erection. We may expect a new church here within 90 days unless some unforeseen obstacle develops. Remember these people in prayer.

Narrows, Virginia—

This town is the site of a new artificial silk plant of huge proportions. Two years ago in company with Bro. Bernard Schneider and Bro. Herman Koontz, we drove down to look the prospects over. The foundations were then being laid. Today they have 2,700 men in their employ. This means about 2,000 new families already; and it is but a start of the real plant to be completed. Many of our people from other places where there are silk mills are moving to Narrows. They have been writing us and asking for a Brethren Church. We have asked Bro. Herman Koontz to go down and start a Bible class there for the present if possible. This is the way the Covington church was started. Pray for Bro. Koontz and all of us, that we may not lag behind our Lord in these wonderful opportunities He is heaping upon us in these tremendous days as the end of the age nears.

If Hitler Wins

By CONARD SANDY, pastor, Third Brethren Church, Los Angeles

This timely and striking article from Bro. Conard Sandy will be followed in our next month's Home Mission issue with a complementary article on "If Stalin wins." Don't miss it.—Editor.

According to the Apostle Paul (1 Cor. 10:32), there are only three groups of people in all the world: the Jews, the Gentiles, and the church of God or the Christian. The rule of Hitler would destroy, in as far as humanly possible, two of these groups; and then would limit the activities of the other—the Gentiles—to bring about his ends and purposes. Some of these—those having pure Aryan blood—would rule with him and be the favored class, while all the rest would do service to him and his kind.

But why does Hitler so oppose the Jews and the Christians? One of the main reasons is that both of these groups can never worship a mere man. The Jews were taught by God never to have any other god before them nor to bow down to any but the true God, known to them as Jehovah (Ex. 20:1-7; Duet. 6). The same teaching continues for the Christians. They have but one God, Who is revealed to them in the Person of the Lord Jesus Christ, and Who alone is to be worshipped as God and Lord (Jn. 14:1-11; 20:24-29).

WHAT WILL HAPPEN TO THE JEWS

God's chosen nation? We would like to answer this with our own experience in the city of Vienna, formerly the capitol of Austria, now subjected to the rule of Nazism. We arrived in this city late at night, Sunday, Aug. 13, 1939, not so long after Hitler had taken over this country, and just 19 days before the present war began in earnest. The next morning we wanted to get a view of the city as quickly as possible. So we joined a sight-seeing party that was to tour the city under competent guides. There were several buses filled with tourists, each one having a guide in it who described the city and the important places as we travelled. We were shown the music-halls, the theaters, the palaces of the kings and emperors of other days, the places where Hitler had stood when he made certain speeches in the city, the former homes and musicians, who had lived there and made the city famous as a music center; and we had been to see the "Blue Danube." Our guide, a middle aged lady, evidently a long time resident of the city, had taken much pride in showing us these things in historic old Vienna.

At last, as we were nearing the end of the tour, we turned from the main thorough-fare into a by-street. What a contrast met our eyes! The street was littered with old papers, dirt was everywhere in abundance; the doors of the dingy little shops were locked, shades were drawn before, doors of some of the houses were standing open, with bits of broken furniture scattered about, giving evidence that the whole section had been deserted in double-quick time. After having gone several blocks through this sort of thing, the guide said very calmly, just as she had described everything else to us: "This was the Jewish section of the city." That is all she said; but she spoke volumes in those few words to those of us who remembered reading of some of the terrible things that had happened to the Jews in Germany and then in Austria when Hitler took that country under his "protective" control.

And don't forget, that is just the thing that will happen in any other part of the world, even here in America, if Hitler wins this war. The Jews will be persecuted more than at any time in previous history. America, awake! for the Trojan horse of Anti-semitism is already within our gates in readiness to be Hitler's ally at the slightest instigation. Anyone who, in anyway, gives any help to Jewish-hatred is but helping Hitler win.

If Hitler wins,

WHAT WILL HAPPEN TO THE CHURCH?

It may be that the winning of the war by Hitler would set the stage for the sudden and glorious return of the Lord Jesus for His bride, the church. But if it is not the time for the rapture of the Church, then what will happen? We shudder to think of the possibilities involved in this. The persecutions under Nero and Domitian will be as child's play in comparison to what will follow. Christians will again take to the catacombs as a place of worship and even for homes. Believers will be sought out as abnoxious pests to be destroyed. Death, which means entrance into the presence of the Lord, would be far better, for the trials that will follow for the church are unimaginable.

Already Nazism has drawn up some 30 points for their new order of law and life. We quote but three of them here:

> "13. The National Reich Church demands the immediate cessation of the printing of the Bible, as well as its dissemination, throughout the Reich and colonies. All Sunday papers with any religious content also shall be suppressed.
> "18. The National Reich Church will remove from the altars of all churches, the Bible, the cross and religious subjects.
> "19. In their place will be set that which must be venerated by the German people and is therefore our most saintly book, Mein Kampf, and to the left of this a sword."

This kind of a program is as dangerous as the Russian doctrine, which would rule out all religion. This Nazi philosophy would substitute a false, man-made, Satanic-born religion and compel all to accept it or receive the consequences. To remain true then will mean that the tribe of the Niemollers will be greatly increased. Christians, when caught, will be put to death, or what is worse, be put into concentration camps or starved.

Pastor Niemoller's last sermon was preached from the text: "We must obey God rather than man." Immediately he was arrested and accused of "endangering the peace, misuse of the pulpit, and incitement to disregard the laws of the German government." Now, concerning this incident Sir. N. Henderson reported: "Herr Hitler is in a highly nervous and excitable state. I gathered the impression during my conversation with him on Mar. 3, that he is dissatisfied with the result of the Niemoller trial. The man, he declared, was a traitor" A traitor to what or whom? Just read the text of his last sermon again and then read Rev. 13 and you have your answer. The stage is set, and will be more ready should Hitler win, for the appearance of the Man of Sin, whose blasphemous tongue will outdo Hitler's. The world, according to Hitler, is too small for God and Hitler.

If Hitler wins, then, that is what we will get. Freedom of press, freedom of speech, freedom of study, freedom of worship are all gone. The church, the Bible, the home, the Christian standard of morality, the rights of women, and the honor of men will all go. The Holy Spirit has told those who will believe what He has said just why this will be (2 Tim. 3:1-6). Germany has been the hotbed of unbelief under the cloak of "higher criticism." This is the result, at least in part, of that kind of teaching. And now America is overrun with the same kind of teaching, known to us as Modernism or Liberalism. But having considered what it has done to Germany, don't you see the urgency for our being done with it here in this country?

Christian, yield yourself and your all to Christ to be used in His service in these days. Unbeliever, turn to Christ for salvation before these things shall come to pass. Bow willingly to Christ before you must bow to another.

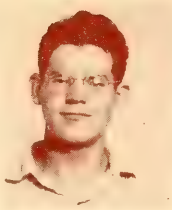
Wanted . . . Workers



God never goes to the lazy or the idle when He needs men for His service. When God wants a worker, He calls a worker. When He has work to be done, He goes to those who are already at work. When God wants a great servant He calls a busy man. Scripture and history attest this truth.

Moses was busy with his flock at Horeb.
Gideon was busy threshing wheat by the wine-press.
Saul was busy searching for his father's lost beasts.
David was busy caring for his father's sheep.
Elisha was busy plowing with twelve yoke of oxen.
Nehemiah was busy bearing the king's wine cup.
Amos was busy following the flock.
Peter and Andrew were busy casting a net into the sea.
James and John were busy mending their nets.
Matthew was busy collecting customs.
Saul was busy persecuting the friends of Jesus.
William Carey was busy mending and making shoes.

My Testimony

By
JESSIE FUGATE

No one at home was a Christian until Oct. 26, 1941, when I gave my heart to Jesus. They all laughed at me. Before I became a Christian something would tell me not to go to church, and something would tell me to go to church. I continued to go to the Clayhole Brethren Church. It was there that I gave my heart to Jesus Christ. I am thankful that the Lord saved me. If others would take the path I did, their days on earth would be brighter to them. I thank the Lord for saving me from going to a Christless grave.

—Jessie Fugate.

To The Reader:

This boy's life has been a real living testimony since Oct. 26, 1941. His life has been completely changed. Since Jessie has accepted Christ, his older brother has started in to church. Our young people started out to read the Bible through in 1942. Roy (Jessie's brother) has already finished it. He is here for almost every service. We are praying that Roy will soon take the stand that Jessie has.

"If Any Man Sin"

I John 2:1

By HOMER A. KENT

Fellowship is one of the great words of the First Epistle of John. Fellowship with God is possible for men through our Lord Jesus Christ. The only thing that can break this fellowship, when once it has been established, is sin. No wonder, therefore, that the inspired apostle, in his writing on the subject of Christian fellowhip, has much to say about sin. In the passage before us we have presented the subject of sin in its relation to the child of God. "My little children, these things write I unto you, that ye sin not. And if any man sin, we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous." In considering this passage, note first:

The Persons Concerned: "My little children."

The words translated "little children" are one word in the Greek, and might better be translated "children" without reference to age or size, although it is certainly true that in the sight of God every Christian is as a little child. The address here then is to all the born-again believers in Christ. The mesage of the text concerning sin is for them. John is not now concerned with the world of unbelievers. He has a message for the household of faith in the matter of their relationship to sin. In other places it is made clear what the man outside of Christ should do in view of his transgression. He must accept the Savior in order that His blood may take away its guilt and pollution. But what about the believer when he sins? That is the concern of the passage before us. "My little children"—that includes you and me as those who belong to the Lord. This message is for us. In the next place observe:

The Purpose Revealed for the writing of this message.

It is "that ye sin not." The things of this Epistle were written in order to keep the children of God from sinning. God expects those who have been saved by His grace to live in separation from sin. They are born "from above," partakers of a new nature, and therefore ought to live a heavenly life. In 3:9 we read, "Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin." That is, the true child of God does not continue to live in the practice of unrighteousness. Sinning is not the habit of his life. Sinless perfection is not taught in this passage, else it would contradict other passages in this same Epistle which make provision for the sins of the saints. Neither is the doctrine of perfectionism taught anywhere in the Word. While in this life, the children of God still have the old nature. It is not eradicated from their being. However, the new nature is able to obtain the victory over sin if it is properly fed by prayer, the Word, and a careful walk with God.

May God help us to see the force of these words, "These things write I unto you that ye sin not." If God has seen fit to give us an inspired letter like this for the express purpose that we may not sin, it must be tremendously important that we keep ourselves from iniquity. In these days when the world is aflame with hatred, when moral standards are steadily moving downward, when in so many instances the church is compromising with worldly influences, there is an increasing need for a God-given sensitiveness to sin. It is so easy to go along with the tide in thinking and conduct. But the will of God for His children is "that ye sin not."

Sin in the believer's life breaks his fellowship with God. It saps his spiritual power and makes his witness ineffective. "If we say that we have fellowship with Him, and walk in darkness, we lie and do not the truth" (1 Jn. 1:6). This is the tragedy in the lives of so many Christians today. They are saved. They belong to Christ through faith in His blood. But their fellowship is broken because of some permitted sin, some unholy alliance, some selfish rebellion. This link of fellowship with God is very delicate and may be easily snapped. One unholy action may break it, one hour given over to foolishnes or levity may sever it. But, thank God, broken fellowship can be restored —but more of this later. We come now to our third consideration, namely:

The Provision Made for Believers When They Sin.

This provision may be summarized in these words of our text, "And if any man sin, we have an Advocate with the Father."

What happens if the child of God sins? Some folks think that when the believer sins he loses his salvation, and that it is not restored until he has repented and confessed his failures to the Lord. If this were the truth, it would rob the soul of all possibility of assurance of salvation. because in thought, word and deed even believers are so prone to falter and fail. This passage teaches no such thing. It does teach, however, that when the child of God sins his Advocate, his Attorney, his Lawyer undertakes for him.

Very likely as soon as the believer sins, the great adversary of the souls of men, which is the devil, appears before God the Father and seeks to prosecute the sinner. He says, "There is one of your Christians. See how he has brought shame upon Thy name. What a miserable representative of Thyself he is!" Then it is that our Advocate, the Lord Jesus Christ, our Defending Attorney, steps forward and shows to the Father the > "Five bleeding wounds he bears,

> Received on Calvary;
> They pour effectual prayers,
> They strongly plead for me.
> Forgive, forgive, they ever cry,
> Nor let that ransomed sinner die."

And thus the atonement of Christ avails to repel every accusation of the evil one. He is the propitiation for our sins.

Do you remember the time when you miserably failed your Lord—That time when you shamefully misrepresented the One whom you profess to serve? What happened then? Did the Lord immediately cast you off? Did He take away your salvation? Did He respond to the accusations of the adversary by severing you from His body? No. This is not the manner of His grace. Your Advocate interceded for you then. He stood for you in heaven's court by reminding the Father that you belonged to Him, and that you had been bought and paid for by His own precious blood, and said, "My Father, this too, was included in the debt I paid at Calvary." "He ever liveth to make intercession for them" (Heb. 7:25) who are the heirs of salvation.

And then, as the Spirit of God spoke to your heart because of your sin, with tears of contrition you sought His presence as David and Peter did after they had sinned. You availed yourself of the privilege and responsibility revealed in I Jn. 1:9, "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness."

Thus two things are especially important to observe on the part of the sinning believer. First, there is the Advocacy of Christ. This maintains his relationship as a child of God. Were it not for this continual advocacy, our condition would be hopeless. But because of it the believer's assurance is possible. Second, there is the confession of sin to God. No sooner has a believer sinned than he ought to seek the throne of grace in order that broken fellowship may be restored. If we only knew how God desires our unbroken fellowship, surely we would seek more faithfully to live apart even from the appearance of evil.

NEWS BRIEFS From Our Workers

In the first mail to reach the Herald office after the foreign missionary offering was taken was the following report, sent in by Bro. Wm. Schaffer, pastor of the Bethel Brethren Church at Berne, Ind. It read as follows:

"Resurrection Day, 1942. This is red letter day for us! The first time we passed the offering plates for our foreign mission offering the Finance Committee counted $1726.75 in cash. There were some pledges and some offerings incomplete. Is it any wonder we were prompted to sing, "Praise God from Whom All Blessings Flow?" This offering was taken during the Sunday School hour. After we had that report, we took up an offering for our own expenses. Not bad for a little church out in the corn fields!

"Here they won't let a fellow even get started on an Easter Sermon before they take the offering, they take it during Sunday School and just like an ordinary offering. It will take us a long time to get over this pleasing shock. May the Lord have all the glory!"

From Winchester, Va., comes this news: "Recently, the Winchester School of the Bible, which meets in the First Brethren Church weekly, concluded a two-day Bible Conference with Rev. A. L. Lynn of Johnstown, Pa., as the speaker. A large crowd was on hand each evening to hear the inspiring mesages of Rev. Lynn. The Bible Conference was sponsored by the School of the Bible and was a real spiritual feast from beginning to end. The school is looking forward to having Bro. Lynn back sometime.

The School of the Bible is about to bring its sessions to a close after a highly successful year. Rev. Herman Centz has been with us also for a two day Jewish Bible Conference. This year there will be approximately 43 who will receive certificates as a result of being present 80% of the time in the school. Many outside folks have supported our work and we can truly say the Lord has been good to us."

Bro. Chas. W. Mayes, pastor at Ashland, O., writes "West Tenth Street Brethren Church has just closed the greatest single week of revival in its history with Rev. John Hamilton Squires as the evangelist. The messages, centering around the truths of the victorious life, were used of God to awaken our entire congregation. There were over 40 decisions, and an attendance Easter morning of 365 with an offering for the week of over $400." Bro. Mayes adds, "Our attendance this Easter was less than last, but we did not have the once-a-year visitors we had last year."

The young people's class of the Second Brethren Church of Los Angeles, Calif., recently went in a body to conduct both morning and evening services at the Community Church at Lake Elsinor.

Calvary, the Revelation of God's Love

By JOSEPH L. GINGRICH, pastor, Allentown, Pa.

"And when they were come to the place, which is called Calvary, there they crucified Him, and the malefactors, one on the right hand, and the other on the left" (Lk. 23:33. Calvary's reality is conclusive proof of God's love. This mighty act is wonderful to contemplate. It is beyond comprehension; it is beyond expression. Hear John as he said, "Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the children of God; and such we are." "Behold, now are we the children of God, and it is not yet made manifest what we shall be. We know that, if He shall be manifested, we shall be like Him" I Jn. 3:1-2. If you would grasp a clear view of God's love for lost humanity, and appreciate His unchanging interest in you personally, you have only to stand on the shore of the measureless love of the great God revealed on Calvary.

"God is love." He has shown that love in the gift of His Son. Love is kind, patient and expressive. "Love never faileth." It stretches from eternity to eternity. If you have ever doubted God's love, His mercy and willingness to forgive your sin and to impart divine grace sufficient for daily need, turn your eyes away from self and sin, away from the world toward Calvary. We must believe that God's love plus divine grace effects our salvation. Meditating upon the wonders of Calvary will inspire one to join in eternal praise with the poet who said,

"I am so wondrously saved from sin,
Jesus so sweetly abides within,
There at the cross where He took me in,
Glory to His name."

On the mount, in the presence of the multitude, before He went to Calvary, He declared that not one jot or tittle should pass from the law till all things should be accomplished. He pointed forward to the utmost verge of man's horizon, and gave assurance that until that time is reached the law will still be authoritative. It was not His mission to change or abrogate the precepts of Jehovah. Jesus Christ, by divine appointment, became the fulfillment of the law and became our Substitute.

Christ made up our lack. The great God could not nullify His holy and perfect law; but He could and did give His dear Son to vindicate the just claims and pay the penalty for man's sin in violating the commandment of God. The law of God is not changeable; it is based upon the principle of love. All must admit that the just claims of God's holy law have not been met by man. The law demands a holy life, a perfect character; and these, man could not offer. But thank God, "What the law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh, God sending His Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin, condemned sin in the flesh: that the righteousnes of the law might be fulfilled in us, who walk not after the flesh but after the Spirit" (Rom. 8:3-4). Gladstone is reported to have said that some people believe "that there is nothing in God to fear or nothing in sin to worry about." But the truth is that sin is tragic, it is poison, it is paralyzing, it is demoralizing, it is ruinous, it separates the sinner from God. Sin is responsible for every pang of sorrow, for every tear of grief, every anguish of soul. "All unrighteousness is sin." Sin results in disobedience to God's holy and pure laws. Sin is a terrible thing, it is hateful and heinous. Be sure of one thing, God must deal with sin and the sinner, for "the wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ Our Lord" (Rom. 6:23). On the cross of Calvary a transaction of tremendous importance occurred. God in His infinite love and justice transferred our sins upon His Son. The Son died and we are the beneficiaries. Calvary alone can reveal the enormity of sin and its results. In this mighty act, God's great love provided a way whereby man might regain the position from which he fell in yielding to the tempter.

Verily Christ paid our debt. If we had to bear our own guilt it would crush us. Jesus took our place, though undeserving: "The Lord hath laid on Him the iniquity of us all." Every poor sinner who turns toward the uplifted Savior will appreciate something of the love of God and the cost of Calvary. When we lay every sin at the foot of the cross, confess every guilt, God will pardon and forgive every trace of the stain of guilt, sin and shame. God does not deal with us as finite men deal with each other. His thoughts are thoughts of mercy, love and tender compassion. The evil one is ready to steal away the blessed promises of God's Word. He leads men into skepticism, causes them to disbelieve the Word of God, to break His law and disregard the high claims of heaven. Satan seeks to befor bewilder, discourage (his pet tool), dishearten, and through deception to drive men to despair. He knows full well that all who seek God for pardon and grace will obtain it—and that freely. Ever since Satan kidnaped the first pair in the garden and held over their heads the ransom, mankind has been in a state of bondage. Thank God, Christ was willing to lay down His precious life a ransom for sinners slain.

Be advised that no man in his own strength can meet these awful charges of the Adversary. Every soul stands guilty before God. In his sin-stained garments he stands helpless and hopeless and lost. Thank God, it is possible to change our vile and filthy rags for the robe of righteousness, which is the imputed yet undeserved righteousnes of His dear Son. Then, too, how comforting it is to know that after we have been saved, Christ ever liveth to keep us saved by His own intercessions (Heb. 7:25). We have a perfect Friend at the court of justice. Christ pleads our case and vanquishes the enemy by the mighty and unanswerable argument of Calvary. Christ can always say," I died for his sins." Truly He is our substitute —praise His dear name.

In conclusion, let us ever keep in mind the true meaning of Calvary. There Jesus was "wounded for our transgressions." There, "He bore our sins." There

He gave up His life and died on the cross. But after the death came the resurrection and the glorious ascension, and now He "is set on the right hand of the throne of the Majesty in the heavens" (Heb. 8:1). And when the way becomes rough and stormy, our faithful High Priest, like a street car motorman, rises to conduct us through like the blessed experience of Stephen: "But he, being full of the Holy Ghost, looked u steadfastly into heaven, and saw the glory of God, and Jesus standing on the right hand of God" (Acts 7:55-56). Yea, the heavens opened to receive the first Christian martyr. "Him that cometh to Me," said Jesus, "I will in no wise cast out" (Jn. 6:37). Let us not disappoint Him Who so loved us that He gave His own life to cancel our guilt and sins. Calvary is indeed a revelation of God's love. It was there that Christ was lifted up in fulfillment of His own precious preview, "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me" (Jn. 12:32).

"On the cross for me, On the cross for me;
 See Him dying there in agony,
Jesus paid the price, Himself to sacrifice;
 On the cross for me."
"At the heart's door the Savior's waiting,
 At the heart's door fast closed by sin—
Don't you hear Him gently knocking;
 Draw the bolt—and let Him in."

News from Brethren CHURCHES

JOHNSTOWN, PA.

The "Victory Revival" held in the First Church Feb. 2-22 is now history. However, forces set into motion during the campaign are still marching on. We were very fortunate to have Bro. C. H. Ashman to lead us in this evangelistic effort.

The meeting truly was a victory revival. Many decisions were made for Christ. The church was greatly blessed, challenged, and lifted to a higher plane of endeavor, by the fearless and able preaching of the Word. Bro. Ashman is a true yokefellow in the Lord. Our fellowship was sweet. It was truly a blessing to the church to have Rev. and Mrs. C. H. Ashman with us for a period of three weeks. May the Lord grant to us a similar blessing in the not too distant future. May the Lord grip all of our ministers and churches with a burning evangelistic zeal.

Much preparation was made for the "Victory Revival." Many prayer meetings were held in the homes and in the church. The prayer committee was on the job. Plenty of publicity was given to the meetings via radio, newspaper, large bulletin boards, cards, and letters, the latter being sent to every family in the church.

The singing was the best in the history of the church. We had an average attendance of 40 members in the choir for the three weeks. 12 members of the choir had a perfect attendance record. Prof. J. Lloyd Jones was choir director, Mrs. H. W. Darr organist.

With such able and fearless preaching of the Word, united fervent praying, and great hymn singing, the Holy Spirit came in power and the song of the Lord was heard in many hearts. Nearly 40 members have been baptized and added to the church. We give the Lord praise for every victory won.

We are glad for the great home mission offering which has been reported by the Home Mission council. We give thanks to God for the position the First Church attained among the 10 leading churches. May the Lord increase our generosity. May the Holy Spirit direct the Home Missions Council in the wisest investment of these gifts. May the Lord continue to open new fields to receive our "whole Bible message."

"Now concerning the collection" for Foreign Missions. How much shall we give? If we give according to the need, it will be generous. If we give according to the Lord's will, it will be "as the Lord hath prospered." If we give in the light of the brevity of time and the length of eternal, IT WILL BE SACRIFICIAL. MAKE YOUR OFFERING IN THE LIGHT OF CALVARY.

Sincerely yours for continuous victory,

—Archie L. Lynn.

AT DAYTON, FIRST CHURCH

On Mar. 22, we closed a most enjoyable experience in a revival meeting with Rev. Chas. H. Ashman leading us. We had never worked with Bro. Ashman in a revival meeting before, but found him to be a true yoke-fellow. We were happy that Mrs. Ashman could accompany him, and it was a joy to entertain the Ashman's in our home.

This was our second revival meeting during the year, and it proved to be a most fruitful one. We have baptized 7 to the present time, and will have a larger group ready for baptism on Apr. 12. Entrance was made into a number of new families, and we are always thankful for such blessings.

The services were of a very high type throughout. Bro. Ashman gave messages which were certainly honoring to the Word of God, and most interesting to the listener. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kline, our directors of music here at First Brethren, were in charge of the music. They always give us only of the best. They were assisted by a large Gospel Chorus and by the choirs of the church. There were many visitors at every service, but not so many unsaved people attended as in former years. Working conditions and these distressing times may have had a great deal to do with this. We have so large a list of prospect families that it staggers us. Our difficulty is that with so large a group we do not get as many contacts in any family or home as is needed to win those people to Christ. We have a "Seventy" that is becoming quite active. We trust, soon, it will completely meet this need.

Bro. Ashman had the honor of giving the inaugural message on the new radio program now sponsored by First Brethren. The program is called, "THE VOICE IN THE NIGHT," and is a half hour program every Saturday night at 11:30 o'clock EWT. The station is WHIO, 1290 kilocycles. It is a 5000 watt station, and a number of people in the surrounding states may be able to hear it. Bro. Ashman spoke for the first two Saturdays on this program. Then through the courtesy of Rev. William L. Taylor of the Haynes Street Baptist Church, he was invited to speak three times over the "BACK TO THE BIBLE" BROADCAST over WING, the other Dayton station. We were happy for these broadcast opportunities. We trust many people heard the gospel who would not otherwise have heard.

We look back with thanksgiving for the meeting, and look forward for the next opportunity for working with Bro. Ashman. May the Lord bless all the Brethren in these trying times.

—Rusell D. Barnard, Dayton, Ohio.

The communist party newspaper in Russia states that no book has ever spread so far as the "History of Communist Party in the Soviet Union. There have been 16,000,000 copies in 51 languages in the last two years. However, officials of the American Bible Society reported that 51,000,000 copies of the Bible in 1,039 languages have been distributed during the same period.—Prophecy Magazine.

ALVA J. McCLAIN

WHAT SHALL IT BE CALLED?

At one of his press conferences recently, President Roosevelt asked newspaper reporters to try and think up an appropriate name for the present war; and in response all kinds of suggested names have been rolling in from different parts of the country. Many of these names are couched in the superlative degree. One writer thinks that since the last war is called in England "The Great War.,, the present war should be named "The Greater War." Certainly, the present war should not be called "The Greatest War," for the greatest war is yet to come. And God has already named that war. See Revelation 16:14-16 ARV.

The most important thing about the present war is to win it, not to name it.

THE POPE AND JAPAN

The government of Japan has established diplomatic relations with the Vatican at Rome. The Pope has accepted Ken Harada as Japanese minister, and Tokyo has extended full diplomatic status to the Roman Catholic Paolo Marella. This exchange of diplomats between Japan and the Vatican is regarded as a great victory for the Japanese government, since both London and Washington strongly opposed it.

Those who know the history of the Vatican and its policies understand that Rome acts always with a view to advancing its own interests, not necessarily the interests of international welfare and morality. For the American people to evaluate properly the action of Rome in receiving an envoy from Tokyo, it needs to be remembered that the Pope of Rome is the head of the Roman Catholic Church in America. One cannot help but wonder what the public would say if (let us say) the Moderator of the Presbyterian Church in America would suddenly establish diplomatic relations with Japan! Yet such an action would be a thousand times less significant, for the Pope of Rome holds absolute spiritual and ecclesiastical control over American Catholics, whereas there is no comparable authority residing in any Protestant church official.

THE POPE AFTER THE WAR

Already the Vatican is busy making plans to exercise the largest possible voice in the settlement of peace terms and the formation of the post-war world of nations. The official Roman Catholic speakers are heard constantly arguing that the main reason for the failure of the former post-war peace and the League of Nations was because the Pope was ignored when the settlement was made at Versailles. And this viewpoint, we are sorry to say, is gaining ground even among the leaders of the United Nations. If the war should end tomorrow, it is quite likely that the Pope would be given a place at the peace table. This is clearly evident by the deference already being paid him by our own government. It should never be forgotten that, according to its age-long policies, the Vatican will take the opportunity in both war and peace to advance its own sectarian interests first of all. After the present war is finished (which we pray may be soon), when the Vatican brings its demands for a place and a voice among the victorious nations in the formulation of the so-called "new world," there are some things that should not be forgotten.

First, it should not be forgotten that the Vatican led the procession in coming to amicable terms with the Italian Pacist government, and thus threw the tremendous influence of Roman Catholicism throughout the world behind the rising Mussolini, who in turn became the shining example and inspiration of the German Hitler. It is not too much to say that had the Vatican stood its ground and fought (as it alone among the religious bodies of the world can fight a political battle), Mussolini could never have entrenched his system in Italy and thus started the totalitarian debauch.

Second, it should not be forgotten that the Vatican blessed with its sanction the unspeakable campaign against Abyssinia with all its attendant horrors, and resulting for the time of Italian domination in the closing of all Protestant missionary efforts in that unfortunate land.

Third, it should not be forgotten that the Vatican backed with all its power and influence the tragic march of the Spanish distator Franco, whose sympathy and intrigues with Hitler have done so much to make more difficult the task of the United Nations, and who may at any time throw in his lot with Germany in active military efforts.

Fourth, it should not be forgotten that the ill-advised position of Ireland, in refusing to the United Nations even the slightest aid in their fight for life, could never be maintained if the Roman Catholic Church were against it. Everyone knows that the spiritual power of the Vatican is almost absolute over the people of Ireland, and that no set of political leaders could stand if opposed by the Pope.

THE FEDERAL COUNCIL AFTER THE WAR

If the Vatican is busy laying post-war plans, the same thing is also true about the Federal Council of Churches which claims to be the voice of Protestantism in America. At a recent conference at Delaware, Ohio, called together by the Federal Council, the plans for a new post-war world drawn up by 375 delegates, called by Time "Protestanism's super-protestant new program for a just and durable peace."

The conference was designated by Methodist Bishop Holt as "Intellectually . . . the most distinguished American church gathering I have seen in 30 years of conference-going." It included 15 bishops of five denominations, seven seminary heads, eight college and university presidents, practically all the ranking officials of the Federal Council, to say nothing of many other distinguished leaders and laymen such as John R. Mott, Harvey Firestone, Jr., and William Paton, secretary of the World Council of churches.

There is not space here to analyze adequately the work and decisions of this conference, which I have just received in booklet form, but a few of the more radical suggestions should be noted.

The conference stands for, ultimately, "a world government of delegated powers," which must involve the complete abandonment of United States isolationism.

Furthermore, the conference is ready to impose strong and immediate limitations on the sovereignty of all nations including our own.

There are to be no longer any national military forces, but international armies and navies under international control.

There is to be "an international bank" with "a universal system of money . . . so planned as to prevent inflation and deflation."

There is to be a League-of-nations-with-teeth which will hold "the power of final judgment in controversies between nations," and also power to "regulate international trade and population movements among nations."

The ultimate goal of the conference is "a duly constituted world government of delegated powers, and international legislative body, an international court with adequate jurisdiction, international administrative bodies with necessary powers, and adequate international police forces and provision for enforcing its worldwide economic authority."

The final word was spoken by Dr. William Paton of England, secretary of the World Council of Churches, who said, "Collectivism is coming, whether we like it or not."

WHAT SHALL WE SAY TO THESE THINGS?

Well, the Christian who studies his Bible will probably remark, first, that all these grandiose plans have a strangely familiar sound. It is doubtless true that a collectivist international world government is around the corner, but it will not be of God when it arrives. On the contrary(it will turn out to be completely Satanic in control. See Revelation, chapters 13, 17, and 18. But, of course, the men who met in conference at Delaware would regard you as slightly unbalanced if you quoted from the last book of the Bible in criticism of their notions of the future. The strange thing, to unprejudiced minds, is that men should forget the dreadful danger of unscrupulous men seizing control of their beautiful international government and army. Once the nations have committed all their eggs to one basket, then there will be no recourse or escape if some body of cutthroats gain control of the basket. Apparently these so-called Protestant leaders of the Federal Council have learned nothing from history, even the events of history before their eyes. For the most part they are agreed that we are in a life and death struggle against the totalitarian scheme as represented by Germany, Japan, and Italy; yet as a remedy they can think of nothing better than more of the "hair of the dog that bit them," that is, a world totalitarian government.

Basically, the blindness of these leaders is theological. In the fields of economics, finance, political science, etc., they are very learned men. But theologically they are either illiterate or obstinate. The success of all their grand schemes is predicated in the most absolute sense on the assumption that man basically is good, that the only thing necessary is to set up the right kind of laws and organization, and then men will automatically be good and do right. The very first word in the very first principle laid down by the Federal Council Conference as the basis of a "Just and Durable Peace" in the new world is this: "Man is a child of God" (see page 25, printed report). This is not the truth of God, but a lie of the devil. The truth is that men are not children of God, and they must be born again in order to become His children. Nothing is more certain than that all plans for a new world, no matter how beautiful and idealistic, will utterly break down and fail at last if they are based on the age-long falsehood that unregenerate men already are the children of God.

YE MUST BE BORN AGAIN

Fifth Annual Commencement of Grace Theological Seminary

WINONA LAKE, IND. - MAY 8, 1942

The fifth year in the ministry of Grace Theological Seminary will come to its close in the Commencement Services to be held at Winona Lake, Indiana, on Friday, May 8th. The class will be the largest in the history of the school, including the years 1930 to 1937 at Ashland, Ohio, and the speakers will include two well-known college presidents.

The Baccalaureate Service will be held in the Presbyterian Church at the hour of 10:30 in the forenoon. Dr. C. E. Hawthorne, pastor of the Wallace Memorial United Presbyterian Church of Washington, D. C., will deliver the sermon. Dr. Hawthorne was a classmate of President McClain at Xenia Theological Seminary; and a young man from his congregation, Mr. Eugene Allen, is a member of the graduating class.

The graduation service will be held at the same place on Friday evening, 7:30 o'clock. The address will be delivered by Dr. Bob Jones, Jr., acting president of Bob Jones College at Cleveland Tenn. A former student from this college, Mr. Robert Hill, is among those who will graduate; and a fine group of students now there are looking toward Grace Seminary for their graduate work and training.

The Seminary Faculty and Graduating Class join in extending to all friends of the Seminary a cordial invitation to attend these services. The two services are purposely held on the same day so that people can come in for the day and hear both speakers. Of special interest to Brethren will be the meeting of the pastors of this district on the afternoon of the same day. The Westminster Hotel has been kept open throughout the winter, and rooms are available at reasonable rates for any who may wish to remain overnight. We suggest that the pastors make special announcement of these services to their people and urge them to attend.

On Thursday evening at 7:30 o'clock, May 7th, the annual Middler-Senior Banquet of the Seminary will be held at the Westminster Hotel. The Middle class, in charge of arrangements, were able to secure as the main speaker, Dr. V. Raymond Edman, President of Wheaton College. We are informed that the dining room can easily accomodate two hundred, which means that tickets will be available to outside friends who may wish to attend. Reservations must be made by May 1st. Tickets are one dollar each. Write Mr. Herman Baerg, Winona Lake, Ind. We suggest that our friends from a distance come in on Thursday for the Banquet, and then remain over for the two Friday services.

Radio Messages from Brethren Broadcasts

SIGNS OF THE TIMES IN CHRISTENDOM!

By L. L. GRUBB, pastor, Hagerstown, Md.

When we speak of the signs of the times, we refer to those existing circumstances before our very eyes which the Word of God clearly indicates will come to pass just preceding Christ's coming for His church! "When ye see these things coming to pass, look up for your redemption draweth nigh!"

Rev. Grubb

Three considerations will concern us: the attitude of men toward God.

There is not a single so-called Christian nation today which can lay claim to giving God the proper place in its existence. The Apostle Rom. 3:11,18, "There is none that seeketh after God . . . There is no fear of God before their eyes." Germany's Hitler has said, "God has manifested Himself not in Jesus Christ, but in Adolph Hitler." It logically follows that Hitler is the god of Germany, and this has certainly become practically true! Russia's dictator tells us, "God is a poor ideal." In our so-called "Christian" America, organized movements of atheism are running wild. The "Society of Militant Godless" has dedicated itself to the task of obliterating any conception of God from the American mind! Atheistic organizations have been established on the campuses of the majority of our colleges, while atheistic professors forget that "the fool hath said in his heart, 'There is no God'."

The Attitude of Men Toward Christ

Out of this attitude toward God has grown the same disregard for the Person and work of our Lord Jesus Christ! Church Minister Kerrl of Germany stated, "A new authority has arisen as to what Christ and Christianity are—Adolph Hitler!" To the Italian, Mussolini is the Christ and they are taught to believe so in their creed! The Russian loads Christ in a wheelbarrow and hauls Him down to the ash heap, all the while calling Him the bastard son of a harlot! In this land, modernistic systems of churches headed up by the Federal Council of churches are defaming the name of Christ almost hourly! A one-time president of this organization has said, "Christians have taken for truth the dogma of the deity of Jesus—the dogma that He is very God; while science has made this dogma increasingly impossible." As has been evidenced in Hagerstown this week, this organization seems to be the controlling factor in the Christians' thinking!

We talk about the "conscription of mind and body" by the ruthless dictators of Europe, and the result in making men automatons! Sometimes I wonder if the Christian's mind had not likewise been conscripted by the forces of influence, ecclesiasticism, and oratory, until that mind has become nothing more than an obedient spiritual stooge without power to read the Word of God for itself, to allow the Spirit of God to instruct in present truth! Herein lies the deepest meaning of what the Apostle John said, "Beloved, believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they are of God: because many false prophets are gone out into the world. Hereby know ye the Spirit of God; every spirit that confesseth that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is of God: and every spirit that confesseth not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is not of God: and this is that spirit of antichrist, whereof ye have heard that it should come, and even now already is it in the world" (1 Jn. 4:1-3). Thus by accepting or rejecting the deity of Christ a man can clearly classify himself.

Is it not thus a major tragedy of the ages that Christendom, generally, has pulled the Son of God down from His pedestal of divinity and made a sort of a human, plaster-Paris example of Him! This, friends, is the spirit of Antichrist!

The Attitude of Men Toward the Bible

Under such circumstances we should certainly expect similar unbelief concerning the Word of God—the Bible! The German Reichswart says, "Adam and Eve, oldest of Biblical names, should be blacklisted as unfit for Aryans." The Bible of Germany is that tirade of infidelity, "Mein Kampf," written by the very evident personification of what he preaches! A Niemoeller finds no place in the public life of modern Germany, but he languishes in a concentration camp while the German people are dying for the message of his Redeemer!

Until recently, when the stress of world circumstances necessitated a slight change, the Bible was absolutely forbidden in Russia as reading matter! A $6,000,000 print shop with the most modern equipment has been devoted to turning out tons of anti-God and anti-Christ literature, but not one Bible!

Today the United States of America is a nest of apostasy and rationalism. There are more "isms" and departures from the Bible in this enlightened land of ours than in any other single nation of the world. This may be the result of the religious freedom which we enjoy, which, in turn, only serves to deepen and intensify the guilt of those in whom God has vested such a priceless heritage. No longer is the Bible found in the average public school. Its reading and any comments upon it, except in infidelic attack, are absolutely forbidden! Some months ago a great churchman in a conference in the State of Ohio said concerning the Book of Jonah, "It is one of the finest pieces of imaginative literature ever written." It was certainly a piece of great condescension on the part of this brilliant man to accord the Book of Jonah such a high place in the world of literature, even though he could not accept its inspiration! A prominent Buffalo Professor said recently, "Any man or woman who can believe the Bible to be true is a bigger fool than its author."

"Yes, this sort of blasphemy is fostered and propagated in our so-called Christian nation! Yet, in the hour of strife and need, we cry out, "God Bless America." How can God bless a nation with infidelity in its heart? What America needs more than anything else is to get on its individual and collective knees and cry out in confession of sin, "God be merciful to us, sinners!"

"Not All Christians Can Win Souls"

By HAROLD PARKS, pastor, Garwin, Ia.

Yes, this is what we hear many times: "The reason is I get stage fright," "I get nervous," "I don't want to make anyone angry with me," "Let the preacher do it," and many other answers. I find that many of these answers are not only excuses but wilfully ignoring the work. Yet the Word of God plainly teaches that not all Christians can win souls, and here are some of the reasons:

Rev. Parks

Bibleless-reading Christians—Those who do not read their Bibles. There are thousands today who never look in their Bibles from one year to another, some who do not look into their Bibles once a week, and some who read only when they get time. What do some of them read? Your guess is as good as mine, but I find that there are many "Look," "Life," "Superman," love stories, and what not in the home. Yes, there is time for this reading but not time for the Bible reading!

We cannot dodge the facts. It is utterly impossible for a Christian to be a soul-winner and not know the Word of God. How can one know to operate without surgical knowledge? One may have the necessary instruments and still not know the right method of using them. Yes, Christians may have their Bibles under all the books and newspapers in the house, but still not know how to use it. It takes a knowledge of the Word to deal with those of whom Christ said in John 8:44, "Ye are of your father the devil."

Yes, the lost souls must be won, not by argument but by breaking down all that they have builded up, and then by convincing them, by the Word, of their need. And this cannot be obtained by reading the Bible once a week, or even once a day. This takes consistant study: (II Tim. 2:15) "Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the truth."

Prayerless Christians—Those who do not read the Bible can never know what to pray for, or even know how to pray. It is very sad to hear one say that he knows not how to pray. Prayer is not communion but prayer is fellowship with God. A life that is a prayerless life is one that is dried and shriveled and useles as far as God is concerned. Prayer unlocks doors that cannot be opened otherwise. Prayer is a close conversation between man and God. There is a great mistake made with the Christians who do pray; many take their petitions to God, and when they are through speaking they arise and leave instead of waiting till God speaks unto them. Many prayers are all one-sided.

Jesus taught His disciples to pray that there would be laborers sent in the vineyard. Pray for the heathen, for the enemy, for weak ones. Prayerless Christians are like a cistern full of holes; they hold nothing, and are worth nothing.

Worldly Christians—This is one of the most common reasons why people cannot win souls. Christians do not like to hear this but it is true. The reason that a worldly Christian cannot win souls is because he has no desire to do so; and if he had, the results would be zero. Yes, preach the Word and the Word will loosen the Christians from the world; but many do not realize that they are polluted with the world until some terrible shock happens to rock them.

How can one who has named the name of Jesus Christ, and has confessed Him and accepted Him as Lord Savior and Master, and sits at a card table—rook, 500, or what not—expect to win souls?

How can a Christian sit in a godless moving picture house two or three times a week and win souls? How can a Christian drink this awful beer and liquor and win souls? How can one dance till midnight on Saturday night and win souls for Christ? How can one chew tobacco and smoke the same and win souls? How, I ask you? Yes, I know people say, "It is not harmful to do these things." If these people who think there is no harm in doing these things will get down on their knees and ask God about it, there will be a great big respond with the words, "Love not the world, neither the things in the world; if any man love the world the love of the Father is not in him. And in I Cor. 8:9-13, where we read of meat, just paraphrase these items above mentioned and see where they stand in the light of the Word.

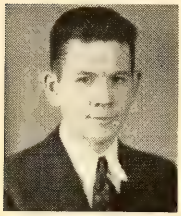
No wonder there are men and women all around us going to hell. It is because Christians are letting them go by their godless, worldly, and sinful living. A house that is divided cannot stand, and a Christian who will divide himself will not be of any service to God. Rom. 12:1; "I beseech you, therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service." Too many Christians are like the doctor, who, after the honeymoon, took his bride to the beautiful new home and showed her this house from top to bottom. But there was one room with a paneled door that was shut. The bride asked why this was so, and her husband told her this was a private room and that she was never to go into it. Half the joy went out of that lady then and there. A great disappointment was hers.

Yes, Christians today have a room in their heart, and that room is barred to God because of some petty sin. God wants all the body not part of it.

Spiritually Inert—Without the Spirit? No, but that Spirit is so suppressed that there is not spreading of life to the dead sinners about. The life is so full of other things that there is hardly any room for the Spirit. One can speak of the weather, tires, sugar, war, but not about Christ!

Fill a glass with pure water and then start putting sand in it; and if you put enough in it, the water will be forced out but not all, for the sand will absorb a little. This is what is the matter with so many Christians—there is so much filling of other things that the Spirit is crowded out. All of Him? No, for, (I Cor. 6:19) "your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost."

The question then arises, "How can one be a soul winner?" Remember, what we yield to God He accepts, and what He accepts He fills, and what He fills He uses. Study the Bible; be in constant prayer; be out and out for God, separate from the world; and let Him fill you with the Spirit.



We are to be fruitful Christians, and one fruit of a Christian should be another Christian.

(John 15:16) "Ye have not chosen me, but have chosen you and ordained you that ye should go and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain."

Hidden Treasures

By SEWELL LANDRUM, Pastor, Clayhole, Ky.

In the fall of 1932 I was employed to teach school in a community 15 miles from the highway. The school term ran from July 15 until the last week in January. Early one July morning my wife, baby girl, my brother, and I, left for our field of service. From our home we were able to ride 10 miles in a truck. At nine o'clock we transferred to a wagon which was drawn by two mules. We made ourselves as comfortable as possible and started off on our journey across the mountains. We followed the course of the mountain streams. Some places the road was in the stream and other places it was along the mountain side. The road was barely wide enough for the wagon to pass along. We ate our lunch on top of one of the mountains, which was green and beautiful at that time of the year. The afternoon passed slowly by. About six o'clock in the evening we came to the end of the wagon road. We still had a trip of four miles across a steep mountain with a path wide enough for one person. We started walking, leading the mules which carried our baggage on their backs. We lost the trail in the woods. Sometimes we were in brier patches and sometimes in thick underbrush, which made traveling very unpleasant. At "dusky dark" we came to the top of the hill, where we again found the trail. We went down the mountain into the valley, and followed the stream which led us to a deserted logging camp (except two families). This was to be our home for the next seven months. We knocked at the door of the first house we came to and asked if we might stay all night. We were given a place to sleep and a real welcome. The only child in this home was a two-year old girl, of whom I will tell you later.

Rev. Landrum

The house that was to be our home was directly across the stream. The school which was to open the next morning was two miles farther down the creek.

During our visitation in one of the homes we found a girl 12 years old who had never gone to school. When asked why she did not come to school she replied, "I have to stay home and mind the babies while mother works." Before we left the father promised that she could come to school the following Monday. She felt as though she would be out of place in school. She said "I have never gone to school and don't know any of my letters or figures."

Bright and early Monday morning, we looked out of the window and saw her coming down the trail with her dinner pail in her hand and a big smile on her face. It seemed as though she was living in a new world. Every morning she would stop by our house and wait for her teacher so she could walk to school with him. She seemed hungry to learn. One day I missed her at school. I went up to her house to see what was wrong. When I asked why she did not come to school she said that she did not have any shoes, and the weather was too cold to go barefooted. The following week end I went to Jackson on business. While I wasc there I bought her a pair of second hand shoes, which she wore the rest of the school year. She advanced rapidly in her school work. At the close of the school year she was up with her fourth grade schoolmates.

We had Sunday School each Sunday morning while we were there. She always enjoyed the choruses and Bible verses. Her favorite was, "Jesus Loves Me This I Know." The last day of school came all too soon for her. She stopped in that morning at our house to kiss the baby girl goodby and then went on to school. As school closed that morning she started the two and one half miles back home. She cried as though her heart would break. All the opportunities in her life seemed gone: school, Sunday School, the little baby at our house, and the teacher who loved her. From all information we have received, she never entered the school house again. She had a good mind and lots of ability but no opportunity to develop them. No one seemed to care.

The little two-year-old girl with whom we spent our first night now lives in the Clayhole community. She attends school with our girl at the Coney school. Every Sunday morning she attends Sunday School and church. Last fall she accepted Christ as her Savior. She has expressed a desire to be baptized when the the weather is warm. Our baptistry is Troublesome Creek, so you can see why we wait until the weather is warm. Tho only a child she has had some severe testing which have proven to make her stronger in the Lord. Yesterday her teacher said, "She shows much evidence of being a saved person." This little girl has an opportunity and knows that some one cares.

"NOT MY WILL BUT THINE"

Lord, grant me, when I kneel to pray,
Imploring aid divine,
The wisdom and the will to say
Not mine own will, but thine;
And if some dark Gethsemene,
Should tempt me to repine,
May angel presence strengthen me
To make Thy will be mine.

——Mildred Werts.

THINK IT OVER

One reason Americans are paying a 10% tax on luxuries, toilet goods, etc., and will no doubt later be paying a 15% pay-roll tax, is because Americans have been robbing God of His 10%.

The Benefits of Church Membership

By REV. STANLEY HAUSER, Supply Pastor, Juniata, Pa.

Repeatedly it is true that, in dealing with those on the outside about their soul's salvation and about uniting with some sound evangelical church, we find many objections and excuses. It is most certainly true that the church is of God.

What, then, are the benefits of a church membership?

THE CHURCH PROVIDES SPIRITUAL NOURISHMENT

"Man shall not live by bread alone."

In that beautiful parable of the good Shepherd, Jesus says of His own (John 10:9): "They shall go in and out and find pasture."

Every species of life must have its special food: the cow, the hog, the chicken, and so on down the list. Likewise, spiritual people must have spiritual nourishment. Here is the menu for a spiritual feast:

Water: "Whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst, but the water that I shall give him shall become in him a well of water springing up into eternal life" (Jn. 4:14).

Milk: "Long for the spiritual milk, ... that ye may grow" (I Pet. 2:2).

Bread: "I am the Bread of life: he that cometh unto Me shall not hunger" (Jn. 6:35).

Meat: "My meat is to do the will of Him that sent Me" (Jn. 4:34).

After this heavier food comes the course of desserts:

Fruit and honey: "He that reapeth receiveth wages, and gathereth fruit" . . . (Jn. 4:36). "The fruit of the spirit is love, joy, peace " (Gal. 5:22). "And with honey out of the rock should I have satisfied thee" (Ps. 81:16).

Christian friends, partake of this spiritual nourishment and be satisfied.

THE CHURCH AFFORDS PROTECTION AND FELLOWSHIP

"Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on Thee; because he trusteth in Thee" (Isa. 26:3).

The very fact we are known as Christians protects us from invitations to questionable places or places of disrepute. The out-and-out, consistent, "born again" church member is not invited to dancing parties, drinking sprees, card and bingo games and 100 other sinful indulgences.

Even the men of the world respect a man or woman who lives for Christ. But that church member or professing Christian who refuses to do so opens his heart, which is the gateway for the enemy of man's soul to come in with all the fiery darts of sin. Who is so strong that he can afford to risk the loss of that protection the church offers?

We all crave fellowship and companionship, but let us choose wisely. it is essential to the spiritual life and growth that our environment be helpful. The church affords such an atmosphere. It counteracts the evil that must be met in the world. "What fellowship hath light with darkness?"

"Truly our fellowship is with the Father and with His Son Jesus Christ" (I Jn. 1:3).

THE CHURCH AFFORDS SPIRITUAL EXERCISE

"Exercise thyself unto godliness" (I Tim. 4:7).

Everyone is exhorted to exercise, not only church members. For, without exercise life weakens and dies out. By exercise we discover oftentimes hidden talents, or develop those we have. What talents have you to exercise? Singing, teaching, willingness to work, leadership or influence for good; use it and exercise it for Christ and for the church.

Church workers develop their gifts and talents by using them and exercising them. Worldly folks lose theirs because they are not exercised for God. A story is told of two brothers who were active in Christian Endeavor and Sunday School work. One day the teacher called on the older of the two brothers to pray. He responded so well, and did it so nicely, that many remarks were made relative to how well the boy prayed. Someone told the youngest brother about it and he tersely replied, "He ought to, he practices every day."

Can you witness for Him? "We are His witnesses" (Acts 5:33).

Have you business ability? The church has need for those who are "not slothful in business" (Rom. 12:11) that all things might be done according to I Cor. 14:40 "decently and in order."

Whatever be your talent, the church teaches you to regard it as a gift of God and bids you consecrate it to His service. "Moreover, it is required in stewards that a man be founr faithful" (I Cor. 4:2).

"Come then and join this holy band, and on to glory go:
To dwell in that celestial land, where joys immortal flow."

BECAUSE OF ME

By MARTHA SNELL NICHOLSON

Is there a soul who died,
Who died because of me,
Forever shut away
From heaven and from Thee?

Is there a soul who died
Because I did not speak,
Because I did not point
The way their feet should seek;

Because I tightly clutched
My little earthly store,
Nor sent Thy messengers
Unto some distant shore?

Lord, let me not forget
That precious soul who died,
That soul for love of whom
Thy Son was crucified.

That soul was dear as I
Unto the Savior's heart.
Lost soul, who died because
I would not do my part!

Look and Live

The commencement of the Christian life is life—life imparted from God through Jesus Christ. That which is born of the flesh is flesh and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit (Jn. 3:6), so that at the very outset of the Christian life the question is have you been born again?

The spiritual difficulties of many professing Christians commence right here. They have not started right. The good news is not clearly apprehended. They have been sincere in their desire to be Christians, believing the truths of the Bible; and more or less instructed in theology, they have made an open confession of faith in Christ, and have continued in the performance of religious duties, waiting for an inward evidence of their divine renewal, which never came.

Now to all such the word must of necessity be, halt! Go no further until this question is settled. Let us not consider the duties of the Christian life, its dangers or its delights, until we have life. And it is the will of God that we should have life, as is shown by the words of the Savior, (read Jn. 3:16), "For God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

Educating one to live like a child of God will not make one a child of God. It will only be an imitation, and must result in failure. And the sooner you are brought to this knowledge, and realize that all in the past, and that all in the future will be failure upon that line, the sooner will your soul be brought to Him, Who is the Savior of real sinners, helpless to save themselves.

And now, my dear friend, I want to ask you, "Are you a Christian?"

"No I am not, I do not know how to become a Christian. I want to be saved, and am willing to do anything, but I do not know what to do."

Well, my dear friend, it is a great privilege to meet one in your state of mind, anxious about salvation, willing to be taught, and willing to yield to God. Now let us look for light where God has placed it —in His own Word, the Bible. Now read again John 3:16.

Now the faith that saves the soul, is wrought out within the soul by believing His Word and looking to Calvary. Read again John 3:16. You see salvation cometh by believing—not by feeling that you are saved, but by believing. Now, like all who seek to be saved, you must first see that you are lost, and utterly lost, before you can be saved. And you must also learn that it is really and truly out of death that we are brought into life. It is resurrection power that saves us, and resurrection power can be shown only where there is real death. So in the case of Lazarus, Jesus tarried four days until Lazarus was dead—not sick merely, but dead. Then He came to Bethany, and resurrection power had the opportunity of manifestation. The dead one was made alive and gladness filled the home. Reader, is the blessing delayed in coming to you? It is because the Lord is waiting for you to see yourself as a sinner, dead—not sick merely with sin, but dead and without a spark of the life of God in your soul. Trying to keep the commandments will not bring life.

The soul that sinneth it shall die (Ezek. 18:4). "Well, my dear friend, your condition is certainly a solemn one. You confess that you are a sinner. It is not that you are going to be lost, but you are lost already." What you need is to be born again. You need forgiveness, you need a new life. Have you this divine life in your soul?"

"No, I really cannot say that I have, I do not feel that I am saved!"

But my friend, do you not see that the reason you do not feel that you are saved is because you really have not as yet believed God's Word? Instead of looking to Calvary and God's Word, you look down into your heart for feeling. Now God says that the heart is deceitful above all things, and your deceitful heart will never tell you that your sins are forgiven. And if it did tell you that your sins are all forgiven, you could not rely upon it.

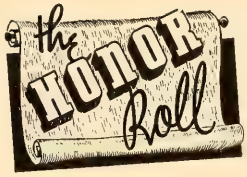
Believing comes first; and God's hands are tied and He can do nothing for you until you, without any feeling, believe that Jesus died on the cross to save you. Faith acts as possessing what it does not feel. Ever keep on believing, and the assurance and feeling will surely come.

Now there are steps, stages, and degrees in the Christian life. Here let me give you a little personal experience, a message that was a great blessing to me. I was in deep distress and agony, and as with the prodigal son, there was a mighty famine in my soul. At the Y. M. C. A. I picked up a religious paper with this message on it, which brought me out of darkness into light and the joy of forgiveness to my soul. Here it is just as I read it 50 years ago.

"Do you believe that Jesus is the Son of God?
NOW STOP and think before you answer it.
NEXT—Do you believe He is able to save you?
NOW STOP and think before you answer it.
NEXT—Is He willing to save you?
NOW THINK it over seriously.
Do you now accept Him as your Savior?"
"YES." Well, He now accepts you and you are His and He is yours. Hallelujah!!!

Hallelujah! 'Tis done, I believe on the Son,
I am saved by the blood of the crucified One.
Oh now I see the cleansing stream, the fountain deep and wide,
And Jesus, only Jesus, know, My Jesus crucified.

—From a tract by M. Slatky.



OUR REAL NEED

Old Matthew Henry said, "If we keep ourselves pure in time of common iniquity, God will keep us secure in time of common calamity."

But we have not kept ourselves pure. We have sinned against God. As a nation we need to repent and confess and find forgiveness and security.—Sel.

A total of 40,000 persons perished in auto accidents in the year 1941. God alone knows how many of these were ready to meet their God. The Bible says "Prepare to meet thy God." It also says, "Boast not thyself of tomorrow, for you know not what a day will bring forth."—Sel.

News from Brethren CHURCHES

ELLET, OHIO

Not often do we find time for writing church news letters of any length. However, we do feel constrained to write concerning some of the recent blessings and victories the Lord has given in this immediate field of labor and service.

Beginning Sunday evening, Mar. 1, 1942, we launched a concentrated effort in the field of evangelism for a three-weeks' duration. During the first week Rev. A. D. Cashman, pastor of the Mansfield Brethren Mission church, spent the days in an intensive personal evangelistic effort in the homes of prospective members. In the evenings of the first week he presented challenging messages to the membership of the church in preparation for the two following weeks of soul winning. During three days and evenings of the last two weeks of the campaign Bro. Cashman concentrated in the ministry of the Word in the homes. We want to announce to the brotherhood that Rev. Cashman is the most skilled soul winner in homes with whom we have ever had the privilege of being associated. We want to commend him in this capacity to other churches, for the Lord blessed with big dividends through this consecrated servant. We want him back with us for more of this type of ministry. Now, lest we be misunderstood, we want to state that, while Bro. Cashman excels in the art of personal soul winning, his ability and ministry is not in any sense limited to such work. He knows the Word of God, and preaches it with fervor and power. The Brethren Church is fortunate in having Bro. Cashman within her folds.

Beginning Sunday evening, Mar. 8, and continuing for two weeks, Rev. C. W. Mayes, pastor of the West Tenth Street Brethren Church in Ashland, conducted an intensive soul winning campaign by way of pulpit evangelism. Though Bro. Mayes did spend three days during each of the last two weeks ministering in homes in the community, his main effort was in the pulpit. The simplicity of his messages and the contagion of his personality won the people's hearts. The second night of his ministry one decision was made; the third night three decisions were made; the fourth night 15 decisions were made, and by the end of the last week 46 decisions for Christ had been made. With Cashman in the homes and Mayes in the pulpit, a combination had been set in operation that the Lord abundantly blessed, to His own glory, and in the salvation of souls. It is hard to see how this combination could be surpassed in its effectiveness.

What have been the numerical results of the revival to the local church? The numerical results are still being enlarged. Sunday morning, Mar. 29, with Bro. Garner Hoyt delivering a challenging message, six more decisions for Christ were made. Easter Sunday morning, with the pastor delivering a message upon the theme of the resurrection, two more decisions for Christ were made. Adding these eight decisions to the 46 made during the three-week campaign, there was a total of 54 decisions in all. These do not include those who made decisions without public affirmation of such. We know of two such, at least, in which brethren gave up their filthy tobacco habit. Perhaps there were more, but we'll probably have to wait until we get over on the other side to know about them.

Out of these 54 decisions 19 have been baptized and added to the church. Two others were received into the church by relation, both having been members of a Brethren church some years ago in a nearby state, but who have lived in Akron for a considerable time, and hence wished to make this their church home. Another, a young lady who is a senior in high school, presented herself as a living sacrifice upon the altar, looking forward to missionary service upon the African field. This was in part, the fruit of the labors of Garner Hoyt in both the district young people's foreign mission rally in Ashland on Friday evening, Mar. 27, and in the Ellet Brethren Church Sunday morning, Mar. 29. Jacqualine Sergent (the young lady under discussion) is one of the finest of a group of fine young people whom the Lord has given the Ellet church, and of whom we are righteously proud (I guess there is such a pride). More will be heard of her, and of many of our young people in the future. Of that we are confident.

Before this news item becomes forbidding in its length, we wish to praise the Lord for allowing us to support Bro. Garner Hoyt, one of our own members, when he goes, with his wife, to Africa. This privilege has been an inspiration and incentive to our people in their foreign missionary offering, which we expect to reach or surpass the $500 mark. May the Lord bless him in his labor of love in Africa, and may He grant unto us a true vision of the beckoning hands and voices that call from that land of missionary opportunity.

—R. E. Gingrich.

THE ELLET REVIVAL MEETING

From Mar. 1-22 inclusive, the Lord planned a unique evangelistic service for the Ellet church. Beginning on the first Sunday evening, the writer began as the speaker for the first week, seeking to prepare the people for a real spiritual awakening. The Lord must have been working mightily in those services, for many of the decisions were made the first three evenings of Bro. Mayes' preaching, resulting in a wonderful revival among the young people of the church and the conversion of their friends. It was not the writer's privilege to witness these splendid decisions, for he was busy giving out the gospel in the homes, day and night, the last two weeks that Bro. Mayes was doing the preaching in his usual effective style.

Speaking of the ministry of personal evangelism, the reception of the message of salvation was marvelous. The work was extremely easy because of the wide acquaintance of the pastor in a multitude of homes in the city of Akron, and the love and respect with which he is held even where no decisions have ever been made for the Lord. Without wasting much time with the niceties of a social call, we would ask each person or family if they would be offended if we talked to them a bit about the Bible. Almost universally the answer was emphatically negative, and immediately we would plunge into the plan of salvation, showing the passages as we read, whether the doctrine of imputed righteousness or what it meant for Christ to pay our debt of sin. This would take about an hour in each home unless acute interest or questions lenghtened out the interview. No immediate decisions were pressed, for we did not care to receive empty professions which might make it difficult to reach them later, should they not be ready to give a positive response at the time. As a result, everyone seemed pleased with the knowledge we had imparted and asked us to return any time we cared to. Many friends were made for the church and a greater love for Christ aroused. The public dicisions that have been made are genuine, and the pastor reports that their progress in the Lord is phenomenal. Many othes who are attending the Sunday services will result in other precious decisions, we are sure.

To those of you who believe in intercessory prayer, we would ask you to pray for the field in Ellet. There is not a better field for The Brethren Church anywhere, and no pastor is better fitted to capitalize on his opportunities than is Bro. Gingrich. He is a splendid preacher and Bible teacher; he is equipped with needed talent musically and socially to work with young people, and he has a reputation through his radio ministry and teaching in the Akron Bible Institute as one of the best known defenders of the faith in the city. His church is prospering under the Lord, and we expect a building program to be necessary to accomodate the attendance in the near future, should the Lord tarry. No one can work so hard and so consistently in the field, month in and month out as the pastor does, and in the will of the Lord, without results. So let all prayer warriors remember this field in their daily devotions, knowing that multitudes of defense workers who are living in that section need the Lord.

As for the entertainment, we had to call a halt after the first week and confine ourselves to two meals a day. The eats were too much for a poor preacher's blood.

—A. D. Cashman.

It was my privilege to be associated with Bro. Raymond Gingrich and Bro. A. D. Cashman in a two weeks' meeting at the Ellet church.

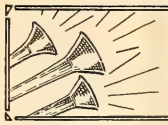
Bro. Gingrich, pastor of the church, had made fine preparations for the revival. Much prayer had ascended to the throne of grace, and the people really desired and saw the need of a revival.

Since Bro. Gingrich had done his part well in leading the church to see the need and the possibilities, and Bro. Cashman had done such a splendid piece of personal evangelism among the prospects, there was not much left for me to do. I simply presented the Word from night to night, making calls with the pastor a few days each week, and the Lord saw fit to accomplish a mighty work.

It was a revival in the full sense of the word. It was not simply an evangelistic campaign. We believe that the Ellet church will go forth as it has never done in the past to accomplish an extensive work of winning souls for Christ and teaching the saints.

Bro. Gingrich, president of the Akron Bible Institute, and a member of its faculty, has done a fine piece of work in Akron. He is well known as a Bible teacher with a powerful and consistent message.

We are glad to have two extension classes under the Akron Bible Institute at Ashland. It was my privilege to speak once before the chapel of the Institute.



—Chas. W. Mayes.

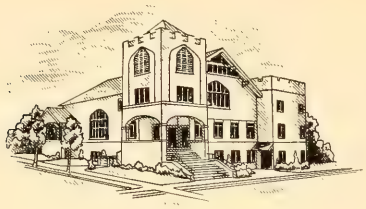
P. S.—We just closed a week of pre-Easter meetings with Bro. John Squires as our evangelist. It was the greatest week of meetings in the history of the church. There were over 40 decisions for Christ and marvelous renewal in the spirit of the congregation as a whole. Never have our young people showed more promise. Never have we had such unity and pleasant fellowship.

Bro. Squires is a profound yet simple preacher of the gospel, whose message is greatly used of the Lord.

VICTORIES AT WHITTIER CHURCH

During the first quarter of this year there have been many victories won for Christ at Whittier, Calif. The pastor was absent for ten Sundays in evangelism in the east. Ralph Colburn was the supply pastor. He did a splendid work in every way and we found

DID IT EVER OCCUR TO YOU



OUR SPEECH

When you say, "the deuce," you are really saying, "the devil," according to Webster's Dictionary. "Dickens" is another way of saying, "the devil." "Darn," means "to damn." Webster says that "gosh" is a substitute for "God," as is "golly." "Gee," is a form of "Jesus." Many say "heavens" who wouldn't say "hell." Which is worse? Read Matt. 12:36.

While walking down Market street in Philadelphia today I saw a man who was smiling and seemed very contented and happy. He seemed to stand out from all the crowd, and as I looked at this man I discovered he had no hands. Oh what a lesson this should teach us today. In these trying days amid perilous times, how those of us who both know and love the Lord Jesus Christ should offer our hands, and our lives to Christ and His cause.—Wm. H. Clough.

WHOSE FAULT?

In a famous ecclesiastical trial in Virginia, a number of years ago, it was said by someone that the preaching of the party on trial had no more effect than "pouring water on a duck's back." Quick as a flash the reply came, "Is that the fault of the water or the duck?" There is food for thought in that home thrust. "Take heed, therefore, how ye hear," the Master said—Prophetic News.

the church in good spiritual condition upon our return. Ralph expects to become a full-time, resident pastor of a Brethren church soon. His experience here at Whittier was a good preparation for further service.

The "Polman Trio" were with us for two weeks. The varied music which they present was an inspiration indeed. The children services averaged 82 in attendance. There were 18 confessions of children at these services, seven of whom were members of other churches in the city. The work among the children was thorough and spiritual, and has left deep impressions upon them.

The average attendance at the 16 church services was 157. There were 18 members who publicly renewed their covenant with the Lord and the church. Five members definitely dedicated their lives for full time service and have already "burned their bridges behind them" in selling their furniture, homes, etc., preparatory to beginning their preparation as the Lord opens the way. There were four confessions other than those listed above who were not members of our church. The meetings closed with a farewell for the Polmans and Bro. Colburn following the Sunday night service.

Our foreign missionary offering started off the best it has for years—over $1300 on the first day and we're headed toward $2,000! The first quarter's reports show every department of the church to be in healthy financial condition with all bills paid, money in every treasury, and sufficient funds accumulated to pay for approximately $500 of repairs.

—Charles H. Ashman, pastor.

EAST CENTRAL DISTRICT

The East Central District young people enjoyed a stirring foreign missionary rally in the West Tenth St. Brethren Church, Friday evening, Mar. 27. The main features of the rally were messages by Bro. Garner Hoyt and Mrs. Nils Jacobson. Mrs. Jacobson is a furloughed missionary from French Equatorial Africa, serving under the Baptist banner. Garner and his wife Mina anticipate an early booking for Africa soon after their graduation from Grace Seminary this spring. About 250 young people were present to enjoy the program. A fine offering was received, and after expenses for the rally were deducted, given to Garner and Mina, to be used to assist in the purchasing of their outfit for Africa.

The Ashland church very graciously entertained the visiting guests in their newly constructed basement at the close of the service. Singing, serving of cookies and cold chocolate milk were enjoyed by all. Bro. Mayes and his people are skilled hosts.

—R. E. Gingrich, Director of Young People's Work.

NEWS BRIEFS From Our Workers

Words of appreciation for the Herald have come to the Herald office from Mr. and Mrs. Ralph McConahay, members of The Brethren Church who are living in HONOLULU, HAWAII. In their letter, dated in March, they state, "This has been a rather hectic week—it started with an air raid alarm last Sunday during Sunday School, and ended with another today; and in the middle of the week we had a bombing. We work in the First Aid Station, so go to duty when the alarms sound. We surely appreciate the Herald—it finally reaches us, and we're glad the war hasn't 'blacked out' our receiving it."

Bro. Russell Williams, pastor of the NEW TROY, MICH., church, reports an attendance of 86 at Bible School on Resurrection Day, 70 at morning worship and 60 for the evening service. A foreign offering of $56.51 was received in the morning.

The CLEVELAND, OHIO, congregation doubled their goal for foreign missions on Easter Sunday with an offering of $700.

The Young People's Chorus of the ELLET, .O, church gave a musical presentation of the suffering and death of Christ on the evening of Good Friday. The various moods and scenes were displayed by lights. On the previous Sunday, the pastor, Bro. R. E. Gingrich, completed the seventh year of his ministry in this church.

The SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA District Mission Board is planning a program to place the Brethren Churches of the district on the radio for a daily broadcast.

BRO. AND SISTER FRED TAYLOR, who will be remembered for their musical contributions by those who attended the last National Fellowship at Winona Lake, Ind., are ministering every Saturday night at the Benton Harbor (Mich.) City Mission. They are using their Hawaiian guitars, steel saws, glass tumblers, and Victortheramin in these services.

Mrs. Walter Jordan of the KITTANNING, PA., church writes, "We welcome into our midst, Rev. and Mrs. Arthur Malles from Covington, Va. Rev. Malles has accepted the call as pastor of the First Brethren Church, West Kittanning, Pa. The pastor and his wife arrived in Kittanning, Apr. 6. We are happy to have such consecrated workers to minister to us. May the Lord richly bless the ministry as we labor together."

Bro. Henry Rempel, pastor at FLORA, IND., writes, "Had three confessions last night, one a high school teacher of our local school —a real victory. I preached on security, and it brought three adults."

Bro. Blaine Snyder, pastor of the Campbell Brethren Church of LAKE ODESSA, MICH., sends in these news items: "Rev. Homer Kent was here with us for Easter Sunday. We had very fine audiences, both morning and evening. There were some who were present for the first time since we have been here. In the evening we had a slide lecture on "The Holy City." There were about 80 present. Our foreign missions offering will pass the $200 point. On Monday, Apr. 6, our church folks and a group of other friends surprised us by gathering at the parsonage to help us celebrate our first wedding anniversary. They presented us with a fine purse toward the purchase of an "easy" chair. There were 50 here. On Saturday evening the writer united in marriage Miss Evelyn Price and Richard Biork. The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride's parents. A reception for friends and relatives followed."

The First Brethren Church of DAYTON, OHIO, has formed a Radio Club, made up of those who support their weekly broadcast by personal gifts or personal prayer. The members help to plan the radio work.

HOW WILLIAM COLGATE GAVE TO GOD

Many years ago a lad of 16 years left home to seek his fortune. As he trudged along he met an old man, a captain of a canal boat, and the following conversation took place:

"Well, William, where are you going?"

"I don't know," he answered: "I must make a living for myself."

"There is no trouble about that," said the captain. "Be sure you start right, and you'll get along finely."

William told his old friend that the only trade he knew anything about was soap and candle making.

"Well," said the old man, "let me pray with you once more, and give you a little advice, and then I will let you go."

They kneeled down upon the tow path and prayed, and then the old captain gave him this advice: "Someone will soon be the leading soapmaker in New York. It can be you as well as anyone. I hope it may. Be a good man; give your heart to Christ; give the Lord all that belongs to Him of every dollar you earn; make an honest soap; give a full pound; and I am certain you will yet be a prosperous and rich man."

The boy arrived in the city. Lonesome and far from home he remembered his mother's words and the last words of the canal-boat captain. He was led to "seek first the kingdom of God and His righteousness," and united with the church. The first dollar he earned brought up the question of the Lord's part. In the Bible he found the Jews were commanded to give one-tenth. So he said, "If the Lord will take one-tenth, I will give that." And he did: 10c on every $1.00 were sacred to the Lord. He engaged in the soap business, made an honest soap, gave a full pound, and instructed his bookkeeper to open an account with his Lord, and carry one-tenth of his income to that account. He prospered, and grew rich faster than he had ever hoped. He then gave the Lord two-tenths, and prospered more than ever. Then he gave three-tenths, then four-tenths, then five-tenths. This is the story of William Colgate, who gave millions of dollars to the Lord's cause, and left a name that will never die.

HOW LONG SINCE YOU LAST WENT OUT AFTER A SINNER?

My Answer

The Habit of Criticism

One of the elements which Satan is using today as never before is the habit of criticism. The increasing world emergency is finding many Christians unprepared. Their loins are not girt with truth. The intensifying of pressure upon unfortified spirits causes many to slump into a desultory state of mind. In days of peace they did not press on to find soul satisfaction in fellowship with Christ, and so when the crisis comes this unhealthy attitude finds release in looking at the sins of others. People feel so much better about their own sins when they think that others are worse than they are. Pride is bolstered, self-righteousness grows as folks dwell on the failures and misdeeds of their companions. Many Christians seem to think that when they become more critical they become more spiritual, whereas the opposite is the fact.

Fear is another force that is driving many to criticism. Different public speakers are going from community to community peddling tales of the misdeeds and excesses that are mounting in the world. When believers are loaded with inflammable news and yet are not given directions as to what they can do about it, they become burdened with a sense of frustration. An attitude of helplessness fills their thoughts and their talk becomes a dribble of faultfinding.

How we need the injunction of the Prophet Hosea, "Turn ye to the stronghold, ye prisoners of hope." One real survey from the watchtower of God's word will clear our heads. A steady diet of eternal truth will satisfy our hearts and give us a song of victory. Drinking great draughts at the fountain will make our spirits soar and our courage high.

How Satan loves to spoil the fellowship of believers by getting them to live in a state of critisism and sensitiveness. How he takes delight in seeing our spirits soured. Is it not true that the practice of looking at the sins of others paralyzes the soul-winning arm of the church, and nullifies her testimony? We need to listen to warning of the apostle James "Be not many masters, for ye shall receive the greater condemnation." In other words, don't try to run everybody's business; when the day of reckoning comes you will share in the guilt of those you have criticised without helping.

Let us look up; "the day of your redemption draweth nigh."—Fred Kendal.

ETERNITY

"Eternity! time soon will end,
 Its fleeting moments pass away;
Oh, sinner, say, where will thou spend
 Eternity's unchanging day?
Shalt thou the hopeless horror see,
Of hell for all eternity?

Eternity! but Jesus died—
 Yes, Jesus died on Calvary;
Behold Him! thorn-crowned, crucified;
 The spotless One made sin for thee!
O sinner, haste—for refuge flee!
He saves, and for eternity!

Today may be thy last (last!) breath,
 Thy little moment here be done;
Eternal woe—the second death—
 Awaits the grace-neglecting one.
Thine awful destiny foresee—
Time ends, and then—eternity."

"Gather Together In His Name"

The following, written by a former member of the Fremont, O. church and now a member at Dayton, O., who has been in camp since last September, has been sent to the Herald office. We are glad to share it with our readers, knowing that many are vitally interested in our young people in camps. —Ed.

By BERYL PRICE

Brethren, Baptist, Lutheran—all dwindled into relative insignificance as three soldiers found fellowship in the unity of Christ. How humbling it is to realize that one is the focal point of many promised prayers, the recipient of hourly personal blessings which are initiated by the bowed heads, contrite hearts, and the pleadings of God's children hundreds of miles away.

The unique manner in which the Lord brought Dave, Roy and myself together was in itself providential. Besides this friendship came a Bible class, and half-hour daily evening devotional period in the chapel, and the resulting rejoicing as two soldiers have accepted Christ as their personal Savior.

The trinity of our fellowship has recently been severed by Roy's squadron being one of the first to pull out for a port of embarkation. Our last meeting together yielded two expressions of words which seemed to us quite applicable and full of assurance. The Lord needs "Frontline Christians": so He first chose this one of us whose spirit and indomitable courage were outstanding in the Lord. Our partin expression was, "So long, see you later—for sure" (Cor. 15:19). God's Word seems peculiarly fashioned for a soldier's life!

Letters of encouragement from family, church and friends, gospel literature, and the undeniable prayer answers, provide our little Christian group with mutual partaking of that peace that passeth understanding. From this we heartily recommend to all fellowmen-in-arms the completeness of the overshadowing wings above (Ps. 36:7), His guardian angel around (Ps. 91:11), His everlasting arms underneath (Deut. 33:27), and His peace within (Ps. 22:8).

Why We're Here

An old Bible prophet, in flowing robes standing beside a state road—he knows the purpose and desire of the driver of each car as they pass. These are his thoughts:

What's your hurry? Slow down brother,
Stop a-while, and chat with friend.
Why the rush? Where are you going?
Let's meditate, and rest, and plan.

What's your hurry? Perhaps, brother,
You may gain the whole world's wealth;
But when you win it, won't you trade it
All back again, sir, for your health?

What's your hurry? Listen, brother,
Need you rush so into sin?
Wait a bit—when have you listened
To that still small voice within?

What's our hurry? God in heaven
Help your rushing people see
That their purpose here in living
Is preparedness—for eternity.

THIS YEAR

What 1942 will bring forth none knows. War may force us to revolutionize our mode of living, and may have its effect upon public worship. This present year will test both the loyalty of our citizens to their government, and the loyalty of church members t their Lord. God grant that we might be found faithful and loyal to both God and country! The perso who is the best prepared to face any possible emergency, and even death, in 1942, is the Christian. I you have not given your heart to the Lord, you bette do so now!—Waynesboro, Pa., Bulletin.

"His Faithfulness" - - DR. GRIBBLE'S LAST MESSAGE

NOTE:—This is the last message to be received by the editor from the pen of Dr. Florence Gribble.

It is indeed a wonderful thing for our frail and finite minds, as we attempt to grasp the infinite One, that we need not form at one time a complete concept of Himself; for His attributes are presented to us, as the hand of the parent is presented to the toddling child. And one of His attributes to which we can cling with the greatest assurance is His faithfulness.

The extent of His marvelous faithfulness no man can measure, for it reacheth indeed unto the clouds (Ps. 36:5). Unto the clouds indeed! Figuratively, it is in the dark and clouded hours of our lives that His faithfulness is most clearly manifested. It is in the high thing, the thing which we cannot reach nor comprehend nor understand—it is in these things that His faithfulness shines out, radiant and joyous. Unto the clouds! Literally so, indeed, for His faithfulness shall reach unto those clouds which shall surround and become the chariot for His own coming! Behold, He cometh with clouds; and until that joyous event, shall we not continue to rely upon His faithfulness? Let us pray, then, for one another as we pass through the dark and clouded days of war and of tribulation. Let us pray for His coming, for these very clouds shall form His chariot as He comes in faithfulness.

Oh, what is the magnitude of His faithfulness! Simile and metaphor fail Jeremiah as He exclaims (Lam. 3:23) in majestic simplicity: "Great is Thy faithfulness!" It was an event which has aroused a sleeping world—the sinking of the Zam Zam. How could it have been except for the marvelous faithfulness of God, that not a single life on that crowded boat was lost? The Kings Business gives an incident which answers this question:

> "But later, when the two men spread their wet clothing on the German raider's rail, the older man picked up the Testament, soiled and bedraggled. Reverently he thumbed the pages, opening and spreading it in the sun to dry.
> "Suddenly words seemed to leap from the open pages. God was speaking again, as centuries before He had spoken to His servant on the seas:
> "'Now I exhort you to be of good cheer; for there shall be no loss of any man's life among you, but of the ship'," (Acts 27:22).

Yes, it was the magnitude of His faithfulness which included every passenger on that ship, and saved every life. Shall we not, as missionaries and fellow helpers, continue to pray that God, in the magnitude of His faithfulness, will continue to extend His grace to those yet unreached in Oubangui-Chari, until all shall have heard the gospel?

In Isa. 11:5 we read: "Faithfulness shall be the girdle of his loins." Oh, the permanency of such a faithfulness! Shall we not apply it to our own mission work? Worn, weary missionaries, depleted in numbers and in strength, holding on—to what? A forlorn hope? No! for "faithfulness is the girdle of His loins!" Missionaries essaying to come forth, driven back by disaster, and finding conditions so changed that only a miracle can thrust them forth again! That miracle shall be worked! As I write, one of these missionaries, Miss Byron, accompanied by two others, equally valiant but having had a lesser history of misfortune, is arriving at Bangui.

Shall we not pray for Miss Byron, Mrs. Kenned and Miss Emmert, as they commence a new term service? Shall we not praise God Who, because "faith fulness is the girdle of His loins," has brought the safely through?

The Psalmist speaks again in words of encourag ment of the promise of God. Ps. 89:33: "Neverthele my lovingkindness will I not utterly take from hi nor suffer my faithfulness to fail." Even in chaste ing He is faithful; and the chaos which we ha wrought for ourselves becomes solid ground, as v step out anew, relying on the faithfulness of God.

Shall we not ask God for His cleansing that we m be vessels meet for the Master's use? For His kee ing that we may not fall? For His guidance that may not err? Shall we not praise Him that in pa failures and sins, He has not utterly taken His lovin kindness from us, nor suffered His faithfulness fail?

The Israelites gathered their manna daily. So wi God's lovingkindness and faithfulness; for (Ps. 92: we may shew forth His lovingkindness in the mornir and His faithfulness every night! But do we?

Let us gather our manna daily in the early mornir watch, relying upon His faithfulness to meet us ther And there, alone with Him, let us present as nev before the mission, the missionaries and their nee the native church and its leaders and membershi Let the wakeful hours of the night be spent with Hi

Then shall we indeed show forth the results of o participation in that double repast. His lovingkin ness in the morning and His faithfulnesss at nigh

In Heb. 2:17, we read of our merciful and faithf High Priest. How we should praise God for Him Wh thus continually presents us before the throne grace! And shall we not also continue the more intercede in these dark days of tribulation?

In Heb. 3:2, we read of the Lord Jesus Who w faithful to Him that appointed Him. Oh, wondro

Editorials - - By DR. L. S. BAUMAN

GOOD NIGHT, SISTER GRIBBLE!

"DR. GRIBBLE PASSED AWAY PEACEFULLY LAST MONTH.* FEVER." So read a brief cable a few days ago received from Joseph H. Foster, acting Superintendent of our work in French Equatorial Africa.

It was enough. While we were not surprised, knowing the state of Dr. Gribble's health, yet it came as a distinct shock. Our work in Africa will go forward. If our Lord shall tarry, it will increase in power. Thousands upon thousands will come to know the Lord who have yet to hear His name. But, to the writer, the work will never seem quite the same with Dr. Gribble out of the picture. She has been too intimately a part of it from its incipiency. To think of that work has been to think of James and Florence Gribble.

Almost forty years ago a young streetcar conductor wandered into the First Brethren Church in Philadelphia. I shall never forget seeing him stand one Sunday morning in the little old frame church that then was, joining in an invitation hymn. Suddenly he closed the book, walked down the aisle and gave me his hand, accepting Christ as his Saviour. Thus I came to know James S. Gribble.

Almost immediately after his conversion, he heard the call of his Lord to serve on the African mission field. That is quite a story of itself, but cannot be told here.

Enroute to his field, he met Miss Florence Newberry, M.D.—also enroute to the same mission field. It resulted in a marriage. A love beautiful to behold was theirs after marriage as well as before, until the day (June 4, 1923) when James S. Gribble heard the call of his Lord to the fields of glory beyond this vale of tears.

When James Gribble first went to Africa, and prior to his marriage, his was a mission of faith, under the direction of the Africa Inland Mission. For a number of years it was—in fact until his work became a part of the Foreign Missionary work of The Brethren Church.

It was in the year 1914 that the attention of The Foreign Missionary Society was called to the work of Mr. and Mrs. Gribble and they were called to undertake the opening of a work under our Board in French Equatorial Africa.

In 1917 Mr. and Mrs. Gribble, with the addition of Miss Estella Myers and Miss Mae Snyder, formed the pioneer group of missionaries and set sail for Africa.

The French Government put up the stop-sign at Brazzaville—the door to the interior of French Equatorial Africa. However, this was not a party to retreat in dismay, even before a mighty Gentile Government. The famous "Siege of Brazzaville" was on and continued for two years.

In 1919 Mr. and Mrs. Antoine Rollier joined this pioneer party at Brazzaville. About August 1 of that year they finally won the battle and, with the exception of Miss Snyder who was temporarily working with another mission, they proceeded up the Sanga River to Carnot. Enroute on the river boat, Mrs. Rollier went home to be with her Lord. With the homegoing of Mrs. Gribble, only one of that original missionary party remains—Miss Estella Myers, still toiling valiently on for her Lord on the African field. However, they died not in vain. Their holy ambition has been realized. In the heart of French Equatorial lies the great Oubangui-Chari country with hundreds of tribes. That great field is now open to the ambassadors of the Cross. Tens of thousands have heard the story and thousands have entered into the kingdom of God.

In the homegoing of Dr. Gribble, we have not merely lost an able physician and workman—we have lost a tremendous "influence." Whether she knew it or not, the influence of Dr. Florence Gribble was more potent than her actual deeds. Mrs. Gribble was an intensely spiritual soul. She was an ardent believer in the efficacy of prayer. Her very presence always created a most wholesome spiritual atmosphere, all of which is so essential to a successful mission work upon fields where gross heathen darkness prevails. Her counsel and advice was always of great value to the Board at home and to the missionaries on the field. Ordinarily the Board can find a workman to pick up the reins where a missionary, called home, faithfulness, not only to us, but to His Father God! Oh, marvelous integrity of the High Priest of our profession! Shall we not, humbly bowing before Him seek an integrity of faithfulness, similar, though not equal to His? Shall not we too desire, because of His faithfulness, to be faithful to Him Who has appointed us?

How marvelous are the manifestations of His faithfulness! A faithful creator! (I Pet. 4:9). A faithful One who has called us! (I Thess. 5:24). A faithful Advocate to forgive us! (I Jn. 1:9). A faithful Friend to establish us! (I Thess. 3:3). Therefore, we must not only pray, relying on His faithfulness. We must testify in declaring that faithfulness—to whom? To all, but especially to the heathen who yet wait for the revelation of His faithfulness through us.

Then may we truly say with the Psalmist (40:10).

"I have not hid thy righteousness within my heart; I have declared thy faithfulness and thy salvation: I have not concealed thy lovingkindness and thy truth from the great congregation."

Who is this "great congregation?" Is it not made up of those who are to be called out from the nations, to form His body which is the church, the fulness of Him Who filleth all in all?

* We believe that there is an error in the cable. Mr. Foster would hardly have been so indefinite as to say: "Last month." We are inclined to believe that the cable should have read "Last Monday." If that is correct, then Mrs. Gribble went home to be with her Lord on March 30. However, we must await further information from Africa as to the exact date of her death.

has laid them down; but, it is going to be an extremely difficult task for the Board to find somebody to fill the place that Dr. Gribble has vacated. However, God makes no mistakes and though He may bury his foremost workman, He knows where to find the great soul that is necessary to carry on. In this knowledge we take courage and go forward.

Dr. Gribble was not only effective as a missionary on the field, but she was extremely valuable in doing deputation work at home. The spiritual life of every church she contacted received a new and wholesome impetus.

Likewise, her pen was very forceful. Her articles were greatly sought by the foremost missionary periodicals of Evangelical Christendom. There are a number of these on file in the office of our Society and will appear again from time to time in the columns of The Brethren Missionary Herald. Her writings will live and merit repeating from time to time. Her book, "Undaunted Hope," is already out of print save for a few copies still in the possession of our office.

Recently we received from South Africa the manuscript for a new book entitled, "Stranger Than Fiction." Mrs. Bauman has just completed the reading of this manuscript and pronounces it one of the best things she has ever read and for years she has been an omnivorous reader of missionary books. It deals with remarkable answers to prayer in the lives of missionaries known to Mrs. Gribble in her long experience on the fields. Doubtless, the Foreign Board will order its publication as a valuable addition to the missionary literature, not only of The Brethren Church, but of Evangelical missions everywhere.

James S. Gribble was a man who our Lord Himself would reckon as truly great. Such is my opinion. At the same time I recognize that his great spiritual power was due in no small measure to the influence of a great wife.

Now they who were separated on the dark fields of Africa eighteen years ago, have joined hands once again, but on the fields Elysian, basking forever in the light of the face fo Him Whom they so greatly loved and so faithfully served. We could not wish them back; but, we miss them! Their loss to our work seems almost irreparable, but it is not so! God lives and the work that James and Florence Gribble and Miss Estella Myers began with such dauntless courage, will continue glorious in its results until Jesus comes. God cannot fail to bless and prosper the work that these faithful servants began, and for which all but one have, to date, laid down life itself and counted it privilege and not sacrifice.

In the meantime. Good Night, Sister Gribble! We'll be seeing you in the morning!

THE FIRST FRUITS OF OUR EASTER OFFERING

If we are to judge by the first fruits of our Easter Offering that have been reported to us, the Foreign Missionary Society of The Brethren will have the greatest foreign missionary offering it is history. Only a few churches have as yet made any report to us, but in every case where a report has reached our ears there hase been a material increase over the gifts of last year in that church. Here are some examples.

Last year the West Tenth Street Church of Ashland, Ohio, gave $439.61; this year $664.00, and going higher. Last year that fine little church at Sterling, Ohio, contributed $379.45; this year $587.00 and going up. Last year the church at Cleveland, Ohio, contributed $431.96; this year $700 to date. Last year the First Church at Peru, Indiana, gave $232.35; this year $415.56, and reaching for a $450 goal post. Last year the Second Brethren Church of Los Angeles contributed $1,911.33; this year it has passed the mark, and we are assured that it will reach $2,000 or over. Last year the First Church of Philadelphia gave us $2,416.-.34; this year the pastor informs us that their offering is already around $2,700, in spite of the fact that they are raising the funds for their new church. Last year that fine little country church east of Berne, Indiana, that some folks have described as being "out in the sticks," went over the top with an offering of $1,087; this year it has blown its top to smithereens with an offering of $1,857, and probably will go higher. Now what do you think of that? We could wish that some of our fine city churches were "out in the sticks!" We are not sure that the folks in Paradise know what is going on on the face of the earth, but if they do, John Parr is a happy man today.

The pastor of the First Brethren Church of Long Beach was a bit skeptical as to whether or not his church would pass the last year's Easter Offering of $10,890.60, and even a bit more skeptical about passing the fiscal year offering of $11,218.80. But, believe it or not, the First Brethren Church of Long Beach has passed all its former marks with a gift of over $12,000, and we are viewing a goal post of $13,000. As to this last mark, however, the pastor is still a bit skeptical; but "here's hopin'!" However, we are rejoicing.

What the Brethren Church now needs, more than money, is prevailing prayers that God will open the barred doors and permit our missionaries on furlough to get back to their tasks. Every last one of them is "rarin' to go." The Sheldons are longing. The Wilare itching. The Sickles are stamping. The Williamses are frenzied. The Jobsons are raging. The Hoyts are hankering. Miss Snyder is yearning. Miss Crawford is already hoping.

If the government doesn't soon grant the passports and ships provide the reservations, one of these days nothing is going to keep some of these missionaries from starting to swim! Then what?

Anyhow, brothers and sisters, we ask you to lay hold on God. This is His work, and He will bless it; but He wants us to enter into His passion for lost souls and to pray. That is a mystery—why He should wait on us to pray—but nevertheless our Lord declared that it is even so.

NOTICE TO ALL PASTORS

Bear in mind that our Easter Offering this year must be in the treasurer's hands in Long Beach on or before May 30th. On June 1st the fiscal year for the Foreign Missionary Society will hereafter begin. The present fiscal year is therefore a year of only eleven months. Pushing the fiscal year forward one month has been made necessary in order to compile the Easter Offering Report and then to follow it with our Annual Report which should be published and in the hands of the members of the Foreign Missionary Society prior to the Annual National Fellowship of Brethren Churches.

Please do not forget this important notice, and act accordingly. See to it that those whose duties it is to prepare the report and forward the offering to our office understand this thoroughly. Offerings received on June 1st or after will of course go into the treasury and be used for the work, the same as any other; but such offerings will not form a part of the Easter Offering Report, but will form a part of the report of the annual offering of such church for the fiscal year beginning June 1, 1942—that is, "next year's offering."

GIRLS SOLD FOR TAXES

According to a report published in the Wesleyan Methodist, "The Japanese Government spends annually 46% of the national revenue in maintaining the army and navy. Result: Japanese farmers must pay 60% of their earnings in taxes. Further result: No less than 30,000 Japanese girls have been sold to help pay these taxes." Such is the story of a Godless, militant, pagan people. How glad we are in America. However, Americans, were it not for the Christ and His Word that our fathers brought with them to America, who knows but that today, in America, we might be selling our children in order to pay our taxes. God help us that it may never come to that. How this poor old world needs Christ! Assuredly, it is the supeme business of every Christian, "To know the Christ and to make Him known."

IS THE EDITOR A JEW?

Again and again the editor of The Brethren Missionary Herald has been accused of being a Jew. The accusation comes from those who do not know him personally, but who have read his writings, especially the book Light From Bible Prophecy, and the book The Time of Jacob's Trouble.

Well, the editor is not a Jew, but if he were, he would not be ashamed of it. In fact, if he had Jewish blood in his veins, he would be proud of every drop of it. It was Jewish blood that was shed for his redemption on Calvary's tree. The hope of Life Eternal for every individual in this world is forever linked with the shedding of Jewish blood. That is the reason the Devil hates the Jew, as he does, and seeks for his destruction.

Who is going to win this war? It is the editor's belief that this war is going to be won by those who are friendly to the Jew. Adolf Hitler is a doomed man.

A MULTI-MILLIONAIRE'S TESTIMONY

We sometimes hear it said that hard-headed practical men discount the doctrine of substitutional atonement through the blood of Christ as impractical and unreasonable. One is hardly prepared to say that J. Pierpont Morgan was not one of the most hard-headed practical men that the world has ever produced. He was just hardheaded and practical enough that in his lifetime he amassed one of the greatest fortunes that a human being in this world ever possessed. In his day he was probably the world's outstanding financier. J. Pierpont Morgan made his will in the year of his death, and in this will he declared: "I commit my soul into the hands of my Savior, full of confidence that, having redeemed it and washed it with His precious blood, He will present it faultless before the throne of my Heavenly Father . . . I entreat my children to maintain and defend, at all hazards and at any cost of personal sacrifice, the blessed doctrine of complete atonement for sin through the blood of Jesus Christ once offered, and through that alone."

While speaking on this subject of the attitude of great men on the subject of the atonement, we might refer to Prof. James Orr, who perhaps was as great a scholar as any other man of his day. Prof. Orr died in the same year that Morgan died—1913. In almost his last address Prof. Orr took for his text Eph. 1:7, "In Whom we have redemption through His blood, the forgiveness of sins, according to the riches of His grace." How many of our up-to-date modernistic preachers would even think of preaching on a text like that in our day? Verily, the great "falling away" foretold by the Apostle Paul is an outstanding sign that the coming of Christ is upon us and the coming of the Lord draws nigh.

WONDER IS THAT IT DIDN'T KILL HIM

A letter just came to the editor's desk dated Nov. 28, 1941, and signed by Mrs. Foster of the Bouca Station in French Equatorial Africa. It took this letter exactly four months to make the trip. We certainly wish this war were over. However, we got a smile from Mrs. Foster's letter and will pass it along to others. Brother and Sister Foster are the only white people on their station and sometimes they see no other white faces but their own for months. Sister Foster says:

> "We wrote and told you that Klievers were with us for a vacation. We all had one at the same time . . . Joe nearly talked himself and Jake sick. No wonder Jake got sick! Imagine a man being alone for months with no one to talk to, but a woman! Then have the company of a man all of a sudden! Well! Nugh said. Anyway, we felt that the Lord was very good to us to give them to us for three precious weeks."

Then Sister Foster closes her letter by saying:

> "Perhaps we will have some fresh (?) news next time!"

Not until this war is over! However, stale news is better than no news at all.

THE MISSIONARIES IN THE FAR EAST

Missionaries everywhere and always need the supporting prayer of Christians, but never more than now. Ever since Japan attacked China, the office of the missionary has held increasing hazards. Japan has made it as difficult as possible for them; and now that America and Britain are Japan's active enemies, no doubt much of her hatred will be poured out on the heads of missionaries. We need to stand with them in prayer. It would be a fine thing if churches appointed special periods for prayer on behalf of the workers in all the Far East.

In spite of the difficulties attending the preaching of the gospel in foreign parts, there is encouraging news of revival in many directions. Dr. W. Wilson Cash, who has been for 16 years secretary of the Church Missionary Society (Church of England), speaking of revival, recently said:

> "It has not come to England yet, but it is coming. Meanwhile tens of thousands are being swept into the kingdom in Africa and other parts of the world. Even China today, in spite of war, is seeing bigger things for the Christian church than ever before in its history."

Orthodox believers will be glad to know that Dr. Cash, a devout evangelical, has been made Bishop of Worcester (England).

Pray for world-wide revival. Pray for the missionaries everywhere; but as a special burden, remember daily those who are laboring in all the lands and islands of the Far East.—Moody Monthly.

Our Loss is Her Gain

By MISS MABEL CRAWFORD, Missionary On Furlough

Our hearts have been made heavy this past week with the word of the passing of our beloved friend and senior missionary, Dr. Florence N. Gribble. With her homegoing, it is impossible for us who are left not to feel that things will never be quite the same again. We will miss her very much, both on the field and here at home, for many years to come.

And yet, in our own great loss and sorrow, we dare not grieve for her, because we realize that her joy must be indescribable, as she is now in the presence of Him Whom she so dearly loved and so faithfully served, through many a long year, and under many difficult circumstances. Truly our loss is her gain, as she has been ushered into the presence of her Lord, heard His "Well done, good and faithful servant," and entered into the reward prepared for her. It is impossible for us to imagine the greatness of her joy today in the blessed presence of her Lord, and also in that of her companion who went on before her.

Dr. Gribble, returning from a furlough taken in South Africa, joined her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Harold H. Dunning, at Leopoldville, Belgian Congo, as they were en route to the field. The above picture was taken on an African river boat, the "Fondere," en route to Bangui, on March 1, 1941.

After the first few moments' grief at the word of Dr. Gribble's "release upward," came the note of thanksgiving; because God had so graciously permitted her frail, tired body sufficient strength to stay with us, until she saw the satisfying of some of the greatest desires of her heart. We who knew her best knew some of her deep heart yearnings, and are thankful that many of those yearnings were changed into facts. Most dear of all was her desire to see her only daughter in the work which had cost her husband's life, and which was so precious to her. That desire wes exceedingly fulfilled when Dr. Gribble had the privilege of welcoming to the field her daughter and son-in-law. And then, to make her cup of joy brim over, she was granted the privilege of welcoming into this world her first grandchild, little Marguerite Ruth Dunning. How gracious and kind has been God's wonderful care!

Even in her "homegoing," I am sure that Dr. Gribble would never have chosen anything different if she had had the final choice. I know that her heart would have broken with grief if she had been forced to spend her last days in America and away from the people and places she loved. I can picture just now her last earthly resting place, in the little tree-shaded cemetery beside the Bassai church; there beside her beloved husband gone on ahead these many years, and Brother Kennedy, waiting for that triumphant trumpet sound which shall herald our Lord's return. She would never have chosen any other as a last resting place than that one, there in the presence of her loved ones, among the people for whom she gave the best part of her life.

There are hundreds of black people whose grief mingles with ours at this time, as they realize they have lost a friend and "mother." Her love, sympathy, and interest in the natives was boundless; and to many, her loss can never be repaired. How thankful I am that she "sleeps" among them, and that her grave will ever be a silent testimony to them of "love unto death." Yes, God has been gracious unto her, even to the choosing of her final resting place; and for that, I thank Him. She has stepped within the pearly gates; the veil has been lifted, and she has seen Him face to face; and she has entered into her eternal reward. Thus, in our grief and loss, we must praise Him who has done for her "exceeding abundantly above all that we could ask or think."

CONSERVING ON THE CHURCH

While it is true that we must all conserve our cars, and especially tires, for "the duration", we must take care not to do all of the conserving on the church. God will not bless those who take pleasure trips and do unnecessary driving and then stay home from Church because tires are thin!

Union and Reunion

((James S. Gribble and Florence Newberry, two great lovers and servants of God, separated by the home-going of James on June 4th, 1923, are united once again, never to part again. The editor felt that the story of the first union would be of special interest just now. We shall let Dr. Gribble herself tell the story. We quote from her book, "Undaunted Hope").

"The time was now ripe for the wedding. Step by step the Lord would lead them. So the bans, which must be published for 16 days before a wedding could take place in the Belgian Congo, were posted at once; and August 12, 1913, was set for the wedding day. . . .

The four ladies were domiciled together in one house with one room only. The gentlemen were lodged wherever possible; some with Mr. Gribble, some in the Stauffachers' brick house. . . . Was there ever such a hustle and bustle of preparation? With a party of six leaving for the interior, with a wedding to take place before they left, with packing, unpacking, repacking —and all in such crowded space and limited time— the moments would have been full had things gone smoothly. But alas, they did not.

Thieves seemed to be stirred to new action by the advent of the new missionaries and such apparent wealth. They must explore the ladies' house again, since there were new ladies with new and strange possessions.

The ladies kept whistles under their pillows; and with the advent of thieves, brought what came to be known as the Pajama Brigade immediately to their rescue. But the gentlemen, so bravely rushing to the defense of the beseiged ladies, were themselves more than once robbed. Mr. Morris returned to his cot one night to find it minus his sleeping bag; and what was James Gribble's consternation, on returning from a hasty rescue trip, to find his own house had been entered in spite of the padlock on the door, and the box containing his wedding clothes stolen! It was a poor outlook for the wedding on both sides, as far as clothes were concerned. Some of the bride's wedding garments arrived after the wedding, and she had to be married in borrowed shoes. Her own had arrived from distant Nairobi just in time, and were by some strange fatality both for the left foot. To make a long story short, we say that Mr. Morris and Mr. Gribble, feeling they had lost the very necessities of life, took the matter to the Lord in prayer, claiming unitedly Phil. 4:19.

Not long after, Mr. Morris' sleeping bag was found early one morning, suspended to a nearby tree, and the box containing Mr. Gribble's wedding clothes was found not far distant from the station in the long grass. So marvelously did God work in the hearts of heathen, and so far as the young men knew, unrepentant thieves! . . .

At last the wedding day arrived. Mr. Morris was to perform the wedding ceremony according to the ritual of the Church of England. Miss Harland was to be bridesmaid; Mr. Batstone, also English, the best man. So it was decided to have a truly English wedding, which would relieve the bride and groom of a great deal of responsibility.

In the hospitable Stauffacher home a bamboo arch was arranged, under which the bridal party was to stand. The Belgian Government official arrived early in the morning at the mission station, to "hold court" and attend the wedding. The civil ceremony, therefore, took place early in the morning; and then the party dispersed to prepare for the religious ceremony.

As Mr. Stauffacher began to play the strains of the wedding march, the bride and bridesmaid were to

Gleanings FROM THE PEN OF C. T. STUDD

From a volume prepared by Dr. Norman P. Grubb

(NOTE—Dr. Norman P. Grubb has prepared a volume which reveals the spirit and character of one of Africa's greatest missionaries; namely C. T. Studd. Some excerpts from this volume will be of interest to the readers of THE BRETHREN MISSIONARY HERALD, inasmuch as C. T. Studd was a very close friend of the founders of our African mission, Mr. and Mrs. James S. Gribble. Mrs. Gribble writes in her book on the life of James Gribble, "Undaunted Hope," as follows:

"We must now briefly return to the events of 1910. While Mr. John W. Stauffacher and his companion, James Gribble, had been exploring in the vicinity of Mahagi in that year, a most remarkable man had been making a similar journey in English territory just north of them. This man was C. T. Studd, already well known to missionary enterprise and endeavor, through his association with the China Inland Mission (having been a member of the famous 'Cambridge Seven') and through his subsequent remarkable work in India. Mr. Studd penetrated further into Africa than Mr. Stauffacher and Mr. Gribble, and returning to England, organized a band of workers to come forth with him and occupy the land. . . .

"It did not take long to discover that the veteran warrior, C. T. Studd, and the young soldier, James S. Gribble, were kindred spirits. Mr. Studd and Mr. Buxton were at this time unfamiliar with the Lingala language, in which tongue they have since published so much of the Bible and other Christian literature. Nor had they at the time had any opportunity to acquire Kingwana, the trade language of the eastern portion of the district through which they were to pass. Speaking Kingwana, and by this time also the Lur language, James Gribble found himself in a position to render some slight aid to the embryo mission.

"After much prayer, he decided to accompany Mr. Studd and Mr. Buxton as far as Kilo, thus bidding them God-speed on their journey. On May 19, 1913, Mr. Buxton, with the purpose of locating somewhere in the great and yet untouched Azande tribe, numbering 5,000,000 people and co-occupying contiguous territory in the Belgian Congo and the French Sudan, left Gacengu Hill, accompanied by James S. Gribble.

"It was a touching scene, that little prayer meeting held under that trees at Gacengu Hill. It was a tense moment when the three soldiers of the cross moved out with their handful of porters to penetrate the almost unimaginable darkness of the untouched tribes beyond. Through all this territory no other Protestant missionary had at that time ever passed. They found the country densely populated to a varying degree among the various tribes, and the people everywhere eager for the gospel. It was evident to the young man who was accompanying these intrepid soldiers that the language difficulties of opening up the vast district through which they were passing would be enormous.") We quote Dr. Studd:

There are more than twice as many Christian uniformed officers at home among peaceful Britain's 40,000,000 evangelized inhabitants, than the whole number of Christ's forces fighting at the front among 1,200,000,000,000 heathen! And yet, such call themselves soldiers of Christ! What do the angels call them, I wonder? The "Let's-save-Britain-first" brigade are in the succession of the "I-pray-thee-have-me-excused" apostles.

Christ's call is to feed the hungry, not the full; to save the lost, not the stiffnecked; not to call the scoffers, but sinners to repentance; not to build and furnish comfortable chapels, churches, and cathedrals at home in which to rock Christian professors to sleep by means of clever essays, stereotyped prayers and artistic performances, but to raise living churches of souls among the destitute, to capture men from the devil's clutches and snatch them from the very jaws of hell, to enlist and train them for Jesus, and make them into an almighty army of God. But this can be accomplished only by a red-hot, unconventional, unfet- tered Holy Ghost religion, where neither church nor state, neither man nor traditions, are worshipped or preached, but only Christ and Him crucified—not to confess Christ by fancy collars, clothes, silver croziers or gold watch-chain crosses, church steeples or richly embroidered altar-cloths, but by reckless sacrifice and heroism in the foremost trenches.

When in hand-to-hand conflict with the world and the devil, neat little Biblical confectionery is like shooting lions with a pee-shooter: one needs a man who will let himself go and deliver blows right and left as hard as he can hit, trusting in the Holy Ghost. It's experience, not preaching, that hurts the devil and confounds the world, because unanswerable: the training is not that of the schools, but of the market; it's the hot, free heart, and not the balanced head that knocks the devil out. Nothing but forked-lightning Christians will count. A lost reputation is the best degree for Christ's service.

I am more than ever determined that no ring nor limit shall be placed around us, other than that of our Lord Himself: "to the uttermost parts," "to every creature". I belong and will ever belong to "the great God" party. I will have nought to do with "the little God" party.

The difficulty is to believe that He can deign to use such scallywags as us; but of course He wants faith and fools rather than talents and culture. All God wants is a heart. Any old turnip will do for a head. So long as we are empty, all is well, for then He fills with the Holy Ghost.

The fiery baptism of the Holy Ghost will change soft, sleek Christians into hot, lively heroes for Christ, who will advance and fight and die, but not mark time. Let us race to heaven; an accident means dashing into the arms of Jesus—such accidents are God's choicest blessings. Don't be a luggage train.

Hugh Latimer (an English martyr burned at the stake) was an inextinguishable candle; the devil lit him, and ever since has been kicking himself for his folly. Won't someone else tempt the devil to make a fool of himself again?

Nail the colors to the mast! This is the right thing to do; and therefore, that is what we must do, and do it now. What colors? The colors of Christ, the work He has given us to do—the evangelization of all the unevangelized. CHRIST WANTS NOT NIBBLERS OF THE POSSIBLE, BUT GRABBERS OF THE IMPOSSIBLE, by faith in the omnipotence, fidelity and wisdom of the almighty Savior Who gave the command. Is there a wall in our path? By our God we will leap over it! Are there lions and scorpions in our way? We will trample them under our feet! Does a mountain bar our progress? Saying, "Be thou removed and cast into the sea," we will march on. Soldiers of Jesus! Never surrender! Nail the colors to the mast!

Such as look to Jesus become grasshoppers in their own sight, but giants in the estimation of the devil.

"Follow me," says Jesus. "I will," we reply; yet somehow forget that Christ pleased not Himself, deliberately made Himself poor to save others, and became the first foreign missionary. We all pray to be like Jesus, yet refuse to pay the price. How can Dives be like Jesus?

The crumbs of Dives are not a dainty dish to set before King Jesus. Try "cake" for a change, and don't forget to put all you've got into it.

"But what if C. T. dies?" This frequent and foolish question must have its answer. Here it is from C. T. himself. "We will all shout 'Hallelujah!' The world will have lost its biggest fool; and with one fool less to handicap Him, God will do greater wonders still. There shall be no funeral, no wreaths, crepe, nor tears, not even the dead march. Congratulations all round will take place. 'And I, if I be offered up, rejoice and congratulate you; do ye also rejoice and congratulate me' (Phil. 2:17, 18—Lightfoot's Translation). The wedding march, by special request! Our God will still be alive, and nothing else matters. The first Heart of Africa Mission funeral will take place when God dies; but as that will not be till after eternity, cheer up, all. Forward! Every man straight before him. Hallelujah! To die is gain."

"Some wish to live within the sound
Of church or chapel bell;
I want to run a Rescue Shop
Within a yard of hell."

UNION AND RE-UNION

leave their quarters for the Stauffacher mansion, where the groom and best man were to arrive simultaneously. All were to stand under the bamboo arch, and the ceremony was to commence immediately. All would have perhaps gone well if the bride and bridesmaid had not failed to hear the strains of the wedding march. As it was, they were very late, and the minister, bridegroom, and best man were extremely nervous by the time of their arrival.

The bridesmaid was so disconcerted that she forgot to remove the bride's helmet as they entered the door. The bride removed her own, and finding everyone unnerved, decided to remain calm. The prayer book trembled in the minister's hand; the groom forgot the wedding ring until gently reminded; but the nuptial knot was securely re-tied, according to the ring ceremony of the Church of England, and for the second time that day the two were pronounced man and wife. "Till death do you part"—what a vista of years seemed together for the King of kings! And how soon, how very soon, one of the two was to be called higher." . . .

And now, united once more! "Why weepest thou?"

THE BOY SCOUTS of Charleroi, Penna., recently collected wastepaper. Among various and sundry items they found in the collection other than waste paper were seven Bibles. What we are wondering is, were they thrown away as just "waste paper" or were they accidently gathered in the papers? If accidently gathered in the papers it would be no surprise. In many homes the Bible is usually covered up with papers and magazines to such a depth that its testimony is literally swamped. Nothing should ever cover the Word of God. It would be a good thing to leave your Bible open so that in passing you could stop a moment, glance at a passage and try to carry its message with you.

"Standing on the Promises"

By MISS MABEL CRAWFORD

(Note: Another missionary proves "God's Faithfulness."—L.B.S.)

As I sit down to write this first account of God's protection and care over us on our homeward journey, my heart is full of praise and thanksgiving to Him Who so wonderfully revealed to me His ability to stand by and comfort His own, amid the trying events of a sea voyage at such a time as this. Truly His promises are "yea and amen!"

My last few months on the field were characterized by much uncertainty, due principally to my physical condition and the constant reminders that I ought to take furlough in order to regain my strength for future service. To most of us the thought of crossing the troubled seas was not at all pleasant; and yet, to me, the idea of taking furlough in South Africa seemed just as impossible and inadvisable. Much time was spent in thought and study as to just what might be the Lord's best plan and purpose for my furlough time. Into my heart, torn by such uncertainty and indecision, He whispered His first precious promise of a safe homecoming.

It so happened that I was then studying the Psalms in my daily devotions. As I came to Ps. 107, I was particularly struck by a group of verses in it concerning "they that go down to the sea in ships." My own desire to do just that caused me to give them close attention as I read, and thus the Lord spoke His own sweet promise right to my unsettled heart from v. 30: . . . "so He bringeth them unto their desired haven". With that promise as my own, and the reiterated thought that so long as America wasn't actually at war with Germany the danger wasn't very great, I left Bassai for furlough on Dec. 1.

On the way to Bangui, I stopped to bid fellow-workers at Bozoum and Yaloke "goodbye." I was sitting in the home of missionary friends in Bangui, awaiting the boat that would take me down the Congo River, when the stunning news of Pearl Harbor came to us over the radio. Thus, any prop that came to my spirits from America's neutrality was swept away, and I was left resting wholly upon Ps. 107:30. The boat bringing Miss Emmert, Miss Byron, and Mrs. Kennedy to Oubangui-Chari arrived on Dec. 9, and my boat sailed down river on Dec. 11; so I had the privilege of seeing them before I actually left the field.

On my trip down the river to Brazzaville (capital of French Equatorial Africa) and Leopoldville, Belgian Congo, I had the company of friends in the Baptist mission working neighbor to us. When we reached Leopoldville, I was encouraged to make plans to come home by clipper plane. I did so, paying my passage and arranging for my friends to bring my baggage on by boat. They sailed from Matadi the day before Christmas. I expected to reach home ahead of them by flying. After keeping me waiting for a month, the air company finally returned my money and cancelled my passage, because the pilots did not wish to be bothered with women passengers in wartime. So there was nothing left for me but to wait for the next boat early in February.

It looked for a few days as though I might have to make the long trip alone; but, the Lord graciously raised up for me a traveling companion, in the person of a young missionary nurse working in Belgian Congo. How often I praised the Lord for her presence; for during the first three weeks of our voyage, we were the only passengers on a slow American cargo boat carrying a heavy war cargo. At the end of that time, we stopped to load rubber, and picked up five men from the Firestone rubber plantation. That completed our passenger list for the entire trip.

For the most part we had a rather uneventful trip, with quiet seas and very little excitement. The monotonous similarity of scheduled boat drills was shaken up one night by the excitement of donning our life belts and grabbing our emergency kits, when we were challenged by a British patrol boat and couldn't get signals straight. We thought for a few minutes that we were facing a German raider and we worked pretty fast. Ps. 91 was a constant stay to us throughout the entire voyage. We quoted it many times, especially when we would hear of other boats sinking around us. How wonderful to remember that "a thousand shall fall at thy side and ten thousand at thy right hand, but it shall not come nigh thee."

The last few days of our trip were the most trying, as we were nearing the American shore and many S.O.S. calls were coming in over the ship's wireless. On the last Saturday afternoon a tanker was sunk about 40 miles ahead of us. After dark we were close enough to the spot to see the reflection of searchlights from another boat looking for survivors. The next afternoon the captain told me I had better plan to sleep light" that night, for the Germans had gotten three more ships that day. Over the ship there seemed to be a terrible cloud of suspense. I felt the need of reassurance, and went into my cabin and picked up my Bible. It opened of its own accord to Ps. 121, and as I read through those precious promises, deep peace and rest filled my heart. In the French, v. 8 says: "The Lord shall preserve thy departures and arrivals."

After supper on Monday evening, we stood on deck, and watched the lights from various lighthouses off the New England coast gradually grow brighter as we approached, and our hearts were brimming over with joy as we thought of sleeping within protected waters. But even as we watched, we saw a dark cloud falling lower and lower until it wiped out every star, and finally every light along the shore. There we were, so near safety and yet so far! Fearing the rocky coast and possible mine fields, our captain dared not let the ship drift in the dark obliterating fog, so he turned the ship and headed for the open sea.

All that night and the following morning, we wandered, lost, without a ray of sunshine to chart our course. About noon the fog lifted just a little, and the captain got his bearings sufficiently to bring the boat into water shallow enough to anchor. There we sat all the rest of Tuesday and all day Wednesday, waiting for the fog to lift. It was so dense we could barely see 50 feet off the ship. Those hours of helpless waiting frayed everyone's nerves more than the entire crossing had done.

On Wednesday afternoon I picked up my Bible which was lying open on my bed, and found myself glancing at Isa. 26:3, 4 . . . "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on thee: because he trusteth in thee. Trust ye in the Lord forever, for in the Lord Jehovah is everlasting strength."

Late that afternoon the fog began to lift. Our boat made its way slowly into harbor; and about midnight

Itinerating Through the Village In Karreland

By MISS ESTELLA MYERS, Bassai, Oubangui-Chari, F. E. A.

Oct. 24. Brother Kleiver left this morning with Miss Crawford, to take her to Bellevue on their way to Bouca and Bangui. Soon after they left, my porters picked up my baggage consisting of four loads, and traveled through the bush that was a much shorter way to this village—Be. I took the auto road with the push car, that I might stop along the way in every village.

We organized new reading classes, as well as strengthened the ones that had been started. In many places, we asked the chief and his workers for permission for his people to learn to read. We find it necessary for the Christians to rise early in the morning for prayer, so that there will be a little time to spend learning to read before they go to work. The teacher, or catechiste, has a slate on which he prints the vowels. After his class knows them, he prints one consonant with all the vowels thus: ni, no, na, ne, etc. After they have mastered this consonant with the vowels he prints another, and so on. The teacher can go any place with his slate.

When enough monosyllables have been mastered, they can form words, and are soon ready to buy a translation. We have printed many words on paper, and given them to the teachers. When the classes are able to read them, they use them. Any method is good that works or teaches people to read. Will not all who read this pray that God will bless any method used for His glory, and that many will learn to read this year?

The Christians who read the Word are stronger in the faith. I have also found that the catechiste who takes a little time, every day, to teach his converts to read along with his preaching and teaching Bible verses, is more interested in his work of evangelization and winning souls, and does not become lazy and run home to see his people so often.

Natives Sawing the Timber with a Missionary's Saw.

The leaves are falling from the trees, and we know the dry season has started. We expect more from our teachers now, for the work of the people in repairing the auto road, and making new sheds for the cotton crop, will soon be over. Even though the cotton is to be picked in another month, they do not leave for the field early in the morning because of the dew.

Our hearts are sad to know that the Shumaili and Lye schools are starting taking many boys away from the village to learn this devilish worship. Some of the Christians have endured persecution to oppose their father and brothers, who have tried to force them to go to this school. This testing of the young boys comes about every year. One large chief said he was not having the school for his boys this year. He said too many come home to say publicly that the school is "belya nyeta" (very bad), and he does not care to have the school spoken of in that manner. He prefers his boys to stay home and work. We praise the Lord, and are seeking his boys for our reading classes and the Lord.

The catechiste at Be is a leper, but he is very faithful. We preached to a large crowd here.

Oct. 26. Kokol. We are spending Sunday here. While ministering to the sick here, we found some Christians very ill. The people here want a chapel, which they can have if they are willing to build it. When we asked how much they wanted it, 20 men stood up, saying they would saw the timber for it. The women and children said they would bring in the grass. The building of it is not hard after they bring in the material. Natives here are like any one else—they let we settled down to rest within the protection of an American port, after 44 days on the seas, a tempting target for some prowling enemy. God has vindicated His promises, and after many months had brought me to "the desired haven."

On Thursday afternoon, we left the ship at Fall River, Mass., and by Friday night I was in Philadelphia, having just stopped long enough to claim my baggage waiting so many weeks in New York. On reaching Philadelphia, I was again reminded of God's provision and timing; for I learned that by hurrying on to Dayton, I could meet Bro. and Sister Ashman in time Monday morning to drive to California with them. I also reached Philadelphia just in time to have a visit with the Jobsons before Bro. Jobson left for a trip south. I took the Sunday night train for Dayton, and was met the next morning by Rev. Ashman. Rev. Barnard, Rev. Uphouse and their wives. We all had breakfast together, and immediately afterwards we started west. Just one week from my arrival at that "desired haven" in the East, I was finding that still more "desired haven" among my loved ones.

How I do praise my Lord for giving me this opportunity of testing and proving promises that had never before been brought to my attention! And of this I am confident. . . . He Who promised and protected, on this homeward journey, can and will prove just as powerful in opening doors and guarding back to the field those who are so much needed just now.

others do work that they are supposed to do, if they can find the people who will do it for them.

Oct. 27. Kaou. This evening many accepted the gospel. The people are dissatisfied with their catechiste. He is too lazy.

Oct. 29. Kekesse. We did not travel far yesterday, so arrived early, although we stopped several times along the way. We are glad to see so many Christians gather early in the morning at the chapel for prayers. God will answer their petitions. The children are carrying dirt on the auto road. At noon, when they rest, the teacher goes with his slate and printed words, to teach them while they rest for two hours in the heat of the day. Wherever there is lots of work, one must take advantage of the rest hours to teach the people. We met, late in the evening, a large crowd going to help on the cotton house at Be, and talked to them about God as we visited with them in the dark. When we arrived at Yiri, we found many of his people not at home.

Oct. 30. Yama. We are glad to meet the Christians here, who also want to build a chapel. Their place of worship is on logs out in the open air, near the catechiste house. The leopards are very bad here, and we kept a bonfire burning all night to keep them away. We saw a trap, and we requested that the man who built it should come to Bassai and make one for us, as the leopards are killing our goats too.

Oct. 31. We are traveling through the Banda villages, and meeting the boys who came to Bassai to learn to read. We are pleased with their work in their own village. They have many children whom they are teaching. They also have a place where they meet early in the morning to pray. They, however, are meeting with a great deal of persecution from their brothers, who try to force them to appease gods.

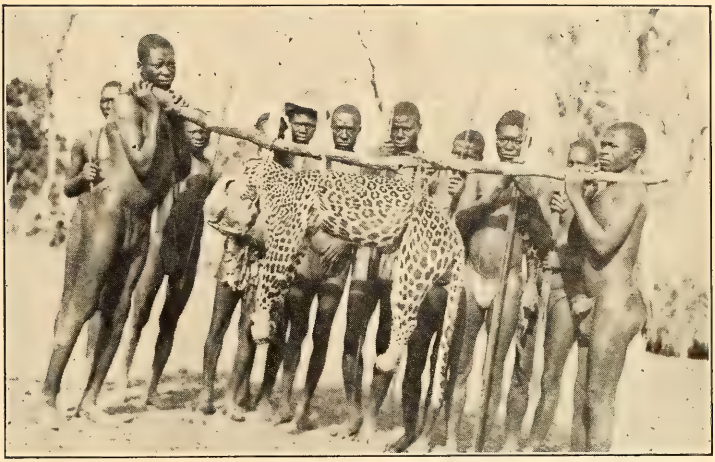
Nov. 2. Lokodiva. We are glad that Sunday is rest day, for we are very tired. Our run yesterday lasted about all day, stopping in villages and fixing the tire of the push. We are now in the Symbal district—the villages of the people that used to be outlaws.

The catechiste, Andre, has only been here about seven months. He has been teaching his converts to read. This morning 20 young men announced publicly to the village that they had no intention of going to the bush school, which the village is preparing in the jungle for them. They are learning to read God's Word. The old men growled when they heard the testimony of these boys, as one by one they rose to their feet to testify what Jesus meant to them. They expect persecution, but God's grace is sufficient.

Nov. 3. Toulourou. This is a Pondo village, but the people understand Karre. The chief wants a catechiste here. He has not forgotten our visit to his village two years ago. The children try to sing the song we taught them. They hear the story at Koungnang also, where we have built a chapel. We pray that this year God will send a worker here. There are many Pondo villages around here, out in the bush, that have not yet heard the story of love.

Nov. 5. Koung-nang. We visited Dime, the place where the government is seeding the cotton. We spent the night in the village that is the home of the Panna boys, who have been at Bassai the past year learning to read. They came as porters with me, and were glad to see their people. Yesterday we came here, and expected to go from here to Paoua. The soldier said we could not get through, for the rivers had no canoes. The natives pass the water paddling in earthen pots. The push, he said, could not get across. Therefore, we have to go back over the way we came, until we see the Paoua road. It is difficult to get porters around here, for all are working on houses. The Panna boys remained at home.

Nov. 10. Our boys are all tired out. We spent day at Baindi and came here today. This is the Paoua. The administrator has all the chiefs circumscription here, building new huts. Wh visited him he showed me his new school house, he has a monitor teaching 60 children the F language. The administrator said he needed a Fr Karre dictionary, as he is learning the Karre lang He knew Sango, the trade language, but he di find it sufficient for his work in dealing wit Karre. If he needs the language, Karre, for his sage, how much more do we need the vernacul our important message to the people, that they understand!



We are thankful to see the many coming t services here at the Poste. It is a large place.

Nov. 12. A trip was made to Bekora to see th pensary there. We stopped to encourage the w along the way. We found a French school boy. G teaching 60 children to read from his slate. The people are anxious to learn to read.

Baindi. Along the way from Paoua to Bain many villages. It is only about 10 miles. The chiste here, Pierre Personne, oversees the work i district. He has his own method in evangeliz He preaches at Paoua in the evening, then t toward Baindi, stopping at every village, arriving at sunrise. We wakens the chief as he comes village, saying he has found his name in the bo God; and also that there is a song he sings ab chief, and hunger is killing him to tell this st him and his people. Will he not wake them up and ask them together quickly? The chief calls the people and they all come out of their huts. The Christians follow him from each village, so he has his choir with him. He sings the song of Nicodemus coming to Jesus by night, as the crowd gathers. After preaching from John, the third chapter, he goes to the next village and repeats the process, continuing all night. In the day time, the people must work, and many do not have the chance to hear the story. This way everyone hears. After the message, they return to their beds to sleep or to think. Many have been won to the Lord in these night meetings.

Nov. 13. Degui. We preached to a large crowd engaged in building a large bridge near here. We also organized several reading classes, and pray that the teachers will be faithful in their task. Some of our porters and push boys must return for colds. We thank God for the measure of health He has given the rest of us to push on. In all the villages, we ask for the Christians or converts, and organize prayer meetings, although there may be no leader there.

Nov. 16. Bouboni. Nothing new the past days. We found Noe, the catechiste here, teaching many children to read. We made him a chart on the black paper I had with me, that was sent from the Bible house, wrapped around translations. Noe has only one hand, the other one having been destroyed from an infection; but he is a good teacher. Near here are Baya villages, and a Baya boy lives with him, and teaches in these Baya villages.

In a Banda village near here, where Thomas is a catechiste, the old people are opposing the gospel very much. Not long ago, a boy who had been to the bush school was baptised. Soon after this, he fell from the cotton shed, which he was helping to build. The people refused to help him because he refused to appease the idols, and left him there with his blood running from his nose. When he came to, he asked to see the catechiste who came and took him home. He is well now, and praises the Lord. This is only one story of many that could be told of the converts in Africa. Whenever one goes to this school, he finds life harder to endure because of the opposition from his people.

Nov. 17. We are sleeping in a Baya village. We found some boys who want to come to Bassai to learn to read. Most all the young people in the village accepted the gospel, even the chief's sons. The oldest said he bought five wives and four of them died. He was through, and was willing to live with the one living, and travel the way of God. I told him he should thank God for delivering him out of prison, for if he had the five wives, perhaps he would not think of his Savior. May God send them a teacher. We organized a prayer meeting, committed them to the Lord, and left.

Nov. 18. Pili. We are now in the Bellevue district. The catechiste here, Timothy, has been very faithful through years of famine and persecution. I met Jacob Yasse here, the ordained elder of Bellevue, who is making a trip through his territory. Last evening he had a dedication service for five babies.

Nov. 19. Bellevue. We left early this morning, for we had a long run to make. A few days rest here to celebrate Mabel's birthday, and we will be off for Bozoum—a three days' journey.

Today we saw a very large track of a snake along the road. The natives said it must have been a Python. We passed a village where the natives were mourning, and learned that a man had just been killed by a buffalo. He was out in the woods cutting timber for his house.

We are glad to see Florence and Mabel, who are busy taking care of twins. The mother died and the father gave them to Florence. This tribe does not care for twins. The evil spirit dwells in them, they say.

Nov. 26. Bozoum. We arrived here just two hours before Dr. Gribble and the Kleivers.

Bro. Kliever brought us to Bassai. We are glad to be back after over a month's absence. Mabel has everything ready to leave for furlough, and we are getting ready for Miss Byron and Mrs. Kennedy.

We pray that God will bless the effort we put forth in spreading the gospel, and encouraging the teachers and catechistes to work harder for their Lord and Master.

Ponda Sees The Light

CHAPTER 2

A continued story written for our boys and girls by MISS MARY EMMERT, Missionary in Africa

A VISIT TO THE SORCERER

Nana sat all day holding her baby. Her arms ached but the load on her heart was much heavier than that in her arms. Her little one lay there limp, not even whimpering.

The news spread rapidly. The old women filled up the hut once more. Their black bodies not only cut off the light but the air from the mother and babe.

"Is the body hot or cold?" one asked.

"Cold takes him," said the mother, "even though there is much sun today. Fear kills me."

"There is something strange about it, to be sure," said the toothless one.

"Give him a little of this medicine I have just made," said a latecomer. "If he drinks it, he will be better by sunset. Sala's baby got better after drinking it."

"That's so," thought Nana. "Sala's bady did get well." She forgot that Gay's baby had died after the same treatment.

So they gave the baby the medicine that had been made from the juice of some herbs. But he got worse instead of better.

"The whole trouble is that you have never taken him to the medicine man, nor even got a charm for him to wear around his neck. There is an evil spirit after him without a doubt," said the shriveled one.

Nana's first two babies had died, even though she had put charms around their necks, but she was not accustomed to deep thought. She felt sure that the old women were right. She had neglected to take her baby to the sorcerer, and now someone had put a curse upon him.

When Koly came in from his day's hunt, the whole story was repeated to him. "I only went to the stream for a short time to put the cassava to soak. The baby was well when I left him, but soon Yalody came after me with him in her arms, and he was already very sick," she explained all in one breath. "She said that Kogara came over and held him for a while," she added with meaning.

"Kogara?" he questioned, as though to read her thought. "Oh, she wouldn't" But he stopped without finishing his sentence. He was accustomed to the quarreling of his wives; but then if it were going to effect his son's health, that was something different.

The next morning the baby was quite a bit better; but the trip to the witch doctor had been agreed upon the evening before, so they made preparations to carry it out.

"Have you caught the chicken to take him as a present?" Nana asked Koly.

"Not yet," he answered. "Yadoly, come and help me." He made a sudden dive at one of the few chickens standing around the doorway. The chicken squawked and ran, the man and the little girl after it. Around and around the house they ran, never losing sight of the particular chicken they wanted. The chicken did not take for the tall grass, as you might have expected; for its enemies, the wild cat and the lynx, lived there. The house was its home, so when danger threatened it ran for home. Finally it darted into the house.

"Pull the mat across the doorway," shouted Koly to Nana. "There I have you," he muttered the next moment, as he seized the squawking chicken. He tied its feet together, and holding it head downward, started down the road without another word.

Nana adjusted the carrying sling around her neck, and trudged after him. Yalody was left home to guard the house.

After a long, weary walk over a very narrow, winding path through the tall grass, they finally came out near a stream. There in a small cleared place was a dilapidated mud hut, which looked as though it had stood three or four years and was past repairing.

By the fire sat an old man, with a leopard skin hat on his head. Tails of the fur dangled down from the skin here and there. Around his neck he wore a long string of wild boar's teeth. Around his ankles and wrists were bunches of dirty leather charms on dirtier black strings. Various patterns were tattooed on his face and body, and in his upper lip he wore a large white disc.

"Is that Gafo?" asked Nana.

"No one else," answered Koly. "Are you still living?" he greeted the old man.

"Are you all living, too?" was the answer.

Koly and his wife sat down by the fire, and there followed a silence. Finally Koly said respectfully, "Are you well, my father?"

The conversation, thus launched by careful degrees, finally arrived at the point where the baby's health could be mentioned. Of course Gafo had long since surmised that they had come to him about the baby; so he said casually, "I noticed that he is very sick."

Nana was instantly alarmed, for she had been somewhat reassured when she had seen that the baby was better that morning.

"We have brought you a chicken," said Koly, "and we want you to give us a charm for the baby to wear."

Gafo stared into the baby's eyes and pretended to examine his head. "I am not sure that it is as easy as all that," he said.

"What do you mean?" asked Koly anxiously.

"It might be an evil spirit," said Gafo. "I shall have to divine in order to find out. That will be worth a goat."

Koly's face fell. He had given his last goat to Nana's parents the day Pondo was born. Of course there was Boua, his small brother. He might take one of the goats that his father was saving, with which to buy Boua a wife. "I have no goats," he told Gafo.

"Then I can do nothing for the baby," said the old man with a tone of finality.

"Oh," said Nana to Koly, "we must find a goat to give him. He is right, there is an evil spirit eating the baby."

Gafo knew that he would get the goat, so he said nothing, but sat abiding his time. He knew that the anxiety of the parents meant wealth to him.

Koly knew that his brother, Boua, would complain a great deal about losing a goat, but then small brothers must obey their elders. There was no other way. "I'll find you a goat," he said finally to Gafo. "Only drive out the evil spirit. I shall bring you the goat tomorrow."

Gafo knew that Koly feared him too much to lie to him, so he got up slowly, and entered his house. Soon he came out again with a smooth pointed stick in his hand. He rubbed it between his two hands, gradually increasing the speed of the revolving stick. Around and around he twirled it, working himself up more and more every moment.

There he stood, suddenly transformed into a bundle of energy, mad, inspired by the incantations he was muttering. For a long time, it seemed to his silent audience, he continued to whirl the stick frantically in his hands, until finally he had become one with the spirit he was invoking.

Suddenly the stick flew from his hands and fell at a distance, pointing towards the village. The old man sank exhausted to the ground. "It is as I thought," he said.

Koly and Nana, who had sat entranced during the whole performance, did not stir. They did not dare to ask what he thought.

"I shall make some very powerful medicine for the baby to wear. It will be ready for you when you bring the goat. And you, Nana, must never eat the bigara fish again. It is your taboo. Do not forget."

Nana agreed. She already had one taboo which had been pronounced upon her as a child. She must not eat the meat of the grey antelope. Then, of course, her whole village did not eat crocodile meat, for had not the crocodiles saved their lives once by carrying them across the river when they were being pursued by their enemies? And now she was to be deprived of a third kind of food, but she did not argue with the sorcerer.

"Why did you not come to me before the baby's birth to receive a taboo?" scolded Gafo.

"I forgot," Nana said in order to conciliate him. "Next time I shall come to you."

He mumbled something under his breath as they got up to go, and they meekly took their leave without even looking toward the chicken still lying on the ground with its feet tied. He had disdained the price they had offered him, demanding a higher one; but he got the chicken, too. No one dared to dispute with a sorcerer.

The next day Koly gruffly demanded a goat from his father, explaining the case briefly. Of course Boua objected loudly, but it did him no good. The harsh tones Koly adopted soon silenced him.

"Is not my baby yours?" he asked Boua, for the first baby is considered as belonging to the father's brother. "You would not want to see it die, would you?" Then he added in a kinder tone, "We shall find some more goats for your dowry somewhere."

That evening he was able to show proudly to Nana the little string of fur that Gafo had given him to tie around the baby's neck. Dangling from it were two bird claws and a tooth. Pondo was already feeling much better, but the charm was given all the credit for his recovery. Nor did it matter that in a few days the string had become dirty and greasy. Night and day, month in and month out, Pondo and his charm were inseparable.

Questions

1. What did the old women do for the sick baby?
2. How did Nana fail to reason correctly?
3. What is a sorcerer? a taboo? tatooing?
4. How much did they pay the doctor?
5. Was he a real doctor? What kind of medicine did he give?
6. Who cured the baby?

AT CHURCH—NEXT SUNDAY

If I knew you and you knew me,
How little trouble there would be.
We pass each other on the street,
But just come out and let us meet
At church next Sunday.

Each one intends to do what's fair
And treat his neighbor on the square.
But he may not quite understand—
Why you don't take him by the hand
At church next Sunday.

This world is sure a busy place
And we must hustle in the race.
For social hours some are not free
The six week days, but all should be
At church next Sunday.

We have an interest in our town,
The dear old place must not go down;
We want to push good things along,
And we can help some if we are strong.
At church next Sunday.

JERUSALEM—(Underground)

It is pointed out in the Sunday School Times that no city in the world has underground protection from bombing like Jerusalem. These are the so-called quarries of Solomon, vast in extent, which are being prepared to accommodate the inhabitants of the city.

NEWS BRIEFS From Our Workers

On one Sunday recently, 15 new members were received into the fellowship of the Second Brethren Church of LOS ANGELES, where Dr. Paul R. Bauman is pastor.

The First Brethren Church of WAYNESBORO, PA., has installed six new flourescent lighting fixtures in the church and Bible School auditoriums. This new system furnishes twice the light at almost half the former cost.

BRO. RANDALL ROSSMAN, who has been serving the church at Altoona, Pa., began his ministry at the Grafton W. Va. church the first Sunday in April. BRO. STANLEY HAUSER, who filled the pulpit at Grafton until the arrival of Bro. Rossman is now supplying at the Juniata, Pa. church, and solicits the prayers of the brotherhood for his ministry there. BRO. ERNEST PINE, former pastor of the Juniata church, has assumed his duties as army chaplain in Indianapolis, Ind.

The Bethel Brethren Church of BERNE, IND received encouraging reports at its last quarterly business meeting. The financial reports revealed substantial balances in all treasuries. The pastor reported receiving 16 new members into the church since his arrival in December. Lowell Leistner, pre-seminary student in Bob Jones College, was elected to the position of assistant pastor during the summer months.

BRO. RUBEL LUCERO, a member of the First Brethren Church of Long Beach, who for a number of years served as a missionary in Taos, New Mexico, is now preaching at Cucamonga, Calif.

During his visit in Southern California, BRO. ARTHUR CAREY, pastor at Rittman, O., filled the pulpit at Bro. Donald Carter's church in LaVerne, Calif.

An item from the bulletin of the First Brethren Church at LONG BEACH, Calif., was written by the pastor, Dr. L. S. Bauman, reads, "$12,000! Foreign Missionary Offering! Yes, sir! We have it, and we don't have it—not yet! We have right now less than $300 to come in, and we will have it. But, last Wednesday night a faithful prayer-meeting brother slipped past us on his way out after the meeting, and whispered: 'Don't think you have all the offering yet!' Then, he held up three fingers! From his past record, we knew what that meant. And we know it means what it meant! We understand sign language. Right then, I said: 'We are over the goal—$12,000!' Praise ye the Lord for His goodness! Any more sign language anywhere?"

Concerning the evangelistic meetings conducted by Bro. Robert Ashman at SHARPSVILLE, IND., Bro. Ashman writes, "Just want to tell you and others about real meeting we had last week at Sharpsville with Bro. Stuber. Fine co-operation, good spirit, rainy weather except Saturday and Sunday, fine attendance; and the Lord blessed with 22 decisions, most of whom were young married people. Will have a more detailed report for the Herald soon."

The church begun at MANSFIELD, O. last September, with Bro. A. D. Cashman as their pastor, had an Easter attendance of 53, and gave a foreign missions offering of $218 besides a regular offering of bout $25. This group has secured the co-operation of the District Mission Board and The Brethren Home Missions Council for organization into a Brethren church at an early date.

GRACE SEMINARY

By W. A. STEFFLER

The Brethren Church can well be proud of the Grace Seminary located at Winona Lake. Aside from being located in a beautiful spot, our school stands to prepare our young people for a life of Christian usefulness.

Rev. Steffler

It is important that the churches loyally support the wonderful program as now being presented by those who have the Seminary in charge. We should constantly encourage our young people whenever possible to attend our own seminary. No one knows the difficulty in doing this than the pastor of a church in a large city where many good seminaries are located. Brethren preachers are better qualified to be leaders of Brethren churches when they have prepared for their life work in the Brethren seminary.

Those who are expected to teach the Bible ought to spend as much time in mastering this glorious book as those who go forth in other fields of service. The Christian worker should be an authority in his field of work. This is possible only with much training and preparation.

God has been good to us. He has given us not only a beautiful location, but a corps of teachers who know the Word and who take delight in imparting that knowledge to those who have a desire to be used of the Lord.

an experience sealed by the Spirit of God to go forth ministering to the sin-sick needs of this old world.

THE GREATEST NEED IN THIS WORLD TODAY

By WILLIAM H. CLOUGH

The Greatest need in this old world today is the need of soul-winners. Millions are dying without Christ—and without Christ they are without hope. They are lost.

Rev. Clough

We have been told, "He that winneth souls is wise." One of the finest things that can be said for Grace Seminary is, "It takes Christian men and makes them soul winners." In Grace they are taught the Word. A strong emphasis is laid on evangelism and soul winning. There, they are instructed and taught in the Word. They are taught to win souls, and how to win souls: how to meet objections and overcome excuses in dealing with the souls of sinful men. But best of all, with this teaching there is a burden and a passion that grips them for this work. The work becomes easy, and like our Lord these men are actually seen dealing with men and taking every opportunity for Christ.

This world needs Christ. There was never a day when the world needed Christ like it does today. But, Christ is all this world needs. The challenge is great. Jesus said, "I am the Light of the world, he that followeth Me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." The Light shineth, but the darkness comprehendeth not, for men are lost—yea they are dead. The world today has many preachers. There are the fundamentalists, and there are the modernists. We have too many of the latter; and all too many of the former lack the real burden and zeal of winning the lost. There are many Bible teachers: some of them are leading Bible teachers, some are not so leading (but mis-leading). And the one great eternal need above all others is men, men of God who are trained and who know how to win other men to the Lord Jesus Christ; men who are willing to depend on the Lord and not on another man's foundation and work; men to build their own, a work and a church for Christ. It can be done; it has been done; it is being done—and like another has said, a Spirit-filled man, called of God, can build a work for God anywhere. We do not know how long the church will have to witness for the Lord. As it looks now, the days are short, so there is an urgent appeal to everyone to give himself to the work of soul-winning. The W.M.C. have a noble interest when they stand back of Grace Seminary, for Grace stands for and gives to its students the kind of teaching that makes them soul-winners.

WHY WE SHOULD SUPPORT GRACE SEMINARY

By PAUL E. ARNOLD

Humanly speaking, we are living in perilous times. There probably has never been a time in the history of the world when life was so cheap. Lives are being snuffed out by the thousands every day by the most powerful machines of destruction that the world has ever known. Starvation is haunting millions of people. Death and destruction are stalking the earth as never before. Men's hearts are filled with fear. Thrones have toppled, others are trembling. Heads of nations are calling upon the Lord for help. Even the wicked dictators who have never known God are asking Him to give them victory.

Mr. Arnold

We are made to wonder and ask, "Why all this greed for power? Why do some men desire the destruction of their fellowmen in other lands?"

The answer, it seems, is the fact that so many people either have never heard or have ignored the teachings of the Word of God. Maybe we as Christians are partly responsible for this condition. When our Lord departed in the flesh from this earth, He commanded His followers to go into every nation and carry the gospel to all peoples. Of course, He knew that not all of us could, or would, become missionaries in person; but He also knew that everyone who loved Him and possessed a desire to do His will, could in one way or another help in this great work. We who are not giving all of our time and strength to the actual work of carrying God's Word to those who do not know Him, can do our part through prayer and financial help.

Perhaps we have been too selfish and indifferent in our giving and have not done our part in helping along with this great work.

Although the time is short and there still is much to be done, we should not delay or wait longer, but start now to help support the several organizations in The Brethren Church that are so vital, not only to the growth of the church but to the spreading of the gospel of Jesus Christ here on earth.

For anyone who really is interested in helping with the advancement and expansion of this cause, certainly there could not be a better time to begin than now. Let us give the W.M.C. the support they deserve at this time in their drive for an offering for Grace Seminary.

After all, Grace Seminary, under the very able leadership of Pres. Alva J. McClain, is God's ammunition factory here on earth; for here is where the highest type of young men are trained to go out into the four corners of the earth, fearlessly to preach the Word of God to a lost people.

An institution so important as this should have the wholehearted support of every man, woman, and child in The Brethren Church. Grace Seminary was founded on faith; it operates on faith, plus your prayers and gifts. The better we support it with our prayers and gifts, the greater will be the glory that we shall bring to our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

GRACE SEMINARY—EXCEPTIONAL

By A. D. CASHMAN

Thomas Henry Huxley, the famous English naturalist and philosopher, once said, "Clever men are as common as blackberries; the rare thing is to find a good one." This can truthfully be said of seminaries in these days of apostasy. Godly saints of the past, who left their means to endow safe, Biblical institutions of learning in their respective denominations, would be filled with remorse and sorrow if they were to witness the modernism and higher criticism in those same institutions today. Even in many of the seminaries considered conservative and orthodox, there are professors to whom it makes no difference if Jesus is called the son of Joseph, and they have their doubts as to whether or not certain parts of the Bible are the inspired Word of God. The professors are not to blame if they are natural men, devoid of the Holy Spirit, and have been influenced by false teachers themselves without adequate protection from other sources; but those who hire and tolerate such men are responsible.

Rev. Cashman

It is also a rare thing, especially today, for large fortunes to be turned over to a school in which the Lord is well pleased. Most men with financial ability are not interested in defending the "faith once for all delivered to the saints;" and those who are, as a rule, make their spiritual investments where visible results are produced as soon as possible. (Humanly speaking, we cannot blame them, seeing what has happened to so many good schools for the training of Christian workers.) Therefore, the support of a graduate school of theology, such as our own Grace Seminary, must be secured by a multitude of smaller gifts from consecrated Brethren who still have a reason for the hope within them. Knowing this, the good women of the W.M.C. have set aside three months of their calendar program, to emphasize the support of our institution which trains home and foreign missionaries who are true to the old Book. (Should any man read this article, let me encourage you to hand to that "better half" of yours an extra bill to represent your appreciation of being a part of a denomination whose seminary is second to none in the land).

It is very exceptional today to find informed Bible teachers occupying the pulpits of the world. Preachers who are graduated from the popular denominational seminaries are usually orators and exhorters whose messages may inspire for the moment, but are like a diet of shadow soup which does not stick to the ribs. Consequently, people are hungry for the meat of the Word and do not know what is wrong. The ministry of the graduates of Grace seminary speaks for itself. The plan of salvation is made so clear and reasonable, and God's plan for our age is so emphasized, that the people are glad to give liberally for every work to advance the cause of Christ. Check the gifts, per capita, for all denominational causes from our churches manned by Grace seminary graduates, especially the mission churches, and note the results. Certainly, this should inspire the confidence of every man, as well as every woman, in the Brethren churches, to support the school that produces ministers which, in turn, raises up others to support every phase of the denomination's program.

Let Your Requests Be Made Known Unto God

MRS. EDWARD D. BOWMAN, Buena Vista, Va.

2. Col. 1:9-11—Remember Bro. Jake Kliever, who at the present time has the responsibility for three mission stations on the African field.

3. Phil. 1:3-6—Thank God for the last term of Bozoum Seminary and His blessing upon it. Pray that He may guide in the plans to reopen the school in June.

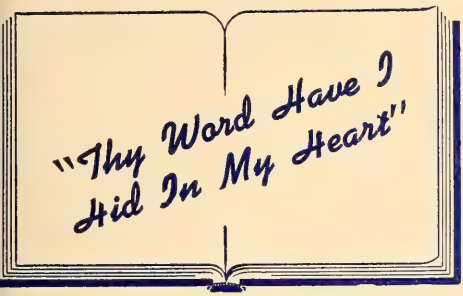
4. Jn. 15:7—Ask God to provide an outfit and passage to Africa for Brother and Sister Garner Hoyt, who will be graduated from Grace Seminary this month.

5. Ps. 103:1—Praise God for answering our prayers in regard to the offering for home missions, and continue to pray for each home mission pastor and church.

ONE NIGHT IN AN ARMY CAMP

Ten thousand men, and yet so lonely;
 As many mothers lonely, too;
Ten thousand dreams are interrupted.
 Ten thousand uniforms are new.

The hour is late; I should be sleeping;
 The drill was hard and long today.
A fine bunch these asleep around me—
 How strange our paths should cross this way!



What means this muddle—war's confusion?
 They said we had a better world;
And now some stirring phrases of freedom
 Is ours, as war flags are unfurled.

The other night the wind was sighing;
 It seemed to be in awful pain,
And I was sure I heard it moaning
 As it came drifting back again.

I wonder if the wind remembers
 The boys and ward of days gone by.
To think of man's repeated folly!
 And all the wind can do is sigh.

How foolish seems all human wisdom!
 It could make even angels weep;
It must be God will soon do something—
 So, "Now I lay me down to sleep."

—Will H. Houghton, In Moody Monthly.

A man once said that he could walk almost any umber of miles when the scenery was good; "but," e added, "when it is flat and uninteresting, how one res!" What scenery enchants the Christian pil- rim! The great sea of providence, the rocks of sure romise, the green fields of revelation, the rivers that ake glad the city of God, all these compose the cenery which surrounds the Christian, and at every ep fresh sublimities meet his view. In Eph. chap. -3, the inspired apostle presents the scenery, the in- piration, the motive, the basis for the believers' walk n the world. Those chapters are doctrinal and lay he firm foundation for the Christian life. The last hree chapters are practical and show how the believer ught to walk in this world. Ever as he walks he is to eep his high calling in view. His mind is to be fixed pon things which are above.

Keep in remembrance how the second main division f Ephesians opens: "I therefore, the prisoner of the ord, beseech you that ye walk worthy of the voca- ion wherewith ye are called" (4:1). In the section f this present study, 5:1-21, there is a continuation f this idea. The word "walk" occurs three times in hree paragraphs of the section. Let us gather our houghts in this study about these three appearances f this word.

"Walk" in Love, vs. 1-2). In this matter of the nanifestation of love in the world, the believer is to e an "imitator" of God. The word "followers" in the uthorized Version is more correctly translated "imi- ators" in the R.V. We are to be imitators of God n the matter of kindness, compassion, forgiveness, re- nembering how "God for Christ's sake hath forgiven ou." This is a high ideal that has been set before s. None could be higher. But as the children of God, t is expected of use that we shall manifest the like- ess of our Father when it comes to the matter of ove. From the love of the Father, we are immed- ately referred to the love of the Son, Whose love- ffering on the behalf of sinners was "a sweetsmell- nging savor."

In the light, then, of the throne of God and the cross f Calvary, the walk of the Christian is to be a living lemonstration of what true love is. In this connec- ion, it should not be forgotten that the new com- nandment that Jesus gave to His disciples the night efore His crucifixion was "that ye love one another; s I have loved you, that ye also love one another. By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, f ye have love one to another" (Jn. 13:34-35). And t is reported that the pagans, observing the early Christians gathered together in their love feasts, said: Behold, how these Chirstians love one another!" May Christian love increase.

Study IX in the Epistle to the Ephesians

"The Believer's Walk In The World"

Ephesians 5:1-21

By HOMER A. KENT

"Walk in the Light (vs. 3-14). The main exhorta- tion of this passage is found in v. 8: "Walk as chil- dren of light." Believers have been called out of dark- ness. Peter said in 1 Pet. 2-9, "Ye are a chosen gener- ation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people; that ye should show forth the praises of Him Who hath called you out of darkness into His marv- elous light."

Walking in the light implies separation from the works of darkness. Light and darkness are contrary one to the other. One sunshiny morning I overturned an old plank that had been lying in our back yard for a long time. A thousand bugs and worms sought for a hiding place. They could not bear the light. They loved darkness. The light sent them to their holes. And so I thought about the light of the gospel which enters men's hearts. It sends the works of darkness to their hiding places. And the more completely the believer lets the light possess his heart, the more fully will he find himself freed from the multiplied forms of sins and uncleanness. The writer in the verses before us presents a mean list of things which will flee from the life in the presence of the light. Each one of these things is to be separated from the Christian's daily life, including the matter of "foolish talking" and "jesting."

Walking in the light also has a definite positive aspect. It should be characterized by the spirit of gratitude (v. 4). Let us exercise particular care as to this. If the Christian spent more time time in med- itating upon his blessings there would be less time for complaining and evil thinking. One of the outstand- ing characteristics of the Apostle Paul's life was his thankful spirit. It made no difference if he was in a prison cell, still the note of praise and gratitude was upon his lips. We of today need to emulate him in this respect.

Then, too, the Christian should remember that his life is a risen life (v. 14). The light and glory of Christ's resurrection victory should permeate his en- tire walk.

Then, finally, the Believer should "WALK" WISELY (vs. 15-21).

In what does a wise walk consist? Note five things that are included in the passage before us:

1. A careful use of time (v. 16). "Redeeming the time" carries with it the idea of "buying up" every opportunity for service. We have no time to waste. Every day is precious. On an old sun-dial was found this pertinent legend: "It is later than you think."

2. A careful consideration of the will of the Lord (v. 17). How much time would be saved, and sorrow averted, if this were observed seriously!

3. The filling of the Spirit (v. 18). This means an emptying of self and a yielding to God.

4. A joyous and grateful spirit (vs. 19,20).

5. A proper consideration of one another as mem- bers of the body of Christ (v. 21). Let us therefore seek to walk in fellowship with one another and with God.

"Open Doors" -

"ADVERSARIES MANY IN NIPPON"

A study of the difficulties of early mission work in Japan.

"For a great door and effectual is open unto me, and there are many adversaries" (I Cor. 16:9)." And in nothing terrified by your adversaries: which is to them an evident token of perdition, but to you of salvation, and that of God" (Phil. 1:28).

Truly all those who pioneered in Nippon for Christ's sake met with many adversaries, but God was faithful and went before them.

Character of the People

The Japanese are called a mixed race. They are clean and neat in person and habits, quickwitted and apt to learn, so polite that they are called "the French of the Orient." Against these qualities is a lack of steadfastness.

Religion

Filial piety and national patriotism are the two outstanding characteristics of the Japanese people. The individual is nothing, the family and state are everything. They are the most patriotic people on the face of the earth. Patriotism becomes a passion, and life is held in light esteem; and no honor is more coveted than to die for "the heaven-descended emperor" or for their country. Unfortunately, other equally important moral principles and virtues have been all too lightly regarded, and lying and licentiousness must be recognized as national sins. "Where Christianity has not brought reform, truth for truth's sake is a phrase with force or meaning, while concubinage was provided for in legal and social regime; prostitution was legalized; and without any shock to the moral sense, girls were sold by their parents to lives of shame, and accepted their dreadful fate meekly and as a matter of course.

Their national religion is Shinto, "The way of the gods," evidence of which is still everywhere to be seen in the shrines. Their religion can be traced back to 660 B.C. and is the third oldest of the world. Shintoism was not personally founded but is a system of ancestral and nature worship. This has developed 8,000,000 gods and goddesses and bred all sorts of degrading superstitions, self-sacrificing reverence for government as a divine institution. Its adherents worship the sun-goddess, Ama-terasu, at the temple at Is'e.

Buddhism and Confucianism were introduced from China. These have a powerful influence in Japan, having 100,000 temples, copying Christian methods of work such as schools, Sunday preaching, young men's associations and the like. But the evils of the system, and especially the vicious character of the priests, have drawn the severest criticism from Japanese themselves. Baron Kato Hiroyuki, former president of the Imperial University, said in an address: "The priests are indeed a rotten set, and they themselves have the greatest need of reformation. They are absolutely unable to save the masses, and are, moreover, a peril to society."

Missionary Work—1542-1920

The first missionary contact with Japan was by Mendez Pinto, a Portuguese navigator in 1542. Others followed and were well received, and with them came the Jesuits. Francis Xavier, the great Jesuit (under the title of the Society, or Company, of Jesus) has the honor of being the first missionary to Japan. He had been sent to Goa, the Portuguese Colony on the west coast of Hindustan; and after three years in Southern India, he came to the Malay Peninsula where he came in contact with a young Japanese, an escaped murderer, whom he made a convert. Hearing of Japan, Xavier had a zeal to visit and evangelize Japan. With the Japanese convert, Hanjira, he landed in Japan in 1549. His journeys in Japan occupied two and a half years. Although unable to speak the language and laboring under other great disadvantages, he claimed and baptized thousands of converts. By 1581 there were 200 known churches with 150,000 professed Christians.

Two of Japan's greatest men were turned against Christianity; and at the same time Nabunage, a friend and protector of the Christians was assasinated. These two great leaders, Hideyoshi and Iyeyasu, lead in the persecution which followed. The persecutions were horrible—Christians were burned, crucified, buried alive, subjected to every form of cruelty they could devise, for not renouncing their faith. In 1638, 37,000 native Christians were slaughtered, and it appeared that every trace of Christianity was swept away. Some Christians remained, worshiping in secret, and after 230 years it was found whole villages had retained the faith, yet in a corrupt form.

During the exclusion of missionaries, Japan was cut off from the outer world; with ships of certain size being destroyed, Japanese were forbidden to travel abroad, and all foreigners found on Japanese territory were executed. Over all of Japan, rigid prohibition of Christianity were posted. From "The Gist Of Japan" p.157, we read the text of the prohibition—"So long as the sun shall continue to warm the earth, let no Christian be so bold as to come to Japan: and let all know that the king of Spain, or the Christian's God (thought to mean either Christ or the Pope) or the great God of all, if he dare violate this command, shall pay for it with his head." These prohibitions could still be seen along the highway as late as 1872.

The door for missions reopened in the year 1858 to the United States and Great Britain, but not with much safety. In 1868 sovereign power was restored to the emporer. Thus, within, four months from the opening of the treaty ports to foreign residents, seven American missionaries had arrived, and in a year four American Societies had begun work. Among these was Rev. Guido F. Verbeck, a very remarkable man of God, of the Reformed Church of America. He styled himself as "a man without a country," for he had no citizenship rights in Holland, his birthplace, or in the United States. He so mastered the language that he could not be detected as a foreigner, and always held his audiences spell-bound by his fluent speech. He was an educator and evangelist, orator and translator, brilliant statesman and humble personal worker. In 1868 after the Revolution in Japan, he was invited to take part in organizing the great Imperial University at Tokyo and planning a new system of education. At his death he was given a State funeral.

Again in 1868 another edict was issued and read thus: "The wicked sect called Christian is strictly prohibited . . . suspected persons are to be reported to respective officials, and rewards will be given." Spies were constantly at work. Many were secretly arrested and thrown into prison. In 1873 these edicts were taken down, with permit for only small concessions of foreigners. In 1899 such restrictions were done away with.

In 1872 Captain L. L. Janes, an American army officer from West Point, an earnest Christian, taught in a military school at the city of Kumamoto. His pupils loved him much and he gained their loyalty, so he had them in his home for Bible readings and preaching on Sunday mornings. The result of this was that more than half of the students made definite decisions for Christ. They resolved to preach the gospel throughout the empire. Such determination brought a loud protest from school and home. Bitter persecution broke out, fathers threatening their sons with the death penalty, mothers threatening to commit suicide in order to atone for the disgrace brought upon the family name. A plot to destroy the whole company was not a success. Captain Janes took his students to a Christian school in Kyoto which was opened by Joseph Hardy Neesima. Neesima was the pioneer of public gospel preaching in the interior. In this sacred city of Kyoto there were 3,000 temples and 8,000 Buddhist priests; yet the gospel went forth. We are ever thus being reminded in missions that the gospel is a living seed of irresistible power. The first Japanese church was organized at Yokohama on Mar. 10, 1872, by Rev. J. H. Ballagh of the Reformed Church, with 11 members. The years from 1859 to 1872 have been called the "Period of Preparation." The "Period of Popularity" was from 1873 to 1888, during which Christianity grew steadily in favor.

By 1888 the Buddhists, who saw their power waning imitated the methods of their Christian antagonists; and at the same time a strong nationalistic sentiment arose, fed by friction with foreign powers. Missionaries were criticized, which resulted in the Japanese modifying certain doctrinal beliefs, forming an "independent" church movement. A sifting process took place, by which nominal converts disappeared but real Christians remained, and with their faith and convictions strengthened. The spiritual life of church was purified and deepened, and the Lord continued in His own way to "add to the church daily such as were being saved."

Statistics of 1900, after four decades of missionary activity, showed a total of 42,451 Protestant Christians, 538 churches, of which about 100 were self-supporting, and 348 groups of Christians not yet organized into churches.

Christianity's opportunity came during the war with Russia, in 1904-1905. Christians were leading her fleets, were on the battlefield and in the home, and they made use of the opportunity to witness for the Lord.

Newspaper evangelism was very profitable. Paid space in the daily press for presenting Christian truth through series of short expositions of the Word brought most encouraging results, bringing many personal calls and still more letters asking for literature. The follow-up work led to many conversions, as well as to a wide proclamation of the gospel.

With all these years of missionary work Japan is still heathen. Over 70% of the people live in rural districts. The missionary work has as yet scarcely penetrated the rural area. Foreign and Japanese missionaries work largely in the great cities and provincial capitals. The wealthy have received little attention. The industrial masses of the great cities have 2,500,000 fisher folk, 500,000 miners, 400,000 sailors and 1,000,000 outcasts still waiting to hear the gospel.

The end of World War I found Japan facing a second great crisis of her history. A new "National Cult" was formed at that time, which the government proposed to make universal, and which makes emperor worship its central dogma. This brought about a deepening interest in the gospel and increased conversions.

Japan is still a heathen nation with millions of souls groping in darkness, because they have not heard of our Savior, Who is "the Light of the world." In spite of all the difficulties, we rejoice that God still has faithful missionaries who are laboring in this great and needy mission field. May God arouse Christians everywhere to a vision of the great need of Japan, and may He speed the day when her millions shall hear the gospel, and shall accept our Christ as Savior, and acknowledge Him as King of kings, and Lord of lords.

(Rev. Robert Hall Glover, "The Progress of World-Wide Missions.")

NOTE: In the Oct., 1941 issue of "Revelation" magazine, you will find the latest account of the missionary situation in Japan.

IS LIFE WORTH LIVING? This is a question that millions of men and women have pondered when in the midst of disaster or when facing discouragement. When life gets to be too great a burden, then it is Christ's opportunity to help. He will bear you and your burdens. He will meet the need of the past of your sin, blotting out both the sin and the record of it. He will meet your present needs as you trust in Him and yield to Him. He will carry you through the experiences ahead, until one day you will stand in His very presence. Yes, with Christ, life here is worth living, and the end with Him is life abundant and eternal. You have tried everything else, and now in the midst of the failure of things why not try Him?—Glendale church bulletin.

Let's Be Fair to Our Minister

Be fair to your minister. He belongs to no union. He cannot force an increase in his stipend. Although he has paid far more for his education, yet on the average he receives less than does the carpenter, electrician, mason. He has to run a car. Two-thirds of the use of his car is strictly parish business. Either he must decrease his efficiency in the parish or the church must help him meet the changing economic situation due to the war.

In what other business does a man stick to his job year in and year out with no increase in salary? True, this man is a servant of God, but remember, St. Paul admonished that a man is worthy of his hire.

"How Beautiful are the Feet of Them That Preach the Gospel--"

BELLEVUE, PAR BOSSANGOA
PAR BANGUI
AFRIQUE EQUATORIALE
FRANCAISE

December 5, 1941

Dear sister:

Miss Crawford was asked to send unto you four letters; and since she is just leaving for furlough, she has turned this opportunity over to me.

Dr. Gribble

The first letter was to reach Mrs. Barnard by Feb. 1st. In these wartime days this is obviously impossible. Letters require from three to 15 months enroute. Mrs. Barnard's made good time, being only three and one half months enroute. I have thought in this first letter to have a little chat with you on "A Missionary Day." So I am going to take a day at random, and one in the future, to describe to you. That day shall be (D.V.) Mon., Dec. 8th, 1941. Let happen what may, you shall know about it, and be able to get a glimpse of our lives, just as if you were to visit us and take "pot luck" upon the station.

So welcome, dear friends, as you come to us for this unexpected visit for this brief time. Would it might be a real visit!!

Four o'clock! So early it sums on a Monday morning! One rises hastily lest one repent of one's resolution. Just the necessary motions to make one ready for the day, then the precious hour of devotion. I breakfast alone this morning as Miss Bickel is doing extra work at night. Then to church! The dry season mornings are cool, and people are late. On the whole, however, the congregation is a good one. The native pastor preaches on the subject of Daniel with true negro eloquence. Then home again in the "pouce pouce" to take up the duties of the day. There is a runner to send to Bozzoum as potatoes are needed, and cannot be procured here. There is a manuscript to prepare for the typist. The table-boy wants to leave for the day. Shall we let him go? I must visit the storehouse to get out some supplies. There is produce to be purchased at the door. I must order dinner. And then, after all these things are accomplished, there is the usual heavy Monday at the hospital. All these things are accomplished, there is the usual Monday at the hospital. All these things? There are still others. Nampea wants a "laisser passer" (road letter(. Our natives cannot travel in French Equatorial Africa without one.

The table-boy's affair has been investigated. We have decided we cannot let him go today. A nurse did not report for special duty yesterday. We find she did not receive the message which was sent to her. The termites (white ants) are destroying the floor of garage. Workmen must repair it at once. Wash-boy is waiting for soap. Some money is returned which was not needed for a special purpose, and must be credited. The native pastor comes and says he has found a woman to help with the care of the twins left motherless but three weeks ago. But she cannot come for another week. A "laisser passer" road letter is returned.

Next we investigate the case of Yalanga, father of the twins three weeks old. Cannot eldest daughter help? The native pastor on whom we rely for authentic and unbiased information in these things says, "No." She has gone away not to return. I buy some native brooms. I send a would-be patient to the hospital (to wait for my arrival). I give out some hospital supplies. And then I go to the hospital!

I find Demoguili is ill; and Gea has not yet returned. So I fit the other helpers into the work as best I may—result: a new assistant for laboratory work.

"Open this bottle, be careful. It burns" (acid). Stand there and open carefully."

He uttered some Sango words which I interpreted to mean: "Shall I open it here in the middle of the floor?" Absorbed in what I am doing, I respond m. m. m. (yes). Something leads me to turn my head. I look aghast at his pouring a precious chemical on the cement floor. At my exclamation of surprise, he says: "I asked you. if I should pour it on the floor, and you said "yes!"

"It is hot!" he said. "Yes," I responded,' put some ammonia on your finger and cool it. A new push boy is in front as I return from the hospital. They get me stuck in a ditch and he does what an "old boy' would never do, turns dexterously around in the shafts, the better to pull me out again By thus turning twice, one of the shafts is unsupported. He turns so dexterously however, that although I sway, I do not fall. We all have a good laugh and I hurry on. I find consternation because the twins cream was not saved out when the butter was made. I find I must terminate. for I have already far exceeded my 400 words and I have recounted only seven hours of a missionary day. More next month.

Lovingly yours,

—Florence N. Gribble.

You will notice we are using the topic listed for July this month. We will have our topic from Africa for our July study.

Since this is our June meeting we should check every goal if we are going to be honor societies, and you want your group to meet all the goals, we know. Our Bible reading must be completed, our mission study books read, our boxes sent to Kentucky, our membership projects completed, our spring cabinet meetings held, and our offerings sent to the financial secretary by July 31! ! ! If you haven't completed your work for the year, you have just a few weeks left. Get busy!

Your general secretary is still waiting for a letter from your society. We are glad to have a letter this month from a new society—at Winchester, Va. 20 girls truly interested in the Lord's work should be able to do great things in Sisterhood. Let us remember this new group in our prayer.

When you write to your general secretary, please be sure you address your letter to 540 14th Street, S.E. Sisterhood letters have been traveling all over Washington, and reaching your secretary late. Don't forget!

CHRIST, OUR ONLY HOPE

By LUCILLE REED

Our Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ, our hope (I Tim. 1:1).

"At that time ye were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world" (Eph. 2:12). Paul here tells us that without Christ we have no hope. When we receive Christ, we have hope; but Paul says in I Cor. 15:19: "If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable." Hence, our hope must reach beyond this life.

What Is Hope?

It is an anchor (Heb. 6:19,20), "sure and steadfast." It is expectancy (Rom. 8:24,25); full assurance (Heb. 6:11), and a living hope (I Pet. 1:3). "In Him we live" (Acts 17:28).

Hope, then, is an expectancy that lifts us and gives us full assurance of salvation past, present and future.

The Christian's Hope Is a Person.

We are saved, and live, because of what He has done. What He has done is effective because of Who He is. "Who gave Himself for us that He might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto Himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works" (Tit. 2:14).

He Is Our Hope Past in Deliverance From the Penalty of sin.

"Who delivered us from so great a death," (2 Cor. 1:10). "Who loved me and gave Himself for me" (Gal. 2:20). "He by Himself purged our sins" (Heb. 1:3).

He Is Our Hope Present In Deliverance From the Power of Sin.

"Who delivered us from so great a death, and doth deliver" (2 Cor. 1:10). "Who gave Himself for our sins, that He might deliver us from this present evil world, according to the will of God and our Father" (Gal. 1:4). "How much more shall the blood of Christ, Who through the eternal Spirit offered Himself without spot to God, purge your conscience from dead works to serve the living God?" (Heb. 9:14). "Who gave Himself for us, that He might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto Himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works" (Tit. 2:14).

He Is Our Hope Future In Deliverance From the Presence of Sin.

"In Whom we trust that he will yet deliver us" (2 Cor. 1:10). "Who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto His glorious body, according to the working whereby He is able even to subdue all things unto Himself" (Phil. 3:21). "For the Lord Himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in clouds, to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we ever be with the Lord" (I Thess. 4:16,17).

"Christ in you, the hope of glory" (Col. 1:27). "As for me, I will behold thy face in righteousness: I shall be satisfied, when I awake, with Thy likeness." (Ps. 17:15).

"Once I hoped in Jesus,
Now I know He's mine;

Once my lamps were dying,
Now they brightly shine;
Once for death I waited,
Now His coming hail;
And my hopes are anchored
Safe within the vail.
All in all forever,
Jesus will I sing;
Everything in Jesus,
And Jesus everything."

—A. B. Simpson.

"MY ONLY HOPE"

My only hope must be in Jesus
To lose the burden of my sin;
There is no other power to help me;
Anew in Christ I must begin.

My only hope must be in Jesus:
No other Friend of love divine,
No other sacrifice beside Him
Who made such great salvation mine.

There is no other Savior given,
No other hope beyond the grave,
No other name in earth or heaven
My guilty, dying soul to save.

—Ina Duley Ogdon.

JUDE

In our Library, the Epistle of Jude is placed last in the group of books entitled "Epistles." This is the proper order, because Jude shows the full development of the apostasy which has been discussed in preceding epistles; and because Jude thus describes the last of the last days, it is a fitting introduction to the book of Revelation.

The writer, whose name this epistle bears, is probably the brother of our Lord mentioned in Matt. 13:55 and Mk. 6:3. He is writing to those who are called; to those who are sanctified, or set apart, by God the Father; and to those who are preserved in Jesus Christ (or as it should read, "kept for Jesus Christ"—we are kept because we are His inheritance (Eph. 1:18). Therefore, this letter is for all Christians in every age. It is for us.

In vs. 3-4 Jude gives his purpose in writing. He intended to write about that salvation which is possessed by all Christians. Instead, the Holy Spirit caused him to give warnings concerning false teachers, and to urge Christians to contend earnestly for the faith. The picture here is that of an athlete fighting for all he's worth to win the game. Jude tells us that whenever we come face to face with those who deny our Christ, and with those who scorn His blessed Word, we should take our stand and fight earnestly (not angrily) for the truth which has been committed unto us.

The Spirit of God uses historical instances to warn us as to the fate of those who will go on in their own independent, God-ignoring way (vs. 5-7).

Notice how vividly Jude describes these ungodly men (vs. 18,19). They are sensual (v. 19) i.e. natural, not spiritual, (I Cor. 2:14). They have never been saved. They have not the Spirit (Rom. 8:9). They are rebellious to anyone who would rule over them (vs. 8-10). (We need to watch our hearts and tongues in this matter!). They are like Cain (Gen. 4) who had a religion of his own, but rejected God's blood-bought way. They are like Balaam (Num. 22, 23, 24) whose reasoning was false and in opposition to God (cf. II Pet. 2:15; Rev. 2:14 distinguishing the "way," "error" and "doctrine" of Balaam). They are like Korah (Num. 16) in that they defy the word of those in authority.

These people are inside the church, professing to be Christians. They pretend to be leaders. They even attend the love-feast, and in so doing they are "spots" i.e., "hidden, jagged rocks" which wreck the "faith-ships" of those who sail within reach of their pernicious doctrines.

Jude continues his description. Study it closely. We must be able to recognize these false teachers in this day when there are so many. Clouds, trees, seas, and stars may be attractive to us, but God, who looketh upon the heart, has something else to say about these.

It is interesting to know that Enoch, the man who walked with God (Gen. 5), preached the second coming of the Lord (vs. 14,15).

Vs. 20-25 (good verses to learn) are such a contrast to that which has just preceded. We as Christians are beloved; we have the holy faith; we are in the love of God; we have the mercy of our Lord, Who is able to keep us from falling. We have the privilege of leading others into this wonderful salvation. It's a grand thing to be saved, but it's a tremendous responsibility. Many are the souls that are on the brink of hell. We must "snatch them in pity from sin and the grave," and "tell them of Jesus the mighty to save!" Girls, let's not be ashamed to stand up for Jesus!

A TRIBUTE OF LOVE TO DR. FLORENCE GRIBBLE

We feel sure every girl in the Sisterhood was deeply touched when the news was received that our beloved Dr. Gribble had gone home to be with our Lord.

Perhaps no other person has had a greater influence on the lives of the S.M.M. girls than Dr. Gribble. Her life and work were an inspiration to all of us.

Through studying her book "Undaunted Hope," studying her biography, reading her letters and meeting her personally when she was at home on furlough, we grew to love her and became more interested in our African mission work.

It was our privilege for many years to prepare and send bandages to Africa, which were used by Dr. Gribble in her medical work.

Since the Lord has called Dr. Gribble home, we should be much in prayer for our missionaries on the field. We should definitely pray that the Lord will provide the way for others to go forth to carry on the work in Africa which Dr. Gribble helped begin, and carried on so faithfully through the years.

We shall always cherish the memory of our dear sister, who was used to create within our hearts a great desire to see the gospel carried to the lost in Dark Africa.

What ARE WE DOING?

IN WINCHESTER, VA.

Dear Lorraine:

Greetings from the First Brethren Sisterhood, Winchester.

The S.M.M. was organized two months ago at the First Brethren Church, Winchester, Va. We have not as large a membership as we would like. The attendance of girls at the first meeting was 15 and 20 at the second meeting. We pray that there will be more girls at the meetings to come. We feel indeed privileged to have as our president, Rhoda Fletcher. We elected Mrs. Paul E. Dick as patroness.

We have received a real blessing in attending these meetings because we learn more of the Bible and of God's Word.

We are planning on sending our box to Kentucky, and on a mother-and-daughter banquet in May.

We are fond of reading the Herald each month, and enjoy all letters about Sisterhood.

We are grateful that we know Christ, and we are trusting in His help.

Yours in Christ,

—Kathleen Weakley, Sec'y.

Juniors

News from Fremont, O. again—This time it is a contest which you might like to try. If it is too late this year, you may save it for next.

"We now have a membership project which we believe will be very interesting to our Junior girls. We made two outline maps of South America on black paper (using white ink), and also made two maps on white paper (all identical). Sides were chosen. The goal of each side is to turn the "darkness to light." To do this they must bring new girls. Every time a new girl is brought, a country on the white map is cut out and pasted on the black map. Thus, if one side brings two girls next month, their black map would have two white countries rather than all black ones. The contest is to last three months, then the losing side entertains the winners. If a tie, the patroness and assistant entertain all the girls. We gave little black maps of South America to the girls for their Scrapbooks.

"In July we are inviting all the mothers to attend our regular meeting. We will show them what a meeting is like and also have the girls put on a missionary pageant, 'The Whole World for Jesus'." Thanks, again, Fremont. By your many good ideas we would say you were certainly wide awake. Keep up the good work! And, now a word from way out in California—Fillmore.

"We started our first real Sisterhood group in Fillmore, Calif. Church last September. We met at the home of our new patroness, Mrs. Arnold Kriegbaum, and considered separating into two groups (Juniors and Seniors), which was accomplished at our October meeting. We had 10 present at our first meeting including five juniors and five seniors. At our February meeting there were 15 juniors present.

"Last month we sent a package of Bible story books and Sunday School papers to the children in the nearby Tubercular Sanitorium. At our February meeting we brought clothing, which we shall send to our mission in Kentucky. Because of the blackouts in California, we missed the District Christmas meeting, but we plan to attend the other district meetings as they come.

"Our officers are: Pres., Marian Hicks; Sec., Maxine Rawlins; Treas., Marjorie Atchley; Patroness, Mrs. Floyd Webb; Assistant Patroness of Junior and Patroness of Senior group, Mrs. Arnold Kreigbaum."

We are so happy to hear from both the middle of our U. S. A. and the far west. Now how about word from the south, the north, and the east?

Yours, because of Calvary,

—Aunt Mabel.

W. M. C. & News

DALLAS CENTER, IA.

Greetings in the name of Our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ!

We always enjoy reading news of our sister Councils. Last July all our W. M. C. officers were unanimously reelected. They are: Pres., Mrs. Gordon Carter; Vice Pres., Mrs. Dale Wineland; Sec'y Treas., Mrs. Ralph Morgan; Cor. Sec'y, Mrs. Glenn Hoover, and pianist, Mrs. Elmer Deemy.

At close of our July meeting we had joint installation of W. M. C., Sr. S. M. M. and Jr. S. M. M. officers. We had planned for Mary Emmert to have charge, but just before time, she was called home because of her mother's illness. So Mrs. James S. Cook, our district president, very graciously installed us.

In September we sponsored a Farewell Church Night in honor of our beloved Mary L. Emmert. We presented her with a camera and films. The husband of our president also presented the church with a large framed picture of Mary, that he had taken the evening before at his home. The picture was tinted by his daughter, Jean. We are so thankful for Mary's life and testimony. We truly do praise the Lord for her safe arrival at her chosen field of labor.

Our October meeting was held in the recreation room of our president's new country home. 57 women and children were present. Many were guests. This meeting was rather special, October being the month that many of our members have birthdays, especially elderly members; so they were all seated at the table decorated in their honor and also enjoyed the large angel food cake baked by their hostess.

Also in October, 13 of our W. M. C. members held a missionary meeting for an Aid Society of a country Church of the Brethren at their request. We gave a regular W. M. C. meeting and also showed our scrap books. The women were much interested in the scrap books, especially the African one, which we had dedicated to Mary. She was indispensable in the making of it. Many of those women knew Mary. Then the senior patroness gave a short talk on the purposes and work of the Sisterhood.

In January we sponsored a Fellowship Father-and-

Son Banquet. After the delicious meal, a short program consisted of songs by the Sunday School boys, talks by Mary's father, Mr. A. Emmert, Glenn Hoover, and Rev. Cook. Then two S.M.M. girls came in, one carrying our Christian flag and the other the American flag.

Besides our regular lessons, at our meeting we have one woman give a chapter or more of the book, John and Betty Stam.

We have helped S. M. M. send clothing to Kentucky. More women are daily reading the Bible, and many more chapters are being read this year than last.

We have 43 members, but many of them are elderly and unable to attend the meetings very often. Our average attendance is about 30.

We meet in homes of our members except in summer time, when we meet in the church basement.

May we truly grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior, and may many souls be saved in these last days.

In His Service Until He Comes,
Mrs. Glenn Hoover (Cor. Sec'y).

ROANOKE, VA.

Dear Friends:

When I promised you a quarterly report of finance last conference, we had not yet decided to use the space in the Herald for our programs. This change of plans has made it very difficult for our editor to find room for all the material she needs to use. Consequently it has been decided that I should bring you brief reports as the offerings close instead of the detailed reports that I planned to bring.

Our total home mission offering was $956.39, of which $625 went to the Clayhole parsonage for principle and interest, $200 to Rev. Claude Pearson for his work among the sailors, $100 for publishing a Brethren tract, and $31.39 to the general Home Mission Fund.

Our National Expense Fund offering was $778.83. To this can be added as balance from last year and conference offerings $357.84, making a total of $1136.67. Already $841.00 has been used from expenses, of which the largest item is $600 for publication to the Brethren Missionary Herald Co.

We already have $60.85 in the treasury for Grace Seminary. $15 has been given to Jewish missions. In the Foreign Missionary treasury $10 has been given to the emergency offering; $42.76 was given to Mrs. Morrill at conference; $30.10 has been given to the Jobsons for silverware for the field; and $20 has been given for equipment for the Hoyts.

Our great interest now is the foreign mission offering. Already it amounts to $656.99. Remember that the names of the Councils will be sent with the money this year so that your church will receive recognition.

You are to be commended for the splendid offerings you are giving. May the Lord bless and keep you.

Mrs. H. W. Koontz, Sec.-Treas.

NEWS BRIEFS — From Our Workers

Since we reported, last week, the dedication of a new flourescent lighting system at the First Brethren Church of WAYNESBORO, PA., we have learned that the Philathea Class of the Bible School also installed a flourescent lighting fixture in the parsonage kitchen. We also learn that the Bible School is contemplating the establishment of a Bible School Library and a Bible School orchestra.

On Easter Sunday the PERU, IND. church, where Bro. Robert Ashman is pastor, just missed meeting its foreign mission offering goal of $350 by 35c. The following Lord's Day $38 was received, and it is believed that the offering will go over the $400 mark. 35 Easter banks were turned in by the boys and girls of the Bible School, 20 of them full.

Bro. R. E. Gingrich, pastor of the ELLET, O. church, writes, "Things are going fine here at the church. The Lord is abundantly blessing the work. The foreign mission offering will reach $600, I believe. It is over $400 in cash already. We are supporting Garner Hoyt, as you perhaps already know. . . . We have the finest and largest group of young people we have ever had. I have a high school class of 40, and Mrs. Gingrich has a young people's class of approximately the same number. There are many prospects who have been coming occasionally, whom we hope to win." From the Ellet church bulletin we also glean the following items of interest: The high school class has become so crowded, when all are present, that the high school seniors and others in the group 18 and over are being promoted into the young people's class two months ahead of time. The young people recently sponsored a service at the Haven of Rest Mission in Akron, and will continue to do so one night each month. The Junior Girls Choir recently presented the music for the Brethren Radio Hour, a weekly Sunday morning broadcast sponsored by the Ellet Church over WAKR at 8:30 a. m. During the month of April, Bro. Gingrich presented the Sunday School Lesson each Saturday morning over WAKR. This broadcast, sponsored by the Akron Bible Institute, may be heard each Saturday morning at 8:30. The May broadcast will be in charge of Rev. Harold Etling, a Grace Seminary graduate, and pastor of the Evangelical Church of Greensburg, O.

Bro. Glenn Miller, of the WHITTIER, CALIF. church writes, "It might be interesting news to you to know that our Christian Endeavorers are bringing Dr. Arthur I. Brown to the church for a one week's meeting in May."

In the Victory Revival with Bro. Vern Stuber and the Brethren at Sharpsville, Ind., conducted by Bro. Robert Ashman of Peru, the attendance average was about 65 through rain and all. The cooperation was excellent and spirit of the people was most encouraging to pastor and evangelist. The Lord gave victory with 22 decisions, 14 of whom were baptized at Peru the following Monday night. The evangelist states, "there is opportunity in that community as was evidenced by the fact that most of the decisions were among the young married people and their families. This looks forward to a real growth in the Lord's work at Sharpsville."

Something of the spirit of our churches in these days of emergency can be seen in this item from the bulletin of the First Brethren Church of LONG BEACH, CALIF.: "A black-out coming? We doubt that there will be many more, if any. But if it should come, what of it? There wouldn't be any better place, and very few places as safe, as right here in this church at 5th and Cherry. We are prepared for a real spiritual love-feast for the entire period of any black-out. Tonight we will give you a demonstration of just how it would be—only no bombs—not tonight."

The Waynesboro, Pa. bulletin informs us that "ROBERT YODER, the son of our pioneer missionary to Argentina, who has worked for the Argentine Government for 7 years, has been sent by that government to take a U. S. Scholarship Course in aviation, so he can return and teach pilots in Argentina. He is stationed at the Hagerstown Airport, and reports he enjoys his visit to the U. S."

Among items of interest reported at the business meeting of the First Brethren Church of PERU, IND. are: a perfect attendance for the quarter by 68 members of the Bible School; more than $1000 received by the financial secretary during the quarter; an average attendance of 160 at 20 revival services; 7 outside speakers; 61 decisions for Christ; and an addition of 18 to the membership of the church.

In answer to the question why news from some churches seldom or never appears in these columns, we either never hear from these churches at all, or the information arrives so long after the events take place that they are of no value. Just this past week we have received bulletins from three churches covering their activities for the past three months, and in one instance, dating from early in January. Among the items we would have been glad to report ahead of time if we had known of it was a Bible conference conducted a month ago—and we just learned of it for the first time! We appreciate greatly that some of the churches are "up on their toes" when it comes to reporting their activities PROMPTLY by card, letter or bulletin, and informing us ahead of time when special meetings are to be conducted. And for those who are not doing so, we hope that this hint will be sufficient.

The Mother Who Didn't Forget

By REV. JOHN H. SQUIRES, pastor, Wooster, O.

When we requested from Bro. Squires a mother's day article for the Herald, we remarked that a father of twins should have no trouble in preparing one. To this Bro. Squires replied, "Where do you get that stuff, 'A fellow with twins shouldn't have any TROUBLE writing a mother's day article'? Man, only a father of twins knows what TROUBLE is. Didn't you know that the author of 'Nobody Knows De Trouble I'se Seen' was the father of twins'?" Well, perhaps it's so. Never having been the father of twins, we at least cannot speak from experience. But we can certainly commend the following article to our readers. Perhaps its worth lies in the fact that it comes from "the voice of experience," the father of twins!—Ed.

"When I call to remembrance the unfeigned faith that is in thee, which dwelt first in thy grandmother Lois, and thy mother Eunice, and I am persuaded in thee also. . . . And that from a child thou hast known the Holy Scriptures which are able to make thee wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus" (2 Tim. 1:5, 4).

27,000,000 boys and girls without Bible instruction in America! This is a conservative estimate! But it is more than an estimate; it is an indication. It indicates that millions of homes in the United States are without The Bible, without Christ, and are therefore without hope!

At once we are confronted with the fact that somewhere someone has failed. This failure is not difficult to find. The most important institutions for molding human life is the home, and it is here we find our failure. The school and church combined exert little influence upon children compared to the power of persuasion that is found in the home. "Of the first 10 years of a child's life, nine-tenths of his time is spent in the home." One great child-educator has truthfully said, "If you train your children carefully until they are seven years old, they are already three-quarters educated." Or to put it even more forcibly, in the words of Clarence H. Benson: "By the age of three, parents have done more than half of what they will ever do for their child." This is a truth pastors and evangelists have seen demonstrated only too often. Some mother will neglect the spiritual training of her child for seven or ten years, and then suddenly see the folly of her way when she is confronted by a rebellious and godless son or daughter. The mother then decides to do something about it and rushes to the pastor with, "Won't you please do something for my child?" It has already been done. Nine chances out of ten it cannot be undone. Were it not for the grace of God in salvation through Jesus Christ it could never be undone.

The real teacher of the child in the home is the mother. This has always been and ever will be true. In the habit-forming days of early childhood, it is the mother for the most part who will decide what the child will be in later life. All that the little one in the home knows about God will come from mother; for the mother is the only God the little one knows. "In the earliest hours she (mother) is all of heaven and earth to him. In his mother he has discovered protection, provision, and Providence. The first object of a child's religion is its mother. The mother's arms are his heaven; her eyes, the stars; and her care and provision, the Providence on which he relies with fullness of faith."

Precious to mother, but how much sweeter far
To Jesus Christ these little children are.
She watches them upon their morning way,
Her heart will follow, but her feet must stay;
Oh, dare she trust them past the threshold's rim
Unless she KNOWS she trusts them unto Him?

——Sel.

Where do your feet take you mother? Those tiny, trusting feet are following you. A little boy, having been told by his mother that it was God who made people good, made this reply, "Yes, I know it is God, but mothers help a lot." Yes, mothers may help or they may hinder.

In the passage before us we have two mothers who didn't forget. But our purpose for the present involves the mother of Timothy, Eunice. Thank God for Lois who brought up Eunice at the altar of her knees. But praise Him thrice for Eunice who didn't forget, and in turn made an altar out of her own knees for little Timothy. Is there not in this passage an answer to the problem of why only 10 per cent of the homes in America have a family altar? Our grandmothers as a whole believed something, and they tried to pass that great body of truth on to their children. But what about those children who are now the mothers of oday? Have they not, to a great extent, forgotten what they learned and where they learned it? What if Eunice had forgotten to transmit to Timothy what she had learned from Lois?

There are in the above two verses at least three things that took place because a mother didn't forget:

Because Eunice didn't forget, a son was saved.

Eunice was a Jewess. This very fact in itself practically assured Timothy of a knowledge of the Word of God. The Jew knew the importance of child-training, and every child was sure to be indoctrinated from infancy. The very heart of Judaism was drilled into the minds and hearts of Jewish boys and girls so that they could never forget it. The heart of Judaism is found in this: "Hear, O Israel: the Lord our God is one Lord: and thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy might" (Deut. 6:4-5). But this would mean nothing to future generations unless it was written where it would be preserved. Where should it be written? The Jew knew. The child was the key. The Jew knew that "the child was wax to receive and granite to retain." That is why the instruction is given in the next two verses, Deut. 6:6-7: "And these words which I command thee this day, shall be in thine heart: and thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children, and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in Thine house, and when Thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up." The ability of the Jew to exist down through the ages amid horrible persecution is not such a mystery when we study the above passage and understand the value the Jew put upon the child and its education in the Holy Scriptures.

Eunice had received her knowledge of the Holy Scriptures from her mother Lois but thank God she didn't keep that knowledge within her own heart. Paul said that Timothy had "from a child known the Holy Scriptures." Eunice began teaching Timothy when he was an infant, for that is literally what "child" means here. Let no mother be so spiritually stupid as to deny her child its inalienable right to learn about Christ from infancy. A child is never too young to learn about Christ and His Word. Timothy will be forever a powerful protest against such an erroneous idea. Undoubtedly in the first five years of his life Timothy learned more about the Lord and His Word from Eunice by just watching her as she went about her household duties and lived a godly life before him.

"Not merely in the words you say,
Not only in your deeds confessed
But in the most unconscious way
Is Christ expressed.
For me, 'twas not the truth you taught,
To you so clear, to me so dim,
But it seemed your very presence
Brought a sense of Him
And from your eyes He beckons me,
And from your heart His love is shed,
'Till I lose sight of you, and see
The Christ instead."

That unhypocritical, crystal-clear faith in the Christ of the Word of God that dwelt in Lois and Eunice came to dwell in Timothy in those early years because a mother by the name of Eunice didn't forget.

Because Eunice didn't forget, a preacher was produced.

Eunice was well paid for those early years of instruction. Throughout all eternity she will be able to see the fruit that comes from being able to present to the Lord, not only a saved son, but a son who has surrendered his life in full-time service to the ministry of the gospel of Christ.

Timothy's first pulpit was his mother's knees. It was there that he not only learned about salvation but also learned he should "be able to teach others also". What a blessed beginning to learn to "preach the Word" at mother's knees! Too many mothers can't keep their knees bent long enough to hold a Bible. They are so busy running around in society and doing "church work" that they wouldn't know what to do with a Bible if they did find it on their laps. Think of it! A mother whose children have never heard her pray, much less see Christ in her walk! The reply that a modern girl gave a real estate agent who wanted to sell her a house indicates why too many mothers are producing too few preachers. Said the girl to the agent: "A home? Why do I need a home? I was born in a hospital, educated in a college, courted in an automobile, and married in a church; I live out of the delicatessen and paper bags; I spend my mornings on the golf course and my afternoons at the bridge table and my evenings at the movies; and when I die, I'm going to be buried at the undertaker's. All I need is a garage." Any note of humor in that reply is immediately lost in the tragic truthfulness of it.

Why aren't there more consecrated, Christ-loving young men entering the ministry today? May it not be that we are desparately in need of more mothers like Eunice? Our Brethren mothers should put some serious thought into this in light of the fact that our church is crying out to Gace Seminary, "Give us more preachers." And Grace Seminary is forced to say to the church, "You give us more young men". But our church will never make any real contribution in this way to the seminary until we have more homes with family altars and godly mothers and fathers, who will like Eunice of old teach and live Christ before their children.

Because Eunice didn't forget, another Demas was avoided.

A careful reading of 2 Tim. 1:5 seems to indicate that Paul used the phrase, "When I call to remembrance," that some incident had just taken place which caused Timothy and his fortunate background to flash before his mind. What would cause Paul at this point to be thankful for Lois and Eunice and the part they played in the life of Timothy? May it not have been his keen disappointment over the departure of Demas (2 Tim. 4:10)? "Demas hath forsaken me, having loved this present world, and is departed unto Thessalonica." Demas had turned out to be a hypocrite, and Paul in his sorrow thought of the "unhypocritical faith" that was in Timothy.

Let's not be too hard on Demas. The very fact that Paul should bring up Timothy's background, when he was contrasting Demas' love for the world and Timothy's love for Christ, indicates that Demas must not have had the kind of mother that Timothy had. There was no Eunice to point out what sin was and what it could do. The wordly city of Thessalonica may have been made attractive by the walk of the mother of Demas, as he fashioned his life after her's in those formative years. What a contrast to such a mother was found in another "Eunice" by the name of Susannah Wesley. John Wesley had enquired of his mother to know exactly what sin was. Susannah Wesley answered her son, John: "Would you judge of the lawfulness or unlawfulness of pleasure, take this rule: whatever weakens your reason, impairs the tenderness of your conscience, obscures your sense of God, takes off your relish for spiritual things—whatever increases the authority of the body over the mind—that thing is sin to you, however innocent it may seem in itself." A mother who could talk like that to her boy is a mother who could talk with God. Small wonder that this "Eunice" produced another "Timothy".

How about it, mother; have you forgotten, or does that little one have a "Eunice"? You can't begin too soon. A woman once asked an outstanding religious educator, "How early can I begin the religious training of my child?" "Madam, when will your child be born?" he replied. "Born!" she gasped, "why, he's already five years old!" "My goodness, woman." he cried, "don't stand here talking to me! Hurry home, already you've lost the best five years." Perhaps the difference between Timothy and Demas was those first five years. How could Demas "continue in the things (he) had learned" when he had never been taught them when it mattered most? It is the early years that count. "87 per cent of adult converts fall away within five years, but not more than 40 per cent of child converts, in the same time." Mother, by the grace of God, and under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, consecrate your life to the business that pays the biggest dividends—that of seeing that your children possess "unfeigned faith" which alone can save.

News from Brethren CHURCHES

LA VERNE, CALIF.

To our dear ones in Christ Jesus:

Another glorious Easter has just passed, and we have much for which to praise the Lord; for in these chaotic conditions of war and upheaval all around us, we realize more the blessings which are ours in Christ Jesus. We had a children's program, and were delighted to see our choir loft filled with children and a few young people. More babies and children were in the program than for five or six years, hence more parents to hear the Easter story in song and word. The decorations were beautiful—so many calla lillies, but as one aged sister said, not more beautiful than the babies and children's faces. Bro. Carter gave us a wonderful Easter sermon on, "What if Christ Had Not Risen?" In the evening, after services by our five C. E. groups, our choir and pastor and wife gave an impressive service in song and reading.

Since our report of three months ago, we have had many extra meetings. Our Men's Magnify group met once for fellowship, supper and business meeting, and also the District Men's Magnify group met in our church.

Our Jewish Bible Conference of three speakers was very good. Bro. Centz was extra good, and we realize more what the Lord would have us do for His people, the Jews, and what they have brought to the church.

Bro. Sheldon showed his pictures of Africa and led prayer meeting a time or so. The Sheldons' sojourn with us inspires us to a greater work for our Lord through missions, home and foreign. Sister Sheldon gave us a good talk on their African work at one of our W. M. C. meetings. At the present time she is in the hospital for a minor operation.

Our Pomona Division of C. E., in which five or six different churches besides our own are represented, met at our church for their booster banquet.

We held our spring love feast and communion on Good Friday evening. While there were fewer in attendance than usual, it was a very inspiring and spiritual service; and such fellowship is enjoyed more when we are surrounded with the turmoil, unrest, and war conditions.

We know there is a question in your minds, do war conditions hinder church services? Yes, in different ways. Some fear the threatened blackouts, for when they come, all cars must stop at the side of the street till the all clear signal is sounded. Then the tire rationing is another factor, it seems, but can we not trust our Lord? He is faithful. Has He not provided throughout the ages? And if tires cannot be obtained, will He not provide otherwise? Remember our blessed hope of His soon return; also Heb. 10:25, "not forsaking the assembling of ourselves. . . ."

The greatest factor in lessening church services is the defense schools, where most of the able-bodied men must go to learn ways and means of defense in case of air raids. This has lessened prayer meeting and choir practice.

The Red Cross called on us to see how many refugees or evacuees we could cook for in case costal areas were evacuated. Our W. M. C. agreed to cook for 150 if necessary, and divided our members in groups of four to cook and oversee the work. We were told, "If called, drop home work and respond to the work in church basement." All agreed to do so.

FORT WAYNE, IND.

We here at Fort Wayne praise the Lord for His rich blessings during the church year which closed Mar. 31. Truly He has done exceedingly abundantly above all that we have asked or thought! Apr. 1 marked the close of 17 months of labor among the Brethren at Fort Wayne for the undersigned and his family. These have been months of real joy in fellowship and service together. During this time 34 members have been received into the congregation. In addition there are 9 awaiting baptism and membership. The Lord has also led a number of folks to make definite rededications of life.

The attendance of the Bible School has shown a steady growth during the winter months. During the month of Dec. it never dropped below 160. However, the attendance has shown a decline recently, in spite of a number of new members, due to the seven-day working conditions.

The church services have been exceptionally well attended especially in the mornings. During the three months from January to March we averaged a decision a Sunday. Prayer meetings are always a spiritual feast. The attendance has ranged all the way from 35 to 65 at regular prayer services, with the average around 45. Christian Endeavor has enjoyed a good year in the church. We have four societies, Adult, Young People's, Intermediate and Junior, which have totalled as high as 65 in attendance. Each of the groups is growing.

Many improvements have been made in the building during the past year. The exterior of the church has been painted and several rooms refinished in the Sunday School departments. The outstanding achievement in this connection has been the completion of a chapel in the north wing of the building (see picture on Page 15). It is a beautiful little auditorium, 45' long and 22' wide. The ceiling is "Masonite" tile while the sidewalls are finished in "Celotex" decorative plank and a "Masonite" wainscotting. An unbroken line of fluorescent lights the complete length of the room floods the chapel with light. With the pews from the Bethel Church of Berne and the carpeted platform and pulpit, we have a splendid auditorium seating approximately 100 persons. Dedicated by Professor Herman A. Hoyt at the New Years Eve service, the chapel has already been used for a Bible Conference and a week of evangelistic services in addition to its use every week for prayer meeting, Junior and Intermediate Departments of Bible School and Young People's C. E.

During the past year we have enjoyed the ministry of Dr. V. C. Kelford of Calgary, Alt., Canada, who was with us for two splendid Bible conferences eight days last April and five days in January; the pictures and messages of Rev. O. E. Phillips of the Biblical Research Society who gave us a four-day conference in October; the ministry of several missionaries including the Morrills, Sheldons, Jobsons and Williams of the African work; Mrs. E. R. Munroe of the Oriental Missionary Society, the Zimmermans of the Brethren Hebrew Mission in Los Angeles, and Rev. Norman Uphouse of the new home mission work in North Riverdale, Dayton. The offerings for missions have been the largest in all our history and we are praying that they shall continue to grow. We feel that we here in Fort Wayne owe a great debt to the missionary vision of others in the past, and we have found that missionary giving always is reflected in real growth at the home base.

We are planning to have a two weeks meeting in May with Evangelist "Mickey" Walsh of Philadelphia. Pray for the blessing of the Lord upon this effort. Pray for our testimony here in the city of Fort Wayne, that we may be instrumental in winning many of the lost to Christ in these last days! Pray for the pastor as he has been ministering two days each week in part time teaching at the Grace Theological Seminary. "The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you."

John M. Aeby, Pastor.

CAMDEN, O.

Just a little news from a small church" resurrected" eight years ago. When we came here, there was not even a Sunday School. Now we have a Sunday School of 70 to 125, and a fine Bible Study Class each Thursday evening.

We had eight nights of revival right after Easter. There were eight confessions and five received into the church. Some the parents said were too young. Our evangelist this time was Mr. Peifer, a converted gangster, who drew a fine crowd.

Our Easter offering this year is the best in eight years, but not near what it should be.

Pray for the Camden church. We are in one of the most liberal communities I have ever been in.

S. Lowman, Pastor.

TWO REVIVAL CAMPAIGNS

It was our privilege to conduct two revival campaigns during the three weeks preceding Easter. The first meeting which lasted two weeks was held at the Evangelical Church in Greensburg, O., where Brother Harold Etling, a former classmate and graduate of Grace Seminary, is pastor. We had a wonderful time of fellowship with Brother and Sister Etling and the people to whom they minister. The Lord worked in a wonderful way to the salvation of many lost souls and the surrender of many lost lives. There were 46 decisions in all, about half of them being first time confessions of Christ.

The second meeting has already been reported by Bro. Mayes, but we would like to add our word of testimony to his. Never have we seen the Lord work so mightily in the hearts of men and women in such a short campaign. It was indeed a real revival. Besides the fact that there were over 40 decisions for Christ, we feel that the Lord has brought a definite blessing to the church as a whole.

In both meetings we were glad for the opportunity of presenting the precious truths of the Word of God. And despite the fact that over 90 decisions were made for Christ, we feel that we have been the one really to profit by the manifestation of God's power in salvation, for we too have been revived.

THE BIBLE STILL LEADS

Boake Carter, celebrated columnist, has been bearing strong and fearless testimony to the Bible as the Word of God. It is not often that such men of courage are found in the world of journalism, who would face the scoffs and criticisms from infidel and agnostic critics. But apparently this man has fought his way through the maze of world confusion, past the mere occupation with comments on events as they occur, to discover the true and basic cause of the present state of mankind and world affairs. His columns have been calling America to the Bible as the source of light and guidance for the world in its present confused state.

After noting the recent decision of 100 literary judges that the Bible is the greatest of all books in the world, Carter declared "Now, for a change, let's read the Bible instead of 98 per cent of the trash ground out to divert the mind of man from reading that which he should read daily to find out what he has to do for himself and his nation."

Would to God that America would heed this counsel and go back to the Bible, yield their hearts to the Christ of it, mould their lives into conformity with it, and fill our nation with righteous living men and women from the President down. No nation need fear any enemy if that nation is right with God. But we cannot expect God to bless and save us if we have our backs turned on Him.

"Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord" (Psalm 33:12). No enemy ever conquered Israel while they were faithful to God. But they fell on evil days when they forsook His will for them. If America would attend to God's Word and listen to Him, instead of the confused and raucus voices of godless demagogues who are "ever learning and never able to come to a knowledge of the truth" (II Tim. 3:7), the blood of America's boys would not have to run as a river. God would fight for us. That would be enough!

BRETHREN, WE HAVE LOST SOMETHING—

We attended a missionary meeting the other night. A man was there who had just returned from Peru, South America. He told a pitiful story of the state of the nation, the moral and physical condition of the people, and worst of all, the sad spiritual state. He told of a missionary meeting they had, at which a lay preacher with no education at all reported. He had no message except that which the Lord had done for him through the cross of Calvary. He told how he had felt called to a certain Peruvian city to preach the gospel. He went. There was a powerful and wicked priest there who stirred up the people to kill him. Yet he preached on. Many women pled with their husbands to kill him and do God a service. Yet he preached on. He finally hired a hall. The priest incited people to throw rocks and break the windows. Rowdies were hired to try to break up his meetings. Still he preached on. He won one soul for Christ two weeks later, then another, and another. He found that the hearts of men were sick of sin and longed for a Savior. A very wicked public official was laid upon his heart. The official could have had him thrown into jail for even talking to him about his soul. But he went anyway. At first the official was cold. The second, third, and fourth visits had little effect. On the sixth call he broke down and said he hadn't slept for days, and that his soul was miserable. He accepted Christ. A week later he called the missionary and said he couldn't stay in the high salaried government position he had. He felt that he could only preach the gospel now. He resigned. The missionary sent a letter with him to the mission school, asking them to receive him and teach him the Bible, but stating that they didn't need to set him on fire for Christ for he already was a blaze. In three short months that lay preacher, laboring under the very threat of death daily, brought 15 souls to Jesus in Peru.

We went out of that meeting with a heavy sense of failure in our heart. With all our running around, how little we are accomplishing with all the advantages we have! How that simple-hearted lay preacher in Peru puts us to shame! I thought of the many preachers in Brethren pulpits who seem afraid and ashamed to go to men around them and talk to them about Christ—preachers who year after year report nothing but a few children out of their Sunday School being baptized and taken into their churches. Where is the fire for Christ that is found from a trip to Calvary? Where is the iron, in the blood that comes from the inner assurance of being saved from hell? Will we have to face the threat of a firing squad before we will tell men of Christ here in America? What difference how many fine magazines we publish, how many great sermons we preach, how many books we write, or how many marvelous Bible conferences we hold, if we thereby lose our love and passion to bring lost men to Christ? Would to God that we could take a trip to Peru and learn from that humble lay preacher how to do the thing that Jesus first of all sent us to do. God save us Brethren preachers as well as laymen, from having to face the accusing fingers of men and women in our communities whom we might have saved, but did nothing about it!

"THEY'VE GONE INTELLECTUAL"—

We recently labored in a city where we came across a church with a large congregation. The congregation had plenty of money. They had an outstanding fundamentalist preacher who was in demand for outside work. They had a reputation for the wonderful gospel that church stood for. But they had revival after revival and no harvest of souls. Worldiness was characteristic of its people. Practically all of its men and many of its women, young and old, used tobacco. Prayer was a dead issue. The men of the church avoided prayer meetings. I asked, "What is the matter with a church with such a gospel and such a preacher that such conditions exist?" Quickly came the reply, "O, they have gone intellectual". I asked what was meant by that, and was told that they had gone heavy for Bible Conferences, and Bible teaching ministry, but that no one ever took it to themselves personally. It is hard to believe that such worldliness could live under such teaching. But the facts are that the preacher who thinks that if he just preaches the true gospel that is the end of it, and that his church will be a spiritual one as a result, is badly mistaken. The gospel must be applied. It made little difference how much Nathan talked in the third person to David, but when he said, "Thou art the man," things began to happen. A 'cold fundamentalism' is as detestable as modernism. It is of such that Jesus said in Mark 7:

"This people honoreth me with their lips, but their heart is far from me."

A separated gospel without a "separated life" is a living contradiction. The preacher who, from fear of man or fear of his job, fails to call a spade a spade and lay his finger on sin as sin, is a failure in the sight of God. God save us from going 'intellectual' to the point of harboring sin right in our own congregations.

"HE WOULD CONDEMN HIMSELF"—

A close friend of a good fundamentalist preacher was talking to the writer a short time ago. We are discussing why there were so many glaring outward sins in the lives of his church members, when the preacher was such a strong preacher of the gospel himself. We asked, "Why doesn't he come out boldly and condemn sin as the apostle Paul did in his churches?" Answered his friend, "He wouldn't dare to. If he did, he would but condemn himself, for he runs to the movies and smokes cigarettes. That is why he has lost his influence to clean up his people." He preaches against sin in general, but never so that his people take it personally". Before a preacher can have power to clean up his church and make it free from the world spots that destroy a church's power in the community, he must himself come with clean hands. The preacher whose own spiritual life is so low that he likes to indulge in the pleasures of a Christ-rejecting world, and who shakes hands with the devil's crowd all week long, cannot have the courage of a lion in denouncing sin when he gets into the pulpit. It is like hitting himself with an axe. The injunction of the Apostle Paul to his son in the gospel, Timothy, should be the daily manna for some preachers who like to think of themselves more lightly than they ought to think.

"But thou, O man of God, flee these things; and follow after righteousness, godliness, faith, love, patience, meekness. Fight the good fight of faith" (I Tim. 6:11, 12).

God forbid that any preacher who reads these lines should realize if he should condemn worldliness and sin in his people, he would have to take his own place at the altar of confession, for he would have but condemned himself!

"GO GET THEM"

At the close of a revival service one night, a much impressed young man, student at a lifeless theological seminary, approached D. L. Moody and asked, "How can we reach the masses?" The reply came like a flash, "Go out after them."

Scores of fundamental preachers are wasting good gospel sermons on empty benches with but a handful of saved people, half asleep, in attendance. All the while the thousands of the lost are passing by without so much as a thought of the church. And all the while the pastor and the people feel that they are doing all God expects of them, and they wonder why the sinners don't crowd into the church.

What a pitifully poor conception of reaching lost men for Christ! Church buildings are not designed for reaching sinners. They are fitted as a place of worship for believers. Sinners don't go to church. They are out in sin, without thought of God.

If the missionary in foreign lands should try the method most used in America, he wouldn't get to first base reaching lost natives. But he goes out after them, in the bush, in the villages, on the roads.

The Lord Himself, in a great parable, told us that inviting people to a wedding feast is not enough. We must go out into the highways and byways and compel them, urge them, plead with them, to come in.

Recently, in a community where a group of fundamentalist churches had lost their joy in the Lord, and

COIN COLLECTORS SHOULD BE DISTRIBUTED NOW

It is estimated that $6,000 came in for the Thanksgiving offering through the use of coin collectors last year. More pastors are using them each season. They are making larger offerings easier to get. Some people fill three or four of them. We anticipate the largest use of them this year. Now is the time to start, pastor.

Our Loss is Great

The directors of The Home Missions Council wish here to acknowledge our deep sense of grief and loss because of the death of Dr. Florence Gribble. She was a living embodiment of the passion for the salvation of the lost in Africa. Her going is a loss to all of us. As an example of devotion and fortitude she inspired us all. Our loss is very great.

had settled down to a satisfied state, doing no personal soul winning at all, a change of pastors came in one church. He came in like a firebrand. Within a month he had rung every door bell in town. Then he started on the countryside. Every farm, every home, every farmer in the field, was approached by this preacher. He was full of joy, wore a big smile, was pleasant and easy to talk to, didn't try to make others feel his spiritual superiority, didn't try to run down other churches. He was simply after the lost. Scores of people who never darkened other church doors came to his church. Many were saved. They wanted the thing that made a man as attractive as he was. He told them it was Christ.

Brother preacher, are you preaching to the same little, lifeless handful every Sunday? Do you work and sweat, preparing and preaching your sermons with no result? It is your own fault. Get out of the rut you are in. Get on your knees and cry out to God for a revival. Spend an hour a day pleading for souls. Let your eyes run down with tears like Jeremiah's. Then go out after the lost, face to face, and show some joy in the Lord, and soon you will be a new preacher on fire for God. Your congregation will catch the spirit. They will follow your example. Then your church will be a continual revival center.

But—if you don't, some other preacher will follow you and accomplish wonders right where you failed.

"THAT PREACHER DOESN'T PAY HIS BILLS"

There could hardly be a more severe indictment of a preacher than that he fails to pay his bills. Nothing will cause congregations to shy away from calling him, more than this charge. No other fault aside from clear misconduct on a preacher's part brings more hurt to the name and prestige of a church in its own community. What confidence does a grocer have in the gospel of a church whose own preacher does not, over months of time, pay his grocery bill? How can they expect to win the automobile agent to Christ when their preacher fails to make his payments on his car? And when a preacher leaves town and goes to another field, leaving a lot of unpaid bills behind him for the congregation to face, what chance does his successor have to reach the men of that city until they are paid up? This one item is so important in successfully establishing a new congregation, that the Home Missions Council makes one of the basic clauses of its contract with every home mission pastor to be that he must live within his income. However, such a requirement is a rank injustice if the dear man is not given enough to live on so that he can pay his bills. This is what the Council always seeks to do for each of its men. They take into consideration the size of his family, the cost of living in this particular community, and other items that he will have to face, such as moving expenses and so forth. The training of having to live within a modest, yet sufficient income is one of the most necessary parts of a young minister's preparation. Too large an income suddenly thrust into the hands of a young and inexperienced preacher, just because he is a promising young man, as is sometimes the case, is one of the worst things for him. It has ruined many a young man by getting him into indulgent habits that will demand satisfaction in a future day when he cannot afford it.

But on the other hand, there is a lot to be said in behalf of the preacher. If he is compelled to borrow money to get his training, thus forcing him to enter his ministry after graduation with a load of debt upon him, that makes a difference. The young preacher usually faces marriage, the setting up of a new home, the buying of a car, the establishing of a library, and a thousand other things. Often duties to his own family, an old mother or father, a younger brother or sister, are thrust upon him. Who ever thinks about that as they judge him? Then there may be operations and hospital bills to meet, sickness of himself or wife. These services are not free to a preacher any more than they are to any other. And many, many times, the congregation itself does not pay all of the preachers' salary; and yet they criticize him if he doesn't pay his bills. The way in which a congregation takes care of the pastor reflects either honor or disrepute upon the Lord. A well cared for pastor is to the everlasting credit of a congregation. It is the injunction of Scripture to do so:

> "Even so hath the Lord ordained, that they which preach the gospel should live of the gospel" (I Cor. 9:14).

Let every congregation see that it is allowing its preacher sufficient income to pay his bills before they criticize his failure to pay his bills. Today when most of the congregation are enjoying sizeable increases in their incomes, hardly any have thought to increase their pastor's salary so that he can meet the rising cost of living. And when the salary is increased, let the congregation see that it is paid up promptly! The preacher who can't hold up his head in his community because he can't pay his bills, due to not having received his salary, is licked before he starts. Give the average preacher a chance and he will make good.

"I NEED MORE MONEY"—

So wrote in a young preacher not long ago. Now there is a real difference between having enough for what we need and what we want. Too often a young preacher wants to start out where others are who have been 20 years or more in the ministry. He and his wife want a larger car, they want nicer furniture in their home, they want finer clothes to wear, they want to take many auto trips, and to have many things that most of the folks in their congregation cannot afford. If many young preachers were more concerned about the weight and power of their sermons, and more concerned about the souls that are lost in their community, they would not be so unhappy over their situation. They have their eyes on the wrong things. If their first concern were for the type of work they were doing for their Lord, their congegations would grow faster, souls would be saved, and thus they would make it possible for their church to do better by them financially. It was the apostle Paul, who had wealth and disdained it for Christ, who wrote to his disciples at Colosse:

> "Set your affections on things above, not on things on the earth" (Col. 3:2).

If many preachers spent half as much time in their study as they do trotting about the country burning up what they do receive in gasoline, they would be healthier, happier, and much more successful in the ministry. Many preachers need a boss to make them stick to their jobs at home!

"CAN YOU PROVE TO ME THAT THERE IS ANOTHER LIFE?"—

We were talking to a young man about Christ and eternity. He had spent a couple of years at college and was rather skeptical as a result. He seemed to feel that because science had not proven immortality, that therefore there was no such thing. And the pity of it was that when he went to his pastor, he was told that there was no proof of immortality, that you just had to believe it without proof. What a tragedy for

REVIVAL AT THIRD LOS ANGELES—

From the Modesto meeting we came directly to the 3rd Brethren Church of Los Angeles, and started a two weeks campaign. This church has surely had its troubles during the last couple of years, but it is now coming out of them and is looking upward. The Sunday School is climbing back up to where it once was. The attendance was 117 on Sunday. They now have two fine Christian Endeavor societies, and the church attendance is getting sizeable once more. The difficulties of the past have seemingly been good for all as they have evidently encouraged a spirit of humility, and have driven all to their knees in faith as never before. A fine spirit of fellowship and unity was present through all the meeting.

About half of the membership live in other sections of the city, and this makes it hard for them to get to church. Some of the folks drive as high as 17 miles to each service each way. And they were there as every meeting also. This demands real loyalty and sacrifice. It was a real inspiration to see this. The men of the group have a unity of purpose and a spirit of progress that is an indication that better things are ahead. They are now seriously considering such changes as will make possible the immediate erection of a new church building. We expect results from the efforts now being exerted to that end. One thing is sure: they need a building that will enable them to increase their Sunday School at once. Look for news regarding this a little later.

Bro. Leonard Kuns of Whittier made a real contribution to the success of the meetings by his directing of the song service. His genial spirit and the special music he provided were greatly appreciated by all. The delegation from other churches helped a lot at a time when it is hard to get folks out because of the unsettled conditions due to the war spirit that is everywhere. Some people live in hourly dread of an air raid, while others think nothing of it at all.

Brother and Sister Sandy are greatly loved by the congregation and they are doing a fine work here. He is teaching part time at the Los Angeles Bible Institute, but not enough to hurt his local ministry. Our home, while in his section, was with the pastor and his wife, but they insisted that I do not mention my experiences while there, so I will leave it right there, except to say that I am short a shirt. Sandy is wearing it! I will be 3,000 miles away from Mrs. Sandy when this appears in the magazine, so I have quite a bit of courage on the point.

MINISTERIAL GATHERING AT SAN PEDRO—

One of the good things about this district is the fine spirit of fellowship that the preachers and their wives have at their monthly gatherings. This one was held on a Monday at the sailors' mission at San Pedro, conducted by Claude Pearson. The meeting began at 10:30 in the morning and continued till about 4 in the afternoon. Such a meeting provides a splendid opportunity for the men to visit, cheer each other up, exchange ideas and news, and generally to promote a spirit of unity and good will which is so essential to any group of preachers. We were able to get a good picture of this group also. We had a pleasant time there that day and shall not soon forget it.

NORTH RIVERDALE GROWING—

Last Sunday there were 93 in the Sunday School at North Riverdale mission church, and 73 in the church service. This is a growth of almost 200 per cent in Sunday School since they started last August. They now have 52 members in the congregation, which is a gain of 50 per cent since the start. It would be a real achievement if all our churches had increased 50 per cent in six months! These folks work hard at their task and God is blessing them for it. Too many any preacher of the gospel to know no better than that! You would have thought that he did not accept the Bible as a fact.

The most tremendous fact in the universe is that Jesus Christ, the Son of God, was born of a virgin, lived on earth in a human body, wrought the works that only God could work, was crucified on Calvary, was buried in a tomb, the body in which He was buried was resurrected by His own mighty power, and He is now alive for evermore! That empty tomb is the best established fact of all history. 100,000,000 Christians throughout these 1900 years rise up to testify that Jesus Christ is alive and that He lives in their hearts. The living Christ in the hearts of all believers today is effective proof that Jesus arose from the dead, and that His promise of eternal life is true. He cried.

"I am He that liveth, and was dead; and behold, I am alive forever more." Amen (Rev. 1:18).

"I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live" (John 11:25).

Even though we have the facts, yet we must believe them to make them of any value to us. We have plenty of facts. Will you believe?

churches and pastors spend too much time at other things than the reaching of souls. This is not true in Riverdale. They like to go after souls over there, and that is why their church is growing so fast. And this is the reason why they have such fine offerings. Imagine a mission church of 50 members giving $166 per week in their envelopes! That is an average of over $3 per member. No wonder North Riverdale is growing. Any people who will pray and work and sacrifice as they do will grow by leaps and bounds. Success in building new churches is not just a matter of luck. It is the result of downright hard work, filled with the love of Christ and a desire to glorify Him. Works like North Riverdale surely glorify our Lord.

The church building is going up and the foundation walls are being poured as we write these lines. See page 7 of this issue for pictures on day of laying cornerstone. Pray for these real Brethren in North Riverdale.

BELLFLOWER, CALIFORNIA—

It was originally planned that we hold a two weeks meeting in Bellflower. However, since our time had been so heavily cut into by other demands before we came to the coast, this meeting was cut to one week. This is too short a time for a real revival. Nevertheless we did the best we could to stir up the hearts of the people and to help them to take courage in expanding the work of the Lord in this district.

The one thing that seems to be most needed right now in this field is to have the building completed. They have had the basement only for several years now. Having to use the basement for both Sunday School and church work does not help the work any. The folks have had so many distressing setbacks in their efforts to finish their church and to get a strong congregation built up that some had lost heart. However, it is apparent that they will be able to go ahead now and finish their house of worship. The very psychology of this one thing will do more to set the whole congregation alive to their work for Christ, and to interest the community in their enterprise, and will be worth more than any other single thing. Certainly, the present appearance of the basement covered over is not a very attractive thing from the outside.

But from the inside there is a very different story to tell. Last spring the floods filled the earth so full of water that the pressure burst the cement floor and filled the place with water to 42 inches high. Waiting for the water to recede took a long time, during which they had to meet in a hall a long way from the church. Then the expensive work of repairing the basement followed. During all this time the work was suffering. It was planned that they should finish the upper part of the building at the time the basement repairs were being made. The Council had appropriated $1,000 for this work, but the income last year did not permit the Council to make this payment, with the result that once more the folks had to wait. They went ahead and fixed the basement anyway. Today it is a refreshing sight to see. Brilliantly white, it makes a fine impression on anyone who enters. It is small, close quartered, and that makes a friendly spirit for the services which is very apparent.

The attendance at the services was not large at any time until Easter Sunday morning. The many defense plants with their different shifts make it hard for many of the men to attend at all. When the husband cannot go, it keeps a whole family out. California is alive with defense plants. Such things can be expected in these days.

Bro. Jesse Hall is the pastor here, and he is really loved by his people. We noticed that the very first thing. The hard work and sacrifices that he has made to save this work have endeared him to all who know the circumstances under which he has labored. He has rolled up his sleeves and labored alongside his men day after day in the work. He is a tireless house-to-house visitor. The entire community hold him in high regard. The cause of Christ has been strengthened by his Christian testimony, that is sure. It was our privilege to spend the week in the pastor's home, and he and his wife made those days a very pleasant experience to me indeed. The family altar is a very real part of this home.

We held a meeting in Bellflower in 1937. At that time the church was located in a new section away out in front of the main body of houses. As a result there were many who doubted the wisdom of locating so far out. Today there are literally hundreds of houses all around the place. One subdivision is now erecting 2,500 houses just south of the church. The church today stands alone in the center of one of the largest and fastest growing residential sections in the whole of Southern California. There is no doubt about having a field. There is room for half a dozen real churches in that field now. What is needed now is a place to serve the work adequately and a people with the heart to reach the unsaved. We see both of these just ahead.

On the last Sunday afternoon of the meetings, the secretary met with the officers of the church. These men manifested a fine spirit of interest and devotion; and, after going over their problems and possibilities, the order to go ahead and finish the building was agreed on. Funds were assured and the project was ready for starting as soon as permission from the WPB could be secured. We hope that by the time this is read, the walls will be going up. It will be a great day for God's work in Bellflower when the structure is finished. It will complete a long struggle. God will glorify Himself in Bellflower.

MODESTO AGAIN

Leaving Bellflower for the east, we came by way of Modesto. The time had come for closing the deal for purchase of lots. This was done. Plans for the new building were outlined. Some materials were purchased for the structure. Finances were assured at the local bank. All that was needed was permission from the WPB. This was practically assured.

ISOLATED BUT NOT DESOLATE

Some of the finest Brethren are without church homes. Yet faith burns brightly in their hearts. In Oakland, Calif. are two loyal Brethren Families. They have been attending other churches for many years but still they are loyal Brethren. W. W. Heltman and his family are from the Turlock, California Brethren Church. Brother Heltman has been very sick for several months. He would greatly appreciate the prayers of all of you in his behalf. Brother and Sister Buckland are very close to the Heltmans (these two men married sisters), and are just as devoted to the Brethren faith as ever. We praise God for them both. A glimpse at the home mission offering will tell the story of their love. There are some other Brethren families now living in Oakland, and we hope soon to see a new Brethren Church established in that great city of the west, where these folks can worship with those of like faith. Brother and Sister Rambo and the Secretary's sister, Mrs. Grace Hurley, accompanied us on this trip to Oakland. Mrs. Hurley has been away from The Brethren Church for many years but is still loyal.

At Steamboat Springs, Col., we stopped to see Mrs. Viva Kitchens, formerly of Beaver City, Neb. She is a faithful and generous Brethren. She was in Denver when we stopped at her home, so we stayed there all night and then went to Denver the next morning, where we saw her. By the way, if any Brethren are going west, by all means plan to stop at Steamboat Springs, for Sister Kitchens has as fine a group of auto camp homes as are found anywhere. We found Mrs. Kitchens in Denver and had a good visit with her there,, and told her how we appreciated her fine gifts to home missions.

A NEW FIELD IN DENVER?

H. H. Stewart, as a boy, went from Portis, Kan., to Denver Bible Institute. After he had finished his work there, he became a teacher in the Institute, and finally managing editor of the magazine, "Grace and Truth," which the school publishes. The school at one time planned to establish a church in a needy section of the city by student service. The project did not succeed. But believing there was a field there, Bro. Stewart wrote us asking if we would be interested in the field. We promised to stop in and look it over at our first opportunity, and so we did. There ought to be a Brethren Church in Denver, but we will need a man with the ability and passion and willingness to sacrifice to establish one there. It can be done. God must lead and provide.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE MEETS

The annual spring Executive Committee meeting was held at the office of the Council in Berne, Apr. 17th. While the blessing of God is upon our mission work as never before, yet our problems and hindrances are manifold. Four building projects with finances and approved plans are held up at present on account of war restrictions. Prayer is requested for permission to build.

Satan is also on hand causing trouble as ever in many ways. But a growing church always has plenty of devil around.

This was the most constructive and enjoyable Executive Committee meeting we have ever held. In the past we have had heavy concern for finances for our many points. This year that worry was over. For the first time the last half of our budget for a fiscal year balanced. This is a great achievement in view of the tremendous increase in our mission points.

One deep and taxing problem was the shortage of ably fitted men for our new fields. The prospect of a greatly increased Junior Class at Grace Seminary is very encouraging to us. After all, our greatest need is for men—able men.

Never has our home mission work been so effective and well ordered as today. Never has it enjoyed the united and enthusiastic support of all our churches so much as now. Our Executive Comittee meeting was a splendid evidence of this fact. This meeting was not only a blessing in its work, but also in its fellowship. We had the pleasure of enjoying dinner with the Schaffers, and supper with the Millers.

NEW BRETHREN CHURCH AT MANSFIELD, O.

On Sunday afternoon, Apr. 19, the secretary assisted in the organization of the Grace Brethren Church of that city. Arthur Cashman has been working in this field for 18 months and has now begun to see real results for his labors. He now has a congregation of about 50 and a Sunday School of the same size. The offerings run high for such a group. The Easter offering is over $200. Plans are now in the making for a tent campaign in July with R. Paul Miller, preaching, and Leo Polman as song leader. The building fund has already been started. A real church is in prospect in Mansfield if Jesus tarries much longer.

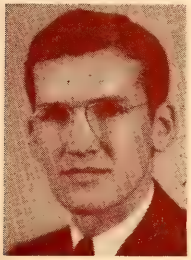
CORNERSTONE LAID AT NORTH RIVERDALE

(See Page 7)

On Apr. 26 in the afternoon, the cornerstone of the new North Riverdale church building was laid. There was a fine crowd in attendance. Weather was perfect and there wasn't one long-winded speaker, believe it or not! And the secretary spoke! Short messages of greeting and encouragement were given by Lee Burkett, Roy A. Patterson, Roy Kinsey, Russell D. Barnard, Morse Hoover, Mrs. Wallace, Mrs. Patterson, Owen Hacker, Norman Uphouse, and the secretary.



The building is now past the first floor and going up with a large force of men on the job. Dedication is planned for July 1, and without serious holdups they will make it.

The congregation is growing steadily, and on last Sunday morning they just about packed the hall in which they are now meeting. They have fixed it up and it looks real "churchy." Bro. Uphouse is proving a real and wise leader of this new work. God is glorifying Himself in this strong testimony for Christ in Dayton.

Christ's Return — IS IT A LOGICAL ANSWER WITH WHICH TO MEET THE WORLD'S PRESENT NEED?

WALTER A. LEPP, Pastor, Cleveland, O.

The nerve strain of the present world conflict is becoming intolerable. It is almost more than the human can endure. The millions at the front, facing imminent death from fear-some tanks, low-flying bombing planes, flame throwers, and all the terrifying weapons of modern warfare, must often find themselves near the breaking point; and the conditions of the millions of refugees from all this frightfulness — homeless, hungry, and heart-broken —can be hardly less terrible.

Rev. Lepp

Yet the fearful strain is not limited to them. It is bearing down with more or less severity upon us all. There is no one living today, no matter how far he may be from the actual scene of battle, who is not deeply concerned about the whole awful tragedy. The stakes are so high, the forces involved so tremendous, that everybody is watching the mighty struggle with bated breath and ever-increasing tension. Day by day the newspapers proclaim their evil tidings in their boldest and blackest type. Hour by hour the radio blares out bulletin after bulletin like a never-ending knell of doom. People have said to us: "I hate to turn on the radio nowadays. I am afraid of what dreadful calamity I may hear next. Yet something draws me to it. I have to listen. And then I can't sleep. I can't work. I just go on worrying and worrying, although I know it won't do any good." Someone said the other day that his radio seemed to him like a lurking hyena waiting to shriek and pounce on him as soon as he touched it.

It is clear that if we are going to keep our mental balance through all this growing disorder and increasing frightfulness, we shall have to take something to steady our nerves. And drinking won't do it, nor smoking, nor any of the drugs so commonly taken today. The situation is so bad that no mere physical antidote can possibly be of any lasting benefit. This is a case for spiritual treatment, for the healing of wounded souls with the Balm of Gilead. We must find our way somehow to the Source of peace, for statesmen and governments cannot bring the world back from its danger of ruin. There was a time, even in post-war years, when modernistic preachers painted the future in glowing colors. With the establishment of the League of Nations, and international economic and disarmament conferences, they saw the coming of the kingdom of righteousness, love and peace. But alas! The events of recent years have completely shattered their hopes, and today they are disillusioned and full of despair.

Can it be wondered at that many Christian are drifting from the church when preachers are silent on the truth of our Lord's return? What hope has any believer for the future of the church and the world apart from His appearing? Unless the Christian church builds its hope for the future upon what Christ is going to do at His return, it will have no message for its people in these critical days. It will continue to lose its grip on its members, unless it has a positive message and hope for the future. It has none apart from the return of our Lord, and His judgment on those who deny and defy Him, and His promised deliverance of those who amid persecution and suffering await His appearing.

The real and only optimist of the day is the Bible Christian. He is not greatly alarmed at current happenings, for he is forewarned by Christ and His apostles. He does not look for a kingdom from below as does the modernist, and therefore he is not surprised that man's efforts to secure brotherhood and peace have proved unavailing. He alone is the real optimist whose hope is fixed on the certainty of Christ's return and reign. The Bible Christian has first of all

A Vindicating Hope

"In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth." He made a perfect world. There was nothing in it that even savored of chaos until God Himself judged it (Gen. 1:2). This judgment came as a result of Lucifer setting himself to the impossible task of making out that he was going to be like God. Chaos resulted, and will continue until He Who judged this world will complete judgment. God must rule and Satan must be confined to the place God has prepared for him. Today Satan is opposing God, and the climax to his opposition is seen in Psm. 2. This second Psalm opens with the question, "Why do the nations rage and imagine a vain thing?" It is a confederacy of all the nations—the climax of the great anti-God and anti-Semitic movements that we see every day growing in intensity. What is the "vain thing" they imagine? It is that they can defy the claims of Jehovah and of His anointed with impunity, saying, "Let us break their bands asunder and cast away their cords from us." The evident futility of such an attitude calls forth the derision of the Almighty, and He meets their blustering defiance with the calm and decisive announcement, "Yet I have set my King upon my holy hill of Zion." The King is God the Son. He will be no timid constitutional monarch; but shall rule with despotic power, brooking no opposition. Of the rebellious nations we read that "He shall break them with a rod of iron; He shall dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel." And as we today, read the foolish and defiant talk of a Hitler, a Stalin, a Mussolini, or the war lords of Japan, we too can laugh, for we are in the secret of the Lord, and we know that the day is near "when the loftiness of man shall be bowed down and the haughtiness of man shall be laid low, and the Lord alone shall be exalted." In the second place, the Bible Christian has

A Clarifying Hope

He who has his eyes on the prophecies of God's Word is not confused. For to such a one, this is not an hour of despair but hope; for we know that the Lord Jesus Christ has, in the Word, associated these very events which we see today with the circumstances of His personal return to the earth. Present day conditions match the divine description given of the latter days by our Lord, and our conviction is deepened that the Lord draweth nigh. Even newspapers and magazines convince us that thoughtful people are beginning to realize that the Christian has a clarifying hope. Thinking men are beginning to realize that, (1) the world is in a condition of confusion and commotion such as it has not experienced before; (2) leaders and statesmen are at their wits end and have no remedy for our plight; (3) the church in general is impotent and apathetic, having fallen into a Laodicean state, with a "form of godliness but denying the power thereof." Such convictions led news commentator Boake Carter to write a series of comments which have even been a blessing to many preachers who have forgotten that God has a purpose and a plan for this world. Here are a few quotations from one who realizes that God is still on His throne and is about ready to punish the kings of the earth. Among other things, Boake Carter writes: "Gloom grows in Washington. Washington's correspondents are steeped in gloom. Of the future they are wholly uncertain. Expressive of this confusion and bewilderment is recent comment of the Saturday Evening Post. It said, 'We know for sure only that the war will sometime end, and that when it does there will be some kind of peace. How the war will end, or what the world will be like at that time we do not know.' I am not bewildered or confused because I have steeped myself for months in reading the Bible, particularly Ezekiel, Daniel and St. Paul's revelation (he means St. John's, or better said, The Revelation of Jesus Christ.) Those who measure the future by material vision are always confused. Spiritual values are lasting, and those who have tried to learn and interpret our material trends through the spiritual glass are those who become fortified against despair. They do not despair because they understand that what is collapsing are false gods, false values, and as such must collapse and die if God's Word is to be fulfilled. Parsons are the only ones supposed to talk this way. But to me, the church at large has been as blind as the rest of us and wholly missed the boat." While the church at large has missed the boat, thank God that those of us who have read our Bibles are not confused, but rather we are a listening people. We hark for the shout of the Lord, the voice of the archangel, and the trump of God.

And finally the Bible Christian has

A Motivating Hope

The Christian believer is to watch, pray and be ready to meet the Lord at any moment, but remembering the exhortation of our Lord, "Occupy till I come". The Christian who is living in the hope of the Lord's soon return is energetic in evangelism, "snatching some from the fire." As the shadows increase and the darkness deepens we hear the words of our Lord with a great impact, "The night cometh when no man can work". And again, "Lift up your eyes, and look on the fields; for they are white already to harvest". And lest anyone reading these words has misunderstood God's design and program for His church, it should be reemphasized that the business of the church is not to convert the world. The God-given plan for the church is that it "evangelize" the world; that is, to give to every man an adequate chance of accepting Jesus Christ and being saved. And as we go out with the message of the gospel, to evangelize, and to trust the Holy Ghost to save souls here and there, everywhere gathering out "a people for His name," we will not do so under the delusion that it is by our efforts that the kingdom will be established. Jesus Christ Himself, after He has gathered out "a people for His name" as He has Himself stated, "will return" and will establish the throne of David and reign for 1,000 years in millennial splendor. But before this glorious reign takes place, the church will be caught up to meet the Lord in the air.

A weary, exhausted, despairing world wants some sure word of promise and hope for the future. We have the answer, we have the message of hope. With boldness and courage, in language free from extravagance or vain speculation, we respond in these words, "God's remedy for the world chaos is the personal return of His Son; first as the Bridegroom for His bride, the church, and then as the King of kings for Israel and the nations. A synthetic tracing of 6,000 years of man's complete failure, and his present blinded folly of faith in himself, make a mighty background for the coming of Christ, Who alone is able to adjust this world's affairs and bring in a lasting peace. Christ's return is our only hope for the future.

NEWS BRIEFS — From Our Workers

Bro. L. L. Grubb, pastor of our mission church at Hagerstown, Md., writes, "Building is going up,up,up! Pray that we can wade through the jungle of priorities."

The Whittier, Calif. church, as was reported at its last quarterly business meeting, is entirely out of debt, with a balance in every treasury represented in the church.

The time of the weekly broadcast of the Bible Fellowship Hour, heard each Sunday evening over WMBS, and sponsored by the First Brethren Church of Uniontown, Pa., has been changed from 5:00 to 6:00 p. m.

The Ellet, O. church reports that 62 decisions for Christ have been made in their services since the first of January.

The Northwest District is planning three camps for its young people at Clear Lake, Wash., during July this year: a boys' camp, a girls' camp, and a young people's camp. The first camp is to open on July 4, and the young people's camp is to close July 27.

Rev. E. W. Reed, pastor at Sunnyside, Wash., writes, "We had two good meetings during the season, but not much in visible results: Dr. Bauman last October, and Rev. Trevor Kelford last month. Five new members so far this year. A few soon ready for baptism." The church has posted a map in the auditorium, on which is marked the location of each of the 92 homes which constitute the membership of the church. 50 of these homes are rural

Bro. Chas. Mayes, pastor of W. 10th St. church at Ashland, O., writes, "Had 341 yesterday morning (May 3), 190 in the evening. One decision." He reports three decisions on the previous Sunday. The average Sunday morning attendance for April was 317, and the total receipts for the month $904.12. The Primary church recently started has reached an attendance of 90

To those who are wondering if our Coast churches are still being effected by the war, this item from the Whittier, Calif. bulletin will be of interest: "Because of an error in advice last Wednesday night, we all left the church at the blackout signal and rushed home. The official advice is that all except fire wardens stay in the building. Our basement is prepared for such an emergency and we know of no safer place to be than right here in it if the need arises. It is far safer than our homes! Let the church roll on!"

Reports from Our Mission Churches

THE THIRD BRETHREN CHURCH OF LOS ANGELES

The Lord hath done great and mighty things for us. We are sure that we have not always pleased Him, yet we have never once doubted His love and grace as extended to us in the person of the Lord Jesus Christ. As we look back over the first quarter of this calendar year we note several things we might bring to the attention of our fellow-readers of The Brethren Missionarly Herald.

During the illness of the pastor we were privileged to have some most excellent messages by other men of God. Elder J. A. Remple, the assistant chaplain of the Los Angeles Jails and a member of our congregation, spoke upon two occasions. His work has given to him some singular examples of what the grace of God can do and has done. Other services were given by Dr. J. E. Conant, president of a Baptist Seminary in the city; by two men from the Los Angeles Mission, to which our congregation has the privilege of going with the gospel message once a month; and a team from the Bible Institute. It is always refreshing to us to hear other ambassadors of the cross bring forth from their hearts the message the Lord has given to them.

Our Bible School has shown a small average increase in attendance. The Women's Missionary Council is a very active organization and a very vital part of the church. The women have undertaken, in addition to their regular monthly missionary study periods, the salvaging and mending of useable clothing, which is then given to Brother and Sister Remple for them to use in connection with the visitation they do in connection with the jail work. And the Christian Endeavor Societies have been privileged to have several missionary speakers with them.

We, along with other west coast churches, have suffered somewhat in attendances as the result of possible blackouts at night, and the scarcity of rubber. We have noticed the effects of these perhaps more than other congregations, because of the fact that just about one half of our membership live 8 miles or more from the church. (Too many people do not put "first things first," and so the work of God often suffers first.) We are not alarmed over the situation; to the contrary we feel it is an unusual opportunity we have on the west coast to tell the wonderful story of salvation by grace. We believe we have the message that is most needed by the world in these uncertain and unprecedented days. May we ask the prayers of all the saints that all the Brethren on the west coast may be quick and diligent in buying up the opportunities that are ours, before the day of reaping has ended.

One of the brightest spots in this first quarter of the year was the revival-evangelistic campaign we had during the last two weeks of March. Evangelist R. Paul Miller was the messenger that God sent to lead us during the two weeks. It is not necessary for us to tell of his messages, for most readers of this Herald have heard him preach and know of his earnestness and passion for souls, both in the pulpit or in the private witness, wherever it may be. He preached faithfully the Word. Every member of the church who had the privilege of hearing him was revived, and we are realizing daily just how much good the meetings did the members. There were four first-time confessions of Christ as Savior and seven reaffirmations of faith. New contacts were gained for the church, although as yet not one of these 11 has united with the church. One was baptized and united with another church nearby. We continue to pray for Bro. Miller, that he will be used till Jesus comes to point men to the Lamb of God Who taketh away sin.

The Lord surely had His way in securing for us one to lead in the music during these evangelistic services. He is Leonard Kuns of the Whittier Church. He did very acceptably the task assigned to him, was always ready to make the service of song prepare the way for the message that was to follow. Everyone here fell in love with Leonard and his wife from the very beginning. The result of this is that they are continuing with us in the capacity of music director. The music of the congregation is improved and hence the spirit of singing is better than previously.

The spiritual welfare of the members is being bettered daily. As we try to win souls to Jesus we also try to remember and obey the command: "Feed the lambs and the sheep." A good part of this improved condition is largely due to the meetings with Bro. Miller. Personally, he did us good, as he was a most welcome member of the family for the two weeks. We are sharing some of the things we learned during those weeks together and are finding results to be forthcoming. As we remember you at the place of prayer, we desire that you would do the same for us.

FIRST BRETHREN CHURCH OF BELLFLOWER

It is in the name of our blessed Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ, that we send greetings from the First Brethren Church of Bellflower. The months pass by so very quickly in the work of the Lord that we can hardly realize that it has been some time since we have shared with the rest of our brethren some of the good things that have come to us from the hand of the Lord.

We have just closed one of the best three-months periods of service for Christ that this congregation has ever known. Trusting in the Lord for His provision, we have sought to press the claims of Christ in this community with all the vigor at our command. God has honored the faithful service of the pastor and people with 21 first-time confessions, 34 reconsecrations of life, and nine members received into the membership of the church, all of these results coming apart from any special services. We have been made to marvel at the way in which God has answered prayer in behalf of some of our folks who were sick. We wish to praise the Lord for two cases in particular in which the power of the Lord was present to heal.

Our interest in the missionary endeavor of our beloved church is growing in a most favorable manner, and we are glad to report increases in those offerings. Our Women's Missionary Councal is contributing no small share to bring this to pass. We do praise the Lord for the splendid women's organization of this church. Our Home Missions Council secretary, R. Paul Miller, has just completed a week of special services with us. We are grateful to him for giving us this time out of his busy schedule while here on the coast. He doubtless will report on the meetings to the brotherhood, but we do want to say that his coming was certainly timed by the Lord, and his ministry among us was used of the Lord to encourage the hearts of our people. God gave us great victory on the closing day of his stay with us. At the morning service 23 came forward at the invitation; four of these were first time confessions. We feel sure that God has a real work for this church here in Bellflower and is preparing His people for it. We are hoping by the Lord's help to complete our building in the very near future. Humanly speaking, the possibility of such action seems almost too good to be true. However, our eyes are upon Him. We serve One Who delights in doing the impossible for those who love and serve Him. He says, "Call unto Me, and I will answer thee, and shew thee great and mighty things that thou knowest not" (Jer. 33:3). As far as we are concerned, the prospects are just as bright as the promises of God. Brethren, pray for us.

REPORT OF THE VICTORY REVIVAL AT UNIONTOWN

Directly following Easter Sunday, we launched a campaign of evangelism in the First Brethren Church at Uniontown. The meeting began Tues., Apr. 7 and closed Sun., Apr. 19. The evangelist was Rev. Michael "Mickey" Walsh of Philadelphia, assisted by the Stover Gospel singers of Philadelphia. Rev. Peter J. Stover is pastor of Cedar Grove Church in Philadelphia, and with his wife, Mrs. Marie Stover, our revival was furnished with a splendid program of music and special numbers. Mr. Stover was song leader during the campaign and directed a young people's chorus of 40 voices each evening of the meeting.

Mickey Walsh, better known as the Irish evangelist of Philadelphia, proved himself to be a man of God, humble in his life, powerful in the scriptures, and a strong preacher of the Word. His knowledge of the Word, passion for the lost, and zeal for the Lord, won his way into the hearts of the members of our church and the great number of visiting friends who came every night.

From the first night to the last the church was full. Only one night was the attendance down, and that night there was a terrific mountain storm that made traveling almost impossible, and on this night 150 were present. Several nights of the meeting the church could scarcely accommodate the crowds. A loud speaking system cared for overflow crowds in Sunday School rooms.

Mickey made no apologies for the gospel appeal. He did not give any appeals for general consecration services: every service was evangelistic and filled with the Word of God and the appeal for sinners to come to Christ. There were 53 decisions for Christ (not reconsecrations).

Mr. Walsh is a hard worker, a great personal soul winner, and willing to do all within his power to reach the unsaved and win them for Christ. Each morning and each Sunday afternoon the evangelist spoke over the radio. He taught the entire Sunday school bot Sundays, and visited with the pastor in many homes.

The First Brethren Church in Uniontown heartily endorses th ministry of both Mr. Walsh and Mr. Stover, and by unanimous vot we have invited them to come back again. Following the revival, w held a Jewish Bible conference with Rev. Victor Buksbazen, Christian Jewish refugee from Warsaw, Poland. The conference like the revival, was a wonderful success.

William Clough, Pastor.

LA VERNE, CALIF.

The La Verne church met in regular quarterly meeting Apr. 1 and since very few were in attendance, it was decided to call special meeting with fellowship supper for Apr. 24. At this meet ing we agreed to have Dr. Harry Von Bruch, and pianist Johnni Hallet, who is also a children's worker, to hold evangelistic meeting from May 3-17. We are holding cottage and extra church praye meetings this week in preparation for same. May we have a glor ious revival of our members, and may sinners be born again.

Rev. Owen D. Lower of the European Christian Mission was her Apr. 17, and showed moving and still color pictures of the mission work in New York City and portions of Europe. We enjoyed h message very much, also the pictures. The Men's Magnify Grou met this Thursday evening for a fellowship supper, and Rev. Lowe brought them a message and showed more pictures.

Bro. Carter and three of our C. E. workers went to the San Pedr mission Apr. 20, where Bro Carter preached. We praise the Lor for His many blessings, of which one is our Missionary Herald.

A minister, passing a big department store, followe a sudden impulse to go in and talk to the proprieto on the subject of his salvation. Finding him, he said "Mr. T., I've talked beds and carpets and book case with you, but I've never talked my business with you Would you give me a few minutes to do so?" "I am a Layman in the Brethren Church"

ROY A. PATTERSON, Dayton, O.

Some time ago a very popular magazine contained an article on "Why I Don't Go to Church;" at a later date a companion article appeared in the same publication on the subject, "Why I Go To Church." The latter article, no doubt, was intended as a reply to the former. It is said that more than 15,000 letters were received by this magazine, expressing the comfort and inspiration received by the writers of these letters, because of their attendance at the church of their choice. These letters came from all walks of life, from Protestants, Catholics and Jews, alike.

Such response bespeaks the power, hope and sustaining influence of the church, even in a day when all forces of evil are trying to crush and destroy this source of comfort.

Summarizing the messages contained in these letters, we find an urge to attend for spiritual refreshment; that believers might be bound together more closely; to renew and increase faith in humanity and the destiny of man; to impress upon us our responsibility to our fellow men; to learn that life loses all its meaning aside from Jesus Christ as Savior, and that aside from Christ and His shed blood there is no hope for sinful man.

To the testimony of these, multitudes of others could be added: expressions of laymen from every avenue of life and from all parts of the world, which would voice the joys and blessings received because of their relationship with their church.

But you ask, "What about our subject, 'I Am a Layman In the Brethren Church?'" The writer is a member of a church because, even in its faltering and wavering way, it is the place of all places where soul-inspiring and assuring truths can be embraced; the writer is a member of The Brethren Church today, because he can and does receive the spiritual blessings above enumerated, and many more which sustain, comfort and give hope; the writer is a Christian layman in The Brethren Church because, here, he finds that laymen can and do walk in newness of life.

Of course, we are not going to boast that we are a member of The Brethren Church because of any special effort or undue exertion on our part, but partly because of ancestral background, but more especially because of the deep concern and earnest pleadings of loving friends. Sounds rather strange does it not? But how did you get into The Brethren Church? Do men today (or did they ever) break down doors to get into our churches? Should this not be a gentle hint to those within the church?

The Brethren Church offered no more to the writer than it offers to all others, "The Bible, The Whole Bible and Nothing But The Bible." The Brethren Church has no new remedy for the ills of man, nor does it need a new remedy. God the Father has provided in His Son the only remedy which man needs to assure him of that hope implanted in his breast, and which will satisfy the yearnings of a hungry sin-sick soul.

Man in his struggle for physical existence has ever sought to raise his standards of living, to provide greater comforts for himself and loved ones, and to safeguard his possessions against his enemies; yet all of this has been of no avail, and that which he planned hoping that it might afford him this, has, in the hands of evil, become an instrument and agency of his own destruction.

The heart of the man of the world is failing him for fear of the things which are coming upon the earth; man's ingenuity is being tried and tested to devise ways and means of bringing happiness and security; yet the destruction of life and property mounts higher and higher and the shadows of each passing day bring deeper gloom and greater fear.

As a comfort in all this, I thank God that I am a layman in a church which offers as its message, "The Bible, The Whole Bible and Nothing But The Bible," as a protection against the powers of darkness and evil around us.

Thus we learn that The Brethren Church offers that message of hope, security and protecting care we read about in Ps. 91 and Rom. 8:35-39. If these things have been a source of comfort and assurance to us, they can be no less to our posterity; if we needed the saving power of the Christ in our lives, certainly our children need Him also; if we needed Him to guide us in the proper path and help us to resist temptations, do those of the present generation and of the future generations need Him less?

Laymen of The Brethren Church, do you think we ought to be doing something about it? Do you think we can do better than we have in the past? What is your answer? Will our answer be given fuller emphasis by our efforts to be better laymen?

53d Annual Conference of the

NATIONAL FELLOWSHIP OF BRETHREN CHURCHES,

Winona Lake, Indiana—August 31 to September 6

If ever Christians needed to attend an annual conference, certainly it is in a time like this. Life and Death are in a gigantic struggle fighting on a world's battlefield. The church of Jesus Christ never was challenged more than now. Certainly we need to confer with one another to meet these needs, with our missionary work and evangelism, in a war-torn world. Your counsel this year is indispensable.

This is no time to get careless and indifferent in our way of living. Let's not economize on tires, gasoline and traveling expenses at the expense of the church—that church that our Lord Jesus Christ was willing to pay for with His own life's blood on Calvary. Economize, yes, in less pleasure rides and other unnecessary motoring, and use this for conference this year!

On to Winona Lake—the meeting place for all Brethren, young and old.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

By L. L. GRUBB, Pastor, Hagerstown, Md.

THE JEW IN HIS TORTURE CHAMBER

Continuing our messages on the prophetic signs of the times, as outlined in the Word of God and substantiated in an unsuspecting world, we begin a consideration of those signs as evidenced among the nations.

Rev. Grubb

Perhaps the foremost of these is found in the attitude of the nations toward the Jew and his movements. It has been frequently and rightfully stated that the Jew is God's great timepiece; i.e., that his position in the nations at a particular time will show us what time it is in God's prophetic plan.

From their beginning in Abraham to date, and on into the millenium, the Jews remain God's chosen people according to His own unalterable statement in Gen. 12:1-3:

"Now the Lord said unto Abram. . . . I will make of thee a great nation, and I will bless thee and make thy name great; and thou shalt be a blessing: and I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee: and in thee shall all the families of the earth be blessed."

A careful study of Jewish history will show that God has closely followed this plan. If Israel had accepted her Messiah in the person of Jesus Christ when He came in Bethlehem, this promise already would have reached its complete fulfilment. Despite their objection of their promised King and their subsequent sin and belief, God is still following the policy just mentioned. Bless them and I will bless thee; curse them and I will curse thee! In His infinite wisdom and foreknowledge Jehovah peered ahead through the centuries, and through Moses in Deut. 28 outlined the complete destiny of His people. Vs. 1-14 are dedicated to the task of painting a glorious picture of blessing for Israel in the promised land if they would hearken to the voice of the Lord, their God! Vs. 15-68 paint on the other hand a dark, terrible picture of the sufferings which shall fall upon Israel as a result of their disobedience:

"And the Lord shall scatter thee among all the people, from the one end of the earth even unto the other . . . And among these nations shalt thou find no ease, neither shall the sole of thy foot have rest; but the Lord shall give thee there a trembling heart, and failing of the eyes, and sorrow of mind: And thy life shall hang in doubt before thee; In the morning thou shalt say, Would God it were even! And at even thou shalt say, Would God it were morning!"

The utter truth of this prophecy has been more than established by both medieval and modern events in the history of Israel! Since the Hebrew race officially rejected Jesus Chirst, they have consistently languished in the torture-chambers of the nations. At one blow thousands were slain in medieval massacres. The whole world today is in possession of at least partial information as to the plight of Israel among the nations! If all the facts were known, the picture would be far darker. After the Germans have bled the Jews of all profit, they are to be removed to some remote corner of the globe according to the official organ of Hitler's Elite Guard! It is an established fact that Jewish mothers today are sneaking down the back alleys of German cities and towns and lifting the lids of garbage cans, if perchance they might find some little morsel of food for a starving child! Jews have been obliterated from public life; their properties and bank accounts confiscated! Families have been torn asunder by the annulment of marriages between Jews and Germans. In the Ghettos of Poland thousands have been slain in cold blood and thrown into a common grave or left to die in shame! Strong legislation against the Jew has been recently recorded on Italian statute books! Shiploads of Jewish refugees ply submarine and mine-infested seas, with death as perhaps the only hope! Even in such so-called Christian nations as England and America there are organized movements aimed at the subordination and persecution of the Jew! However, these two are about the only great nations in the world where a Jew can any longer find a semblence of peace and prosperity and blessing! What we must see is this, that today the Jew is being persecuted on a greater and wider scale than ever before in the history of the world! All of this is leading to the acme of anti-Semitic persecution during the time of "Jacob's trouble!"

There is a silver lining of mercy in all of God's clouds of judgment! In the same Book of Deuteronomy, 30:1-5, we read:

"And it shall come to pass when all these things are come upon thee That then the Lord thy God will turn thy captivity, and have compassion upon thee, and will return and gather thee from all the nations, whither the Lord thy God hath scattered thee."

Thus on the basis of God's prophetic plan we conclude:

1. That since the persecution of Israel has increased to such an alarming and almost unendurable intensity, the full time of "Jacob's trouble" must be very near when all the heat of the wrath of men and God combined will be turned upon Jewry.

2. We know that this time of Jacob's trouble is included in the judgments of the tribulation period of about seven years.

3. The Word of God plainly teaches that Christ must return to receive His bride, His body, the church, unto Himself in the clouds of the air before the tribulation period. Thus judging from the intensity of Jewish persecution, and Israel's steady, but slow return to the land of her fathers where her greatest judgments will fall, we must conclude that this is an unmistakeable sign of the imminent return of Jesus Christ.

What should be our attitude in the face of such evidence?

Instead of berating and persecuting Israel we should be loving them and giving them the gospel message which is their only present salvation! We should remember that the Scripture clearly teaches that Jesus Christ, the God-Man, our Savior, was a Jew; that the Bible is a Jewish Book; and that from the stock of Israel came those revelations that have resulted in our eternal spiritual blessing.

In brief, the position of the Jew among the nations today should teach every true Christian heart the need of renewed dedication in the service of Christ in redeeming every moment of the time for Him, for the time is short!

One of Hitler's "Pure Aryans" learned a lesson recently when his plane crashed into the sea off the English coast. Lieut. M. E. Jacobs, Jewish officer in the English army, swam 300 yards to save the Nazi ace from drowning. Lieut. Jacobs was fully aware of Hitler's hatred toward and persecution of the Jews, yet he threw himself without hesitation into the sea to rescue one of Hitler's pilots who helped spread death and destruction in England! This is an example of true grace! There wes another Jew Who, 2000 years ago, threw Himself into the sea of God's judgment against sin on Calvary's cross without the least thought of Himself, and emerged victoriously with all of those who would accept His redeeming power. To Jew and Gentile alike tonight we offer full and free pardon from all sin in the finished work of Jesus Christ! Will yqu open your heart to His blessed entrance tonight?

A new subscriber also, from California, writes: "We received the first copy of the Herald this morning, and wish to take this opportunity to praise the Lord for the spiritual uplift that was ours from reading our own official church publication. We think the Herald is splendid. To those of you whose task it is to compose a paper such as the Herald, we say 'Thank you' and may God continue to bless and use you in your work for His glory."

O professor, too little separated from sinners, you know not what you lose by conformity to the world! It cuts the tendons of your strength and makes you creep where you ought to run. REV. SANDY'S ARTICLE

The second installment of Rev. Conard Sandy's article on "If Hitler Wins" will appear in the June issue.

Good Intentions PAVE THE WAY TO DISAPPOINTMENT!

Recently a good brother, member of a Brethren Church, told us of his intentions regarding disposition of his property after his death. He enumerated his various assets, stating how he wanted each one disposed of. Some was to go to home missions; some to the seminary; some to foreign missions; some to publications.

We never saw finer "intentions."

He never actually did anything about it, although we did our best to urge him.

HOME MISSION BANKS CAN BE HAD AGAIN

There have been so many requests for the little home missions banks that we have arranged to supply them again. Undoubtedly they are far superior to the coin collectors for children's use. The banks are available free of cost to all children's workers who desire them for use in gathering our next and greatest home mission offering. The banks can be had at once by ordering through the office of the Council, at Berne, Ind.

NOBODY KNOWS

Nobody knows, but the Lord and I,
How His blessings flow as the days go by.
How His mercy falls, and His love bestows
My every need, nobody knows.

Nobody knows—but tucked away
In my blessing box, from day to day,
I keep a record of His grace
That others may behold His face.

Nobody knows — just now — but when
My Father's books are opened, then
I shall be glad: for then I'll know
How far a blessing shared can go.

THE SEMINARY COMMENCEMENT

On pages 3-5 in this issue of The Brethren Missionary Herald there appears an account of the recent events of the week of graduation. We wish that it had been possible for all friends of the seminary to attend those services, and to have seen the splendid group of graduates. Although 11 students are leaving the school through graduation this spring, advance registrations already indicate that the incoming class this fall will be considerably larger than the one going out. The seminary appreciates the loyal support of our many friends who have made this ministry possible, and asks that they will continue to have fellowship with us in definite prayer, to the end that in this crucial and perilous hour, still greater numbers of young men and women may be prepared adequately for the great work of spreading the knowledge of the gospel of the grace of God at home and abroad.

PLAYING BY EAR

With all the research of the specialists and all the advance in learning, men are still groping in the dark for a solution of the world's political and economic problems. As the old Yankee farmer said of a certain prominent politician of this country, they are "playing by ear". Schemes recently had all the sanctity which ordinarily attaches to divine revelation are now being completely abandoned for other plans which probably will succeed no better. Only a few years ago we were told by our so-called statesmen that we must forget economy, quit saving our money, and spend it freely. The thrifty man was regarded as an enemy of human progress. Today all this is reversed. Now we are to save our money instead of spending it. Only a short while ago we were told to plough under perfectly good crops and kill our little pigs. Now the government wants more pigs.

However, in thus shifting our economic gears, there is considerable grinding and groaning of the machinery. Incongruities pop up that would be amusing if they were not such a tragic commentary on the foolishness of men. For example: recently in a certain eastern city, an elderly man working on a WPA project managed to save enough money to do what the government is pleading with all of us to do, namely, buy some defense bonds. But the poor man got himself into serious trouble. When the WPA authorities, who periodically investigate such matters, found that the worker had a couple of bonds in his possession, they promptly fired him, arguing that a man who could buy defense bonds did not need a WPA job. If the poor fellow had gone to a roadhouse and spent all his money for Roosevelt liquor, all would have been lovely. His job would have been secure. And this sort of thing, we are told, is social progress!

WHAT WOULD FINNEY THINK?

In the month of June this year, from the 21st through the 28th, a conference will be held in the Moody Church of Chicago, to honor the memory and work of the great evangelist and one time president of Oberlin College, Charles G. Finney. It has been said that Finney was the greatest revivalist since the days of the apostles, a man who won over 100,000 souls to salvation in Christ. His work as a teacher and administrator at Oberlin College was no less remarkable.

But the impermanence of earthly institutions may be seen today in what has happened to Oberlin since Finney left his work there 1852, less than 100 years ago. The type of gospel and theology preached so powerfully by Finney has long since been completely abandoned there. Men who still preach it are not only never asked to teach there, but they are regarded as relics from a by-gone age of superstition and ignorance. As for the sort of separated life preached by Finney, the campus authorities would doubtless examine the head of any teacher who would think of advocating it there today. Not so very long ago, one of the young women students there wrote an article for a campus publication, advocating the policy of romantic "affairs" outside the married relation for husbands and wives. The article was such a flagrant violation of good taste and morality that the local Catholic priest asked the postal authorities to ban the publication from the mails. According to newspaper reports, the editors said the disagreed from the young lady's views on marriage, but that she had not violated any of the standards of Oberlin College. If you wonder what Finney would say about this sort of thing, you need only read his writings.

ne and champagne were served throughout the ene meal, and there were 36 toasts. Stalin, says Mr. ynolds, drank every one of the 36 toasts. The final st was proposed by Stalin himself, who spoke in the ssian language. As translated by Mr. Oumansky d reported by Reynolds, the dictator spoke as folvs:

"Let us drink a toast to President Roosevelt, who has h a difficult task. He leads a non-belligerent coun-
, and yet he wants to give all possible help to Brit-and the Soviet Union. Let us ask God to help him his most difficult task!" According to the reporter, er Stalin finished there was a moment of stunned nce and then a roar of applause.

There are perhaps five or six possible views you may e of this story: (1) The most optimistic may be-ve that Stalin has really been converted to belief a god of some kind. (2) You may argue that the nslator cleverly gave a mistranslation of what Stal-really said. (3) You can believe that Stalin has w found it convenient politically to talk about "God" ce he needs help from nations that believe in Him.
You may think that the reporter either misunder-od or deliberately misquoted the translator of lin's toast, or made up the whole story. (5) You y think that Stalin, after drinking 36 toasts at one al, got slightly befuddled with alcohol and was not olly responsible for what he said. Or (6) You may l that perhaps the whole party was somewhat nk, and therefore nobody there knew exactly what k place.

On Friday evening, May 8, Grace Theological Seminary completed the 5th year of its history and ministry. Perhaps it would be more accurate to say the 12th year, since Grace Seminary has simply been carrying on for the past five years the faith, ideals and purposes of the graduate school which was founded in the fall of 1930; the main difference being that during these five years there has been perfect freedom to maintain its faith and ideal without interference on the part of those who were in the former years opposed to them. As one of the direct results of this freedom, the seminary graduated the largest class in all these years of its ministry. Certainly, there is cause this year to celebrate in a special way the infinite goodness of God, Who has so graciously brought us thus far along the way. We are grateful to Him for many things: for the many friends He has raised up to make the work possible through prayer and sacrificial giving; for the many pastors and churches who have given Grace Seminary a place in their program of work; for the officers and members of the Board of Trustees who served as the administrators of the school; for the students who have helped to maintain the faith and ideals of the school; for those who have ministered as teachers; and for the many friends outside The Brethren Church who have spoken well of the Seminary and recommended it to students. In all these things we have seen and acknowledged the hand of the God of all grace.

THE SEMINARY RETREAT

The first of the closing events of the year was a Seminary Retreat, planned and conducted by the Senior Class, which was held on April 27, at Camp Alexander Mack. This camp was built and is maintained by the Church of the Brethren on a beautiful little lake not far from Winona. The Lord gave a practically perfect spring day for the occasion, and after an afternoon of fellowship and recreation, the day closed with a period of testimony and prayer around the camp fire. Prof. Shultz of Manchester College opened the buildings for inspection and told something of the history of the camp. This is the second year the seminary has held the annual retreat at this place.

THE SEMINARY COMMUNION

On Wednesday evening of the week of Commencement, the students and teachers with their families gathered in the large library room of the seminary to celebrate the Lord's Supper. All members of the student body, save one, were present; and the total attendance was 62. Besides the Brethren, there were present at the tables students from six different denominations—Baptist, Presbyterian, Reformed, United Presbyterian, Friends, Southern Presbyterian and Independent. It was a very blessed service, a visible symbol of that fellowship which all believers enjoy in our Lord Jesus Christ. The service was conducted by the faculty, assisted by the members of the graduating class.

THE MIDDLER-SENIOR BANQUET

Members of the middler class arranged for the annual banquet in honor of the seniors, and the occasion was unusual in a number of respects. The large dining room of the Westminister Hotel was engaged, and the place was well filled with students, teachers, their families, and friends of the seminary from the local community and surrounding churches. Mr. Keith Altig of the middler class presided as toastmaster. Special musical selections were rendered by Mr. Lawrence Lawlor and Mrs. Altig. Rev. Polman led the group in choruses. Pres. McClain expressed the farewells to members of the graduating class, and the response was delivered by Mr. Robert Culver. Mr. Clarence Nida of the middler class and graduate of Wheaton College, introduced the speaker of the evening, Dr. V. Raymond Edman, the distinguished president of Wheaton College, who brought to us a deeply spiritual and practical message on the general theme of how God trains men in obscure and hard places. During the program Dr. McClain read to the students and faculty members an invitation to attend the wedding of Mr. Robert Hill of the senior class and Miss Mary Edith Harris of Winona Lake, graduate of the Moody Bible Institute and part time student at the seminary this year. The ceremony will be held on June 20 at the Bethany Camp Residence.

THE BACCALAUREATE SERVICE

At 10:30 a.m. on Friday, the main auditorium of the Winona Lake Presbyterian Church was well filled by friends, both from the local community and distant churches to hear the Baccalaureate sermon. Dr. Parley Zartman, pastor of the Presbyterian Church and good friend of the seminary, led in the invocation and then welcomed the seminary and friends to the church for the day. In response, Rev. William Schaffer spoke for the Seminary Board of Trustees. The Scripture was read by Bro. Norman Uphouse, and the main prayer was offered by Rev. Walter C. McCrory of Winona Lake. Special music was rendered by Mr. Keith Altig and Mr. Lawrence Lawlor. The Baccalaureate sermon was delivered by Dr. C. E. Hawthorne, pastor of the Wallace Memorial United Presbyterian Church of Washington, D. C., who was introduced by Dr. McClain as a former friend and seminary classmate at Xenia Theological Seminary, for 15 years a neighbor pastor and friend of Prof. Kent in Washington, and pastor of Eugene Allen, honor student of the graduating class. Dr. Hawthorne's message very helpfully dealt with lessons for the young ministers, taken from God's dealings with the prophet Jonah. Those who heard will not soon forget the lesson of the two cities: Nineveh, the place of God's will; and Tarshish, the place of self-will. Prof. Hoyt led in the closing prayer.

THE GRADUATION SERVICE

In the evening of one of the most beautiful days we have ever seen at Winona Lake, the colorful academic procession formed at the seminary building and marched down the hill to the Presbyterian Church, where a capacity audience had gathered to honor the graduating class. Both the main and Sunday School auditoriums were filled, and extra seats had to be brought up from the basement to accommodate the people who arrived after the service began. After the invocation by Dr, Raabe, pastor of the Warsaw Presbyterian Church and moderator of the local Presbytery, the Scripture lesson was read by Prof. Kent from I Cor. 15. The annual announcements for the Board of Trustees were made by vice-president Russell D.

Grace faculty, graduating class and student body, May, 1942.

Barnard in the absence of the president, Rev. A. V. Kimmell. Dr. Harold C. Mason, pastor of the local Free Methodist Church, offered the evening prayer.

Dr. Bob Jones, president of Bob Jones College, Cleveland, Tenn., delivered the very interesting and inspiring graduation address. In introducing the speaker, Pres. McClain explained that Dr. Bob Jones, Jr., acting president of the college, who had been scheduled for the address, had made reservations to come by airplane; but the government had exercised its priority in taking over his reservations; and he had arranged to have his father supply in his stead. Dr. Jones, in his introductory remarks, spoke very highly of his regard for the ministry of Grace Seminary.

The academic part of the program followed the address immediately. Mr. Eugene Allen, head of the senior class, with a very appropriate speech presented the class gift, a complete set of the writings of the church fathers for the seminary library. Pres. McClain then explained the basis of the academic honors and read the names of the recipients: Mr. Robert Culver, summa cum laude; Mr. Eugene Allen, magna cum laude; Mr. William Kerr, cum laude; and Rev. Curtis Morrill, cum laude. As these men remained standing, Rev. John M. Aeby, instructor of Hebrew, delivered a brief address in recognition of their scholastic achievements. Their records were unusual because, as Dr. McClain explained, all four men made grades for the three-year course which were above the minimum for the first honors. Prof. Herman A. Hoyt then presented the candidates for diplomas and degrees which were conferred by the president, assisted by Prof. Homer A. Kent and Rev. Norman Uphouse, Th. M., of Dayton, O.

The service closed with the ordination of three members of the graduating class, Robert D. Culver, Garner Elwyn Hoyt, and Glenn F. O'Neal. Officiating ministers were Barnard, Uphouse, Mayes, Kent, Hoyt and McClain. Dr. McClain read the Scriptures, Prof. Hoyt questioned the candidates, Rev. Mayes offered the dedicatory prayer, and Prof. Kent gave the charge, while many ministers of various denominations stood throughout the congregation. In the absence of Bro. Ernest F. Pine, who was unable to be present because of his duties as a chaplain in the army, the closing prayer was offered by Dr. Hawthorne.

In both the morning and evening services, Bro. Leo Polman led the congregational singing and Mrs. Polman presided at the piano, a ministry which made no small contribution to the helpfulness of the services.

A number of our pastors were present with representatives from the membership of their respective congregations. Delegations also came from a number of the little churches around Winona Lake which are pastored by members of the graduating class. The parents of Robert Culver came all the way from Harrah, Wash., and the parents of Eugene Allen came from Washington, D. C., to be present at the graduation of their sons.

As one of the many evidences of the friendly spirit of the Winona community toward the Seminary, the Girl Scouts of Winona Lake volunteered to decorate the church for the graduation service, which they did very tastefully, using a background of dogwood blossoms across the choir panel and lilacs and snapdragons across the front of the pulpit platform.

Dr. J. N. Rodeheaver and Mrs. Rodeheaver, representing the Rodeheaver Music Company, gave to each graduate a gift consisting of four of their newest song books.

The afternoon of the day of graduation was devoted to a meeting of the ministers and pastors of the Central District of Brethren Churches, of which Bro. Robert Ashman is moderator. The meeting was held at the seminary chapel.

NEWS BRIEFS — From Our Workers

The First Brethren Church of LONG BEACH, CALIF., has decided that it would be to the interest of the cause of Christ and of His church to have The Brethren Missionary Herald come to every home in the congregation. The pastor, Dr. L. S. Bauman, has written every member of the congregation to that effect. The church is giving these members two weeks in which to pay for the subscription price, if they desire to do so, and the rest of the subscriptions will be paid out of the church treasury. With the letter from the pastor was a self-addressed envelope, printed by the church especially for this purpose, with a place on which the members might write their own name and address and that of four friends.

Since the First Brethren Church of DAYTON, O., is out of debt, they are endeavoring to help the new North Riverdale Brethren Church of that city by raising among their own members a loan of $4,000 which the North Riverdale group needs to complete its building. The First Brethren is also launching a "Claim-This-Community-for-Christ Campaign" in their district of the city. For eight days a number of teams of two people each are doing the preliminary work of visitation, in which they are visiting every home in the community to inform the people of their "Voice in the Night" broadcast every Saturday night from 11:30-12:00 over WHIO. At the same time they are securing the names of the members of the family and ages of the children who are not attending church and Bible School elsewhere. These names are being turned over to the teachers of the respective classes, who will do the follow-up work. Regular contacts are also to be made by those who visited on a certain street, telling the prospects of special meetings in the church and inviting them again and again to come.

The Men's Sunday School class and the Boys' Brotherhood of the MARTINSBURG, PA. church, of which Bro. Robert Miller is pastor, is sponsoring a "Dads-Lads Banquet"—the first father and son banquet to be held in their church, early in May. The banquet was served by the ladies of the King's Daughters class. Moving pictures of Bible lands were shown during the evening. The Martinsburg church is also one of the churches which has 100 per cent of its membership on The Brethren Missionary Herald subscription list.

Joyce Ann Simmons arrived at the home of REV. AND MRS. PHILLIP J. SIMMONS of the Grace Brethren Church of Fremont, O., May 3. A little Miss also has arrived at the home of Rev. and Mrs. Herman Baerg, missionary candidates to Africa who are now in training at Grace Seminary. Also, a "new preacher" in the making has made his first appearance at the home of Rev. and Mrs. Arnold Kriegbaum of Fillmore, Calif.

Bro. Keith Altig, Grace Seminary student, has gone to COVINGTON, VA., where he is taking up his duties as pastor of the First Brethren Church for the summer. Bro. Harold O. Mayer, also a student in Grace Seminary, will serve as pastor of the JUNIATA, PA. Brethren Church till the fall term of seminary begins.

Among the items of building news are these: that even the stringent defense requirements have failed to stop the work at the Grace Brethren Church of HAGERSTOWN, MD., and that the First Brethren Church of LOS ANGELES has received a loan sufficient to furnish the remaining building materials needed for the auditorium of their church. The latter group has already received over 13,000 in cash for the building, and has its heating units purchased, though funds are still needed to furnish the pews, carpets, etc. The former group has seven more members, recently baptized into the church, to welcome the day when their new building will be ready for occupancy.

SPECIAL MEETINGS NOW IN PROGRESS

MUNDY'S CORNERS, PA.—Revival meeting conducted by Bro. Orville D. Jobson, missionary on furlough from Africa, May 17-31.

Is There Such a Thing As Unpardonable Sin?

By ALVA J. McCLAIN

There has been so much discussion, often fruitless, surrounding what is called the "unpardonable sin", that one may well hesitate to enter a field where well meaning men have widely disagreed. However, even leaving out of consideration those texts in the Synoptic Gospels about which much of the controversy has raged, it can be affirmed that there is described in Scripture a sin for which, by its very nature, there no divine remedy. The general nature of this sin may be stated as follows:

1. There is but one place where a holy God can justly forgive sinners, that is, "in Christ," whose death upon the cross satisfies in full all the claims of broken law for those who take refuge in him (Rom. 3:21-26). Outside of Christ, not even a sovereign and omnipotent God can forgive men their sins (Acts 4:12).

2. Now, by divine appointment, it is the peculiar work of the Holy Spirit to bear witness to Christ as Savior and bring sinners unto Him (John 15:26, 16:8-14). All the ministry of what we call evangelism, from beginning to end, is under the immediate direction of the Holy Spirit. No man can even say with a true confession that Jesus is Lord except by the Holy Spirit (I Cor. 12:3).

3. Therefore, to resist the ministry of the Holy Spirit, as he seeks to lead sinners into Christ, is to refuse to be led into the one place where divine forgiveness is morally possible (Heb. 2:3-4). For outside of Christ, there can be nothing for the sinner but the wrath of God (John 3:36).

4. This means, by the very nature of the case, that sin against the Holy Spirit is unpardonable sin. It is not, as some have carelessly supposed, that the person of the Spirit is somehow more sacred than that of the Son, or that sin against the Spirit is more damnable than sin against the Father and the Son; but rather that the Spirit's peculiar work is to bring sinners into Christ, the only place where God can forgive. Hence, for the man who "hath done despite unto the Spirit of grace", there can no help nor remedy for his sin (Heb. 10:26-29).

5. This sin against the Holy Spirit may begin as a single act of resistance to the voice and ministry of the Spirit, on the part of some sinner in rejecting Christ as the place of salvation; and then by constant repetition the sin may become a settled state of hostility or indifference toward Him as Lord and Savior (Jno. 19:15, Acts 7:25-52).

6. Even the initial and single act of rejecting Christ as Savior, if persisted in, holds the sinner inexorably in a place where forgiveness is morally impossible on the part of a holy God: "he that believeth not is condemned already" (Jno. 3:18). But such a sinner may yet be reached by the voice and ministry of the Holy Spirit if he is willing to hear (Heb. 4:7). The "door" is open, as wide as a sovereign God can open it (Jno. 10:9).

7. When, however, by repeated acts of resistence and rejection, the sinner hardens his attitude into a fixed state, his condition may become utterly hopeless (Eph. 4:18-19 ARV). The voice of the Spirit no longer reaches his heart (Matt. 13:14-15). Such a man may even mistake the Spirit's testimony and ministry for the work of Satan (Matt. 12:24, 31-32). When this point is reached, it is possible for the sinner to say "No" to God for the last time, and, like Judas, perish while still upon earth (Jno. 17:12 ARV).

8. If this seems a hard saying, we must remember that this sinning against the testimony of the Spirit is not unpardonable because of some arbitrary decree of God, for God is eternally a God of infinite mercy and grace (Matt. 11:28). But it is simply a moral impossibility for even a God of grace to forgive sin outside of Christ, and a hardened resistance to the voice of the Spirit will keep the sinner outside of Christ forever. He is "guilty of an eternal sin" (Mark 3:29 ARV).

9. It must be remembered, however, that only God can know certainly when any sinner has reached the point in his resistance where he can no longer hear the voice of the Spirit. No man is able to judge infallibly in these matters (I Cor. 4:5), and therefore no man has any right to point either to himself or any other man as one who has sinned beyond recovery. But if we cannot judge in such matters, it still remains our solemn duty to warn men of the awful possibility, and strive without ceasing to bring them into Christ, Who is the only place of pardon (Heb. 6:4-6, 10:29).

10. The progress of sin, as set forth by the sainted Jeremy Taylor, may be mercifully slow, but it is certain at last, if unhindered, to bring the sinner to an irrevocable doom. At first sin startles the sinner, then becomes pleasing, then frequent, then habitual, then confirmed; then the sinner becomes impenitent, then obstinate, then determined never to repent; and then he perishes.

THE STORY OF THE PIGTAILS

"Pigtail giving" has been suggested by a practice that prevailed in the New Hebrides when the natives were sunk in heathenism. At their heathen feasts they would cut off the tails of the pigs they were about to eat and throw them into the "bush" as an offering to their gods, while they themselves would eat the carcasses. They could easily spare the tails and this simple offering was supposed to satisfy the gods. At any rate, the giving satisfied the crude consciences of the givers.

Some Christian giving does not constitute a very great advance upon that of the undeveloped New Hebrides natives. It is indeed quite common for people to feel obligated to give only what easily can be spared, or what is left after all personal needs have been supplied.—Exchange.

MY TESTIMONY

W. B. MEERS, Dallas, Texas

"For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved" (Romans 10:13).

When I was a child I remember that I went to Sunday School nearly every Sunday. I do not recall anything that was taught except the Bible stories—nothing on how to be saved.

As I grew older I did not attend Sunday School and went to church very seldom. I lead a rather wild and reckless life of dancing and drinking and all the things that the world had to offer. I am not telling this to brag about it, but to show the wonderful saving power of our Lord Jesus Christ (Rom. 10:13). I found the so-called joys of the world like a beautiful soap bubble that lasts only a short time and then fades into nothing. I was seeking something to fill the empty, gnawing feeling that was in my heart.

One night my wife persuaded me to go to church. As I went in, a man with a face beaming with a radiance of heaven met me at the door. Then the pastor, his face beaming with the joy of knowing the Lord Jesus Christ, told about Christ's saving power—How God so loved me that He sent His only Son to die for me (Jno. 3:16); how, by believing that Jesus died on Calvary and shed His blood for me, I might have eternal life. I heard him say, "Believe with childlike faith, put your trust in Him, and He will save you." He told us that Jesus would save and keep and satisfy.

I attended several services and wanted to confess Jesus as my Savior (Rom. 10:9, 10), but the devil kept whispering that I should hold on to the things of the world. But praise God, I heeded the call of Jesus Christ. I put my trust in Him and accepted Him as my personal Savior; and now I praise God that my spiritual father (the pastor who showed me the way to salvation) nourished me along in the "sincere milk of the Word", and that I have grown in the grace and knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. I have studied God's Word daily, have prayed daily, and have witnessed daily since God saved my soul. How true is Acts 16:31!

All members of my family are saved, and we rejoice in Him and sing His praises daily.

God called me to preach. I told Him I couldn't talk and that I was even as Moses. But He kept calling and so I said. "God give me a church that I might proclaim the glories of Christ Jesus." I have been preaching for three months now, telling others how Jesus Christ died for sinners.

"Thanks be unto God for his unspeakable gift" (II Cor. 9:15).

COME UNTO ME

MRS. W. B. MEERS, Dallas, Texas

"Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest" (Matt. 11:28).

It is with thanksgiving and rejoicing in my heart that I can give my testimony, because I know from real experience the meaning of "Come unto me—I will give you rest". Blessed be God for the gift of His Son, the Lord Jesus Christ, that even one such as myself could come into the marvelous wonders of His salvation, by receiving into my heart the Lord Jesus Christ.

As a child I was taught about the things of the Lord in my home. I attended Sunday School and church, and held a certain reverence in my heart for God, because I knew about Him.

On many occasions as a child and as I grew older, I wondered just what would happen to me if I were to die, because I knew I dare not die in my present state. But as the years passed by I kept telling myself, "there's plenty of time yet—you're young". Yet, how many, many times did I feel the Spirit of God speaking to my heart!

After I married and the children came along, I tried to satisfy the longing of my soul in the complete absorption of my time, energy and thoughts in my family. From that I turned desperately to the wisdom of this world—man's philosophy, psychology and the like. Many were the hours spent in pouring over the works of man, trying to find the answer to my questions and satisfaction for my soul—but in vain. Yet, many a time have I looked at my Bible (for I always had one) as I sat there entangled with the works of man, and it would seem to speak to me "Come unto me—I will give you rest". But no! I would cry out, "You are dry, I can't understand you".

Time drifted on until in Aug., 1939, I decided that to lift myself to the right level of community living (as I was very active in community life) I needed to join a church. I did, and was baptised and thought everything was settled. I then became even more active in church life, and decided to read the Bible, to pray, to give more—I had what I call real mind religion.

I began to read this book 'which seemed so dry', and was astonished to find it not nearly so uninteresting as I had supposed. I began to pour over it as I had previously the books of philosophy. Many unusual and trying circumstances seemed to be coming my way, until a very tragic one presented itself—until I became so burdened, so heavy laden, that it seemed I would faint under the burden. But the Lord was calling through it all so sweetly, so lovingly, so tenderly, "Come unto me—trust me". But I didn't. I was afraid to trust God. I turned again to the wisdom of man and sought peace—but in vain.

Vacation time came, we drove to California. I was delighted, because I felt, "There will I lose my burden, for I will find rest in my parents". It was in California that I lost my burden—it was there death took my father—it was there I said, "Lord, here I am, take me; I do believe". I trusted in the Lord Jesus Christ as my Savior, and it was there I became a new creature in Christ Jesus; old things passed away—behold, all things became new! How wonderful! for from that time on I can testify as the Psalmist of old,

"He satisfieth the longing soul, and filleth the hungry soul with goodness."

Standing In The Gap

An excerpt from Dr. Paul Rood's article printed in the Gospel Call before America joined the war.

"And I sought for a man among them, that should make up the hedge and stand in the gap before me for the land, that I should not destroy it: but I found none."

This text, of course, refers to Israel. It belongs to Israel by way of interpretation, but it belongs to the United States, to you and to me, by way of application.

The first thing that impresses me in reading it is the fact that this verse introduces us to the seeking God. Much is revealed about Him in nature; we can learn, for instance, from nature that God loves the beautiful, because He created so many beautiful things. We can also learn from nature that He is omnipotent, because it reveals His omnipotence. But the more perfect revelation of God is found in the Bible, and how thankful we ought to be for this marvelous, precious treasure in which God has revealed His plan and purpose. But the most perfect revelation of God is in the person on His only begotten Son, our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ, who can say, "I and my Father are one" (Jn. 10:30). "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father" (Jn. 14:9).

A SEEKING GOD

It is remarkable that the Father is revealed as a seeking God. This differentiates Christianity from all other religions. The others show man seeking after God. The first cry that comes from the heart of God is the question, "Where art thou?" It reveals Him seeking for man, who had lost his way and was out of fellowship with Him. Man had sinned, and sin had broken the relationship between God and man. In Lk. 19:10 we read: "For the Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost," and in Christ we have a perfect revelation of the seeking God—"God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto himself" (2 Cor. 5:19).

Why did God create man? Did you ever stop to ask that question? The answer is that God wanted an object upon whom He could bestow His effection. He hungers for love and fellowship, and sin has broken this fellowship between man and God. This explains why He sent His Son to die for us, that this fellowship might be restored. And then He seeks after men who have been saved to have more intimate fellowship with them. We are co-workers with Him. Marvel of marvels that He has called us into fellowship with Himself that we might carry out His program for the evangelization of the world!

VALUE OF THE INDIVIDUAL

The second thing that impresses me in this text is the value of personality. . . . Totalitarianism looks upon man only as a cog in the machinery of the state, but the Bible emphasizes the essential value of one human personality. "What is man, that thou are mindful of him?" asks the Psalmist. Man is the object of God's love, concern and care, and the infinite value of the soul is given in the statement made by Jesus, "What shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?" We cannot overemphasize the value of the individual in the sight of God. . . .

The third thing that impresses me in this text is God's interest in a nation. Israel at that time was on its way to destruction as a result of the law of cause and effect. In that hour, God recognized that the nation was reaping what it had been sowing, and He sought for a man that would make up the hedge and stand in the gap, to save the nation from destruction. God is interested in America, and today He is seeking for a man who will make up the hedge and stand in the gap that this nation may be spared from destruction. The law of cause and effect is at work in America. "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap" is true of nations as well as of individuals. The Scriptures say, "The wicked shall be turned into hell, and all the nations that forget God." The Lord is seeking for Americans that will make up the hedge and stand in the gap, so that this nation will be spared from destruction. He desires human co-operation.

WHAT ONE PERSON CAN DO

We depend upon God, but it is also true that He depends on man, and man can hinder Him. Have you ever stopped to think of the implication of the fact that man can actually hinder and frustrate God? "They . . . limited the Holy One of Israel." We also read concerning Nazareth for instance, "And He did not many mighty works there because of their unbelief." . . . Although man can hinder God, man can also co-operate with Him, for He works through human instrumentality. God is seeking for a man and a woman who will co-operate with Him. Here is the astonishing thing, the outstanding thing—I hope it will burn its way into your consciousness: God makes a statement that one single individual can save a nation from destruction—one single individual can keep America from destruction—"I sought for a man . . . that should stand in the gap before me for the land, that I should not destroy it."

In that ancient day God sought in vain for an individual that would make up the hedge . . . to spare the land from destruction. Will He seek in vain today in America? Will you be that man or women? Will you stand in the gap? Will you be one that God can count on?

We find that Moses saved Israel from destruction. We read of this in Ps. 106:23, "Therefore He said that He would destroy them, had not Moses His chosen stood before Him in the breach, to turn away His wrath, lest He should destroy them." Moses preserved Israel; one man stood in the breach. Now turn to Ex. 32:32, "Yet now, if thou wilt forgive their sin"—and then you will notice a dash; that means he hesitated to finish the statement. "Yet now—I think he choked on that; he couldn't go on, and when at last he gathered himself together he continued, "And if not, blot me out of thy book." Here was a man that was concerned; a man that really was burdened for Israel.

SPIRITUAL AWAKENING ALONE CAN SAVE US

Hear me! You love America, do you not? In these troublous days, you thank God that you live in America, don't you? And you are concerned, are you not, for the well-being and the future of your nation? You don't want this nation to be destroyed like nations of Europe have been destroyed. Then, hear me! There is only one thing that can spare America and that is that Uncle Sam will go to the mourner's bench and that God's people will give themselves to prayer. Roger Babson, the statistician, says that a debacle is inevitable unless we have a spiritual awakening.

I want to say with the fear of God that someone must receive this vision and this burden and give himself to prayer. Will you be that man? Will you stand in the gap?

We are challenged by the word of God in Jer. 33:3: "Call unto me, and I will answer thee, and show thee great and mighty things, which thou knowest not." God is still on the throne and is still in the business of answering prayer.

I said to Senator Vandenberg, in discussing this crusade with him, "Senator, don't you feel with me that God still is interested in America, and still intervenes in the affairs of nations in answer to believing prayer?"

He responded, "There can be no question about it."

And he reminded me of the day of fasting and prayer we had during the Civil War, when Abraham Lincoln called the nation to its knees and the tide was turned.

GOD HAS NOT CHANGED

There has been no change in the attitude of God. How much we need a realization of the power to deliver us,, so that America will become God-conscious once again! My prayer is that we might have such a revival that this nation will be stirred from center to circumference, in order that even Hitler, Stalin, and Mussolini shall know that the Lord God is in the midst of His people in America. Oh, how greatly we need such a manifestation, that men will have the fear of God before their eyes! Tolstoy said that the curse in his day was that men had lost a consciousness of God; and it is true today. Men do not concern themselves about their sins, are not thinking about judgment, about God, and about eternity. Men do not want to think about these things. We need a revival to make America God-scious and give us moral stamina and stability and courage to resist the evil tendencies at work in the schools and in society throughout the length and breadth of our land.

God works in response to believing prayer. He has committed a marvelous power into the hands of men that can turn the tide and change the history of nations by prayer. Marvel of marvels! And yet how many of us neglect prayer; how few of us recognize its benefits, and give ourselves to prayer. Dr. R. A. Torrey said that the average Christian in America spends three minutes a day in prayer. I don't know how Dr. Torrey secured his statistics, but if his statement is accurate we know why conditions are as they are in our country. We need to give ourselves to prayer for a revival.

WHY WE NEED TO BE SPARED

I will tell you one reason why I am so concerned that America should be spared. You know that in recent decades the four great missionary nations of the world have been Great Britain, Germany, Sweden, and the United States. The three European countries are handicapped now. Christian people in Great Britain, Germany, and Sweden cannot function effectively at present as far as world evangelism is concerned. There is only one of those countries left to carry on these efforts, and that is America; and if we become involved in the war, how can we evangelize the world?

Pray for a revival in your own church, your own community, your own city; pray for a revival in America. Pray for my brother preachers who are telling out the story of Jesus and His love, and for every gospel center in America.

Pray that revival fires may be kindled in hearts and homes and churches; that God's people may be revived and awakened to give themselves to the task of sending the gospel into the whole wide world; and that every man, woman, and child in America may have an opportunity to accept Christ.

Will you stand in the gap? Will you give yourself to prayer?

The Strange Providences Of God

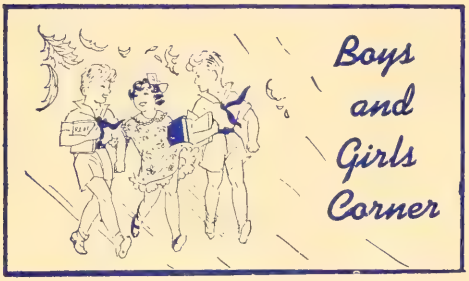
The Stowaway

About forty years ago a poor Chinese lad, who was unhappy and starving in his own country, watched his chance and slipped on board an American brig which was just about to leave port. He crept down the companion way and hid amongst the cargo. At night he would crawl out and prowl about the vessel trying to pick up odd scraps of food.

When the little vessel was tossing amid the great waves in the middle of the Pacific Ocean, he was suddenly pounced upon by one of the crew and dragged before the captain. He looked a very dirty and unhappy specimen and fully expected to be beaten. But to his surprise, he found the captain a kind-hearted man. He was made to work for the rest of the voyage, but he was treated fairly. When the ship arrived at Baltimore, the captain took him on shore himself, and led him to the house of his own minister, a Methodist preacher, and asked the minister to take charge of him.

The minister looked around in his congregation for the best Christian home he could find, and choosing one which was very humble but decidedly Christian, he asked the good people to take the boy in as a lodger and look after him. The Chinese lad had never in his life found such friendliness; the family with whom he lived guided him into a job, and he was soon earning enough to pay for his keep. Then later, finding him very bright and intelligent, they arranged for him to have a university education. At last came the proud day when Soong, the Chinese stowaway, took his degree.

Before that, however, he had given his heart to Christ, because of the fine example of the people with whom he lived.



Feeling that he ought to return to his own country and try to serve China in its great need, for the sake of Christ, he worked his way back to China where he married. His wife, too, became a Christian—indeed, she became a very good Christian. They had three daughters, all of whom grew up to be Christian girls. And what wonderful daughters they have become!

The eldest daughter married Sun Yat Sen, the man who led the Revolution in China, and who created the Chinese Republic. The second daughter married Mr. Kung, who is today the Chinese Finance Minister. The third daughter married Chiang-kai-shek and is that wonderful little woman who might be described as the Joan of Arc of modern China, for she is the inspiration not only of her husband's life, but of the manhood and womanhood of China in its great struggle against Japan. She is actually the head of the Chinese Air Force, and although they are involved in the most unhappy war, she and her husband are Christians, and their aim in life is to bring China to the feet of the Prince of Peace.

Is it not wonderful that a humble Baltimore home should have had such a tremendous influence upon the life of the world, because it revealed Jesus Christ to a poor foreign lad?—Pentecostal Testimony.

ISN'T IT TRUE?

If your heart would stop beating one week from now, and you knew it, what would you do? You are not certain that your heart will be beating one hour from now!—Lester Myers.

"A CHRISTIAN"

"Dear mother," said the little maid,
"Please whisper it to me—
Before I am a Christian
How old ought I to be?"
"How old ought you to be, dear child,
Before you can love me?"
"I always loved you mommy dear
Since I was tiny, wee."
"I love you now, and always will,"
The little daughter said,
And on her mother's shoulder hid
Her golden curly head.
"How old, my girlie, must you be Before you trust my care?"
"Oh, mother dear, I do, I do,
I trust you everywhere."
"How old ought you to be, my child,
To do the things I say?"
The little girl looked up and said,
"I can do that today."
"Then you can be a Christian, too,
Don't wait 'til you are grown.
Tell Jesus now, you come to Him
To be His very own."
And so the little maid knelt down,
And said, "Lord, if I may,
I'd like to be a Christian now."
He answered, "Yes, today."

THE SAFE HIDING-PLACE

Charlie and Leona were spending a day with their Aunt Emily, who had a very large garden and orchard, with many little nooks and corners which the children declared were capital places for hide-and-seek, a game of which they were very fond.

After dinner they played their favorite game, and there was much fun and laughing, for as there were so many hiding places, they did not easily find each other, so were all the merrier when they met. The afternoon passed so quickly that they were greatly surprised when tea was ready, which was served in the summer house. As a treat, Aunt Emily gave them strawberries and cream with their bread and butter, so altogether it was a pleasant time.

Auntie enjoyed hearing their fun, and asked if they had heard of that beautiful verse in the Bible which says, "A man shall be as an hiding place from the wind, and a covert from the tempest" (Isa. 32:2).

As Charlie and Leona were so interested in it, she explained its meaning, that Jesus Christ was the hiding-place from judgment, and the shelter in the time of trouble. He is the only true and safe hiding-place, and there is none other who can give such refuge and safety from the wiles and temptations of the devil; and none can forgive every sin, save Jesus, for He came to earth to provide a hiding-place for the people. Those who believe on Him are sheltered by His blood, and God has promised that they are safe for evermore.—Junior Boys & Girls.

BIBLE QUIZ

By MRS. RUTH WAYMIRE

I lived in the days of the New Testament. I never saw Jesus but I heard all about him from my mother and grandmother. One day a man came to our town preaching the gospel of Christ. He was such a wonderful preacher I felt that I would like to accept Christ and be a preacher like him. So I followed him, and helped him in his work. Later I was made a bishop of one of the great churches in Asia. I also had two wonderful letters written to me by the great preacher while he was in prison in Rome. What's my name? (Answer next week.)

Giving To God-- Does It Pay?

A man in a New England town had been unemployed so long that he came to his last $1.00. He laid 50c of it on the offering plate on Sunday. The following morning he heard there was a possibility of his obtaining employment in a neighboring town. The railroad fare to the town was $1.00. It looked as if he should have kept the 50c he laid on the offering plate; but with the 50c that he had he bought a ticket, and rode half way to his desired destination. He stepped from the train and started to walk to the town. But God had something better for him. Before he had gone a block he learned of a factory near at hand that needed help. Inside 30 minutes he had a job with a wage of $5.00 more a week than he would have received had he gone on to the other town. The first week's pay brought back his 50c tenfold. That man was W. L. Douglas, the shoe manufacturer.

When morning comes and guilds the skies,
With faith and trust my prayers arise
To Him Who orders all things right,
Who guides the worlds in their flight.

The glowing sun dispels the night
And paints the clouds with colors bright.
He took my life, all drab and sere,
And gave me hope, new life, and cheer.

He stills the tempest on the sea;
Quietness and peace He gives to me,
Strength to resist the powers of wrong;
And in my mouth He puts a song.

In my sorrow I still can sing,
Give thanks and praise for everything,
And show the world His keeping power;
For in my heart He lives, each hour.

Joel

(Author Unknown)

For the best understanding of the prophecies of the Old Testament, it is always advisable to know something of the historical setting of the prophet writing, and the people to whom he is writing. The messages of the prophets were always delivered for the particular time in which they lived, even though the prophecies had reference to a future fulfillment of some great event. The predicted judgments might not actually come to pass for years to come, but the conduct of the men and women who were to hear the message was always pointed to, as the cause for that judgment. Their responsibility seems always to be that of saving the nation from that judgment.

Immediately following the reign of Jehoshaphat, Judah rapidly declined, and the good effects of that king's reformation disappear in the apostasy of his son. Judah, as a nation is plunged into iniquity, her people are hardened in sin, and the downward path seems to continue until the reign of Hezekiah.

During this reign of sin, Judah is visited by a great national calamity of almost devastating nature. The land was covered with swarms of locusts that destroyed vegetation. Added to this was the second calamity of drought, leaving a people faced with starvation. To understand something of the tremendous ruin, we need only to realize that conditions have become so bad that the people were forced to discontinue their religious rites of sacrifice, due to the fact that the materials for the offerings were wanting. "The meat offering, and the drink offering is cut off from the house of the Lord," is the cry of Joel, in the very opening part of his message (Joel 1:9).

But God never brings judgment upon men without a purpose, and so, in the midst of this great calamity, which brought a swarm of locusts, and drought, leaving starvation in its wake, we hear a man named Joel, the son of Pethuel, rising to tell men "the word of the Lord, which came unto him (Joel 1:1).

This word is first of all concerning:

The Present Calamity

One of the surest ways to get the attention of men and women focused upon the thing that you want them to think about is simply to illustrate it with that which is uppermost in their own thinking. Thus it is that we find Joel going, in the very beginning of his prophecy, to that which was uppermost in the minds of the people of Judah—"the plague of locusts." Now a plague of locusts is not uncommon in the Holy Land, for men who have spent their lives in that country tell us that often the fields are destroyed by the swarms of locusts; but in this particular instance, the plague was of such devastating power that we hear the prophet asking, in the very beginning, (Joel 1:2-3), whether there has been in the memory of the old men such a plague as this? So devastating is it that Joel suggests it become a memorial, and that they tell the story to their children, even to the fourth generation.

However, having reminded them of the plague, the prophet of God moves forward; for he sees more than just a natural calamity. The chances are that in that day, as in this, many men and women would look upon such a series of events, say "It's too bad," and proceed promptly to forget all about it; but Joel sees not only a natural calamity but a judgment of God—a judgment which is great enough to call the children of Judah to repentance. Singling out the drunkards, the worshippers, the husbandmen, and the vine-dressers, he reminds them of the completeness of devastation, showing how it had effected all classes. The wine-bibbers are to wake up to a recognition of the hand of God, and to "weep and wail," for the judgment has touched that which they love most. We pause here, to add that drunkeness is one of the greatest curses on our own land today, and one of the greatest hindrances to the gospel of Jesus Christ. America has come to a place where not only her fathers, but her mothers as well, are drunkards; and the old law still abides, "We reap what we sow." Unless America turns her eyes upon Jesus Christ, unless she accepts him as Savior and Lord, she too will receive the judgment of God for her sinfulness.

Having thus dealt with the actual calamity, and having called the men and women into a place of repentance and humility before God, we find Joel moving forward to bring to Judah the interpretation of the visitation. "Blow ye the trumpet in Zion, and sound and alarm in my holy mountain." The trumpet call was used among the Israelites both in their religious rites and in the conduct of war. It would seem that Joel is sounding the trumpet to the nation, calling upon all classes of men and women to give heed to the presence of the Lord in the calamity that had just befallen them, and to learn the lessons from that calamity, lest even a greater and more terrible judgment come. This trumpet call is to "sound an alarm." With the figure of the locusts still in mind, we believe the prophet now turns to a second invading group; this time the armies of Babylon. Their destruction will be even more terrible than the destruction of the locusts; and here again the people will be absolutely helpless, not because it is a stronger army, nor because they have greater human strength, but because God will be with them to see that the full judgment is meted out to the children of Judah. Once more, we pause to remind the nation in which we live that our efforts may be expended in building greater battleships, and we may spend more money this year than ever before in the equipping and maintaining of bigger and better armies; but unless we return to God, unless we begin to take him into all of our plans, they will fail, for with the prophet Joel we can say, "Who shall be able to stand?"

But God has not yet sent forth the army of Babylon. He still waits. If the men and women of Judah will return to Him, he would not bring judgment to pass upon them. Thus it is that we hear the second time (Joel 2:15), "Blow the trumpet in Zion, sanctify a fast, call a solemn assembly." If the first trumpet call was one of alarm, then truly this might be called one of repentance, for all of Judah had sinned. Men are constantly gathering together for every kind of a meeting: political, commercial, scientific, entertainment; but what is needed most of all right now, is a meeting of repentance. The prophet ever goes so far as to outline the program for the meeting. "The priests, the ministers of the Lord," were to "weep between the porch and the altar, and cry, 'Spare thy people O Lord, and give them not to reproach'." Oh, how this ought to stir the hearts of us who are ministers of God's Word today! What we need is to be broken. The world is offering to men all kinds of "Utopias," and we know that none of them will work, unless God is in them; and yet we allow men to be "duped," and fail to tell them that there is but one way out. "Christ is the answer to every problem—through Him we can do all things, but without Him, we can do nothing."

THINK IT OVER

When you come to church on Sunday morning, you come to hear a sermon; but when you walk out of the church on Sunday morning, you go forth to preach a sermon!

If the people of Joel's day would come in such an attitude, then God would respond in mercy and grace.

The Future Condition

Having in such vivid language described the present calamity of locusts and drought and starvation, together with its immediate interpretation, we see the prophet once more moving still farther to point to a future fulfillment, of which these things were but the shadow and forecast. Dr. G. Campbell Morgan has, I believe, found the key to this section in one word, found in 2:28. Some of the things foretold have now been fulfilled, some are still in the future; but the whole portion rests upon one word, "Afterward." The Hebrew word here translated "afterwards" has for its actual meaning, "latter" or "last," and in the Septuagint version is translated by the Greek word which means 'in the last days." Thus the conclusion that we are now thinking in terms of the actual "Day of Jehovah."

In the first place, this is to be a day of discrimination. We read 3:19 "Egypt shall be a desolation, and Edom shall be a desolate wilderness, for the violence against the children of Judah, but Judah shall dwell forever, and Jerusalem from generation to generation."

This is only repetition of that which is so clear in many other passages of scripture. To those who have truly repented of their sin, to those who have relied fully upon Jesus Christ for their salvation, the Day of Jehovah is to be entirely different than it will be to those who have refused to listen to His call. It is a day of division. A day of discrimination. But more than that, we are told just how far this discrimination is to be carried. To the wicked, it is to be a day of vengeance. The wrath of God is to be outpoured. It ought to be noted here that this destruction, according to the prophet Joel, is to proceed according to strict justice. God will plead the cause of His people, in proof that he deals with their oppressors in a judicial manner, and thus, whatever punishment is meted out, will be shown to be deserved. We cannot pass this day of vengeance and destruction, without at least noting something of its nature. In 3:15-17, we find that it is to be a day of darkness. "The sun and the moon shall be darkened, and the stars shall withdraw their shining."

I walked one day in a tunnel in which there was no daylight at all. The only means of lighting it was artificial. Suddenly, because of a break in the power line, the lights were out; and the darkness was so great that it was impossible to see my hand, when held within one inch of my eyes. Here is to be the condition in the day when God brings judgment on the wicked people—the sun, the moon, and the stars are to refuse to shine. But add to that v. 16: "The Lord also shall roar out of Zion, and utter his voice from Jerusalem; and the heavens shall shake." When God, in punishing his enemies, shakes the heaven and the earth, and shouts out of Zion, not only will men fear, but nature itself shall be actually changed.

But the day of the Lord is to be yet another day for His children. To the wicked, it is a day of darkness, and dreadfulness, and destruction. To the children of God, it is to be a day of blessing and happiness. There is the promise of plenty. The language of v. 18 conveys to us the idea of bountiful blessings. "The mountains, covered with vineyards, shall yield abundance of wine, "or, without human toil, shall pour it forth; the hills shall be clothed with flocks, the rivers shall never again be reduced to dry river-beds. But the more wonderful thing about it is that the promise to the children of Judah is one of perpetuity. The enemies of God, like Egypt and Edom, are destroyed, but the children of God shall dwell with Him forever and forever! Once redeemed, God takes care of his children.

Conclusion

Truly, the prophet Joel has left for us a very wonderful picture. Every great national or individual calamity is but a part of God's mercy toward us. By it, he is flashing the danger signal to each one of us. If I drive down the main street of our city, and see the red light turn against me, it is a warning for me to stop. Likewise, having read the prophecy of Joel, it should remind us that God has red lights of warning all along life's highway, in the little difficulties and troubles that cross our pathway. If heeded, we may turn to Christ, and find the joy and blessing that comes in the "day of the Lord;" but if disregarded, if rejected, we shall reap what we sow —destruction in the "day of the Lord."

Christian Endeavor Department

AN IDEA FOR YOUR SOCIETY

By MISS RUTH McCLAIN, National Lookout Director

Most young people enjoy some sort of a get together after church on Sunday evenings. Two well planned sings a month will do a lot for your C. E. At this time the new members become better acquainted, and Christian fellowship is enjoyed by all. It is usually a good idea to have a sing chairman who may work with or independent of the social committee. These sings are held in the different homes immediately after the evening church service. A rousing song service takes place first. Special numbers may be included and also introduction of new members, who should be made to feel at home. Refreshments are served and then the sing closes with a devotional service. This part of the service may vary from time to time. The sings should never be too long or drawn out, closing usually at least by 11:00 o'clock. Our sing chairman is allowed one dollar for each sing held, to be used for refreshments. Cake, cookies, sandwiches, ice cream, punch, candy, apples and pop corn, hot chocolate or tea all taste good and may be taken care of out of this fund.

Greetings through Jesus Christ our Redeemer from The Christian Endeavor of the First Brethren Church, Johnstown, Pa.

The Lord has been wonderfully blessing the work of our young people in Johnstown, the past weeks. We have recently received 13 new members into our society, and have reached new goals in our attendance in the Christian Endeavor meeting and our pre-prayer service. Our society recently organized a chorus of 30 voices to sing praises and exalt our Lord through song. On Apr. 5, it was a great pleasure for the Young Peoples Christian Endeavor to present a sunrise service for the public to attend. This was very well attended. We are of the opinion that meetings such as this makes for better leadership in our church. The prayer of our society is that we may be used in winning souls to Christ. Only true happiness is found when one is in the service of the King.

Yours in Him,

President of the Y. P. S. C. E.

WHY WERE YOU LATE TO C. E.?

1. Because you do not plan to be early.
2. Because you do not own a consecrated watch.
3. Because others are late you are willing to train with them.
4. Because tardiness has become a habit with you.
5. Because you are a passive member and not an active one.

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

Christian Endeavor is an inspiration for the evening service. It prepares your entire being for the time of worship to follow?

It is a tonic for spiritual blues?

HERE'S JUST WHAT TEACHERS AND SUPERINTENDENTS ARE LOOKING FOR

If you have been wanting supplementary material for your children's work, don't fail to read this.

Bible customs illustrated by flannelgraph figures

Two splendid sets of flannelgraph figures are available, both printed attractively in brown on good quality paper, ready to be cut out. Both are accompanied by a 48-page booklet containing 15 excellent lessons. These lessons are especially valuable as a number of customs which throw light on Bible stories are treated in each lesson, and a spiritual application is made as each custom is dealt with. This makes it possible to use each lesson in its entirety for a class period; or the various customs can be singled out and used separately as supplementary material by the department superintendent, or by the teacher in connection with the Bible stories where these customs are seen. One set treats the agricultural life and customs of Bible lands, and the other the shepherd psalm and the shepherd customs. The price is $1.00 each set, which includes both the figures and the leson booklet.

Missionary stories illustrated by flannelgraph figures

This set of 10 fascinating missionary stories, written out in full on 14 mimeographed sheets, includes one story each of China, Sicily, Alaska, India, Borneo, and the South Sea Islands; two of Africa; and not the least, THE SINKING OF THE ZAMZAM, the Egyptian steamer on which six of our own missionaries and two missionary children were attempting to gain passage to Africa. The stories are excellent, and the 44 sheets of figures accompanying them contain native huts, idols, and other interesting pictures which depict life in the respective countries. The set comes in two prices: on light weight paper to be mounted or used as patterns, $1.00; on heavy paper which needs only to be colored and cut out, $2.00. We cannot recommend these too highly to those desiring something to create a missionary interest.

News from Brethren CHURCHES

MARTINSBURG ON THE MAP

Praise the Lord! It is true that the First Brethren Church of Martinsburg, Pa., is on the map of God now with regular morning and evening services every Lord's Day. This is a triumph for the Lord's work here, because it is the first time in more than 25 years that a full schedule has been established—not only on Sundays but on Wednesday nights, when we have the largest prayer meeting and Bible study class in the community. Again we say, "Praise the Lord!"

The faithful and loyal members of our church are among the staunchest and strongest which The Brethren Church has anywhere. Practically every missionary has been here, and the church is a live supporter of every missionary organization of our beloved denomination which we believe is true to the faith once for all delivered to us to hold and to proclaim.

A quick survey of events include the following: Weekly teacher training classes under supervision of Evangelical T. T. A. of Chicago; regrading of Sunday School classes according to age and ability; quarterly Sunday School cabinet meetings; a unified Sunday morning worship service including sermon and classes; a live-wire Boys' Brotherhood which meets twice a month; a young people's Endeavor which has just been established on Sunday evenings; the hiring of a full time sexton; yearly Bible conference and evangelistic meetings.

Concerning our Bible conference with Prof. Herman Hoyt from Grace Seminary, we would like to express our deep appreciation for the rich feast of spiritual things we all enjoyed the week preceding Easter. Prof. Hoyt was truly the channel of the Lord, and his Spirit-filled messages from the Word of God were a source of blessing to eager audiences, including many from surrounding communities. Even the good brethren from Waynesboro, including the pastor, Rev. R. D. Crees, and Bro. Ed. Cordell, Jr., came all the 75 miles to fellowship with us. The brethren of Leamersville were with us regularly including the pastor, Rev. Clair Gartland. Prof Hoyt will always be welcome in Martinsburg, and already the folks have asked him to return.

We should say a further word about our missionary interests. By the goodness of God, we were able to give our largest home missions offering this past Thanksgiving time. We do believe that a growing home base is vital to a thriving foreign mission work. At present writing we are thanking the Lord for a foreign mission offering which is very close to $300 and will be over that, Lord willing, when all comes in by the end of May. Going back just a bit, it was our privilege to put "the Jew first" in our program for 1942, having with us on the first Sunday in the year our Bro. John Solomon from the Pittsburgh Branch of American Board of Missions to the Jews. We want to do this each year, and we are confident of the Lord's blessing. Our own Bro. Jobson was with us in February, and it was with deep spiritual emotion that we bid him Godspeed on his perilous way back to Africa. How we do praise God for stalwart servants of the Lord such as our missionaries are. May we all faithfully uphold them in daily prayer. Our people enjoyed immensely the slides which were edited by Bro. Jobson, the pictures being shown just recently.

Progress in His work is being made in the community, and the pastor has had the opportunity to speak at the union Thanksgiving service, the closing session of Week of Prayer, the Christmas exercises of Cove High School, two Parent-Teachers Association meetings, and is now scheduled to bring two Baccalaureate sermons. We thank the Lord for these avenues of witness.

In June we will have the Eureka Jubilee singers with us, Lord willing, for a few days. We have already called our evangelist for meetings next November, Rev. Bernard Schneider being the man we believe God will mightily use for His glory to the salvation of souls and up-building of the saints. Brethren, pray for us. We witness while we wait. Our Lord is coming soon!

Robert E. Miller, Pastor

What About You? At the close of a meeting a cynic approached Mr. Moody and said, "Mr. Moody, during your address this evening I counted 18 mistakes in your English." . . . Looking kindly at the critic, Mr. Moody said, "Young man, I am using for the glory of God all the grammar I know. Are you doing the same?"

How to Get a New Pastor

There are said to be pastors and congregations that would be happy if they could part pleasantly. Some of these pastors have been in their pastorates less than 10 years. They are doing faithful work, shepherding the flock of Christ; and yet they feel that they have been in their present pulpits too long, and they long for a new congregation to preach to. And in some cases the congregations desire a new voice in the pulpit, saying that the preacher has outlasted his usefulness among them. His sermons have the shine of a five-year-old black serge suit, and his illustrations are threadbare from usage.

There is no question that the minister is a good, sincere, genuine Christian, who is just as able and zealous now as he was a few years ago; and the people are as kind and devout as they were when the pastor came to them. And yet there is this growing apart between pastor and people. They are getting tired of each other.

There is a way for the congregation to get a new pastor without compelling the minister to resign; and there is a way for the pastor to get a new congregation without moving to a new place.

This is the way: have a surprise party on the minister, and give him a purse with a request that he take an extra vacation when he reads a lot of new books and attends if possible the classes in a theological seminary. This kindness of the congregation will warm his heart and stimulate him to more consecration; the books and lectures will open for him new vistas of God's goodness and love and inspire him anew. When he returns he will be a new man, and the congregation will be surprised by the ardor and ability of their pastor.

As a rule, the average church attendants do not realize that the pastor cannot give them anything unless it be given unto him. But books are expensive, and preachers' salaries are small. To get good sermons we must give the preacher good books and periodicals. If a church gave the pastor $50.00 a year for reading material, it would receive $500.00 worth of better sermons.

"The reason people pass one door

Is not because the busier place
Has better silks, gloves, or lace,
Or cheaper prices; but it lies
In pleasing words and smiling eyes.
The only difference, I believe,
Is in the treatment folks receive."

My church and I: "I have united with the church in solemn covenant. I have pledged to it my prayers, my interest, my spiritual assistance, my presence at its services, and a definite portion of my income for its support. Should I not keep my pledge, I will immediately bring an injury upon my church. The nonchurchgoer reads my life like a book. It is the only sermon he ever receives. I should be very careful as to the kind of sermon my life is preaching to the world. The apostle said that Christians are living epistles known and read of all men."

WHAT KIND OF A "SOLDIER" AM I? A true and faithful Christian does not make holy living a mere incidental thing. It is his great concern. As the business of soldier is to fight, so the business of the Christian be like Christ."

AMAZING RESULTS FROM A BOOK IN A CLASSROOM

An Indiana school teacher writes us, "Would like to make this testimony, giving Him much glory. I have been using Egermeier's Story Book of the Bible in my schoolroom along with the teaching of memory verses from the Bible. The results have been amazing. Only four children of my entire room of second graders do not have Bibles of their own. Many parents are being awakened by the eagerness of the children." This story book is available in three styles: Style "A" 645 pages, 234 stories, $2.00; Style "B" Child Culture Edition, 715 pages, $2.95; Style "C" De Luxe Library Edition, including a picture-story life of Christ, $3.95. 60,000 churches last year reported not one soul saved! There were also 30,000 churches closed down, says Rev. John Zoller of Detroit! Let us pray for a national spiritual awakening!

THE CONSECRATED TEACHER

The glory of life is brightest
When the glory of self is dim,
And they have most compelled me
Who have pointed most to Him.
They have held me, stirred me, swayed me,
I have hung on their every word
Till I fain would rise and follow
Not them, not them, but their Lord.

S. S. Times.

The parents of our nation have sown the seed of indifference, and now we are reaping the harvest. In Matt. 13:25 we read, " . . . While men slept, his enemy came in and sowed tares. . . . " Let us look at some facts which are the result of this sowing:

36,000,000 boys and girls in our country growing up without any spiritual training.

700,000 become criminals before they are old enough to vote.

97 per cent of child crime comes from boys and girls who are not attending any Sunday School or church.

Every 45 minutes a murder is committed in the United States.

Each man, woman, and child in America pays $120 per year for crime, for its results and after effects.

The average child in our homes today will spend 18,000 hours in the public schools to receive an education that he may be better prepared to live and earn a living. The same child, attending a Bible School regularly the same period in life, will receive 600 hours of spiritual training, which will help that life to live better now and to live for eternity. 18,000 hours in preparing to live for this uncertain life; 600 hours to prepare them for eternity! What use our Lord would make of the opportunities that are ours in those 600 hours! But he has committed every one of them to us! Are we so yielded to Him that every moment of that precious time shall count the utmost for Him?

TEACHERS AND SUPERINTENDENTS AND DAILY VACATION BIBLE SCHOOL WORKERS

If you have been wanting supplementary material for your children's work, don't fail to read this.

Object Lessons for Flannelgraph

The set which goes by the above name consists of 13 lessons, with a 24-page book of instructions and 46 7 x 11 inch cards of objects ready to be cut out and used. The lessons deal with such subjects as, Two Ways from the Place of Decision; The Sinner's Heart and the Christian's Heart, Pride Goeth Before a Fall, The Narrow Way and the Broad Way, The Refuge of the Sinner, Barriers to Prayer, and other subjects that make it easy to present the way of salvation or some phase of the Christian life. Price of the set, $1.50.

There is another series of object lessons designed as a Bible study, and especially adapted to children, with lessons teaching each of the following: the need of salvation, how Christ has met that need, how to study the Bible, how to pray, how to confess sins, how to keep the life clean, and how to become soul winners. Each of these lessons have sufficient material for a 30-minute class period. Price of both lessons and cutouts, 60c.

Bible customs illustrated by flannelgraph figures

Two splendid sets of flannelgraph figures are available, both printed attractively in brown on good quality paper, ready to be cut out. Both are accompanied by a 48-page booklet containing 15 excellent lessons. These lessons are especially valuable as a number of customs which throw light on Bible stories are treated in each lesson, and a spiritual application is made as each custom is dealt with. This makes it possible to use each lesson in its entirety for a class period; or the various customs can be singled out and used separately as supplementary material by the department superintendent, or by the teacher in connection with the Bible stories where these customs are seen. One set treats the agricultural life and customs of Bible lands, and the other the shepherd psalm and the shepherd customs. The price is $1.00 each set, which includes both the figures and the lesson booklet.

Missionary Stories illustrated by flannelgraph figures

This set of 10 fascinating missionary stories, written out in full on 14 mimeographed sheets, includes one story each of China, Sicily, Alaska, India, Borneo, and the South Sea Islands; two of Africa; and not the least, THE SINKING OF THE ZAMZAM, the Egyptian steamer on which six of our own missionaries and two missionary children were attempting to gain passage to Africa. The stories are excellent, and 44 sheets of figures accompanying them contain native huts, idols, and other interesting pictures which depict life in the respective countries. The set comes in two prices: on light weight paper to be mounted or used as patterns, $1.00; on heavy paper which needs only to be colored and cut out, $2.00. We cannot recommend these too highly to those desiring something to create a missionary interest.

Bible Stories

Figures are available for many of the separate stories, and for all the respective periods of Bible history, at various prices. Scenery also is available in either paper patterns or oil-painted flannel or felt, at various prices. A 25c set of instructions for making scenery is available also. Write us concerning your wants.

PRAYERS ANSWERED. JOBSON'S ENROUTE!

As the readers of the Herald peruse these columns they will be happy to learn that Rev. and Mrs. Orville D. Jobson are out somewhere in Mid-Atlantic on the SS Besholt of the American-West African Line enroute from New York to Matadi. Let us earnestly pray that God will keep His own safely as they pass along the dangerous pathway over the seas.

THE EASTER OFFERING

As we write this editorial (May 25, 1942) the Easter Offering is pouring in upon us. Practically every church, if not indeed every church thus far reporting, is exceeding last year's offering—most of them by a goodly margin. It now looks as though the Lord is giving us the greatest offering for foreign missions in the history of the Brethren Church. Our God must look with favor upon the work that the Brethren are doing in Africa and in Argentina—in two greatly neglected mission fields until the Brethren entered therein. If possible, we shall have our Easter Offering ready to report in the July issue of the Herald. With the Easter Offering out of the way, we should have the treasurer's financial report ready for our August number. By closing our year on June 1st instead of July 1st, it is making it possible to have these two reports in print in the hands of the members of the Foreign Missionary Society for at least three weeks before our National Fellowship meets. We trust that all churches will have sent in their reports as requested so they will reach our office by June 1st.

The office at headquarters presents a very busy scene these days. In promising these early reports we trust we are not promising more than we shall be able to accomplish. Just now the office is humming with activity in connection with passage and passports for the Williamses and the Hoyts. We have the promise of passage for them about the middle of June on a Portuguese steamship, provided we can get passports and visas in due time.

FULL SPEED AHEAD

The editor has contacted the pastors of nearly all the churches supporting the National Fellowship of Brethren Churches. We have laid before these pastors the situation that confronts us in the matter of transportation, but every pastor urges that we make full preparation for the National Fellowship of Brethren Churches to meet at Winona Lake, Indiana, on August 31, 1942. If at the last moment the transportation situation will be such that the government will express a desire that church conventions, as well as all other conventions, shall be postponed, we will doubtless be loyal to our country in this time of stress. However, we believe that our government realizes that the spiritual and moral values must be maintained. Without maintaining them, winning the war would scarcely be worthwhile. With a sympathetic government, we believe it will be possible for us to hold our church conventions.

"GOOD NEWS FROM A FAR COUNTRY"

Some of the best news that has come to us in many a moon, comes to us in reports of progress in Argentina. Don't fail to read all the letters and articles from there in this issue. We have long prayed and looked forward to the very things contained in these reports. The determination of those fine Argentine pastors to put their churches on a self-supporting basis as soon as it can be done—that's good news. That will mean more churches and more pastors. That will encourage the folks at home that give. The Brethren in South America are poor—poorer than we here in America know anything about. The government down there doesn't play "kind papa" to its poor. But, out of their poverty, they are determined to move toward self-support. Which one of those Churches will prove to be the first to cry—"Done!"

Then meet Mrs. Gamarra! Now, isn't she just as fine looking as the finest of them? And from what we have heard, it isn't a case where "beauty is only skin deep." Our Mission has another fine worker.

Then—but turn to it and read it!

PRAYER "FOR THE DURATION"

Sometimes we have to get news concerning our homeland from the other side of the ocean. According to The Christian Herald (London), the world's largest grain market, situated in Chicago, has decided to sound a gong each day at 11 A.M., in order that business might be suspended for one minute while silent prayer ascends to God, for victory over America's enemies. That is mighty fine! But why is it that the

Rev. Orville Jobson

A Farewell Message from the Jobsons

New York City, May 21, 1942

Mrs. Jobson

The time for sailing has come at last. It has been a long wait, but God has been faithful.

When we left our dear children in California four months ago and came East, expecting to sail either by clipper or steamer, we never dreamed that we would have this long delay before leaving for our adopted country; but God, Who knows the end from the beginning, makes no mistakes and is always on schedule time. Yes, waiting days, as many of you know, are difficult; but we truly found His grace all sufficient. We know that we are in the center of His will.

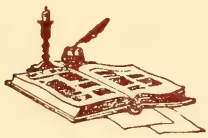
We are now in New York expecting to board the ship very soon, and want to tell you how wonderfully the Lord has answered your prayers and ours in the past few days.

Prior to going to Mundy's Corners, where we expected to be with Bro. Kenneth Ashman for a two weeks' evangelistic meeting, we went to the "Houses of Fellowship" at Ventnor, N. J., for a short stay. While there, a letter was received May 9 from New York, stating: "If you are interested in traveling along, can accommodate you on . . . " With this in hand, Mr. Jobson went to New York Monday, the 11th, only to find that the word "along" was a typographic error and should have been "alone." Just one letter different, but what a disappointment to us! The captain of the boat refused to take any women aboard.

Now, we realized the great difficulty of securing passage in these days of war, but we did not feel it to be the Lord's will to be separated. However, after committing all to Him and shedding many tears, the Lord brought me to the place where I was willing to be separated, even from my husband, that His work might be carried on in Africa. This was not permitted, and just two days later we were called to the phone and advised that accommodations were available for Mrs. Jobson also. I am trusting that I will not inconvenience the captain in any way because he consented to let me travel along!

Now, we had secured passage (a definite answer to prayer we know), but the problem of securing our passports confronted us. Mr. Jobson had to be released from the draft board. Well, I shall not go into detail, only to say that these papers arrived just at the right time, and without too much difficulty the passport was granted.

Dear friends, is there anything too hard for God? These things didn't just happen—thousands of God's children had been praying for His servants. And all these answers to prayer came just at His own appointed time. Let us magnify His name together.



We have had a most blessed and fruitful furlough. It has been our privilege to meet many new friends, and to know them is to love them.

We praise the Lord for every member of our Foreign Board, and for a church that stands behind its missionaries in support and prayer. We thank you one and all for your prayers, which we know will follow us all the way. "Great is thy faithfulness" (Lam. 3:23).

GO YE, THEREFORE, AND TEACH ALL NATIONS . . .
Matt. 28:19

AND HOW SHALL THEY PREACH, EXCEPT THEY BE SENT? . . . Rom. 10:15.

directors of this grain market "propose to continue the arrangement for the duration"? It sounds as if they believe in creeping into the bosom of the Infinite when there is trouble, but wandering forth to "go it on their own hook" when the trouble is over. Unless we are greatly mistaken, prayer is going to be even much more needed at the close of "the duration" than during "the duration."

"LET US ADVANCE UPON OUR KNEES"

Pemier General Tojo, of Japan, is said to have declared that Japan will continue to fight until the people of America and Great Britain "are brought to their knees." Premier Tojo may be right. However, it might be well for Premier Tojo to know that if once they "are brought to their knees," America and Great Britain will become invincible, and Japan will learn that her gods are but vain idols. We believe Japan has been winning her way because the people of America and Great Britain have not been brought to their knees. But, as God lives, Japan and all other aggressor nations will perish by the very sword they have drawn. Our Lord said: "All they that take the sword shall perish with the sword" (Matt. 26:52).

It may be of interest to know that it was a Japanese Christian, Neesima, who was the author of the slogan: "Let us advance upon our knees." It is the conviction of the Editor that God will not give victory to America and England in this war until they, due to the light that they possess, shall acknowledge Him and do more praying than they are doing now. If only once these two nations would truly go to their knees, and confess their sins, we firmly believe that instead of reading continually of Jap advances, we would hear of American and British advances. "If My people, which are called by My name, shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek My face, and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land" (II Chron. 7:14).

Who can believe that God lives, and yet is not tremendously concerned about this World War and the attitude of the nations toward Him? President Wilson, who was our President during the first World War, visited England on his way to France at the close of that war. While in England, he spoke in a little country church, and in a message delivered there, said: "It was just such gatherings as these that won the World War."

May God help us, "Lest we forget!"

"MISSIONARY FACTS IN WAR TIME"

There has come through the mails to the Editor, from the Board of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian Church in The United States of America, a release of "crucial, significant facts of the foreign missionary situation in war-time that every member of the Presbyterian Church should know!"

The members of the Brethren Church will be interested in these facts of a sister denomination, inasmuch as the problems of the various Protestant missionary societies are very similar problems in these days. We therefore quote from this release of the Presbyterian Board several paragraphs, with comment thereon.

1. "The Presbyterian Church, at the time of this release, has in sixteen mission areas 1172 missionaries. Of that number 815 are on the field and 357 on furlough." The Presbyterian Church is one of the largest evangelical churches in the world, and has one of the greatest missionary organizations. It has tremendous influence with human governments, and yet we discover that practicallv one out of every three of its missionaries is "marooned" in the homeland. It is interesting to know that the Brethren Church has 32 missionaries, and of this number, 12 are "marooned" in the homeland. We might say that, of these 12 "marooned," 5 are new missionaries under appointment to Africa, who are ready and anxious to sail the minute they can secure passage.

2. "In countries open to mission work the task is urgent and imperative. New, transferred and returning-from-furlough missionaries are re-enforcing the field staff. Where transportation is not possible, funds continue to get through." With the Brethren, as with the Presbyterians, our "task is urgent and imperative," and we are sending out new missionaries and returning missionaries from furlough whenever opportunity offers. Likewise, "Where transportation is not possible, funds continue to get through" by one route or another. It is necessary for the Home Treasurer to secure a license for every dollar that is sent to our missionaries in French Equatorial Africa. There is a lot of red tape in securing a license to send this money. First, we have to answer a number of questions for the satisfaction of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York. When that bank is satisfied that our request is legitimate and urgent, they recommend to the Treasury Department in Washington that we be given a license. With this license in hand, a bank in New York will forward money to certain banks in Africa. This World War has certainly multiplied the duties of the Home offices.

3. "The National Churches, carrying on with great faith and strong determination, within and without the war zones, need increasing support and every possible evidence of Christian fellowship." What is true of the national churches within the Presbyterian Church, is also true of the Brethren Church. Especially do the churches in Argentina "need increasing support and every possible evidence of Christian fellowship."

4. "We have reason to believe that the interned missionaries are living under as favorable conditions as circumstances allow. In-so-far as governments permit, every effort is being made to assure them proper maintenance and of course we are giving every attention to the care of their families in the homeland." The Presbyterian Board has difficulties that the Brethren Board does not yet have to face—the problem of "interned missionaries." Should the Axis powers succeed in wresting French Equatorial Africa from the Free French government, troubles like these would begin. We certainly are praying that the Free French government may never have to surrender to the French Quizzling Laval. Likewise, our Board, even as the Presbyterian Board, as been "giving every attention to the care of their (the missionaries') families in the homeland." We shall not allow our missionaries to suffer financially for that for which they are

General Conference in Argentina

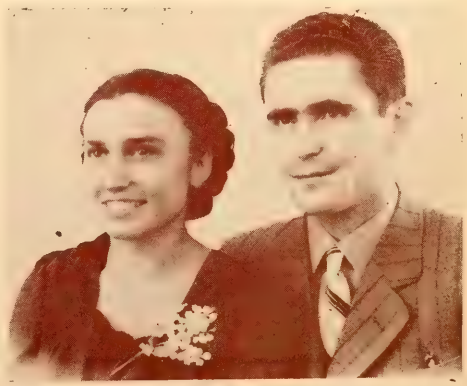
By J. PAUL DOWDY

The annual conference of our mission was held this year Apr. 3-5. The conference was fairly well attended. Almost all of our congregations were represented. A spirit of real Christian fellowship prevailed throughout the conference.

We were all very happy to see a large number of young people present his year. There is evidence of a growing spirit of unity and collaboration among the youth of our congregations. To us this is a very promising sign of better things to come in the work of our churches here. This evidence of a more wide-reaching fellowship among our young people is very encouraging to us; for we have seen a number of our young men and women, who have grown up in the church, drop out just when they reach the age at which they should become useful members of the church. May the Lord give us wisdom properly to teach and help our youth to give Him first place in their lives, to love and serve Him faithfully.

The theme of the conference this year was "The Church." The program was made up by two of our national pastors. They chose the theme and assigned the various subjects for messages to the rest of us. There seems to be a growing consciousness of the need of a more stable organization of our congregations, the desire being to have a local church that really belongs to the Argentine believers, and supported by them. This is the ideal in all mission work, and has been the goal to which our church has aspired, but which it has not attained. May it soon become a reality.

We are most happy at this time to be able to report that a movement is already under way toward the realization of the above-mentioned ideal. It is in the beginning stages only, but we have confidence that it shall develop. More specifically stated, the movement is this: our national pastors themselves brought before the workers' session, during the conference, the idea of starting a plan to begin transferring the support of pastors to the congregations themselves. You can imagine that we felt like shouting; and even if we did not shout, we did thank the Lord for this evidence of the working of the Spirit in our national pastors. In that very session a committee was appointed, named by national workers, composed of nationals, and approved by the entire group.



Meet the committee: Maximino Pereira, Luis Siccardi, and Antonio Gamarra. The committee even went into session before leaving the conference, and is to prepare a definite plan to be presented at the next pastors' meeting to be held in the last week of May of this year. Naturally, this thing cannot be done all at once. It will have to be a gradual process. But just the same, we can rejoice greatly if the process can begin now. Once it is on the move, it will be a pleasure to exercise patience and see the thing go ahead. We know that you brethren at home will be glad to learn of this project toward a self-supporting church in Argentina, and we ask you therefore to take a really active part in the realization of it. You can do this through real definite prayer for the pastors and believers of our churches here in this land. Please do not let us down.

Our little church paper, Heraldo Evangelico Argentino, after almost a year of existence, was considered in our pastors' session, and found to be satisfactory in most respects. This is an eight page monthly publication with a section for articles by the pastors, a section for the young people, a section for the women's work, and a page for notices of the activities of the various congregations. It was suggested that a page be dedicated to material for the children. This childrens' page will likely appear soon. For the most part we publish articles written by our own people. There is an editor to prepare the material for each section, putting it up in typewritten form ready for the printer. The printing is done in Rio Cuarto. The cost of this paper is borne by our local churches. We shall be glad to send our Heraldo each month to any of you brethren who read Spanish and would care to receive it.

We are confident that the blessing of the Lord was upon us in our conference of this year 1942. We trust that He may bless us in our efforts to bring to realization the plans that were made, and may He be glorified thereby.

NEW PASTOR AT HUINCA RENANCO ARGENTINA

We are very happy to present to the brethren of our church in the U. S. our newest national pastor, Antonio Gamarra, and his bride. Bro. Gamarra is a member of the Tancacha church and has been a worker in our mission for a number of years, serving as colporter with our Bible Coach. During the last three years he has studied in the Baptist Seminary in Buenos Aires, completing three years of a five year course. His wife, a member of the Baptist church, completed a course of study in the Bible Institute of the same denomination. They, therefore, begin their work in their first pastorate with a fair degree of preparation. They were married in the bride's home church in Llavallol, Buenos Aires, on Mar. 14 of this year. On Mar. 27 they were installed as overseers of the flock of God in Huinca Renanco and Realico.

Antonio Gamarra and wife, Mercedes

We believe that the Lord has given our mission another capable and consecrated young couple who will serve Him faithfully and well. Bro. Gamarra has already shown considerable interest in the idea of working toward a self-supporting Brethren Church in Argentina. He is a member of the committee that is to bring in a plan for instituting a program that will transfer gradually, from the Foreign Missions Board to the local congregations, the support of the national pastors. Mrs. Gamarra has a fine personality that will be a great asset in working with children and young people, and in every way shows real capability for assisting her husband in the work of the ministry. May the Lord bless them and use them greatly to bring glory to His wonderful name.

A NEW WORK BEING OPENED IN RIO CUARTO

Through the leading of the Lord, we have been able to obtain a nice meeting hall at a remarkably low rent, in a good section on the west side of this city. For a long time we have recognized the need of an annex in that part of the city, and we are confident that the Lord is working now to meet that need. This new work will be in charge of Bro. Domingo Reina and his wife. Very shortly they will move over into that neighborhood within two blocks of the meeting-hall.

The Reinas are quite enthusiastic about this new annex, are really giving themselves whole-heartedly to the work of establishing a permanent and effective testimony of the gospel in the other side of town. Our congregation here is also very much interested in this work, and is really praying and working for the success of this new mission. We are planning to make this a missionary project for our congregation. The rent and other incidental expenses will be paid by the brethren of the Rio Cuarto congregation, until the people of the new annex can take such responsibility upon themselves. They will be taught from the very beginning that this is their privilege and their duty.

Will you not take an active part in this new work by just remembering it quite definitely in prayer? Surely the Lord will bless and use this effort for His own glory.

Young People's Camp in Argentina

By J. PAUL DOWDY

The Campers

Although we got awfully tired, terribly tired, almost worn out, doing our part in the preparation and realization of the camp, we had a good time, and got a lot of real joy out of seeing the camp idea grow and produce results. The Lord blessed us, and we thank Him for it all.

The idea of Young People's Camp is new among our people here. Last year the first camp was held, and with great success and blessing, even ending with a surplus in the treasury. That first year it was not easy to get young folks to go to camp. They did not know what it was, and we had to persuade many of them to give it a try. Others, more adventurous, jumped at the chance to go somewhere and do something different. This year there was not much trouble getting the young folks to go. It was really more difficult to keep the married ones away. As it was, we had 23 fathers, mothers, and little children, besides the 41 young people.

This year we encountered many difficulties. For one thing, we had to find a place that would provide a real camp environment. Last year we had it in a town, but that is not exactly a place for a camp. We finally found a place in the Sierras of Cordoba, just in the foothills, about forty miles from Rio Cuarto. It is a real job to find a place with shade, drinking water, and a place to swim, here in this section of Argentina. Shade and swimmin' holes are just too scarce. Our camp site was as near the ideal as one could expect to find in these parts.

Having found a place, we next had to solve the problem of getting the campers and the equipment to the site. We expected from 40 to 50 young people, and knew that most of them would not have much money. In fact, most of them could not have gone at ordinary transportation rates. Through the collaboration of some of the brethren with trucks and autos, we managed to get everybody there at a nominal cost to the camper for gas and oil.

The good camp site we had found had no buildings, so we had to search for tents. The mission has one good-sized tent, but we needed three. A missionary of another denomination loaned us one. Then we were able to borrow several large sheets of canvass. The tent problem was solved. Little by little all the others were solved also. Our Lord can solve all problems.

The first day in camp it rained—poured down at first, then more slowly—but kept at it all day. It

Appeciation of Dr. Florence Gribble

BY MRS. ORVILLE D. JOBSON

The news of Dr. Gribble's home-going has just reached us here in Philadelphia. How we shall all miss her smiling face and sweet fellowship! For to know her was to love her. But we know her triumphant entry was glorious, first to meet her Savior face to face, Whom she loved and served so faithfully these many years, and then to be reunited with her dear husband, who preceded her to heaven 19 years ago. We love to think of them at heaven's gate, watching the redeemed of the Lord from French Equatorial Africa coming home, in whose salvation they had a great part.

It has been our blessed privilege to know and work with our dear Sister Gribble 21 years on the mission field, and we are sure her going has left a big gap out in Oubangui-Chari. But He doeth all things well, and our loss is her gain.

Dr. Gribble's life of faith, trust and victory meant much to me in my missionary career. Mr. Jobson and I had just been on the field a short time when the Lord called Bro Gribble to Himself. Personally I felt helpless! I did the crying, and Dr. Gribble did the praising. Just the three of us were left to carry on the work. I shall never forget her victory at that trying time. Returning home from the place where we laid Bro. Gribble to rest at 4:00 A.M., she sang this little chorus, "Above all the rest this note shall swell that Jesus doeth all things well." What a testimony that was to me!

We rejoiced with her when Marguerite and Harold answered the call and came to the field just at His own time. We know it meant much to both Dr. Gribble and Marguerite to be reunited on the field. Thus one of the great desires of her heart was truly fulfilled.

The urgent call is, who will go and fill in the ranks? There are many open sores to heal, but at present no doctor on the field. Won't you pray that a young doctor may answer this call and say, "Here am I, send me?"

BY ORVILLE D. JOBSON

News of Dr. Florence N. Gribble's departure for glory comes as a complete surprise to most of us. While we have known that her health has not been robust for some years, yet she has through the years been very active; and at last news we had from the field, before the cable announcing her departure, she was busy in her usual full round of duties.

Just before the cable came she had been much in our thoughts. We were praising the Lord that she was still with us, and able to carry on the medical work in the mission, while Dr. Taber assisted the government in the Bankui Hospital. And now without previous word of any illness, the news of her "loosing away upward!" She has gone from us! It is hard to realize. She will no more grace our beloved work in Africa, of which she was co-founder and pioneer. The work has sustained a great loss. But we thank God for her life, and for the many years she devoted to the service of the Lord in Oubangui Chari. The influence of her life shall always linger among us, ernment in the Bangui Hospital. And now without she exemplified so beautifully and so faithfully.

As a medical missionary, our departed sister was the pioneer in Oubangui-Chari. When permission was finally granted for the establishment of the Brethren mission in that colony, upon her application the government also granted the opening of medical dispensaries on all of the stations, under her direction. At the time of her death these dispensaries numbered four, and were always the object of her prayers and earnest efforts. Hundreds of thousands of treatments have been given at these centers by Dr. Gribble and the faithful and devoted missionary nurses who assisted her.

The first medical work was done under great difficulties and most trying circumstances. Scanty equipment, very little trained help, and for the most part under the canopy of the blue sky, this pioneer served God and man in her God-given sphere. But at the time of her release from these earthly scenes, each of these dispensaries functioned with a trained missionary nurse, trained native help, modest equipment, and in adequate buildings. The Lord provided for the doctor, in answer to prayer, a Plymouth Sedan in which to make regular visits to these four dispensaries, for consultation with her nurses and constant contact with the native patients. The mission may feel justly proud of this branch of the mission work which she organized and developed under God in such an efficient way.

Dr. Gribble was loved by all the African natives, Christians and heathen alike. Her services were of course without charge, but this rather increased her desire to do her best for each patient. On her passages at Bozoum, where we had a flourishing government medical service, the students of the Bible School and their families would flock around her. She had such a gracious way about her, and always performed her work so as not to conceal or hide the Great Physician, was cloudy and cold. Then after the second day it got warmer and the program moved along fairly well. We had bugle call at 6:30, or were supposed to; the bugler had no alarm clock. At 7:30 we had morning devotions. 7:45 was breakfast hour. Classes began at 9:00 and ended at 11:30. There were four classes, with ten minute intervals between. Three afternoons there was one class period, otherwise the afternoon was free for supervised recreation. At night we were supposed to have campfire; but because of the weather, we had only one, the last night.

On the last day, in the afternoon, we all went to the river, not for a swim, but for a baptismal service. Bro. Wagner baptized two girls and a boy, all of teen age, fruits of their labors in their district. That same night at campfire meeting, three others accepted the Lord as their Savior. Thus ended our week of camp, crowned with spiritual blessing. The next day when we were to break camp, we had a drenching rain,—not so good for taking down tents, but we could still sing "Are We Downhearted? No! No! No!" The Lord had blessed us abundantly.

Whom she always sought to exemplify. Yes, the natives have lost a friend. But I am sure that having known her will make it easier for many of them to trust more fully the greater Friend, Whom they saw in her.

To her fellow-missionaries Dr. Gribble rendered hundreds of hours of loving medical care. She was most considerate of their sufferings and always extremely sympathetic. We shall never forget her thoughtfulness and special care lavished upon us when on beds of sickness. She has been present at bedsides when missionaries lingered between life and death. Through her care some were restored to health and service; others fell asleep in Jesus. She will long be remembered as the "baby doctor" for a number of our missionary children, of whom are our own Kathryn and Roger. What she did in medical work, as in other spheres of service, was done as unto the Lord. Great shall be her reward.

As a fellow-laborer on the mission field, Dr. Gribble was an ideal missionary. She was always thoughtful, sometimes overly so, and would invariably put herself in the background lest she offend or hurt a fellow-worker. It always wounded her if unconsciously some word or deed of hers offended one of her fellow-workers. Confession was made at once and forgiveness pleaded. In this she was ideal. Being the wife of the founder of the mission, and for 18 years a widow among us, she held a unique place in the mission. There was a sense of easiness when she was present on the stations, or in the Field Council meetings. We looked to her often in spiritual matters. Her advice on certain mission problems was always of value. From her years of experience (and she had five years in East Africa before coming to Oubangui-Chari), and from the information she gathered from a wide range of reading, especially biographies, she suggested the best for her much loved Oubangui-Chari Mission. Whenever on the field, she served on the executive committee of the mission.

As a friend she was true and faithful. To those of us who had the privilege of calling her our friend, she will be greatly missed. She saw the deeper motives for good in her friends, and quickly excused their surface failures and mistakes. But never did she excuse wrong or sin in her freinds. She was open and frank concerning her conviction of righteousness and separation from sin.

Dr. Gribble loved the Lord and had a well ordered and powerful prayer life. The obstacle of the waiting days 1918-1921, and the hardships and Satanic attacks upon the mission after its opening, were overcome thru her prayers and intercession.

She also loved and appreciated every one of her fellow-workers, and prayed for their service and victory. What a privilege has been mine to have her as a prayer helper for more than 20 years! On some occasions during these 20 years, when times of weakness and discouragement came upon me, she would quietly and assuringly say, "Bro. Orville, I am praying for you." I have felt the strength of her prayers, and shall surely miss the interest she had in me personally.

Yes, we shall all miss her. She was a faithful doctor, an ideal fellow laborer, a true friend, and a constant prayer helper. But her life has been an inspiration to us all, and I am sure I speak the mind of the missionary body when I say that our lives have been richer for having known Dr. Gribble.

"GOOD NIGHT" TO DR. GRIBBLE

One of the new subscribers to The Brethren Missionary Herald from Zanesville, O.—a subscriber who, we believe, is not a member of The Brethren Church—has written the editor his appreciation of the Herald. Upon reading of the death of Dr. Gribble, he sent us a poem which he has dedicated to her honor:

GOOD NIGHT

We could not say, "Goodbye"—
To us 'twould mean forever;
'Tis only earthly ties
That we must sever;
But as she peacefully embarked for yonder shore,
Where Christ and friends await her glad returning,
We softly waft a kiss, and smile, and say,
Good night; sweet rest; see you in the morning!"

BY MRS. CHAUNCEY D. SHELDON

The heavenly chariot has swung low and carried Dr. Gribble to her eternal home, leaving us all a little lonely. Many times, in her more than 30 years of missionary work in Africa, has her fever-ridden body seemed to be about to release the spirit to cross over the river; but each time the Lord seemed to spare her for a while longer, to garner in a few more souls for Him. But now the Lord has viewed her task as finished here below, and has called her to her heavenly reward at a time when it seems that her services are more needed on the field than ever before; but our Lord knows and does all things well. It is true that "God buries His workers but carries on His work."

It was our privilege to know Dr. Gribble intimately since our arrival in Africa 17 years ago. Our first night in the mission was spent in her mud house at Yaloke. She shared gladly her meagre fare of sweet potatoes, rice, yams and peanuts in that day when food was scarce. In later years Dr. Gribble, Mr. Sheldon and I worked together alone at Bellevue for a year. In Africa there are few outside contacts, and one sees his fellow-missionary continually; and when you see one so closely, all the little faults stand out. I wouldn't say that we didn't see any faults in Dr. Gribble, but I will say that she was ever charitable toward the faults of others, having that love which covers. It seemed to me that she would go out of her way to be kind to those who had wronged her. Once I was quite exercised about a wrong that I felt another had committed against myself, and also against Dr. Gribble, and spoke to her about it. She said, "O, Hattie, let's say that that is a little defect in a great character."

We shall miss her prayers, for she remembered all the missionaries before the throne daily. The children of the missionaries were the object of special prayers. She never forgot the natives and their burdens, and many were the prayers to God for friends and loved ones in the homeland. On hearing the news, one woman said to her husband, "Now we shall have to pray more for our son since he will no longer have the prayers of Dr. Gribble."

God was very good to her, before He called her away, in allowing her to see her daughter Marguerite and her husband arrive on the African Field. Her prayer of many years was answered then. She had also wanted a grandchild, and God very graciously gave her a little granddaughter last November. How happy she must have been!

But for almost 19 years she has missed her faithful companion who left her a little lonely. Today, how she must rejoice in seeing her Savior first of all: and then how glad she must be to see Bro. Bennett, whom she and her husband loved so greatly. Hers will now be the privilege, along with Bro. Gribble, to see the redeemed coming in from those tribes in heathen Africa where they have been privileged to be pioneer missionaries.

Miss Myers writes of Mrs. Gribble's last days

Bassai, April 4, 1942

Another one of our number has fallen or should I say has been promoted to her heavenly home. Dr. Gribble had not been well for a long time and we all knew with such a high blood pressure only God was keeping her with us. When she was here at conference time she seemed as well as usual, but on the way home she had an auto accident that shocked her system. She rallied from this and went to Bangui but suffered on the way back. She remained at Yaloke a few days then continued her trip home to Bellevue. A week later she was with her Lord. They brought her body here to bury beside her husband. All the missionaries were here and the natives spoke well at the funeral. They had charge of it in Karre and in Sango.

We all shall miss Dr. Gribble. She has meant a great deal to me; especially during the waiting days at Brazzaville and Carnot.

When we approached the government twenty-four years ago for permission to do missionary work and they said "wait" she wavered not — when others doubted the wisdom of us waiting, saying we would not get permission, she said: "The question is not shall we receive permission; but, shall we not receive permission." The door was closed but she believed the Lord could open it in His time.

All through the wait at trying times Dr. Gribble failed not to quote the promises of the Lord in His Word. In all emergencies she was calm and her self control was especially admired by me.

Dr. Gribble practiced the Lord's presence and was always happy in communion with Him. She loved her Lord and spent much time in prayer. Prayer was sweet to her. She prayed, expecting an answer, for she only asked His will to be done and all was for His glory. There was nothing too hard for Thee Lord to do.

She loved people in much the same way as God loves people. She saw in them what they would be after the Lord had finished His work in them. She had faith in people and saw only their virtues, thus never criticized them, and found it wrong even to listen to criticism. She believed people should give all to the Lord, which she did herself. Her heart rejoiced to give her only child to the Lord, the most precious of what she owned on earth. Her cup ran over when she welcomed Marguerite and her husband here in the foreign land. Her young granddaughter was a great joy to her.

Brother and Dr. Gribble were the first missionaries I had ever met. Their companionship will always be a sweet memory to me. I have learned many lessons from them.

I am well. Only one left of the waiting party now.

May we all follow their faith and seek to please God until we too shall be called home.

Yours in His service,

in no wise responsible and cannot help. They are our missionaries. "They have not counted their lives dear unto themselves" in the work of making Christ known to the perishing multitudes beyond. We know that every member of The Foreign Missionary Society of The Brethren Church will commend our Board for providing for missionaries who are unable, due to the war, to return to their fields.

5. "Sixty-five missionaries, unable to carry on their work in the war zones, have been transferred to other fields, including 18 now working in Latin America. Others have been placed temporarily in positions in local churches, educational institutions, and mission projects in the United States. Some are being retained here to assist in the promotion of our missionary cause." Our Brethren missionaries, even as these Presbyterian missionaries, have been filling temporarily positions in local churches, educational institutions and missionary projects, while they are "marooned" in the United States. There is a possibility that Miss Crawford may be used in Grace Theological Seminary, teaching French and the Sango language, thus preparing prospective missionaries while doing some work herself in further fitting herself for her educational projects in Africa. The Morrills have not been idle, but have also been equipping themselves for more effective service when once they can return to the Field. The Morrills in the homeland have in no sense been idle.

6. "New missionaries are being recruited. Certain ones are going at once to open fields. Others as 'appointees in waiting', are remaining in training and temporary service in this country with the hope that 100 new missionaries will be ready to go to the field when the war is over." Likewise, in the Brethren Church, "new missionaries are being recruited," and "others, as 'appointees in waiting', are remaining in training and temporary service in this country." Likewise, when the war is over, we believe that we will have a goodly group of missionaries ready to go to the field. We know of a number who are now in training.

At the close of this release, the Presbyterian Board has to say that every evidence, at home and abroad, "increases the conviction of the Church that it has a tremendous and inescapable obligation to stand by its ambassadors at this time of their greatest opportunity and need. Missionary facts in wartime present a most earnest plea for continued devotion and support. Let us pray that as a fellowship of believers in Jesus Christ, the Church may not fail in this hour of testing." Also, this release displays this significant headline, which we, of course, endorse:

"It must be Christianity! This is the cry that rises from the inner soul of every nation today. This is the insistent and challenging demand upon the Christian world mission."

OUR INIMITABLE GRACE WRITES A LETTER

(Note: Just as our copy was about to be sent to the printer, the editor received a letter from Miss Grace Byron, which was extremely interesting to him from beginning to end; and we believe our readers will enjoy this letter in toto. Therefore, we quote it exactly as is:

"Dear Brother Bauman:

"Me heke tou," as the natives say in Karre, I am sorry for not getting my report in more promptly. It is not because I am less busy now that I am writing, but to use one of your expressions, "I am taking the bull by the horns," and hope for the best. "These missionaries??!!!"

"I arrived at Bassai Dec. 17. They tell me there was very little rain last wet season, and the rains stopped early, and it is drier than punk. What a desolate place it looked! Even the dry season haze hid the beauty of the Karre hills. But when the natives started coming up to greet me, the place no longer looked dry and barren. I realized I was back to Bassai, back home.

The children had grown almost beyond recognition; but I must recognize them and call them by name, or they would feel offended. As I would address first one and then another, calling them by name, they would exclaim, "Mademoiselle, ga yanguela mi ya"—"she has not forgotten me." One young lad came grinning and his face all aglow. I greeted him, but I could not remember the name that went with that smiling face, but after talking with him a few minutes, I remembered. He looked so happy to see me I felt I just must call his name.

About the first thing the natives would say after they greeted me was, "You have gotten fat." I think they really think that is the polite thing to say to a lady if they have not seen her for a long time They told me that they thanked God I was back, they had prayed for me for a long time, they had heard that I had been sick, and they had heard about the "Zam Zam." I told them the story of seeing a rainbow between me and the raider the morning the Zamzam was shelled. They marvelled at God's faithfulness and power to give peace in my heart in such an hour. The experience was worth it just to be able to tell them that Christ is sufficient in every emergency.

I can see a real spiritual growth in the church. There is more reverence in the church, there are conversions, and backsliders come confessing their sins and want to be restored to church fellowship. It is inspiring to see whole families come forward with their gifts. Even the toddlers come with their sous, pennies. One woman brought a pan of grain, and a boy brought an egg instead of money. They support their native pastor and help the evangelists starting work in new fields, such as buying a cassava patch so he will have food.

I am teaching two classes a day, and trying to get my house cleaned and settled, and getting some minor repairs done. The Dunnings and Jake are here having meetings with the evangelists and the native Christians. They had planned on a week; but they can only have them for three days, as the government is buying cotton, and they must carry their cotton into the buying centers. Our missionary conference is less than a month away, and we must prepare for that, such as looking after the garden, fixing up sleeping quarters, etc., etc. Estella and I do not have much time to get either lazy or lonesome.

The bell just rang for the afternoon service. I started this just before lunch and did not get very far, so tried it again; but if I keep at it I will finish in time for Jake to take it to Bozoum and put it in the mail.

I found my groceries at Bassai when I arrived, the ones I sent Barber Line instead of the Zam Zam. They are worth their weight in gold after paying all the storage charges, freight, and handling charges. There is freight for the other Zamzamers also. Ruth's is here at Bassai. We are trying to protect it from the termites. I hope there is not anything that is apt to spoil in it. I got back just in time to keep the termites from spoiling my pillows. They are a pest.

No one had ever told me about the beauty of the trip up the Congo, and it was a most agreeable surprise. I had heard much about the malaria swamps along its bank, and the most different kinds of disease-carrying pests that caused suffering and death to those who dared to embark upon its bosom. From all reports, I expected to swelter with the heat, and thought the boat would have to push its way among "hippos," "crocks," and alligators, all to the tune of hundreds of monkeys chattering and swinging from every tree. On the contrary, it was quite cool, I only saw the head of one "hippo" and one "crock" above the surface of the water, and saw some flying fur too far away to really distinguish what it was, but I was told it was a couple of monkeys chasing each other. If the captain and one of the passengers had not had three dogs and a cat, I would not have seen any animals except the village goats.

The river reminds me of a huge brown snake that pushes out a hundred miles into the ocean, discoloring it a coffee brown to make known its presence. It twists and turns through the low marshes; but at the entrance to the hills it swirls and whirls like a boiling caldron, defying anyone to proceed farther, and we could not have proceeded farther without a skilful pilot. It continues its rush to the sea, twisting and turning through the hills and on up through the lowland jungles. Because of its serpentine course, it looks more like a chain of lakes instead of a river. The silhouettes of the natives pushing their canoes, the blue haze on the hilltops, the villages dotted along the banks, kept us enthralled by its beauty. Only an artist or a poet could begin to portray the beauty of the gorgeous sunsets and the moonlight nights.

We stopped each night to load firewood, that was piled along the banks and carried on the boats on the heads of natives. It seemed to take an unbelievable amount to keep the paddle wheels turning against an eight-mile current. I enjoyed reading "God's Ravens" by Julia Kellersberger. I am sure Mrs. Bau-man would thoroughly enjoy it. It is advertised in the Congo Mission News in the October issue.

Sh! Here is a little poem from it. They are not all like this, but I know you will enjoy it, and it just expresses my feelings.

"You may have your bitter breezes
And your flannel beeveedeezees!
You may have your radiators!
We prefer our alligators!
You may have your frozen noses;
We use ours to smell the roses;
And we're shouting Congo cheer,
In your poor old frozen ear."

The bell just rang for prayers, so I must stop and be a little more serious.

Yours for Africa,

(Signed) Grace Byron.

P. S.—Please greet all my good friends at Fifth and Cherry.

GLEANINGS FROM MISSIONARIES' LETTERS

Long-delayed letters from the Fosters, dated Oct. 15, 1941. Seven months enroute! The censors must dearly love a letter written by Sister Foster. Well, we all love her letters. Knowing this, the editor shares a portion of this letter with our readers. It is still of interest:

"First of all; the decisions by the Field Council in placing the missionaries were made with the belief that they would soon be with us. But since the tragedy of the Zamzam has delayed them, naturally we are very disappointed; however, not 'upset,' as you say. We are 'set up,' ready for anything that now comes! But how we praise the Lord that they are all safe in America, since the Lord did not see fit to permit them to come on at that time. We know that He will bring them forth in His time; therefore we are simply resting and waiting for Him to work.

"We are glad that our missionaries are willing to return at any cost. However, we feel that precaution should be taken; especially as to the cargo of a boat, and naturally with the permission of the government; since what they do, they try to do for the good of the citizens.

"Even though our personelle may be reduced by three more, or I should say 'three less,' the beginning of 1942, we take courage when we read how the Lord reduced Gideon's army to such a small number, yet worked miracles through the few. We refuse to be discouraged, for it is the Lord's work that we are engaged in.

"Foster furlough: If the Lord so wills, we are not expecting to go home until 'the rough ways shall be made smooth,' and that will probably not be until the war is over. If the Lord soon returns, we will not need a furlough.

"I think conditions at the present time should arouse Christians to give more than ever before, and be willing to continue the support of those who cannot return to the field of labor where their hearts really desire to be. Jehovah-Jireh still liveth!"

Miss Elizabeth Tyson, Yaloke, F.E.A., wrote us under dates of Jan. 4 and Feb. 16. Both letters were sent by the speediest air mail possible, and yet these letters have just arrived at our office, Apr. 11, 1942.

There are several items in Miss Tyson's letters that will be interesting to the members of our Society, and it is our intent to pass along all interesting news items to the readers of the Herald insofar as we can, that they will know better how to pray for the work that is being supported by their generous gifts. In her letter of Jan. 4, Miss Tyson says:

"Dear Brother Bauman:

"I just heard a good program from England. It was the service from the Burmingham College, and was conducted by a Roman Catholic Archbishop. What he said was good; but like so many, he did not go far enough in his message.

"This radio that Mary brought out is a big temptation to idle one's time away. During the week we always get the evening news, so we are quite up-to-date on the war happenings at least. We get some very good concerts from time to time. They are so refreshing, and help to relieve the tension of station stress and strain. This morning I actually heard a negro spiritual. This came from Radio Leo, Leopoldville, Congo Belge. It brought back memories of the Jubilee singers and 5th and Cherry." . . .

Then again, in her letter of Feb. 16, there is a paragraph that concerns us very much. We quote:

"You will notice in the medical recommendations that I have been instructed to make inquiries again about the quinine order that was placed in Java. Have you ever heard from them? We have not heard, nor have we received any quinine; and the order was placed by air mail in May, 1941. Now we are getting a bit anxious about our quinine supply. You know that we cannot live without it. We have enough on the field for at least six months. If you have not heard, will you please instruct Mr. Jobson to get one year's supply of quinine for each member of the mission, for those on the field and those at home? The quinine out here is very expensive, and just now there is none in Bangui to be had, so we must depend upon him bringing it out with him, if at all possible. We also need Haliver Oil for our missionary children, and then some vitamin tablets. Some of our missionaries need building up, and vitamins will do the work. I would suggest several bottles of each kind."

(In the past two years we have ordered enough quinine sent to our missionaries to last them for ten years, but apparently some of these orders sent to Holland and to France were never filled. We do not know whether the order of which Miss Tyson speaks was ever filled, but we do know that this paragraph has caused us suddenly to become extremely busy looking into this matter; and if our missionaries are running short on this important item, by some hook or crook we will get quinine to them. This is indicative of some of the troubles that we are having in our office continually due to this miserable war. Jobson is taking the quinine with him.—L.S.B.).

"THINK IT OVER"

Was your offering for foreign missions a fair expression of your love for lost souls? You must back your prayers up with your gifts, or they will sound hollow, indeed.

The Maconaghys Write from Argentina

Mrs Hill Maconaghy, of the mission at La Carlota, Argentina, under date of Apr. 13, writes a very interesting letter, portions of which we are passing on to our readers.

"Dear Brother Bauman:

"Greetings to you and all our brethren in North America! We hope that you had a blessed Easter season. What a privilege and blessing it is to have the living Christ abiding within us, and to know that He died once to put away sin but now is 'alive forevermore.' What a contrast to the belief of these deceived people, who believe that He dies every year! I'm enclosing a photo, cut from the leading newspaper here, 'La Nacion,' showing a procession in Buenos Aires, going from the cathedral to the place where the burial of the image took place. The figure that is stretched out on the pallet is the image of Christ, which they later buried. The figure behind is that of the sorrowful virgin. Doesn't it make you sick just to look at it? And look at the crowd that makes up the procession. It seems there are still plenty of men who line up with Romanism. In the article that accompanied the picture, it described the procession as 'an expressive demonstration of Christian devotion.'

"We had our General Conference in Rio Cuarto during Holy Week this year! and it seemed to be a suitable time for many, as there was quite a good delegation from our various mission points. . . .

"Several weeks ago we had a week of special evangelistic services in Alejandro, with Bro. Pereira bringing the messages. . . . They distributed tracts throughout the town, and invited unsaved friends and relatives to the meetings. One lady, Dona Luisa, who was baptized last year, even wrote a friend who lives in that very Catholic town of Reduccion, and invited her to come and stay with her for the whole week. She came, and received the Lord as her Savior. So now there is at least one Evangelical in Reduccion. We are praying that she will be faithful in witnessing for her Lord. The week after the meetings, two girls were saved. So now there are three awaiting baptism.

"During the week we used the Bible Coach to a vertise the meetings, and had a short service in plaza. While one of the boys was giving out tra he overheard two women conversing. The one said the other: 'You don't believe those Evangelicals, you? They are the worst race there is.'

"As a further result of the meetings, some folks are attending the regular services, and we praying for their conversion.

Now we are planning to have a week of special me ings in Los Cisnes, perhaps the end of this month. We are looking to the Lord for a harvest of souls that little town. We have a number of unsaved come regularly to the preaching services and B study classes. And they seem to enjoy the Bible s dies many times more than the preaching servi Hill has been using Bro. McClain's 'Bible Truths,' has the folks look up the references.

Hill Maconaghy writes from La Carlota, Argenti "Thank you so much for your prayers in behalf. We certainly do need them. The work d here is hard, and the peoples' hearts even harder. would appreciate your prayers that we might be sh instruments in His hands to gather in the harv also for conviction of sin in those who hear the W

"One of the members went to invite one of his r tives to the meetings. The latter finally said would go, but he wanted it plainly understood t he would not spit on the image of the virgin t we had hidden behind the door. This is an old met the priests use to scare people away from evangel meetings, but it seems that with some it still force. . . .

"Well, we had fairly good attendance. Practic every night the salon was full. That means we an attendance of from 40 to 50 each night. That d not include the many, many who stood outside at window and the door. The visible results of the m ing—one lady saved. The Word of God sowed fa fully in many hearts we know shall yet bring fort harvest. We would ask the prayers of the entire l therhood that there might come to this field a revival among the saved, and a genuine wave of ev gelism among the lost."

The Maconaghy's address now is: Velez Sarsf 1018, LaCarlota, F.C.C.A., Provincia de Cordoba, gentina, South America.

Every word of God is pure: He is a shield unto them that put their trust in Him" (Prov. 30:5).

By "THE FOSTERS"

We praise our Father for the "shield" these days. It is more than an ordinary shield because it surrounds us, is over and under us: thus it affords us protection day by day, in all places and under all circumstances. His "Work is pure." It will not fail.

Dear friends in the Lord:

We have had a ten days conference with our native workers. As usual we had an interesting time listening to their testimonies and experiences.

About a year ago, we wrote and told you of the painful injuries that Isaac suffered in his frantic struggle with a leopard that had been caught in a net, and which he tried to kill. No one thought that he would ever be able to walk again. But after 3 months in the hospital, and three more in his village on a mat, he began to walk with a bamboo pole. At first he swung himself along on the pole and one leg, then later he discarded the pole and walked with a cane; and now he walks without the aid of anything, with scarecely so much as a limp.

He gave a wonderful testimony. He said: "If I had stayed at the work of the Lord, and not put my eyes on hunting and meat—that which my heart liked to do, and my stomach wanted to eat—I would not have been laid aside from the Lord's service for such a long time. But God has healed me; and I have asked Him to keep me from ever going after anything again that only brings satisfaction to the body; but to keep my heart occupied only with Him."

Isaac bears a real testimony where he labors. The people see that the Lord has undertaken for him in a wonderful way; and many are turning from their idols to serve the living God.

It is now two and a half years since he first began work in Mokounzi Kete's village. However, the work had been begun before he went there; but they have at this time 75 active Christians, and they have supported Isaac from the beginning of his stay with them. Just recently they selected one of their number, who feels led to go to a large village about 35 miles from Mokounzi Kete's village to serve the Lord. They expect to support him also.

These Christians always have shown great interest in the Lord's work. Before Isaac went to stay with them, they walked 70 kilometers each way every Sunday to Bouca to attend the services.

Etienne, you remember, fell out of a tree some months ago, when he tried to cut some limbs off the trees that the monkeys used to swing on, and from which they jumped into his grain field. His back was seriously injured by the fall. But the Lord has completely healed him.

It seems that just as soon as our people surrender their bodies to the Lord to serve Him, the enemy begins to test them almost beyond endurance. Some cannot stand the severe testing and they fall; some lean heavily on the Lord, and He brings them through victorious.

One evening after the Sunday School lesson had been taught, Etienne rose and said: "Several years ago I gave my heart to the Lord, and He cleansed it. Tonight I give my body to the Lord to serve Him." This is the way our Christians express it, when they surrender to the Lord for service.

Not many months later, his oldest son died from sleeping sickness. A little later his wife bore him a lovely baby boy, and their hearts were comforted But before it was old enough to walk, it died with pneumonia. Since they have gone to work in Yabingui's village, they have had another baby; which died when it was only a few weeks old. All his brothers tell him that all these misfortunes have come upon him because he has given up all his "medicines." But both he and his wife have been brave, and have not been persuaded by their relatives to return to the "old preventives," but are trusting the Lord wholly and completely.

Not only has he suffered all these things, but he also is having a hard and difficult time with his work. The chief, in whose village he is established, has recently been placed into a responsible position as chief supervisor over nine other villages.

The people had been running away from their villages, because they were discontented. So he devised a plan whereby he hopes to keep all who are under his supervision happy and satisfied. He forces them to work hard all day, then dance until midnight. This may satisfy the sinners, but not the Christians; because it keeps them away from all their services and spiritual instruction.

In spite of all these difficulties, Etienne has no desire to make a change or to return to his village. He has asked the Bouca church to pray with him for victory, and the breaking down of the evil forces.

Elie, another worker, had a terribly infected thumb. When he came in to the station, after sitting out in the village six weeks after it was injured, treating it with herbs, waiting for it to get better before he came in to go to the doctor with it. It seemed that nothing could be done, but amputate it. However, the doctor was gracious enough to try to save it, and in a very short time it had healed completely. He said, "Fear kept me from coming in sooner. I was afraid the doctor would cut off my thumb." He is very grateful, and gives God all the praise.

I don't believe that any of us ever fully realize what it means for our people to become Christians. We surrender worldly pleasures, and sometimes we think that is a lot. But these people give up every crutch upon which they ever leaned in times of sickness and death, and upon which they depended in every circumstance of their daily lives. Pray that God will give them great victories in their daily living and service for Him.

We as missionaries appreciate your prayers. Do not let up, but rather pray more. While the Lord tarries, we long to be used mightily for Him in this needy field.

As ever in His blessed service until He comes or calls.

NEWS BRIEFS From Our Workers

The First Brethren Church of WINCHESTER, VA., observed its annual rededication day on May 24, by following the regular morning service with a basket picnic dinner at the church. There was no afternoon service, but the evening evangelistic service was conducted as usual.

45 students of the Winchester School of the Bible, which has been meeting at the WINCHESTER, VA., church, received diplomas or seals at the commencement exercises the last of May.

BRO. FLOYD SHIERY, pastor of the Winnetka Congregational Church of Dallas, Tex., and writer of the lesson exposition section of the Brethren Bible School Quarterly, received his degree as Doctor of Theology at the commencement exercises of the Dallas Theological Seminary in May.

The Daily Vacation Bible School of the Grace Brethren Church of FLORA, IND., is reported to be progressing splendidly, with 147 enrolled during the first week. The attendance for the week, in spite of the rain, was 112 daily. While the pastor, Bro. Henry Rempel, will be absent to conduct special meetings in Limestone, Tenn., Bro. Homer Kent of Grace Theological Seminary will fill the pulpit.

It will be good news to our readers that not only have the JOBSONS already sailed for Africa, but that BRO. AND SISTER ROBERT WILLIAMS, Zamzam survivors, and BRO. AND SISTER GARNER HOYT, who recently graduated from Grace Seminary, are booked to sail on a Portugese vessel about the middle of June.

The First Brethren Church of GLENDALE, CALIF. conducts a Children's Missionary Band on a week day, for an hour after school, for children from six to 12 years of age.

BRO. ORVILLE LORENZ, who has been pastor of the Meyersdale, Pa. church, has been appointed to the office of chaplain, and reported at Ft. Dix, N. J., for service on May 22d.

Excerpts of a letter which appeared in the bulletin of the Long Beach 1st Church, written by BRO. ERNEST F. PINE while he was attending the Chaplain School at Ft. Benjamin Harrison, Ind., will be of interest to our readers: "I have been amazed at the frequency with which we have been reminded that we have perfect liberty of expression regarding our spiritual convictions. The only limitation is that of a purely denominational character. Just today one of the instructors said that the pulpit of the army chaplain is the most free for the expression of our true Biblical convictions of any pulpit that can be found anywhere. He suggested that there were no deacons and no meddlesome women to try and dictate what can be preached. This far exceeds the liberties of many of our churches. At a camp I will be subject to the regulations of the commanding officer, but this will be in matters of military discipline and not of spiritual matters. We are feeling day by day that God has opened unto us a great and effectual door of opportunity. The needs are many, as I will have to be the spiritual provider and advisor of 1200 men assigned to my care. . . . Many of these boys have not had in the past any spiritual training or background and will for the first time hear the gospel. Before entering the service I read that 60% of the men entering had no religious convictions. So you can see what a great task and privilege awaits us. We are fully aware of the many problems that we are facing and can only meet them with victory as we have our Christian friends praying for us. We would thus like to ask an interest in yours and in the church's prayer life."

Chaplain Ernest F. Pine is now stationed at Ft. George Meade, Md., and can be reached by mail by addressing him there with the 76th division. If you know of Brethren boys there, please notify him, and he will make every effort to contact them. Pray for this important work in spreading the gospel of Christ to the army boys.

In the bulletin of the Grace Brethren Church of HAGERSTOWN, MD., we read, "The air duct men from Washington have done a fine job of installing all air ducts in our new building. A little matter like a cloudburst doesn't stop them! Two feet of bricks are to go on each sidewall and all the way up the front and rear of the structure.

The annual banquet which the SUNNYSIDE, WASH. church gives to the Juniors and Seniors in their congregation, just before the Seniors graduate from high school, was held at the parsonage with 18 at the tables this year. A red, white and blue color scheme was carried out. Where two tables joined, forming a T shape table, there was a big V of spirea, red peonies, and blue iris. Across the table in little blue vases were lilies of the Valley and bleeding hearts. The napkins were pastel red, white and blue flowers, and congratulations printed across the corner. The programs were in book form, having blue covers with a red V for the Seniors, and red covers with a blue V for the Juniors, and "S.H.S. '42" in white down the side of each. The place cards were blue, the size of a stick of gum, written in white; and fastened on little airplanes having a stick of gum for wings, life savers for wheels fastened by a rubber band to the gum, a stick of red peppermint candy for the body with the wrapper forming the propeller, and a piece of tin foil on the tail. The nut cups were "Uncle Sam hats" made of cardboard with red Scotch tape stripes and a band of blue Scotch tape. The banquet was served by candle light. The following Sunday, the Baccalaureate address was given by their pastor, Bro. E. W. Reed.

The sudden sailing of the Jobsons for Africa necessitated what Bro. Kenneth Ashman calls an emergency ministry, during the first week of the victory revival which Bro. Jobson was scheduled to hold at Bro. Ashman's church in MUNDY'S CORNERS, PA. A profitable week is reported, with Bro. H. Walter Nowag of Listie filling the pulpit on Monday, Bro. A. L. Lynn of Johnstown on Tuesday; Rev. and Mrs. Mountain of Greensboro on Wednesday; Ruth Snyder, Zamzam survivor of Conemaugh on Thursday, and Bro. A. L. Lantz of Conemaugh on Friday. The meetings are being concluded by Bro. Leo Polman of Ft. Wayne, who began his two weeks of services on Sunday night. The following night, after a message on soul-winning, 25 public decisions were made: one first time confession, two rededications, and the others for soul-winning. A children's meeting is being held nightly in the basement a half hour before the regular service.

The First Brethren Church of WHITTIER, CALIF., has completed a new cement floor in the basement, and according to last report was remodeling the rooms back of the balcony. According to a recent check-up on the visitor's register, in three successive Sundays 70 visitors attended their services, representing 15 different denominations and 12 different out-of-town places.

During the evangelistic meetings conducted by Bro. R. Paul Miller of BUENA VISTA, VA., 63 decisions were made. Two more decisions were made in the mid-week prayer service following the meeting, at which 72 were in attendance.

The Union Bible Class which BRO. E. W. REED of Sunnyside, Wash., has been teaching during the winter months, has completed its year's course and has closed for summer vacation. The class has been taking the Scofield Course by correspondence from Moody Bible Institute.

Announcements

NATIONAL FELLOWSHIP CONFERENCE

The Executive Committee announces the conference of the National Fellowship of Brethren Churches to convene at Winona Lake, Ind., Aug. 31 to Sept. 6, 1942. The program is rapidly being arranged, and proves to be one of the best ever rendered. If there are organizations or individuals who wish to contact the Executive Committee at any time relative to the National Conference, you may do so by writing either to the Chairman or the Secretary, whose names appear at the close of this announcement.

The Manual of Procedure states, "It shall be the duty of this committee (executive) to make full and complete arrangements for the National Fellowship Conference." In accordance with this provision, the present Executive Committee is proceeding to arrange for the next national meeting of Brethren Churches.

Chairman, Charles H. Ashman
Secretary, L. L. Grubb

BRETHREN CIVILIAN SERVICE COMMITTEE

The Brethren Civilian Service Committee appointed at the last National Fellowship Conference has received many inquiries concerning what financial assistance The Brethren Church plans to give to those drafted into the C. O. Camps. In answer to these we say, "We have no plans for rendering any financial assistance, nor any such fund from which to draw such assistance." We do not favor the diverting of funds from the regular organizations and interests of our church to this purpose. We favor the government paying for the 40 or more hours per week the C. O. Camp members labor on government projects. However, inasmuch as the church authorities conducting these camps have seen fit to refuse such a plan, members of our church are thus placed in a position of embarrasement unless they are able themselves or through the gifts of relatives or friends, to care for their share of C. O. Camp expenses.

Therefore, we are announcing that if there are those who desire to assist any of our members in the camps by their gifts, such gifts may be sent to the secretary of our Brethren Civilian Service Committee. He in turn will transmit the same to the treasurer of the committee, and the entire committee will decide where it is most needed and apply it there.

A Chinese preacher, speaking of robbing God, used this illustration: "It came to pass that a man went to market with a string of seven coins. Seeing a beggar that asked for alms, he gave the poor man six of the coins and kept one for himself. The beggar, instead of being thankful, followed the good man and stole the seventh coin also. What an abominable wretch! Yes, and would you, to whom God has given six days, steal the seventh also?"—Christian Readers Digest.

SHOULD THE MISSIONARIES GO TODAY?

Why not? God is still on His throne; and when a child of God goes forth in His work, in His will, and in the path of duty, God has promised to go with Him. And if God goes forth with the missionaries, they need never fear the devil nor Hitler along the way. And if men and young men go forth today for their country, and they should, should the servants of Christ not be willing to go forth to win the souls for Christ, even those who have never heard of Christ before? And they are dying out there today. Yes, the missionaries should go, and God bless them as they go; and may God help this church and its members to help them as they go.—Uniontown, Pa., Bulletin.

THE DREAMER

"Your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions" (Joel 2,28).

Dreams are the seeing of visions,
The hearing of golden chimes;
Only a dreamer conquers,
Only a dreamer climbs.

A dream has the lift of a lever;
A dream has the power to drive;
They who have known no dreaming
Have never been alive.

Dare to dream through the lightning,
Though thunder bolts be hurled,
That God will snatch up His children
Out of a rocking world.

Dare to dream of a ploughshare
Beaten out of a sword;
Dare to dream of earth's rulers
Bowing before the Lord.

Dare to fight for your dreaming,
And dare to dream anew,
Knowing the God of dreamers
Will make your dreams come true!

Let Your Requests Be Made Known Unto God

(Phil. 4:6)

MRS. EDWARD D. BOWMAN, Buena Vista, Va.

1. Ps. 123:2. Pray for the four home mission churches that are ready to build, that permission may be obtained from the government to go ahead with the construction of their church buildings.

2. Luke 10:2. Pray that Brethren men and young men will be led to enter preparation for the ministry, in order that the great need for home mission pastors may be supplied.

3. Phil. 2:16-18. Pray for your own local pastor, that he may have wisdom to deal with local problems and a greater ministry for Christ in these last days.

4. 2 Cor. 6:2. Pray for the chaplains of the armed services, that they may lead many young soldiers to a saving knowledge of Christ.

5. Col. 2:6-7. Pray for the Christian young men who have been called to service, that they might maintain a true testimony for Christ in their camps.

TITHE YOUR TIRES AND GAS

"You perhaps are worrying about that automobile of yours, and wondering how you are going to get to church and to the denominational meetings which you have been attending. The problem is not a very difficult one.

"Go to your automobile dealer and ask him to give you a conservative estimate of the mileage in your tires, then reserve a minimum of one-tenth of that mileage for the Lord.

"If you have 10,000 miles left in your tires, you will, of course, have 1,000 miles for traveling to and from your church services, and to Bible conferences. It is the same principle as tithing your money.

"By giving the Lord one-tenth of your estimated mileage, you will very probably discover that the automobile man underestimated your tire service, and that the tire situation will be cleared up long before your present tires are worn out."

DO LIKEWISE WITH YOUR GASOLINE AND WE WILL SEE YOU AT WINONA, AUGUST 31 TO SEPTEMBER 6, 1942.

Trains and busses still run and will bring you quickly and economically.

STUDIES IN TH EPISTLE TO THE EPHESIANS—X

"THE GREATEST ROMANCE OF THE AGES, or THE CHURCH THE BRIDE OF CHRIST"

Ephesians 5: 22-33

HOMER A, KENT, Grace Theological Seminary

Chapter 5 continues the series of practical exhortations which characterizes the second section of Ephesians, namely, chap. 4-6. The walk of the church before the world is set forth in this entire section. In the latter part of chap. 5, which is the subject of this present study, the inspired writer boldly asserts that the Christian life should manifest itself in the home life of believers. Wives should be in subjection to their own husbands. They should recognize that the headship of the home is divinely given to the husband. In a well ordered home there must be a head. God has ordained that this headship should be vested in the husband. See 1 Cor. 11:3.

On the other hand, it is the duty of husbands to love their wives. And the nature of that love is "as Christ loved the church." There should be little difficulty on the part of wives submitting to the headship of husbands who love them as Christ loved and loves the church. This is no slavish submission. It is the submission of love and honor. The bride on her wedding day ought have no trouble with the phrase "to obey" in the marriage ceremony if the groom promises "to love" her like Christ loves the church. Marital difficulties will be erased when God's ideal for marriage is adhered to.

But we have not yet reached the heart of our message. Paul, in enforcing the sanctity of the marriage relations, refers to another relationship, namely, that between Christ and the church. Christ is pictured as the great heavenly Bridegroom and the church as His bride. This relationship we want to study briefly. Since we have been noting in these studies that the church is the theme of this epistle, we shall consider the relationship mostly from the standpoint of the bride. Note several things with reference to the bride that stand out in the passage before us.

The Wooing of the Bride

"Christ also loved the church, and gave Himself for it for this cause shall a man leave his father and mother, and shall be joined unto his wife, and they two shall be one flesh. This is a great mystery but I speak concerning Christ and the church" (vs. 25,31,32).

When a young man sets his heart upon a certain young woman, and thinks she would make a good wife for him, he attempts to court her and to win her love. If she responds to his attentions all is well, if not there are difficulties to be overcome. In the council of heaven it was decided that there should be a bride for the Son. It meant that the Lord Jesus Christ must come to earth to make preparations for the winning of this bride. Just how was it all done?

You will remember how a bride was provided for the first Adam. "The Lord caused a deep sleep to fall upon Adam and he slept; and He took one of his ribs, and closed up the flesh instead thereof; and with the rib, which the Lord God had taken from man, made He a woman, and brought her unto the man. And Adam said, This is now bone of my bones, and flesh of my flesh; she shall be called woman because she was taken out of man." (Gen. 2: 21-23). Likewise, at the close of His earthly ministry, a deep sleep fell upon Jesus, the sleep of death; and out of His wounded side, by reason of the atonement which He made on the cross, there came forth that from which the church was formed, and to which the Holy spirit gave life on the day of Pentecost.

Thus the bride began to be wooed at the cross. That wooing took definite form on the day of Pentecost. It is continuing to the present hour as the Spirit is abroad in the world calling out believers, prepare the bride for the day of Christ's coming to claim her as His own.

The Submission of the Bride (V. 24.)

"The church is subject unto Christ." The church is called to do the will of her Lord. It was said of Eve, who is a type of the church, that she was to be a helpmeet for Adam. The church is to be a helpmeet for Christ. She is called to evangelize the world, to be loyal to Him Who has bought her with His own precious blood.

The Oriental bride on the day of her wedding says, "I dedicate this heart to love none other but my husband, these hands to serve none but him, these eyes to look upon none other, these ears to hear nothing but his praises". A like loyalty should characterize the bride of Christ, the church, for her heavenly bridegroom, the Lord Jesus Christ. See also

The Beauty of the Bride (Vs. 26, 27).

How marvelously does the Spirit of God picture for us the beauty of Christ's bride! She is sanctified, separated from all others unto Himself. She is to be a glorious bride, without spot or wrinkle, or any such thing. She is to be without fault of any kind, holy and without blemish. Even now Christ sees those whom He has purchased with His own blood as though they had never sinned at all. What will they be when at last He presents them to Himself in the final phase of their salvation? Note next

The Identity of the Bride (V. 30).

"We are members of His body, of His flesh, and of His bones." Someone may ask, How is it possible for the church to be both the body and bride of Christ? We have the answer in the case of Eve, who before she became Adam's bride was a part of his own body. Then there is a oneness between husband and wife which is inseparable so that "he that loveth his wife, loveth himself". They being two are yet one flesh as v. 31 tells us. So it is with Christ and His bride. How vital then is our relationship to Christ! How inseparable! A part of His very body! Finally,

The Marriage of the Bride (V. 27).

"That He might present it to Himself a glorious church".

This has not taken place as yet. At the present

"Open Doors" - David Livingstone

"WHO BEING DEAD YET SPEAKETH"

By MRS. H. W. Koontz

Among the great in faith who are privileged to be counted in Heb. 11:4, no modern has a higher place than David Livingstone. As we analyze his life, using this verse as a measuring rod, we find that it falls under four heads: his early training in godliness, his explorations which opened the interior of Africa to the gospel, his evangelization of tribes in Africa, and his battles against the slave trade.

David Livingstone was born on Mar. 19, 1813, in Blantyre, Scotland. His parents were poor in worldly goods but rich in godly living. They taught their children to love the Word of God and to be thankful, thrifty, inured to hardship and dependable. When Livingstone was nine years old he earned a New Testament by repeating Ps. 119.

When he was 10, the poverty of the home forced him to find employment in a cotton mill . With money from his first week's wages he bought a Latin grammar, and studied it in snatched minutes as he worked. Later he attended night school though it caused him much hardship.

Sunday was a day set apart in the Livingstone home for church services, reading and meditation. David's Sunday School teacher taught him to make his religion a part of his daily life, and thus have power to overcome the temptations that came to him. When he was 11 years old he felt the need of salvation, but his feeling of unworthiness to accept so great a gift deterred him for several years. Finally he saw his error in waiting to be good enough to be saved, and joyfully accepted the Lord Jesus Christ as his Savior. The new life immediately changed him and he determined to spend his years for his Master. At first he had no thought of becoming a missionary but determined to support the missionary cause with all his earnings above his meagre wants. But he learned, through reading a missionary article by Gutslaff, of the millions who had never heard of Christ, and of the scarcity of qualified missionaries; and from that time his "efforts were constantly directed toward that object without any fluctuation."

Livingstone felt that he would be more useful as a medical missionary and so he set his heart upon an education. For six months he labored in the mill to earn money so that he might go to school the other six; and by untiring determination he completed both medical and theological studies, and was finally accepted by the London Missionary Society to be sent, as he thought, to China. However, the Opium War then raging closed the door to China, and he allowed himself to be sent to Africa.

We find Mr. Livingstone, then, at the time of his acceptance as a missionary to Africa, a strong young man with fine eyes; a slow, steady swinging way of walking; and a power of will that led him on resolutely and firmly. He found an Africa about which men knew little, and he reached it with a determination to push into the interior away from settled mission stations and to take the gospel to tribes not even known to white men.

When he went to his first mission station he took Mary Moffat, the daughter of a missionary, with him as his wife; and there his first child was born. Not long after he received a permanent injury from the attack of a lion.

Livingstone felt that if his dream of a Christianized Africa was to come true, the continent must be opened to travel. So he set out to find a way across Africa from west to east, having already traveled from south to west. Through almost insurmountable difficulties, problems and disappointments, along bush trails and over unopened country, he traveled with his native bearers and finally had the joy of reaching the east coast. On the way he discovered the Zambesi River falls and named them Victoria Falls. After this journey he went home for a furlough, anxious to see his wife and children, who had been some time in England.

His exact descriptions and scientific data pleased the British government. As a result it financed his return to Africa, expecting more contributions to commerce and science. He took a little steamer with him and used it to explore inland lakes. This time he discovered Lake Nyassa and found a high country where white men could live in health. When he returned to England this time, he sailed the steamer across the Indian Ocean in order that it might not fall into the hands of the slave traders. This was his last trip to England, for on his next great exploration trip he died. After being lost to civilization for two years he was found by Stanley, but refused to give up his journey. He was trying to find the source of the river Nile. By this time he was 60 years old, and worn with fevers and the exhaustion of fearful trips in blistering climates. He had traveled 29,000 miles in Africa, and was terribly tired and ill, but it never entered his mind to give up. One morning he was found at prayer by his faithful black boy, who soon discovered that he had gone to be with his Master.

"How Beautiful are the Feet of Them That Preach the Gospel--"

ANOTHER AFRICAN DAY—December 18

We arose at four. There is always the usual hurry and flurry in getting off, and this time a little more so. We were both busier because of Yasse's convocation by the government; and since he had to be there by 7:30 a.m., we really had to hurry. The notice had come too late for him to go otherwise than by car. It was one of the providential "all things" that we were going anyway. Preparation for the journey, lunch, water, chairs, etc., preparation for the twins, preparing their formula for the day, breakfast, private prayer consumed our time fully.

His body, taken to the coast by black boys, was placed on a steamer bound for England. It now lies in Westminster Abbey.

In all these journeys Livingstone took the gospel. He had a little magic lantern set, with which he showed pictures that told the plan of salvation in the tribes where he did not know the language; and his upright life and honest dealings and earnest Christian character gave testimony wherever he went. He was greatly loved by the black people and accepted in their villages as never white man had been before. He found sites for future mission stations, and furnished a never-dying challenge to others to press into the interior with the story of the gospel.

From the very first the slave trade horrified him, and he determined to do his part in stamping it out. His first experience with it was when he rescued a young girl who was about to be sold. Later he freed 18 blacks who were being taken to the coast to be sold. Wherever he went he saw the evidence of the trade in long lines of frightened men and women and in the bones of those who had died on the marches strewed along the trail. His reputation became so great that many times slave traders ran away when they saw him, and he was able to set the captives free.

All these wonderful accomplishments were done in spite of heart-breaking disappointments. He suffered rebuffs from those who did not believe that central Africa should be explored in order to evangelize it; the jealousy of some of his associates hurt him; the British government failed to see him through his expenses; his children were left in England, and his wife died, thus denying him human companionship. He suffered from hunger, thirst and dysentery. Time after time he nearly lost his life from accidents, wild animals and angry chiefs. He bore all these things because he lived so close to God. His Bible was his daily guide and his companionship with the Lord Jesus was continual.

"He believed that God Himself had called him to open Africa; and having opened it, he left it to others, under God's guidance, to take up the task where he laid it down."

We left about 6:45. We put Yasse off near the administration buildings and went on to our Bossangoa chapel. Guilibana was with us. At the chapel we took on gas, and Timothee Onouguili! We then went out on a road where neither of us had been before, the Peabody road. We tried going in the rainy season once or twice but were told it was flooded.

Our hearts were heavy, for we did not know what the call of our native pastor by the Bossangoa administrator might mean. We had conjectured this and that, but all the wrong thing. On the way, Andre told us that he had heard in Bossangoa that our native chief, Bara, was having him arrested for hindering the work!! Then our hearts were heavier than ever. Especially does dear Florence suffer at times like this. But we encouraged each other in the Lord.

We preached in eight villages on the Peaboy road. In one we found Joseph Farafe from Archambualt making a visit to friends. In all we interest, and even the slight degree of enlightenment was in marked contrast to the darkness on the Bambia road. We returned to the Bossangoa chapel for our simple lunch: sandwishes, tea, and fruit. Then we had prayer, reading part of I Peter and uniting in prayer for Yasse's deliverance. When our prayer was finished there came a knock at the door. The joyous news of Yasse's release!! How good is our God!! We had to wait until evening when we were going home to hear the story of how God used his simple defense and testimony for his release. God gave him power through the consciousness of his absolute innocence. Home! Everyone came running and shouting. "Yasse asene." Oh, the hand-shakes and joyous congratulations!

We had spent the afternoon in various ways at Bossangoa: revisions of a new song Onouguili has written, doing a bit of shopping, etc. Supper was almost ready when we reached home. There were duties to care for, workmen, twins. Then we had prayer again, did a little accounting, took care of several callers, bought a big fish! The mail came. Will you believe that I laid letters aside until I bathed and retired? Even so, for I had come to the end of my strength, and so had Florence. This morning we are up and at it again!

We are so very glad to know of the arrival of our dear missionaries at Bozoum the 16th.

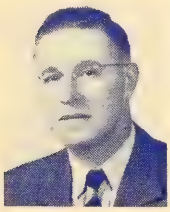
What Have You Done?

NOTE: June, July and August are the months in which we want our women to "talk" home missions. Our home missions secretary, Bro. R. Paul Miller presents a challenging message for our consideration this month. This is our last major offering, so let's get busy on it.



WHAT HOME MISSIONS MEANS TO ALL OF US

R. PAUL MILLER, Sec. of the Home Missions Council

It Fulfills the Great Command of Christ.

"But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto me, both in Jerusalem, and in all Judaea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth" (Acts 1:8).

Home missions is by very nature truly evangelism. This is the very essense of the life of the Christian faith. We must evangelize or we will fossilize. The congregation or the denomination that is not busy winning souls will soon be led aside into worldliness or denial of faith once and for all delivered unto the saints. Home missions is not merely the building of church structures. This is only a result. The real spirit of home missions is carrying the gospel to new communities.

Rev. Miller

Any church people who have no passion for home missions will soon cease to have a passion for foreign missions. Any foreign mission program that has to depend upon a people who have no passion for home missions is like dipping water out of a cistern. It will soon go dry.

But when you depend upon churches that have a passion for home missions, for the saving of men right in America, it is like dipping water from a flowing river whose supply is never exhausted, but always grows greater.

We must put first things first. Jesus put home missions first in Acts 1:8. They must come first. Our Lord very well knew that the gospel would never be carried to the "uttermost parts of the earth" unless Jerusalem, Judaea and Samaria were evangelizd first of all. We must reach men for Christ right here in America as never before, or we are due to lose all.

Home Missions Keeps the Christian Pure.

No one can be a successful soul winner unless his life is clean. It will make the pastor's work much easier in keeping his people separated from the world. Since the very spirit of home missions is essentially winning souls for Christ, it necessarily demands that the congregation live individual lives of purity and separation from the world in order to succeed. The pastor who has a congregation with a passion for reaching lost men for Christ need never fear of finding his members in the movies, the dance, the tavern, or at the card table. The experience of soul-winning breeds the desire in the heart of the soul-winner to be an example of what he is urging others to embrace.

A Passion for Home Missions Keeps the Congregation Free From Internal Strife.

Today the church is suffering from a low state of spirituality. Self-seeking, jealousy, criticism, and lack of confidence pervades Christian work as never before.

It is said of the huskies that draw the heavy loads over the frozen wastes of the north, that so long as they are kept in the harness at their task, that they are very valuable; but just as soon as they are allowed to be idle for a few hours, they start fighting each other and they will actually kill each other if they are not stopped. This is a true illustration of Christians. If they are not kept busy seeking others for Christ, they begin to turn on each other in criticism and jealous ambition. Instead of seeking souls, they begin to seek certain places of honor and service within the church, itself. They will start electioneering and pulling strings in order to get certain positions and offices within the congregation. What a pitiful picture this is, and yet how true it is. View the Christian church with a world of sinners dying on its doorsteps, wholly concerned with the jealousies, contentions and ambitions for little jobs and favors within the church itself. But all this is done away in the church that is stirred to a passion for reaching other people and communities for Christ. A people on fire with the responsibility before God for saving souls have no time for such things. In fact, the soul-winner is so absorbed in the glorious work of bringing souls to Christ that a mere office in a church seems small to him. You can rest assured that those who seek places for themselves in the church are not concerned for lost souls.

The Passion for Home Missions Makes a People Spiritual.

The very nature of soul-winning puts the soul winner to such a sense of helplessness that he is driven to prayer. This, then, casts the entire congregation upon God in utter dependence. This accomplishes the ideal: a congregation that is gripped with a passion for lost souls, not only in America but in the whole world: a congregation that is separated from the world and free from its spots; a congregation that is free from strife and jealousy, but full of love and confidence in each other; a congregation devoted to a life of prayer. This is truly the ideal congregation.

The preacher who neglects or ignores home missions as a passion, as a first concern, is casting aside the one occupation of his ministry that not only will save him a lot of heartaches and disappointments, but which would make his ministry fruitful in the way that God designed it.

Home missions kindles the fires that burn in America, Africa, South America and in every good work for Christ.

SUGGESTIONS FOR YOUR MEETING ON AFRICA

Since our topic, "Christ, the Hope of Africa," has not been received, we are suggesting a quiz for your meeting on Africa. These questions have been selected from a list of questions published by the Foreign Missionary Society in The Brethren Evangelist, May 6 and Aug. 19, 1939. Our object in planning such a meeting is to learn some facts about our African work, so we suggest that you have the girls study the questions before the meeting, and have a contest. You may want to give more complete answers than we have given, and then you may add other questions, too, if you wish. We would also suggest that you assign to each girl in your group the name of one of our African missionaries, and ask her to bring in one or two facts about that missionary. Also, don't forget to spend time in prayer for our missionaries, the native workers, and our missionaries who are here in America.

"LAST CALL ! ! ! "

This is your last chance to check your goals for this year. Remember, too, that your regular Sisterhood offering and your dime calendars should be sent to the financial secretary by July 31!

What ARE WE DOING?

MUNDYS CORNER, PA.

Greetings from the Senior S.M.M. Society of Pike Brethren Church at Mundy's Corner.

We have been reading the letters from other societies and would like to tell about our work for the past year.

We have 17 members. At the present time we are working on scrapbooks for shut-ins along with our scrapbook for our national goal. We have divided our groups in two, each group working on a different book, one for grown-ups, and one for youngsters. We send birthday cards to members on their birthdays, and then put the cards in our scrapbooks.

Our society meets the third Tuesday of every month at the home of one of our members. We have a program, then we are served a lunch, and the rest of the time we can work on our scrapbooks.

On Tues., May 12, at 6:30 p.m., we had our mother and daughter banquet, with all four societies represented—the Women's Missionary Council, the Junior Council, Senior S.M.M. and Junior S.M.M. There were 81 present. We had as our guest speaker Miss Ruth Snyder, the Zamzam missionary. As a token of appreciation we gave her a hand made name quilt.

We want to praise the Lord for all the blessings he has given us in these trying times. Pray for our church and all its organizations, that we may influence more of our young people to do the will of the Lord.

Yours in His Service,
Publicity Editor, Deane La Rue Kerr.

Junior News!

Dear Aunt Mabel and Sisterhood Girls:

Since we last wrote to you, our Junior Sisterhood Society has grown to a membership of 30. We are happy to be working for our Lord and Master each day.

We bought crosses at Easter, and sent them to Kentucky, with the box of clothing, cards, and Sunday School material which we gathered from our girls.

For our mission book, we are reading, "A Little Girl's Four Years in Africa" and "A Missionary Penny and How It Brought a Baby". Instead of each girl reading the book, we read a portion at each meeting We have just finished, "A Little Girl's Four Years in Africa." This book contains letters from Marguerite Gribble when she was in Africa with her mother and father in 1918. We enjoyed this book very much.

We have completed our Bible reading, with over half of our girls having completed the whole Bible reading.

We are filling our dime calendars with our birthday money. Each girl brings her birthday offering when she has a birthday, and we put the money in the dime calendars. Several of our girls have their own dime calendars.

At our last meeting, Miss Blough, our assistant patroness, gave a talk on the Covenant Cards, after which each girl signed the Sisterhood Covenant Cards. We also have our own Sisterhood programs, where we can keep our Covenant Cards ever before us, and try to do just what it says.

Each one of us is collecting material for our scrapbook. Soon we are going to have a meeting and finish our scrapbook.

Pray for us that we might live close to our Lord and Savior and let our lights shine for Him, wherever we may be.

Yours because of Calvary.

Bible Study

By FLO MELLICK

REVELATION—PART I

If we are Christ's servants (v. 1), this is our book. It is a revelation of our own Lord Jesus Christ. It is an open book (22:10, cf. Dan. 8:26; 12:8, 9), open for our understanding. The signs and symbols, if not found elsewhere in the Bible, are immediately explained to us (1:20). There is a blessing in store for us if we read and study this book (Rev. 1:3).

Who wrote this great book? Where was he when he wrote it? Why? How does he describe himself? To whom is the book specifically addressed?

Notice the interesting picture of our Lord in 1:5-6. V. 7 is a picture of our coming Lord. Can you find other descriptive passages that show the effect of His coming upon those who shall behold Him?

Revelation is divided into three parts (1:19): "Write (1) the things which thou hast seen (1:10-20), (2) the things which are (chaps. 2-3), (3) the things which shall be after these things (chaps. 4-22)."

"The things" in part one which John saw was the Lord, Himself, in all His glory, revealed as the Lord of the churches. (After studying this passage, turn and read again John 19 and Isa. 52, remembering it was for you!).

In studying this passage an American Revised Version and a Scofield Bible will help a lot.

"I was in the Spirit" (of Rev. 4:2, 17:3, Ezk. 11:1, II Cor. 12:1-5). "The Lord's Day," cf. the O. T. "day of Jehovah". Alpha and Omega in the Greek alphabet correspond to our own "A and Z". "Seven" is the number of completeness. "Golden" suggests preciousness. "Candlesticks," the churches, are to hold light (cf. Matt. 5:14, 15).

Not only is the Son of God in the midst of the churches, but He is eternally the Son of Man. His clothing denotes royalty and dignity. Cf. Dan. 7:9; Isa. 1:18; Prov. 16:31 with the description of the glorious whiteness of His hair. "Fire" and "furnace" suggest discriminating judgment. (Cf. I Cor. 3:13, Mal. 2-3; Isa. 63:3). His voice was as the sound of many waters (Ezk. 43:2), blessed as soothing streams to the Christians, but terrible as the roaring flood to the lost (Isa. 42:13). Cf. Heb. 4:12; Rev. 2:16; John 12:48 with v. 16 in regard to the two-edged sword. "His right hand" suggests that the messengers (v. 20) are held in the hand of protection. With the description of His glorious countenance cf. Matt. 17:2 and Acts 26:13.

When John saw our Lord, he fell as dead, then the Lord's words were reassuring and revealing. He is the great I am. "Beloved—we know that, when He shall appear, we shall be like Him; for we shall see Him as He is. And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as He is pure". Girls our most glorious outlook is the up-look!

Radio Messages from Brethren Broadcasts

SIGNS OF THE TIMES IN THE NATIONS!

By L. L. GRUBB, pastor, Hagerstown, Md.

Continuing our series of messages on the signs of the times, this being the third and last, we turn to a consideration of three general signs among the nations!

The Attitude of the Nations Toward the Government

In the attitude of the nations toward government, we find a strong indication of the imminence of Christ's return. The holy, prophetic Word informs us that the last great ruler before the millennial reign of Christ will be a world dictator! Describing the rule of this coming Antichrist, Rev. 13:7 says,

"And it was given unto him (i.e. the Antichrist) to make war with the saints, and to overcome them: and power was given him over all kindreds, and tongues, and nations."

Taken literally, this statement can only mean that no corner of the earth will escape the direct rule and scrutiny of this Man of Sin!

Carefully evaluating the ever-changing governments of this world, the clear thinker must be driven to the conclusion that practically all are either dictatorships already or possess a strong tendency in this direction! Even the widely heralded democracy of the American government is tending strongly toward a greater centralization of power in the hands of one man! Government experts are agreed in the main that the iron ruling hand of one man would go far toward solving the multiplying problems of a dying world. Thus the tendency of world government today is increasingly toward the totalitarian state!

Keeping this tendency in mind, we find a sign of amazing prophetic significance in the fact that this world dictator will arise immediately after the rapture of the church. At this very moment the stage of world government is appropriately set to receive its star actor! But the coming of Christ for His people must precede all of this (II Thess. 2:3-8). No born-again man will ever languish under the cruel and tyrannical rule of Antichrist. for all will be raptured safely into the presence of Jesus Christ before He is revealed! Thus the very attitude of the nations toward government must convince the open-minded individual of the imminency of Christ's return!

The Attitude of the Nations Toward National Boundaries.

In the attitude of the nations toward national boundaries, we find another of God's great prophetic fingers! In interpreting the dream of that magnificent Babylonian monarch. King Nebuchadnezzar, Daniel. the prophet, in 2:36-44 outlines fully the course of Gentile world power. Four great world empires fill its entire scope: Babylon, Medo-Persia, Greece and Rome! All of these have come and receded, but the last or Roman Empire is to be revived in the end of time. and will form the basis of the world rule of Antichrist!

Since the fall of the first stage of the Roman Empire under Augustus. the history of national boundaries has been a checkered one. Kings and nations have made conquests and lost them. Such enterprising militarists as Napoleon and Hitler have tried to rear world empires outside the plan of Almighty God! The one has miserably failed and the other will inevitably meet his Waterloo, we hope, soon! It is assuring to know that no matter who sits in the earthly ruler's chair God is still on the throne of the world; and as the puppeteer maneuvers his puppets, so is God maneuvering the unsuspecting nations and rulers of the world to work out to a consumation His eternal plan. Some prophetic Bible students have noted with dismay the apparent subjugation of Mussolini as an underlord of Hitler, remembering that the man with the iron jaw has repeatedly avowed his intention to revive the old Roman Empire! Must God depend on Mussolini to revive the Roman Empire? Must He even depend upon the nation of Italy to do it? One would have a difficult time proving an affirmative answer to these questions! A single major change in the current world lineup of nations and boundaries might overnight print a complete picture of the revived Roman Empire upon the globe! Time not permitting a full discussion of this subject, what we must see is that the present world chaos and the general attitude of European nations toward national boundaries provide ample bases for the immediate revival of the Roman Empire! All are forerunners of and are setting the stage for the Antichrist who will complete the task.

Thus our Biblical prophetic reasoning is again complete; for before he appears and the empire is revived, another must appear for His Bride—the rapture of the saints must take place!

The Attitude of the Nations Toward the Rights of Others.

The last significant sign we see among the nations is in their attitude toward the rights of others! The prophetic words of Christ in Matt. 24:6, 7 are,

"And ye shall hear of wars and rumors of wars: . . . For nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom."

What is war but an encroachment upon the rights of others? No nation has lacked in some degree of guilt in this! The last days just preceding the coming of Christ will see a great intensification of this scourge across the face of the earth.

Since men first learned to fight and murder one another. wars have continually increased in intensity. until today we are admittedly engulfed in the heat of the greatest military disaster of all history. World War I took a toll of approximately 37,000,000 lives directly and cost about $200,000,000,000! The suffering and anguish that came as a direct result were incalculable! World War II has already made the other look like a back-alley snowball fight! Fatalities are certain to run to a tremendous figure before the march of bloodthirsty dictators is stopped. In our own country alone war appropriations have reached the staggering figure of $32.000.000,000 already in the first few months of the war! The cruelties and atrocities of modern warfare were not in many respects known even to the medieval warrior who was not supposed to be "highly civilized." The sky is the limit in armament figures! Even Hitler himself was surprised at the future figures of American military might! The prophet Joel throws out God's challenge in preparation for the great war of Armageddon,

"Prepare war, wake up the mighty men, let all the men of war draw near; let them come up; beat your plowshares into swords and your pruninghooks into spears: let the weak say I am strong."

Thus we are faced with a double sign of Christ's imminent return in the greatest intensification of wars the world has ever known, and in at least what appears to be the beginning of the preparation for the war that will end war at Armageddon! This war will not be fought until approximately seven years after the rapture of the church! Need more be said to impress upon the mind of the wide-awake individual the immediate importance of preparing to meet the coming Savior? Every sign of the times cries aloud for the immediate return of the Lord of glory! Are you ready to meet Him? He has graciously provided a plan for your salvation through His death and shed blood on Calvary. By simply believing by faith in that blessed name tonight, you can be saved for eternity and avoid the hot wrath of the Judge of all the earth! Make your decision now!

STUDIES IN THE EPHESIANS

time the church is as a virgin espoused unto Christ (2 Cor. 11:2). She is engaged to Him. She wears the ring that assures her there will be a wedding day by and by. In Christ's day an engagement was almost as sacred as a marriage and must not be violated. And so the church today, during her engagement period, has solemn obligations to be loyal and true to her betrothed.

One day the heavenly Bridegroom will come forth with all His attendants to call for His bride. Then He will "present it (her) to Himself a glorious church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing," and the marriage of the Lamb will take place. We know not when the Bridegroom cometh. Therefore let us be adorning ourselves with the graces of the Spirit, so that we shall be ready for Him when He comes. Then will be consummated the greatest romance of the ages.

Is it Fair?

A brief questionaire, sent out to thousands of people in one large city, asked: (1) Do you attend church? (2) Do you advocate abolishing the Church?

3,000 people answered "no" to the first question. Not a single person of the 3,000 non-church-goers favored abolishing the church!

Show me a place on earth 10 miles square where a man may live in decency, comfort and security, supporting and educating his children, where women are safe and infancy is respected—and I will show you a place where the Gospel has gone before and laid the foundation.

Is it fair to accept all the by-products of Christianity without supporting the church?

We recognize our obligations to everything else. Why not the church? We serve our employers, pay our bills, etc. Is it fair to make our churches suffer because they, unlike other institutions, do not compel our service or our payment for value received?

NEWS BRIEFS From Our Workers

Rev. Kennth Ashman tendered his resignation as pastor of The Pike Brethren Church MUNDY'S CORNER, PA., Sunday, May 31st. Resignation to take effect as soon as a successor can be secured for this work. Rev. Ashman has been pastor of this church since August 1937. He has accepted a call to the MAIN STREET BRETHREN CHURCH, Meyersdale, Pa., filling the vacancy left by Rev. Orville Lorenz who has enlisted in the Chaplain service of the Army.

MUNDY'S CORNER, PA.—Pike Brethren Church will hold its semi-annual communion service Sunday night, June 21st, 7 P.M.

REV. AND MRS. LEO POLMAN were guests at the Brotherhood of Alexander Mack First Brethren Church, Johnstown, Pa., Rev. Archie Lynn, pastor. Rev. Polman spoke briefly on Brethren Publications challenging the men to undertake a more vital and earnest effort in this ministry of the printed gape. The men took an offering for publications and assured the speaker that they would do their part in promoting this missionary work through publications.

From the bulletin of the First Brethren Church of LOS ANGELES, we learn that in the construction of their new building they have had many problems but no delays. All materials needed have come in when the time has come to use them. Almost every week a gift of money has come in from someone who is not a member of the church. Recently a $15 check was received from a family none of the members of the church have ever met, which family expects to place its membership in the First Church and work with them in the new building.

Bro. Earle Peer of the CLEVELAND, O., church writes, "We had a wonderful service last evening (May 31). The Lord blessed in a wonderful way. I think eight or ten young people and two adults confessed that they had been living too close to the world and wanted to live closer to the Lord. Pray for us here that we might reach souls for Christ in our community. We expect to have Dr. Kelford here for a revival in July."

Two record-breakers are reported in two churches' respective bulletins which have come to our desk this week. One was a prayer meeting attendance of 75 at the PERU, IND. church, and the other an attendance of 138 at the last communion service at the Bethel Brethren Church of BERNE, IND. The Berne church is holding Summer Bible School for a whole month this year, and is providing transportation for children living in the country.

Bro. Leo Polman writes during his last week of meetings at MUNDY'S CORNERS, PA., "Meetings good. Have had seven first confessions, four for church membership, and about 12 in rededication."

From the First Brethren Church of SUNNYSIDE, WASH., we learn that the congregation has been greatly enjoying a Bible Conference with Dr. V. C. Kelford.

The war is being brought very close to some of our churches. We have been informed that Bro. A. L. Lynn, pastor of the First Brethren Church of JOHNSTOWN, PA., has asked for an offering of $75 which is needed to purchase first aid and defense equipment for the church. Johnstown has large steel mills, coal mines, and vital railroads.

GARWIN, IA.—Revival conducted June 7-21 by Bro. R. H. Kettell of North English, Ia.

News from Brethren CHURCHES

CARLTON BRETHREN CHURCH, Garwin, Ia.

God richly blessed us here on the first day of the week. At the close of the service, one precious blood-bought soul came forward at the giving of the invitation. He was 61 years of age.

At our business meeting held May 12, we planned on painting the parsonage and repairing the furnace. The present pastor was given a unanimous call for another year with a substantial increase in salary. This will make the 6th year as pastor.

We are planning on having a revival the 2d and 3d week of June with Rev. R. H. Kettell of North English, Ia., as evangelist. Please remember us at the throne of grace, that Christ may be exalted, God honored, souls won for Him, and saints brought closer.

Three days, Friday, Saturday and Sunday, a young people's rally was held in the Grace Brethren Church, with Bro. Kettell of North English, Bro. Beal of Waterloo, Rev. Don Moffett, missionary from China, and the writer, as speakers. The attendance was good. The banquet was held in the basement of the church Friday evening with Rev. Moffet as speaker. On the first day of the week, the morning service was blessed of God. Bro. Beal brought the message, at the close of which 15 made their renewal vows and there was one first time decision. The next rally is being planned, and if the war does not interfere, it will be held in the Dallas Center church the last week in June. Please pray for this rally.

GRACE BRETHREN CHURCH, Vinco, Pa.

The Grace Brethren Church just completed one of its most successful evangelistic campaign. Rev. Wm. A. Stefler, pastor of the Third Brethren Church of Philadelphia, served as the evangelist for the two-week period. Bro. Steffler proved himself worthy of his vocation. The services were well attended. We were encouraged by delegations from the Pike Church, Conemaugh, Leamersville, Uniontown, and representatives from the Young Peoples C. E. and the Brotherhood of Alexander Mack of the First Brethren Church in Johnstown.

The membership of the Grace Brethren Church was not only strengthened but increased by 12. In all, the visible results of the meeting were: ten first time confessions, three applications for church membership, and eight reaffirmations of faith. The present membership of our church stands at 112.

It was my happy privilege to receive into our church a very fine family consisting of the parents and their two daughters. I had the privilege of baptizing them on Sunday afternoon and receiving them into the church on Monday evening. I had never before had the experience of receiving a whole family in this manner at one time.

As we pen this news report, we are making preparations to have May 24 as Missionary Day in our church. We will have Rev. and Mrs. Garner E. Hoyt with us in the morning service. We are showing the last two sets of slides of the African Mission work at the evening service. We have enjoyed the other three sets. Our offering for foreign missions, though not large, marks an increase of more than double that of last year's offering. We consider this a real victory for the Lord in this field.

The Lord willing, we shall soon complete our seventh year of labor for the Lord in this field. We believe that there are great possibilities for the Lord here, should the Lord tarry. These seven years of service here have had their heartaches and disappointments, but the Lord has seen fit to bless our feeble efforts to His eternal glory. There have been many wonderful blessings and seasons of refreshing. For all these, we thank Him abundantly.

We wish to thank the Third Brethren Church of Philadelphia for "loaning" us their splendid pastor for these two weeks. He was a congenial yoke-fellow. The fellowship between pastor and evangelist could not have been sweeter. We continue to thank the Lord for sending Bro. Steffler to us.

We shall appreciate an interest in your prayers that the Lord's will may be done to His eternal glory in this field.

Yours in Him, 'till He come,

Rev. Ord Gehman

FIRST BRETHREN CHURCH, Rittman, Ohio

Greetings in the name of our Lord! We have not written to the Herald family for some time. The Lord has not been inactive in our midst; and of course, where the grace of God manifests itself in operation, you may be sure the devil also is on the job sowing his seeds. But we have much to be thankful for when we recount the Lord's deeds among us. In glancing over my personal records the other day I noted the following facts. They are a proof of the operation of the grace of God. They cover a period of a year and a half:

Tracts distributed personally	700
Number of calls recorded	402
Number hearing plan of salvation	72
Number of confessions in homes	19
Number of public confessions	67
Dedications of life and service	17
Baptisms and entrance into membership	22

There were many reconsecrations; of these I made no record. The large gap between the number of confessions and the number of baptisms is partially explained in the fact that 27 confessions were made in Vacation Bible School last year, most of these being from other churches. There are several awaiting baptism.

The young boys of the church have distributed approximately 5000 tracts and pamphlets. Other members have also passed out other thousands. The High School C.E. and Gospel Team have been active in the Haven of Rest Mission at Akron. We have had several outside speakers, including Rev. Zimmerman of Los Angeles, the Skinners and Karl Steele the artist, speakers from the Cleveland Hebrew Mission, and the America Back to God quartet. We have noticed and been pleased with the fine growth in grace of some of the newer members of the church. Brethren pray for us.

Since I have recently resigned the work here, any pastor wishing to get in touch with the Rittman congregation should write either me or Bro. Fred Blatter, Rittman, O.

Yours in jubilation over the riches of His grace,

Arthur Carey

MODESTO, CALIF.

Greetings to the Brethren in the name of our blessed Lord. Maybe you would like to hear from the church in Modesto. It has been some time since we sent in a report, so will tell you how the Lord has been blessing us up here in Central California.

We have enjoyed the ministry of several of our Brethren since our last report. Bro. Jobson was with us for a Sunday night, and we surely enjoyed his message and also his presence in our home. The next mountain top experience was with Bro. and Sister Robert Williams (Bob and Lenore to us). Their messages were thrilling, and our people were so glad to hear the personal experience of these servants of God. Then God gave us another real blessing when He sent Bro. Sheldon to us at Easter time. He was with us for two services, and our souls were blessed as we heard of the work in Africa. Then the Polman family gave us three nights, and how we enjoyed them in the church and in the home. Last but not least, our own dear Bro. Paul Miller was with us for one week. So you see we have not been neglected.

God has wonderfully blessed during the year just past. Our membership has more than doubled. Our home missionary offering was $400, and our foreign offering is just about the same. We have purchased the lot for our new building, and will begin our building as soon as we receive an O.K. from Washington. (We expect to be in our new church this fall.) So we are very happy in the work here.

We are just one big, happy family here in Modesto, and how we praise God for the sweet spirit of unity that exists among the members. There has been no outstanding growth, but God is adding to the church such as are being saved.

Ralph Rambo, pastor

REVIVAL AT BUENA VISTA BRETHREN CHURCH

We thank the Lord for His faithfulness in bringing a great revival in the church of Buena Vista. The evangelistic meetings began Tues., May 5 and closed on Sun., May 17. Bro. R. Paul Miller was the evangelist. Bro. Miller delivered powerful and heart-searching messages.

Much prayer went up to the Lord in behalf of these meetings. Consequently the Lord poured out upon us an abundance of His Spirit. During the two weeks there were 63 decisions for Christ. Many of these were backsliders who came confessing their sin, and with tears of repentance desired to renew their fellowship with the Lord. A man and his wife of middle age, who had been out of fellowship for 15 years, came to renew themselves. Now they are happy in the Lord and in His work. There are many others rejoicing because of having been restored in the Lord.

The Lord has abundantly blessed the Buena Vista Brethren Church. At present this church is in better spiritual and financial condition than it has been at any previous time. Many of our good members are cooperating 100% with the pastor, and the work is pushing ahead. This evangelistic meeting with Bro. Miller has greatly encouraged our people. We believe there will be a number of souls reached for Christ as a result of this revival.

The pastor and his wife enjoyed a good time of Christian fellowship with Bro. Miller in our home while he was here. We are vegetarians and so is Bro. Miller (as you have already learned), so we had a good time together.

Brethren, pray for us as we labor in this field.

Edward Bowman, pastor

REAL REVIVAL AT FORT WAYNE

Beginning May 5 and closing May 17, the Fort Wayne church had the privilege of experiencing a real revival under the leadership of Evangelist Michael "Mickey" Walsh of Philadelphia, Pa. Never in our ministry have we heard such plain, challenging, sensible Bible evangelism. For months we had been praying for a real revival in our midst. We had hoped that the Lord would use these meetings to stir up the indifferent ones who have been attending little or none of the services and bring in many unsaved. But such was not the case. From the first night Bro. Walsh brought straight, practical messages to those of us who are regular, showing us our responsibility in Christian living and witnessing. For most of the two weeks he brought this type of message and left the church with many folks really stirred to do a good job of witnessing for the Lord. There were no public decisions in the entire two weeks of meeting. If Bro. Walsh had asked for it, there is little question but that he could have had half or two-thirds of the congregation "down front," but this was not his method. He was used of God to stir those who know and love the Lord to go out and really do personal work with those they contact. We believe that the next six months, and in fact the next six years, will be showing the results of these services if the Lord does not come in this time. In the two Sundays since the meetings closed there have been decisions, one first time, one definite rededication of life. We believe there are going to be many more in the summer months, because the believers in this place are witnessing for the Lord as never before. Pray for the work here and pray for the ministry of Bro. Walsh as he goes from place to place.

PROMOTED TO GLORY

DOAN, DANIEL T., 52 years old, passed away at Mercy Hospital, Hamilton, O., Sun., May 24. Just when we felt he was getting along fine, he suddenly went home to be with the Lord. This has been a tremendous shock to our church, for Bro. Doan was one of those men that we could depend on. He had been a member of the Brethren Church for about three years and was a member of our official board. We miss him, but heaven is richer by his going.

His funeral was conducted by Rev. S. Lowman, his pastor, and Rev. Brown of the M. E. Church. This service was one of the largest gatherings ever to assemble in our local church.

Russian Events and Prophecy

By LOUIS S. BAUMAN, D.D.

Russia has come boldly into the picture since Dr. Bauman's "Light On Bible Prophecy" started on its meteoric career, in which many thousands of copies have been published. Following the same line in his treatment of Russia, Dr. Bauman, according to his own words, "sticks to the Word of God, no matter though its prophecies may at the time seem to man impossible of fulfillment." In his new study he answers such questions as: In the prophecy of Ezekiel is Russia the nation in view? If so, who are the allies? Is the great northern conference now in formation? He also treats such subjects as Gog and Magog Prepared for Battle, The Cause of the Conflict, Forces God will Use to Overthrow Gog, Gog's Doom, The Bonepile in Palestine, The End of Communism, etc. A book every Christian should read and ponder today.

The book will soon be off the press, and all orders will be filled immediately. Due to increased costs of paper and production, the publisher has notified us that it has been necessary to advance the price to $1.25. SENDING A DELEGATE

One of the most beautiful sights is a whole family attending services in the house of the Lord. The church's services are not a convention, that a family should merely send a delegate. We need more of the whole families of the church to fight the good fight of faith, to carry on the Lord's work in a greater way. —Peru, Ind., Church Bulletin.

Herald Mowsell

IS THIS SATAN'S TRIUMPH?—

Dr. Chaim Weizman, president of World Zionism at a Zionistic Conference in New York City on May 8, declared that one-fourth of the European Jews will be destroyed during this present warfare. He declares that the rest of the Jews of Europe will be so uprooted that they will likely be unable to regain their ability to earn a living in the countries of Europe, after the war is over.

This seems to be a sad picture indeed, for it spells endless suffering and misery for Israel. However, we wonder if it is all bad news after all. Could this be but the breaking of the ties and of the attachments that they have had so long in European countries, to make their eyes to long for Canaan? Will this be God's way of making the wrath of men to praise Him? Will this be God's way of bringing them back into their homeland in spite of their own desires? Could this be the fulfilling of Jeremiah's word?

"Therefore, behold the day is come, saith the Lord, that it shall no more be said, the Lord liveth, that brought up the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt; but, The Lord liveth, that brought up the children of Israel from the land of the north, and from all the lands whether he had driven them: and I will bring them again into their land that I gave unto their fathers. Behold, I will send for many fishers, saith the Lord, and they shall fish them; and after will I send for many hunters, and they shall hunt them from every mountain, and from every hill, and out of the holes of the rocks." (Jer. 16:14-16).

It is refreshing to read that Dr. Weizman, himself, is looking to Palestine as the answer and solution for this problem of Israel, for he now admits that the land can support twice the present population, which is 1,500,000. It has so long been an objection that the land could not support the people that are supposed to return. Under the pressure of needs, ideas are changing, and it begins to look now like Palestine is going to be able, in the eyes of men who have previously doubted it, to support the people that God wants to return.

How soon may come the real trek of Israel back to their homeland to suffer and to wait for their soon coming Messiah!

"And I will pour upon the house of David, and upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem, the spirit of grace and of supplications; and they shall look upon me whom they have pierced, and they shall mourn for him, as one mourneth for his only son, and shall be in bitterness for him, as one that is in bitterness for his firstborn. In that day shall there be a great mourning in Jerusalem, as the mourning of Hadadrimmon in the valley of Megiddon." (Zech. 12:10-11).

"And one shall say unto him, What are these wounds in thine hands? Then he shall answer, Those with which I was wounded in the house of my friends." (Zech. 13:6).

What wonderful days God is allowing us to live in, where we can see the fulfilment of the things which Zechariah and the prophets saw. We are living now in the day of the fulfiling of His Word. His Word shall never fail. "Blessed is the man that putteth his trust in Him."

PREACHING THAT PLEASES GOD—

A preacher, whom we know quite well, was called as pastor to a church that was what might be called a religious organization. They resorted to suppers, ice cream festivals, sales of various kinds, and bazaars, to raise the money necessary to keep the church going. The members were generally worldly, with theatre going, dancing, cards, and other forms of worldliness, being habitual in the life of the congregation. Sunday morning service was fairly well attended. The Sunday evening service was very poor, and prayer meeting almost nothing.

The new pastor was called because he was young, energetic and a good speaker. The official board did not realize the difference in the emphasis of his ministry from what they had been getting. As soon as he arrived he began to preach separation from the world. He condemned sin in every form. He did not hesitate to name it. He sallied a spade a spade. He talked plainly of God's way of raising funds to support the church. He began to insist that officials of the church set the example to the congregation by attending prayer meeting.

It was little wonder that in a few months a veritable upheaval occurred in that church. The worldly officials said that the new pastor would have to stop "abusing" them or they would leave. Some well meaning members tried to get a movement on foot to remove the pastor, feeling that anything would be better than losing some of the "leading" members of the church. Nothing succeeded against him. Suddenly a large group of worldly folks asked for their letters and got them. It made quite a hole in the membership.

Then the church enjoyed peace. It began to have a testimony. Souls began coming to Christ. The prayer meetings filled up. Young people began to yield their lives to preach the gospel. Offerings for every cause doubled and trebled. Today that congregation is bigger than ever and it is a credit to the name of Christ.

That is the kind of preaching that glorifies and pleases God. And the preacher says that he has been having the time of his life preaching the gospel; God help every Brethren preacher to so preach Christ and hew to the line, that the worldly crowd will either get converted or get out.

"Preach the word; be instant in season and out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with all long suffering, and doctrine. For

Two School Busses Wanted

WANTED—Two used school busses at once. The Council has been asked by several pastors for used school busses for Sunday School work. They are greatly needed for our growing churches. We have the cash to pay for them. We have used every means that we know of to obtain more busses this year. Perhaps some of our people know of good used busses that may be obtained. If so, write us at once.

—R. PAUL MILLER, Berne, Ind.

the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers having itching ears; And they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables. But watch thou in all things, endure afflictions, do the work of an evangelist, make full proof of thy ministry." (II Tim. 4:2-5).

HOW CAN AMERICA EXPECT GOD TO BLESS HER CAUSE?—

It is most noticeable the way our public men are so frequently making reference to God in their radio and other addresses, and in the way they are appealing to the people to pray to God for the country in our present time of trouble.

There is no doubt but that America needs help from God. There is no question about the need for the people of our nation to pray mightily to God to save us. There is absolutely no doubt about these facts. But before America can pray to a holy God successfully, she must get on praying ground. There is no use for those who reject Christ to pray to God.

"Jesus saith unto him, I am the Way, the Truth and the Life; no man cometh unto the Father but by me." (John 14:6).

There is no use for those whose hearts are full of rebellion against His will, and whose hands are stained with sin against Him, to hold them up in prayer. It is useless.

"If I regard iniquity in my heart the Lord will not hear me." (Psalm 66:18).

America needs the blessing and help of the God of her fathers today more than all the devices she can devise for her own deliverance from her enemies. No doubt about that.

But if America is to find help in God, America must change her ways. We cannot forsake the house of God and prosper.

"Who hath hardened his heart against Him and hath prospered?" (Job 9:4).

America needs a trip to the altar of repentance more than she needs 1,000 new battleships. The boys out there facing the nation's foes need praying fathers and mothers back home more than they need 1,000,000 mighty bombers. The greatest move that America's leaders could make for the country in her distress would be to send our nation's workers to church on Sunday to think on their ways, get right with God, and learn to pray. And then let our national leaders set the example by putting away their own sins and being found in penitence at God's altar.

But how can we expect God's help at this time when our government rations out food to the people but lets the booze flow on? The edict says only one-half lb. of sugar per week, 1 cup of coffee at a meal, one ball of tea at a meal; but you can have all the liquor you can buy. No loyal American will object to necessary food rationing for the nation's welfare, but why should liquor run free to corrupt our manhood? Milk deliveries are restricted for babies, but no restriction on beer and liquor trucks. Gas stations in 17 states are closed at 7:00 P.M., but many saloons are allowed to remain open till 2:00 A.M. The way the booze business is allowed to follow up our troops and debauch them has made our soul sick. Can God bless a drunken army? Can Christians sincerely beseech God to help a country that flouts His will? Does a country deserve freedom when it only uses that freedom to debauch herself?

All true Christians love their country and faithfully pray for our rulers daily, but how can we sincerely pray to a holy God to help when we as a nation ignore our sins?

"If my people, which are called by my name, shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land." (II Chron. 7:14).

We dare say there isn't a boy out in the front lines facing the enemy, that wouldn't rather, than anything else, have a mother and dad back home who really knew God and were praying for him. God help our native land. May our great distress drive us to our knees.

NO CHRIST—NO DEMOCRACY!—

Much is being said today about preserving democracy. But democratic government cannot be preserved by military force. Democracy could never have been truly born but for the influence of the gospel of Christ. It was the gospel that laid the foundation for the democratic principle by declaring that the individual is sovereign; that the life of the pauper is as precious as the life of a monarch; that each man has the right to his own convictions of conscience, that in the sight of God all men are equal regardless of material circumstances; and that every man is responsible to God for his acts in this life. On this foundation of convictions our Puritan forefathers established the first and greatest democracy known to man. Those founders were, in the main, devout worshippers of Christ from the beginning.

Our American democracy can be destroyed only by Americans. No foreign enemy could ever do it. France lost her representative government by her own departure from Christ, not from the armies of Germany. France's doom was sealed when she despised Christ and enthroned the goddess of reason. She is reaping today. German religious and personal freedom were lost, not when Hitler arose, but when materialistic and unbelieving men were made leaders of their churches. When the supernatural character of the Bible was denied, the doctrine of evolution embraced, and Christ reduced to a mere man, that is when the people of Germany lost their liberty.

Loss of liberty and representative government have always been preceded by a forsaking of Christ. American democracy is not in half the danger from the Japanese or German armies that it is from the sinister drifting from Christ in the hearts of our own people.

"Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord." (Psalm 33:12).
"If the Son shall make you free ye shall be free indeed." (John 8:36).

A real Holy Ghost revival in America is the only victory that will save democracy in America. A nation must be ruled either by fear of God in the breasts of its people, or by the force of a tyrant. One is democracy, the other is dictatorship. God help our people to see where their real danger lies. We can win the war and lose the peace by forgetting God. We must preach Christ in America as never before, or tragedy is ahead.

THE BRETHREN HOME MISSIONS COUNCIL
Berne, Indiana

Harold Mayer at Juniata—

It is no doubt well known by now that Ernest Pine resigned his work as pastor of the Juniata Brethren Church, to become a chaplain in the U. S. Army Apr. 1. Bro. Stanley Hauser supplied the pulpit for several weeks until Harold Mayer could arrive to take charge. Bro. Mayer is an able young man, and the congregation feels very fortunate in securing his services for the summer. When seminary opens in the fall, he will return to finish his work there, as he has one more year to complete in his studies. He has already shown real success is stirring up the people to a new devotion to Christ.

The congregation is highly pleased and enthusiastic over the prospect of a real summer of progress. After a heart-searching message on Sunday morning, calling the members to a real life for Christ, practically the entire congregation came forward and knelt at the altar. New zeal has permeated the whole group, and they are now finishing up their basement and painting the interior of the church. The Sunday School almost doubled in attendance the first two week. May our Father God grant that this fine spirit will continue to grow and expand until a mighty testimony for Christ has been established. Arrangements are now being made for a permanent pastor for Juniata. Pray for Bro. Mayer and his people this summer.

Keith Altig is in Covington, Va.—

This field had been without a permanent pastor since the resignation of Arthur Malles last Mar. 1. Bro. Malles has taken the church at West Kittanning, Pa. Bro. Clingenpel of Roanoke has been preaching on Sundays for the Covington church until the coming of Bro. Altig. This meant a drive for Bro. Clingenpel of 130 miles each Sunday. Bro. Altig will be in Covington during the summer and until the fall term of the seminary opens in September. Very favorable reports have already come from the congregation, that real enthusiasm has been started for a large increase in Sunday School and church. Attendance has already shown a large increase and the work is just begun. The congregation has also authorized their trustees to take necessary steps to secure the deed to their property.

North Riverdale Sets a Real Mark—

In a letter from Norman Uphouse, pastor of the new North Riverdale church, we are informed that they have over $600 in their foreign mission offering. That is the first Easter offering this new church has ever taken. No new group has ever made such a record before, if our recollection is dependable. Think of it. This young church was just organized last May. Not a year old yet! They gave $300 to home missions at Thanksgiving time, and now they have doubled that amount for foreign missions. And all the while they are raising money for their new church building that is under course of construction. Why, if some churches paint a class room or repair the roof, they count it a good excuse for reducing their offerings to missions! Churches like this certainly deserve praise. And yet there are some people who are not interested in home missions!

The rafters are now being placed in the new building and they hope to dedicate about Aug. 1. We believe they will. Pray earnestly for this pastor and people, for they are devoted to the glory of Christ. We have some later pictures of the building up to date.

Hagerstown Church is Now Under Roof—

We stopped in Hagerstown two weeks ago to see the progress being made on the new structure, and found that they were just putting the sheathing on the roof. The last rows of brick were being laid, and they will be working on the interior by the time these lines are printed. This pastor and people have overcome almost insurmountable obstacles in continuing their building, but God has answered their prayers and rewarded their faith and sacrifices by raising up friends and help from every side. We were able to get some good pictures of the building up to the time of publication. Dedication is planned for about Oct. 1. This church is going to be a beautiful structure and a real testimony to Christ raised up in these dark days of war and world tragedy. Don't forget to pray daily for them all.

Revival At Buena Vista, Va.—

In August of 1940 we held a meeting in Buena Vista. Since then Bro. Eddie Bowman has come on the field as pastor and made some real changes. Hardly too much could be said of the fine way in which he has raised the standard of Christian life and testimony in this church. We found that the best Christian people of that city were turning their eyes toward The Brethren Church as one church where it meant something to confess Christ. Those members who refused to take their faith seriously and continued to live openly in sin were dismissed, and any who sympathized with them. That was a new thing in Buena Vista. And this separating work is going right on until that church has raised up a real standard for Christ in that city.

Bro. Bowman has faithfully taught the Word of God on responsibility of stewardship, and the finances of the church are at their highest point in history. They are raising greater offerings than ever for all purposes and they are having the time of their life doing it. I dare say that the Buena Vista brethren are happier in the Lord than they have ever been. The reason is that they are really putting God where He should be in their lives—first.

Our meetings were not heavily attended at any time during this campaign. Shift work in defense plants has surely had its effect upon the people of the whole nation. It affected the people in Buena Vista plenty. But on Sundays the house was full. Many decisions were made, and some of the finest people in that city came out wholly for Christ. The pastor has written us that families are still coming to the Lord since the meeting closed, and he is still baptizing folks. They had the largest prayer meeting in their history the week following the close of the campaign. Now they are planning a real tent meeting in the city for next summer, if our Lord tarries. We praise God for having had part in all these wonderful blessings that He showered on this community. We saw it before, and we have seen it now. God has glorified Himself in Buena Vista, and He will glorify Himself again.

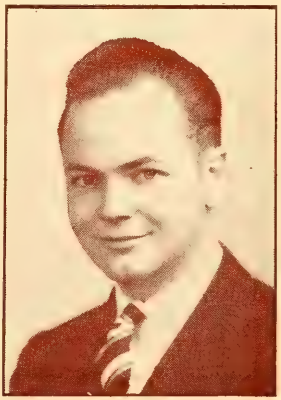
Only those who have ever labored among these dear people realize the extent of the warmth of their hospitality. It is a joy to be among a people who seem to love you and want you in their homes. We were privileged to stay with the pastor and his wife during the meetings, and we cannot say too much for their love for Christ, their home life, and their life of prayer. Mrs. Bowman makes an ideal pastor's wife. The Lord surely did that young man a favor when he sent her into his life.

There is a great field in Buena Vista for the faith that we Brethren preach, and we believe that this congregation is now really going to take up their opportunities for Christ. God bless them all.

During the meetings a gathering of the Brethren ministers of that section was held at the home of Brother and Sister Bowman. These folks surely have real fellowship when they get together. We haven't had a picture of our southeastern preachers for a long time, so we got them all out for a picture in front of the house. Take a look at them. Do they seem downhearted? And they all brought their own sugar along for supper that night too! Wotta life!

Wooster Is Forging Ahead—



The secretary stopped in Wooster a few days ago, and was delighted to find that the Sunday School attendance has grown to the point where they have to use part of the pastor's quarters for class rooms. This is an answer to prayer. The pastor told us he would have to move soon, the way things were going, in order to make room for the school. We told him we hoped he would have to get out sooner than that! the sooner the better! It was planned that the pastor should live in part of the building as a temporary arrangement until it would all be needed for the church and Sunday School work. It was one way of enabling us to provide for the start of the work when funds were low and the needs for expansion very great. Progress has not been fast in Wooster. Some fields do not respond as readily as others. But we knew there was a field there, and that is the determining factor —not the difficulties.

This new work has met all of its goals set at last annual session of the directors, and has raised its two largest home and foreign mission offerings. God is now rewarding the faith and prayers and hard work of this pastor and people today. We praise God for it all, for without Him we could do nothing.

Ralph Colburn

Now

At Compton

We are glad to present the picture of a new man to most of our readers, as pastor of our Compton, California, church. Brother Colburn comes to us highly recommended from the Southern California District. He is a young man highly favored with talent for the work he has undertaken under God.

Compton is a tremendous field of opportunity for the gospel and presents a challenge that has gripped our brother. He fully realizes the problems of the work but has no fear of them under God.

We ask all of our praying people to remember him daily in prayer that a great harvest shall be reaped there through his ministry.

If Stalin Wins! . . .

By CONARD SANDY
Los Angeles, Calif.

Yes, "If Stalin Wins," is a proper subject. Some would object to it on the ground that Russia does not have a dictatorship. But facts are to the contrary. In many respects the dictatorship of Russia is more in the hands of one man than is the government of any other country. Just a few years ago John Gunther wrote these words, which, if true then, are all the more true now. "Stalin is the most powerful single human being in the world, and one of the very greatest. He is different from other dictators, because he is not only the undisputed leader of a national state but of a movement, the Communist International, which has roots in all countries. Also he differs from Hitler and Mussolini in that he is of the second generation of dictators, having taken over authority from a predecessor, Lenin."

The Russian people look upon him as their leader. They are not mistaken about this idea of dictatorship in their country as are some of the Americans who have made hurried visits there, seeing only such things as the Russians wanted them to see, and then returning to us with beautifully painted pictures of a place of true Communism. The same writer quoted above says this concerning Mr. Stalin: "In the Soviet Press you may find him fulsomely called 'Great,' 'Beloved,' 'Bold,' 'Wise,' 'Inspirer,' 'Genius.' Four cities have been named for him. Celebrations have concluded with these words, 'Long live our dear leader, our warmly beloved Stalin, our comrade, our friend'." So, if Stalin wins, our government will still have a dictator with whom to deal; and in the final arbitration he may prove as difficult as Hitler, should he win. From this angle there is not much to choose with favor to either of them.

What can be said of the religious life within this great country of one-twelfth of the world's population? It is as diametrically opposed to that of our own country as is their form of government opposed to ours.

"Religion is the opiate of the people," declared Lenin, the god and great leader of Bolshevism, which in turn has become the official religion of Russia. Following this assertion of Lenin, the official headquarters has added, "It is impossible for Bolshevism and Christianity to co-exist. It must be a war to the death between them." Such a statement does not hold out much comfort to the Christians of this country, should Stalin win. From the A. B. C. of Communism we learn this additional information, "We hate Christianity and Christians. Christian love is a hindrance to the revolution. We have done with the kings of the earth. Let us now deal with the kings of the sky. This anti-religious campaign must not be restricted to Russia; it must be carried on throughout the world."

As we noted, in our previous article on "If Hitler Wins," Germany is endeavoring to substitute a religion of the state for the Christian faith. But Russia would substitute Communism of the Russian type, while claiming to be doing away with all religion. In either case, Christianity will be openly and defiantly attacked, the Bible will be spurned, and the Lord Jesus Christ will be denied and rejected, should He tarry yet a season in His coming. But Christian, look up, for your redemption draweth nigh.

Recently Martin Dies, the Congressman-leader against un-American activities, said: "Some persons seem to think that the Russians' heroic fight against the invading Nazi hordes is good ground for closing our eyes to the nature and ultimate aims of the Communist Party of the United States. Such a view, in my opinion, is wholly devoid of logic. Hitler's complete annihilation at the hands of the Russian armies would not make Communism one iota more compatible with the American way of life. Now is the time to look the fact squarely in the face. Stalin is not fighting Hitler because he has been converted from Communism to Democracy. He is fighting Hitler because Hitler invaded Russia. The destruction of Hitlerism is the one and only point on which the interests of the United States and the interest of the Soviet Union converge, and we may be sure Stalin himself views the matter in this light."

If Stalin wins, the stage will be set for the fulfillment of the prophecy recorded in Dan. 11:36-45 and Ezek. 38-39. Many people were puzzled at the Russo-German agreement of 1939, but not those who knew the prophetic word of these passages. (Read both passages carefully.) But there was one thing wrong in that pact, or so it seemed to the student of the Word of God and of world events. While that agreement was in effect, Hitler held the upper hand. The Scriptures indicate that the leader of this northern confederacy is to be "the prince of Rosh, Meshech, and Tubal" or the prince of the land of Russia, with Gomer or Germany as an ally. How could the political power be transferred from Gomer to Rosh?

Hitler has little regard for treaties. He eyed Russia with all the envy of a desperate subject of Satan. He invaded the land to the east, either because of necessity or out of pure lust for more of this world's power. And now, if Stalin wins, in this bloodiest of all wars up to this time, the stage will be set for the transferring of the whip from the bloody hand of Hitler to the cruel hand of the Russian dictator. Then will follow an alliance between these two mighty powers that will not be of Hitler's choosing. Indeed, dear readers, we are seeing more prophecy being fulfilled in our day than has been fulfilled in any similar length of time since the days of the Lord Jesus Christ here on the earth. But remember this, everything is coming to pass just as God indicated centuries ago. The day of Christ's return is nearing. Are you ready for it?

My Testimony

By HAZEL RUSSELL

Clayhole, Ky.

Ever since I can remember, I have been attending Sunday school and church. I am thankful that I had a Christian mother, who has always insisted that my brothers, sisters and myself attend Sunday School. During the past eight years we have attended the Brethren Sunday School which is now located at Clayhole.

Jan. 1, 1941, I accepted Christ as my Savior. June 22, 1941, I was baptized and received into the Clayhole Brethren Church. Since then I have been elected president of the Christian Endeavor. I have received many blessings from this work.

Those who were my friends before I became a Christian soon dropped me. They laughed at the idea of my being a Christian and thought it was a big joke when I was baptized. I attend the Clayhole Brethren Sunday School every Sunday. I am thankful we have such a nice church in our community, where we can go to worship the Lord rather than waste our time loafing. Pray that I might be faithful in witnessing for Christ and that I may win others for Him.

We love the Landrums. We also think they are fine people to have in our community.

IS THIS STANDARD TOO HIGH?

In a letter from the Board of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian Church of the United States of America, Ruth M. Babcock gives us the following item and interesting information. While one is reading, one wonders what would happen in the United States if all our churches were to set their standard for church members as high as these Indian "untouchables."

We quote:

"One Christian group among the 'untouchables' (in India) has set up this sevenfold requirement for church membership. Anyone wishing to become a member of the church must satisfactorily fulfill these seven qualifications:

"1. He must conduct family devotions in his own home so that his family may realize what is involved.

"2. He must learn to read in order that he may read the Bible and thereby have personal access to the stories and messages in it.

"3. He must attend all services of his church, during the week and on Sunday.

"4. He must tithe even though he may be able to give only a handful of rice.

"5. He must attend a class in which he studies the doctrines of the Christian religion.

"6. He must break completely with his caste by eating in public with Christians who have originally come from other castes, thereby proving to the non-Christian group that he is really in earnest.

"7. He must win someone else to Christ.

"When he has done these seven things he may become a member of the church."

The next time someone comes into our church and "brags" on us, let us recall these "seven qualifications" for membership in a church in heathen India and bow our heads to pray: "Lord forgive us."

"South America is cursed with a baptized program which has hung like a millstone round its neck for four centuries. Romanism, with its hatred and open hostility to the circulation of the Scriptures; with Mariolatry of the most debased character; with its traffic in indulgences, and its exhorbitant charges for baptisms and confessions, for the marriage of the living and the burial of the dead; with the gross and general immorality of its priesthood, has reached a depth of ignorance, superstition, and filth which can find no parallel in any other continent."—Rev. Charles Inwood, F.R.G.S.

"By the value of souls, by the shortness of time, by the greatness of the field, do something definite for South America. If we fail, will not the millions rise and ask in the great day why we left them unshepherded."—The late Mrs. Karl Kumm.

Which Nerves?

A speaker at the Men's Missionary Congress at Chicago told a story of a certain Christian who said to a friend who was interested in missions. "The subject of missions is getting on my nerves." The friend replied, "I am told that there are two sets of nerves, sensory and motor; on which set of your nerves does this subject bear the harder?—H. S. Lard, Uniontown, Pa., Bulletin.

The Victory of Faith

By RUSSELL D. BARNARD
Dayton, Ohio

"Faith is the Victory!
Oh, glorious victory,
That overcomes the world."

"This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith." (I John 5:4).

At Journey's End

In his volume, "Bryggan Holler" ("The Bridge Holds") the Swedish novelist, Sven Lidman tells of the dying words of a good woman who had carried on the work of a little orphanage on faith lines. She lay in a coma, and all those about her bed thought that she had actually passed over. Suddenly she opened her eyes, and looking on her relatives with a smile, said, "Greet the friends and tell them that the bridge holds." Then she shut her eyes and crossed over the chasm which separates us from the next world. He who is the way in life, is also the bridge in death. Thus another testimony to the victory of faith.

At Life's Beginning

A little child had been sent upstairs by her mother to get a wrap for the baby sister. As she reached the head of the stairs she hesitated, fearful of the shadows. Then her little voice was heard to say, "Fear not, for I am wiv thee." After some hurried steps to the cot and back, she carefully descended the stairs. The Lord Jesus is able to bring wonderful peace and great courage, even to the little ones as they begin the journey of life. Every such simple trust in Jesus is a victory of faith.

God's Daily Care

Faith depends on conscious relationship with God. I will not trust Him if I do not know Him. I will want to trust Him if I know Him. To know Him is to know that I can trust Him, always and ever.

Moody and a friend were standing by a garden gate. Two boys came by. Speaking to Moody, the man said, "Watch the difference in these two boys." Taking one of them in his arms he stood him on the gatepost, and stepping back a few feet he folded his arms and called to the little fellow to jump. In an instant the boy sprang toward him, and was caught in his arms. Then turning to the second boy he tried the same experiment. But in the second case it was different. The child trembled and was afraid to move. The man held out his arms, and tried to induce the child to trust him, promising that he would surely catch him. He would never let him fall. At last the man had to lift the boy down from the gatepost and let him go.

"What makes the difference in the two?" Moody asked.

"The man smiled and said. "The first is my own boy and knows me; but the other as a stranger's child whom I have never seen before."

The faith that gives victory is not a blind faith produced by a resolute will, but a living faith in a Person, born of experience in trusting God.

In a Dense Fog

A converted sea-captain, owing to a dense fog, had been on the bridge of his ship for 24 hours, when George Muller, who was one of the passengers, came to him and said, "Captain, I have come to tell you that I must be in Quebec on Saturday afternoon."

"Impossible," replied the Captain.

"Very well," said Muller, "if your ship cannot take me, God will find some other way. I have never broken an engagement for 57 years. Let us do down into the chart-room and pray."

"Mr. Muller," said the Captain, as they went down, "do you know how dense the fog is?"

"No," replied the great Muller, "my eye is not on the density of the fog, but on the living God who controls every circumstance of life."

Muller knelt down and prayed a most simple prayer, and then rising, said to the Captain, "Open the door, and you will find the fog gone." The Captain arose, and found that the fog had indeed lifted.

God may not lift a fog for us, but one thing is sure —no life will be happy and successful in God's service without the victory of faith. Let's trust God more!

Trusting God Is Practical

Faith gets things done. How much more practical to start the day, acknowledging God's partnership in life's undertaking, than to start it alone! Only a few visitors, or a few telephone calls, and God has wrecked accomplishment for the Christian who is too busy doing things to start the day with God. Every time a certain banker came to church, the preacher's theme was "Faith." Finally the banker said, "Don't you ever preach anything else? Why not preach something practical, once in a while?" The preacher's answer didn't satisfy the banker, and time passed.

One day the preacher heard that there was a "run" on this banker's bank. Going downtown, the preacher saw the crowds milling about the doors of the bank. The banker friend was out in front frantically telling the people—mostly a foreign people—that the bank was sound and everything was all right; that they should not withdraw their money. The banker saw the preacher, beckoned to him, and when he was near enough, said to him, "They've lost faith in our bank and I can't understand it."

"Lost faith?" the preacher questioned.

"Yes," said the banker, "I know what you're thinking, and there's nothing so practical or necessary as faith."

And, if faith is necessary in the business life, it is many times more valuable to the one who is a personal servant of the Lord.

Hundred-Horsepower Christians!

Prof. Rufus Jones speaks of persons in every community who, by their lives, are lifting the moral and spiritual level of the community, as "hundred-horsepower" persons. And there are "hundred-horsepower Christians;" those who by their close walk with the Lord, and their daily confidence in Him, move the mountains of opposition and turn the wheels of service in the Christian church. We ought to be that kind of Christians. Of course, its really not our faith, but God's power that does things. Its illustrated by the woman who said. "I'm a weak woman with a little faith in a great God." Truly ours is a great God! We ought to trust Him for every victory.

Reports From Our Mission Fields

GRACE BRETHREN CHURCH

By L. L. GRUBB, Hagerstown, Md.

The Hagerstown brethren extend greetings to all others throughout the brotherhood in the name of our mutual Lord! The story of God's miracle workings at Hagerstown is as long as eternity, but we feel it is about time to share some of our blessed secrets with you. Your home mission gifts are working for Christ, 100 cents of every $1.00.

Spiritually we have revelled in showers of blessings! Transformed lives of those steeped in sin for many years; a heart hunger to know more of the revealed Word of God; a resultant dedication of life, talent and material things; are enough evidence. Despite the fact that Hagerstown is distinctly a "defense" community, and Uncle Sam is bleeding the very life's blood from some of our most faithful members, the church auditorium is filled at practically every Lord's Day service. By this testimony of many at the close of our communion service May 17, it was one of the most blessed spiritual events in our experiences. It is our keen delight to see the servants of Christ growing so rapidly in His knowledge.

Numerically we have felt the Lord's blessing in a doubled membership, the total now being 146. We could wish with other pastors that 25% of that number were as spiritual and active as the other 75%! This number represents many who have found Christ for the first time, others who have been searching for a deeper, fundamental knowledge of the Scripture.

Financially we can certainly say that the Lord has opened the windows of heaven upon us! From $15 per week to considerably over a $100 per week in current and building fund expenses; from $20 for home missions to $337; from a similar amount to $514 for foreign missions; is a story that argues the Lord's blessing and sacrificial giving on the part of His people. In addition to this, approximately $25 per month enters the radio fund.

Last August we began formulating plans for financing building operations with the Columbian National Life Insurance Co. through their representatives, Mr. A. E. Hungerford, who has proved to be a very able director. Because of certain local conditions, church financing has become very difficult in Hagerstown. After much prayer and many bitter pills of disappointment, our financing plan was completed and the money secured to continue the building. During this waiting period we decided to step out on faith and purchase 16 tons of structural steel, $1,000 worth of steel casement windows, our pews and heating equipment, and other essential items. One brother loaned us $500 without interest (this has since become a gift), another loaned us $200, and the Lord's people gave heavily. We have actually acquired this reputation in the community: "a group of Christians who build churches without money." Would you be interested in our formula, brethren?

Before the blasts of winter, we were able to complete a beautiful stone foundation and apply the belt course in cast stone. How difficult it was to abide those winter months and be patient in the Lord while needing our new facilities so badly! With spring came an intensified continuance of building operations. Materials became increasingly harder to secure; but each time we seemed destined for failure, the Lord granted some heavenly priorities! Mar. 29 the greatest snowfall in 50 years blanketed the building to a depth of 24 inches. Men of the church promptly went to work with their snow-shovels, and the Grace Brethren Church was resurrected for our contractor. Apr. 19 at 3:00 P. M. the cornerstone was laid with the assistance of R. D. Crees and a fine group in attendance. Today as we write, despite Hitler and all the hosts of hell, the rafters are being placed and the building is taking its final external form.

Last year the Cumberland Valley School of the Bible met in the church. Students and teachers alike received new spiritual blessings. The school was a real boost for the church.

Our radio ministry each Friday over WJEJ at 6:30 P. M. is reaching an increasingly greater number of listeners, as is evidenced by the excellent letters and cards received.

The pastor and people of the Grace Brethren Church of Hagerstown wish to express their deepest gratitude to the Home Missions Council, the Southeast District Mission Board, and every prayer helper and donor everywhere. May the Lord enrich your hearts as you have enriched others!

The Chaplain's Corner

MY FIRST TEN DAYS IN THE ARMY

By CHAPLAIN ORVILLE A. LORENZ

On the evening of May 8, I received a telegram from the Adjutant General in Washington, notifying me of my appointment as a Chaplain (1st Lieutenant) in the army, and ordering me to report for duty at Fort Dix, N. J., on May 22.

I do not believe that words can adequately describe our thought when we received the telegram. Mrs. Lorenz and I were both filled with joy and sorrow—joy at the prospects of a new and needy field of service. With reluctance we thought of giving up our wonderful church where the Lord has so marvelously blessed our ministry. Yet, we regarded this call as a definite answer to prayer, for we had asked that only His will should be done in the matter.

May I say that our people at Meyersdale and Summit Mills were most gracious in releasing me as their pastor. Many wanted to give us a leave of absence and it was with regrets that they accepted my resignation. The Lord had been most gracious to us, and we have had many victories for Him; and we feel confident that we leave a united church and one that has grown spiritually under our ministry. I'm glad to report that they have unanimously extended a call to Rev. Kenneth Ashman, who will soon became their new pastor.

On May 22 I started for Fort Dix, N. J. That evening I stayed in Philadelphia. Many of my good friends in the church would, no doubt, be greatly amused at seeing me walk down the street the first day I wore my uniform. All enlisted men are to salute, and it seemed as if I met 1,000 men; and as you might well know my saluting arm was "rusty." However, my saluting arm was soon functioning perfectly. By the city hall someone stopped me. Miss Ella Kimmell was the first Brethren person I had seen.

After having breakfast at the home of Brother and Sister Carl Seitz I proceeded to Fort Dix. There I presented myself to the post chaplain, Lt. Col. Newton, who welcomed me into the service. At Fort Dix I was to await further orders. These came from Washington on Tuesday afternoon. Much of my time at Fort Dix was spent in getting acquainted with army procedure, meeting new chaplains, of which there was a fine group, getting my "shots," baggage etc.

Chaplain Zaldivar, a Presbyterian chaplain, asked me to assist him in his two services on Sunday. I have often heard that some of our people think army chaplains are not allowed to preach the gospel. Investigation before entering the service proved that this statement had no foundation in fact, and my experience these first 10 days has definitely established it as false. We are to do only a spiritual work—such as we would do at our home church. Chaplain Zaldivar spoke on Isaiah's vision recorded in Isaiah 6. He stressed three words—"woe," "lo," and "go." I have never heard a finer message upon this passage. "Woe" is me because of my sin and the sin of my people. "Lo,"—or "Behold, the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world." "Go" and tell others of what Jesus has done for you. His message fed my soul.

Late Tuesday afternoon May 26, I started for Fort Bragg, N. C., where I had been assigned to the 9th Inf. Div. On Friday, I presented myself to the commanding officer, Brig. Gen. Irvin, who welcomed me most cordially to the 9th Division.

Sunday May 31, I assisted Chaplain Achtermann in his services. This also was a very pleasant experience for me. He started a series of messages on the general theme, "Remember Jesus Christ." His main thesis in his first message was—the world's trouble has been caused by men who want the world to forget Christ. Now, as always, it is time for us to go again to the cross and come away never to forget what our Redeemer has done for us.

I have just been assigned to the 70th Tank Battalion and will also work with the 609 Tank Destroyer Battalion. I have just been given my chapel, and I am anticipating a joyful experience when I bring my first message this coming Sunday, June 7, as an army chaplain.

I count it a great privilege to be a Brethren chaplain in the army. We have a great challenge before us. Some folks talk about the evil in the army and forget all about the evil at home. Yes, there is evil in the army. On the other hand, there is real Christianity in the army too—Christianity at its highest and its best, because it is tested daily. And, may I say, to the eternal praise of our government, it is doing its very best to provide the men in the armed forces with real spiritual help. If the men do not get it, it is not the government's fault, but the churches which send the men. The government has built many splendid chapels, and all are well equipped with Hammond organ, etc. Fort Bragg alone has 22 chapels with nearly 50 chaplains, some of whom are assigned to the various hospitals.

This morning, I listened to the Corps Area Chaplain, Col. Linquist. He addressed all chaplains at Fort Bragg and urged us to preach the gospel in all of its power and simplicity. The government is doing its part. You folks on the home "front" should be doing your part in remembering us all in prayer. Too, if there are any of the "boys" of your home church at Fort Bragg, I would appreciate your sending me their names and addresses so that I can contact them. You may write to me: Chaplain Orville A. Lorenz, 9th Div. Arty, Hqs., Fort Bragg, N. C.

THINK IT OVER

Mistakes are not always sins, but every sin is a great mistake.

Pondo Sees The Light

CHAPTER 3

A continued story written for our boys and girls by MISS MARY EMMERT, Missionary in Africa

PONDO'S ENEMIES

Little Pondo was not sick continually, in spite of the dirt in which he was raised. He was now old enough to ride astride his mother's back or on her hip, supported by a wide leather girdle, which had replaced the bark cloth sling in which he had been carried when a tiny baby.

Often the little fellow fell asleep in this position, as Nana went to hoe in her garden. His little head bobbed back and forth, and finally remained bent backwards as he slept.

Even as she bent over to chop off the persistent weeds with her short-handled hoe, Pondo slept on, made drowsy by the warmth of the sun. When the sun got to its height, Nana would collect a large bundle of firewood, which she then balanced on her head. In her hands she carried a basket of choice leaves, which she would later chop up and cook for greens for dinner. And with Pondo on her back, she made her way to her village; for after the sun shone on the top of one's head, it was too hot to work outside.

As the baby grew older, he could be put down on the freshly swept ground to play, while his mother prepared the evening meal. As she turned to get water from the water jar, the chickens and the dog took the opportunity to get their share of the food she was preparing. Pondo tried to chase them away, in his childish way, but they paid little attention to his gestures.

He was nearing two years of age now, and was getting old enough to eat a bit of the cassava porridge that his mother cooked daily for her family. It was very heavy food for a baby, and it would be a long time before his little system would really become accustomed to it.

The amount of dirt he picked up off the ground and stuck in his mouth, when his mother was not looking, was surprising. That and the difficulty he had in digesting the heavy food accounted for his frequent sickness. Already he was getting a large abdomen, partly from the starchy cassava mush, and partly from the malaria, which is the common affliction of all African babies, and which gives them an enlarged spleen. If he survived these first few years, which were by far the most dangerous of his life, he would become practically immune to malaria, and probably never be troubled again.

Koly, like most men, could not stand to hear the baby cry. "What have you been doing to him that he's sick?" he asked Nana fretfully.

"Nothing," she always answered.

One day Koly came home worried. "You know when Gay's baby died?" he said to Nana. She nodded. "Well, Gay has never acted right toward me since Pondo was born. We used to be good friends. But by the way he acts, he must think I have an evil spirit that caused his baby's death."

"Why, how could he think that?" asked Nana.

"Just because Pondo lived and his baby did not," was the answer. "He quarrels with me all the time. Yesterday he counted up all the presents he had ever given me, and all I ever gave him, and is trying to prove that I owe him one."

"Why not give him one just to quiet him?" suggested the peace loving Nana.

"No," said Koly, "I am not afraid of him. I am as big a man as he is." Nana sighed. Life was so full of dangers for her baby.

One morning there was great excitement in the village. A crowd of men were talking loudly near the chief's door. Others were coming on the run to see what it was about.

"What is the matter over there?" Koly asked his first wife, Kogara, who was just coming with the jar of water from the spring.

"Someone has stolen part of the chief's tax money," said Kogara.

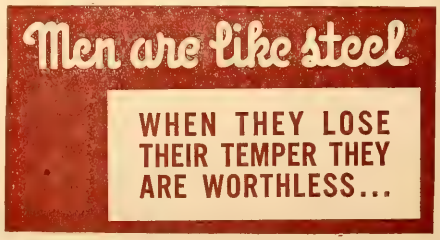
"Who would dare to do a thing like that?" replied Koly as he rapidly made his way over to the group of men to hear the discussion.

"Call all the people of the village," Sambey, the chief, was saying. "This is a big affair. No stranger has been here lately. It is some of our own people."

Soon, several hundred villagers were squatting on their heels in orderly rows before the chief, the women on one side and the men on the other according to African custom.

"Is everyone here?" demanded Sambey.

They all looked at one another. "Gay is not here," said someone. "He went to buy goats two days ago."



"This money was stolen last evening," said a captain. "He wouldn't know anything about it."

The whole morning was spent in a vain attempt to get information from the assembled crowd concerning the robbery. But no one had seen or heard anything unusual.

"You all know that the white man at the Poste will make a big palaver with me if I do not give him the

Why Not?

It has been said "We are here today and gone tomorrow", but with many it can be said, "We are here today and gone today". Why not yield your life to Christ and His great cause "while it is called today" (Heb, 3:13)? "Now is the accepted time, behold, now is the day of salvation."

tax money," said Sambey. "Most of you have never seen the white man, so you do not know how hard he is. But I tell you that this affair of the tax money is a big affair." The old man sighed. The white man and the white man's money had appeared during his ten years' reign, and had caused him much perplexity.

Finally the people were allowed to go to their homes with the dire threat: "If the money is not found by tomorrow, I shall call Gafo to pronounce a curse upon the thief. You had better all hunt for it."

A gloom was cast over the village. A curse meant that someone would die, and it might be some of one's own relatives, as nearly everyone was related.

The next day, Nana and Kogara were rudely interrupted in the midst of their daily quarrel. A friend came running with the news: "They say that Koly is the one who has stolen the chief's money," she said breathlessly.

"Who says a thing like that?" the two wives wanted to know.

"Why, Gay returned to the village this morning, and claims that he has already found the place where the money is hidden," she said.

The startled wives looked at each other in consternation. Before they could answer, a sudden increase in the clamor around the chief's house drew their attention. They saw that nearly all the men in the village were coming their way. Gay was in the lead.

"Oh, what is going to happen?" moaned Kogara.

The loudly gesticulating Gay led the way around Nana's hut, and suddenly stopped. "There," he said, pointing to some freshly dug ground, "if you look there, I believe you will find the money."

Koly looked dumfounded. Who had been digging in the garden in the dry season? They got a hoe and dug out the loose dirt. There came to light a small knapsack made from the skin of a leopard.

"That's Sambey's money sack!" they all exclaimed. The man doing the digging picked up the knapsack and handed it to Sambey. He opened it. The sack was empty! The crowd gasped. The chief looked quickly at Koly, then at Gay, but said nothing.

"Didn't I tell you?" said Gay jubilantly.

"What did you do with the money?" the chief's brother asked Koly threateningly.

"I tell you I did not take the money," Koly repeated hopelessly. "I do not know how the sack got there."

"Ha, ha!" laughed Gay boisterously. "It is buried behind his own house, and yet he says he did not do it! How is that in your eyes?" He winked at the chief.

Still Sambey said nothing. He was an old man and wise in the study of human nature. He did not interfere, however, when his brother and one of the captains seized Koly and dragged him off to the palaver house. He only whispered something to his most trusted friend.

Nana and Kogara were drawn together somewhat by this common calamity. They were almost certain that Koly was innocent, but they could see that things looked dark for him. They each cooked food and took it to him in prison. That was all they could do to show their sympathy.

The next morning they sat huddled around the same camp fire, an almost unheard of thing for them, looking disconsolately at each other. Suddenly, Yadoly, Nana's little sister, exclaimed: "There comes Koly!"

Sure enough, there was Koly coming toward them with a wide smile on his face.

"What is it?" they asked wonderingly.

Koly's grin broadened, displaying two rows of sharply pointed teeth. When a youth, he had had the corners chipped off with a chisel to make his teeth sharper. It was also a mark of bravery, and added to the ferocity of his countenance which had been purposely seamed with scars, reaching from the corners of his mouth to his ears, with others across his forehead.

But now the sullen expression of the past few days was gone, and he joyfully explained: "Sambey is a clever one! You can't fool him. He has taken Gay and turned me loose! Gay is the real thief."

"But how did he find him out?" Nana asked.

"He sent a messenger to the place where Gay claimed he had gone for goats, but Gay had not been there at all. He lay in hiding a short distance away, and came in at night to steal the money and put the blame on me. But they have found the rascal out this time."

"Did Gay confess?" asked little Yadoly.

"Not yet, but he will when they put his feet in the stocks and torture him," chuckled Koly. He sat down happily by the fire, picked up Pondo, tossed him in the air, and then blew kisses in his ears. Pondo clapped his hand in glee, little realizing that his father's troubles had been caused by jealousy over him.

Questions

1. Name some of Pondo's enemies.
2. How are African babies carried?
3. What causes them to have such large abdomens?
4. Why do you think the chief suspected Gay instead of Koly?
5. What do the Africans do with thieves?

A Message to the Boys in Camp

ED. NOTE: With interest we have read the messages to the boys in or training for military service, which have appeared in the various church bulletins. Feeling that the following, which was taken from the bulletin of the First Brethren Church of Philadelphia, might be an encouragement to other boys in training who are receiving the Herald, we are reprinting it. We know that not only the home churches, but many of the Herald readers are backing up with their prayers the boys—especially the Christian boys—who are serving their country in this emergency.

II Tim. 2:1,3—Thou therefore, my son, be strong in the grace that is in Christ Jesus. Thou therefore endure hardness, as a good soldier of Jesus Christ.

Boys we miss you—Some of you were more regular to services than others, some of you were teachers and officers, and some regular members; but we miss all of you. At every service, with few exceptions, you are remembered in prayer and many times you are named personally.

In these difficult days, it requires much courage to stand for God and country; but we believe you are doing it. To stand for our country reqires definite physical courage, for none of you know when you may be thrust into dangers that threaten your very lives. Do not be surprised if fear grips your hearts. It does not mean that you are lacking in courage. It will cause you to trust the Lord completely.

Your greatest test will be in standing for the Lord and right. Tests along this line will come at unexpected moments and at times when you least expect them. A good soldier is always on guard. Let the training of your church and the convictions of Christians make you strong to stand fast and unwavering under all circumstances. We are backing you and helping all we can from the home base—the church.

COME UNTO ME

Traveling the path of life each day,
Sometimes weary seems the way;
But we can hear the Master say,
"Come unto me for rest."

Weary and worn, with heartaches and pain,
Through the sunshine or through the rain,
We go to Him again and again
For we know we will be blest.

Refreshing rest! How sweet to know
That our dear Savior loves us so
And guides wherever we may go,
Always a welcome guest.

O God, keep us in health and strength;
Make of us patterns true
That those about us we may lead
To love the Savior, too.

And when our work on earth is done
And we come to live with Thee,
May we again hear those welcome words—
"Come, yes, come unto me."

PRAYER

Prayer is the "outgush" of the soul
Upheaved by mental strife
When pain and grief beyond control
Embitters human life.
Then, "help me Lord!"—those words in flight
Heart-felt may well upleap!
And when in sorrow's darkest night
The soul her vigils keep,
When human help is no avail
And earthly sources past,
The prayer of faith, it will prevail;
God proves our Friend at last.
The prayer may be unspoken thought
Without one uttered word:
Heart yearnings, if to God be brought,
Such prayers by God are heard.
God knows the thought, the wish, the mind,
God knows too what is best;
And those who "seek shall surely find"
God-given peace and rest.

BISHOP TUCKER

A young artist named Tucker painted the picture of a forlorn woman and child out in the storm. This picture took such a hold on him that he laid by palette and brush, saying, "I must go to the lost, instead of painting them." He prepared for the ministry and for some time worked in the city's slums. At length he said, "I must go to the part of the world where men seem to be most helplessly lost." That young artist was none other than Bishop Tucker, of Uganda, Africa. Painting is not enough. We must obey the command, "Go," or help send others instead.—Grace and Truth.

IMPORTANT ! ! DON'T forget the Lord when you are planning your vacation.

From A Tither . .

(Please don't Read this if money talk bothers you.)

When the ideal of stewardship is rightly understood, truly wonderful blessings are disclosed. Stewardship is not a method by which God tries to take something away from us, but one of His ways of enriching us with a new and deeper experience of fellowship with Him, as we learn how to administer all His gifts as His partner.

A young couple had a pet cat which died. Living in a section where they had no backyard to bury the carcass, it was planned that the husband would throw it overboard as he crossed the east river the next morning on his way to work. The carcass was wrapped up. He boarded the ferry boat and met a friend, who talked to him the whole way across and gave no opportunity of disposing the cat. He took the bundle to the office and planned to dispose of it that night. Again he was prevented. On the train he placed the package in the coat rack and began reading his evening paper. Going to the house, he placed the bundle on the table and sat down to finish his reading. He heard a laugh from the kitchen. Feeling a bit peeved because of his failure in disposing of the cat, he called out, "You needn't laugh, I'll take care of that cat tomorrow." "I wasn't laughing at you my dear. When I opened that bundle, I found a leg of lamb in it."

There's a geunine surprise awaiting all those who undertake God's plan of stewardship. "Prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you then windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing " (Mal. 3:10).

A DIVINE INSTITUTION

Eddie Cantor, the Jewish entertainer, said "The church must be a very strong and righteous thing, for it has survived every enemy it ever had." Jesus said that the gates of hell could never prevail against His church. Yes, friend, the church will survive Hitler and Stalin and Hirohito and every enemy that it has today. "Christ loved the church, and gave Himself for it." What, my friend, is your attitude toward the church?

SURVEYING NATURAL RESOURCES!

When every nation on earth is making an accurate survey of its natural resources, when it is registering its man-power, when it is building up its morale, when it attempts the seemingly impossible—why shouldn't the Church be taking stock of its unlimited energies?

Less than 10% of the Church does 90% of the actual work. More teachers and officers and leaders-in-the-making are on the side-lines than are in the ranks. Only about 1/7 of the tithe is coming into Church agencies. About 6/7 of the tithe we're using for ourselves. Less than 50% of our membership comes to Sunday School, 30% to Morning Worship, 15% to Evening Worship, and 5% to Prayer Meeting. Let's tap our resources! We are not pleased and certainly He is not pleased with our small dedication. Marvelous what God has done with our small offering but, let's tap our resources!—Ex.

THE GOSPEL

—John 3:16

For God, the Lord of earth and heaven,
So loved and longed to see forgiven
The world, in sin and pleasure mad,
That He gave the greatest Gift He had—
His only Son—to take our place,
That whosoever—Oh, what grace!—
Believeth, placing simple trust
In Him, the righteous and the just,
Should not perish, lost in sin,
But have eternal life in Him.

—Barbara Ryberg.

VITAMINS FOR CHRISTIANS

Recently, we saw a picture of some Japanese who, at the point of their bayonets, were compelling some Chinese to dig their own graves. The graves being dug, the Chinese were shot, tumbled in and covered over.

We thought, what a terrible, terrible thing it must be for a man to be compelled to dig his own grave. However, after all, are not many people all around us digging their own graves? The cigarette fiend, the drunkardf, the sexual devotee—all, slowly but surly, are digging their own graves! However, there is One Who is able to save from death. "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved."—Bulletin, First Brethren Church, Long Beach.

Remember The praying Christian moves the hand of God! !

Roger Babson said several years ago: "If the tithing process were in operation it would give the churches of this country an income amounting to about $4,000,000,000 a year. These figures seem very extraordinary, but on checking them up no flaws can be found. The facts are that the church people of the country are giving less than 1% of their income to the church and missionary work. If this were increased to 10%, the church could come into its own in a great big way that heretofore it has been able only to talk about."—Meyersdale, Pa., Bulletin.

RECEIVING OR GIVING

There is the story of an Arab beggar who sat at the gate of a rich man's house on whose bounty he depended. One day the rich man needed a messenger for instant service, and seeing the beggar, called on him, whereupon the beggar haughtily replied: "I solicit alms, I do not run errands." Is not this the practical reply of thousands who claim God's grace and yet refuse to have a part in carrying His urgent message to the lost?—Unknown.

"WHY DOESN'T GOD DO SOMETHING?

There seems to be an inclination on the part of humanity today to blame God for the mess in which civilization finds itself today. From time to time we hear folks ask, as they survey the mess in which "civilization" finds itself "Why doesn't God do something?" Perhaps that question could be easily answered to any reasonable mind. There is a reason! However, without stopping to give the reason, may it not be pertinent for us to state that God has done something? "God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life." One would think that that ought to be enough for God to do. When once man is ready to accept and thank God for what God has done for him, perhaps then God will undertake to clear up the mess in which the world finds itself today. Why should this world expect God to do more when it rejects what He has done?

Who is Responsible?

"We thank Christ for every devoted missionary the cross of Christ who, since the divine commiss was given, has gone forth at His call to preach gospel, and for those who have laid down their li in this glorious work. We thank God, too, for ev missionary now on the field, and for those at ho truly doing their utmost to fulfill the obligation re ing on them. But we must face the fact, that, af all, the work for the most part is left undone, and by day thousands of precious immortal souls are pa ing away beyond our reach into eternity without kn ing Christ, the Savior of the world."

"Who is responsible for this state of affairs? Scar ly, should we think the unconverted men and wom who know not Christ as Lord, nor heed His co mands. Unable to understand the love of Christ the selves, how could they proclaim the story of the cro Angels are not responsible, for surely, had the privil been entrusted to them, long years ago the gos message would have been sounded forth in every p of the globe! No! we alone, as members of the chu of God, are responsible, and what are we each doing fulfill the sacred obligation?"—From "The call Christ to His Church." By Miss Agnes M. Boys.

BRITISH-ISRAELISM

One of the courses of study pursued during the past semester at Grace Seminary was a course in Modern Cults and Isms. In addition to the regular work each member of the class was required to make careful research under the writer's direction of one particular cult, and write an exposition of it. Of outstanding interest was the article prepared by Curtis G. Morrill on the subject of British-Israelism. As is well known, this cult seeks to identify Britain and related peoples with the ten lost (?) tribes of Israel. "The Anglo-Saxon nation and company of nations, and the United States branch of the same people, constitute the national basis of the kingdom of God in the earth."

Following the last war this system of error received great impetus. It will likely increase in popularity in connection with the present war. For this reason it is thought that Bro. Morrill's timely article will be of helpful interest at this time. Thus we are including it in this issue.

SUMMER BIBLE CONFERENCES

Pres. McClain left Winona Lake June 3 for a month of Bible Conference work. His itinerary will take him to the following places: The Brethren Church, Dauville, O., June 3-7; Pittsburg, Pa., Monthly Bible Conference, June 8-9; Callendar Memorial Church, Pittsburg, Pa., June 10; Pittsburg, Pa., Bible Institute, Baccalaureate sermon, June 11; First Presbyterian Church, Norristown, Pa., June 14-19; Summer Bible Conference, Hawthorne, N. J., June 21-28.

Prof. Hermon A. Hoyt at this writing is in the midwest in several meetings. He has already spent a week in Dallas, Tex., at the Winnetka Congregational Church, of which Rev. Floyd Shiery has been the pastor while attending Dallas Seminary taking his doctor's degree. His other ministries will include meetings at the Brethren Church, Portis, Kan., and the Brethren Church at Dallas Center, Ia. A detailed account of the above ministries will doubtless appear later.

The writer has recently returned from a two weeks' ministry in Brethren churches in Roanoke, Va., and vicinity. May 21-24 he was at the Ghent Brethren Church of Roanoke, of which Rev. Hermon W. Koontz is the pastor. It was a joy to note the fine work being done by this church. Truly it is a church "beautiful for situation" and giving forth a valiant witness for the Lord in these days. This church has about the finest illuminated "Jesus Saves" sign on its belfry one will ever see. It witnesses to the saving gospel in all the surrounding vicinity. Bro. Koontz and his fine family have the love and confidence of a splendid congregation and of the community as well.

May 25-26 we were with Rev. J. E. Patterson at the Mountain View Brethren Church, Hollins, Va. This was our first visit to this beautiful country church and the first time we had enjoyed the hospitality of the Patterson home. Here is a church that is known up and down the valley for its stand for the truth. And it was gratifying to note the esteem in which Bro. and Sister Patterson are held after their long ministry of over 25 years in this one place.

On the evening of May 27 we were at Buena Vista with Rev. Edward Bowman and his people. The Bowmans are recent graduates of Grace Seminary, and of course it was a pleasure to fellowship with them in their home and to see how the Lord is blessing them in their work. Surely the Lord is doing great things for them and with them. A fine crowd was present for the evening service.

We spent May 28-31 at the Covington Brethren church, of which Rev. J. Keith Altig, a student at Grace Seminary, is the pastor for the summer. We found the Covington parish a veritable beehive of activity. Bro. and Sister Altig are willing and capable workers and will be used of the Lord in a fine ministry this summer. In addition to its regular work, like the Roanoke church, it carries on a weekly radio ministry, and it cares for a mission work each Sunday afternoon at Moss Run. The attendance at our services was splendid and we shall not soon forget the fellowship enjoyed.

MAPS FOR A NEW WORLD

gone, where all nations will live secure and unafraid. He shows how Europe must be divided on a new basis and suggests a United States of Europe with nine strong nations constructed from existing cultural groupings of small nations, each with its own special culture carefully safeguarded. Colonialism must be abolished in the American hemisphere as also in Asia. Africa must be repartitioned. A round-the-world British Empire must cease to exist. And so on. But how does the Word of God fit into this scheme?

This is all very significant to the student of prophecy who reads of a kingdom which God shall establish upon the earth when Christ shal come. His kingdom will fill the whole earth and will be the answer to the ages-long dreams of men for a golden age.

THE TWENTY-THIRD PSALM

A leading English actor was being banquetted on one occasion, and after the dinner was asked to recite for the guests. He asked if the audience had anything special they wanted him to recite. There was an old clergyman who spoke up, saying, "Could you, sir, recite the 23rd Psalm?"

"I can, sir, and will on one condition; and that is that after I have recited, you, my friend, will do the same."

"But I am not an elocutionist," replied the clergyman. "However, if you wish, I will do so."

Impressively the great actor began the Psalm, holding his audience entranced. As he finished, a great burst of applause broke from the crowd. After the applause ceased, the old clergyman arose. The audience sat in tense silence as the Psalm was recited. When it was finished, there was not the slightest ripple of applause; but those in the audience whose eyes were yet dry had their heads bowed.

The great actor, with his hand upon the shoulder of the white-haired minister, his voice trembling, exclaimed, "I reached your eyes and ears, my friends, this man reached your hearts; I know the 23rd Psalm, this man knows the Shepherd."

SUMMER MINISTRY OF GRACE SEMINARY STUDENTS

The undergraduate students of the seminary are now engaged in service for the Lord in various ways and places. Included in these ministries are the following: Herman Baerg, preaching at the Pleasant View Community Church near Warsaw, Ind.; Donald Hare, preaching at two churches in Monon and Milroy, Ind.; John G. Balyo, preaching in a Baptist church in Three Oaks, Mich.; Irvine Weyhe, preaching in a Baptist Church at Bremen, Ind., and engaging in evangelistic work; Harold O. Mayer, preaching at the Brethren Church in Juniata, Pa.; J. Keith Altig, preaching at the Covington, Va., Brethren Church; Clarence R. Nida, preaching at the Talma, Ind., Christian Church; others are engaged in manual labor during the week, seeking to provide themselves with the necessary finances to complete their school work, and preach on Sundays as opportunities are offered. And, of course, the members of the recent graduating class are all busily engaged in the Lord's service and two of them, Garner and Myna Hoyt, are looking forward to an early sailing to our African mission field.

SAVED FROM AN EASY CHAIR

Some years ago a sweet refined lady got converted. After a while, in testimony meeting, there were those who were thanking God for what He had done for them: saving them from drink, gambling or worldly pleasure. This refined lady got up and said: "Christ gave me a bigger salvation than any of you. He saved me from an easy armchair." Yes, it takes a big Christ to save us from ease and make us willing to toil and suffer. But He is able if we are willing.

Have you been saved from your easy chair of indifference and carelessness? from your radio and friends on Sunday nights and prayer meeting nights, when so much is at stake at your church? Your empty pew is a vote for the devil and an insult to your Lord. —Sel.

"We can't be blind to other's faults, but we can be infinitely tender, comparing their worst with our worst, and not their worst with our best."

A study reveals that 39% of the members of the average church regularly worship, serve or give; 14% occasionally worship, serve or give; and 47% are names only.—Sel.

A NEW DAY BORN

The morning breaks, a new day born.
We rise to greet the day;
And as we pause to seek God's will
We hear our Savior say,
"Come unto me, ye weary ones,
Ye know I am the way."

Do we, as Christians, heed that call
As each new morn we greet?
Or do we turn aside from Him
Who makes our day complete?
We cheat ourselves each time we fail
To kneel at His dear feet!

O, let us not neglect to seek
The face of Christ our Lord.
As each new morning dawns, may we Look into God's own Word,
And there behold the peace and love
He only can afford.

ISN'T IT TRUE?

British-Israelism

By CURTIS G. MORRILL

The purpose of this paper is to define and examine the movement known as British-Israelism. Since there is quite serious disagreement among those who adhere to the tenets of this cult, if such it may be called, it will be wise to confine our attention to the most widely accepted form of the movement. Quite a number in the past have examined British-Israelism in the light of reason and historical evidence. While some reference will naturally be made to these, yet our main concern here is to examine the cult and its claims in light of Scripture. For the Christian, a failure to stand the test of the Word of God would be the most serious of all. Of course, we must recognize that the adherents of British-Israelism refer a great deal to the Bible—when such reference serves their purposes. However, it should equally be remembered that by taking isolated Scriptures out of their context, and by the process of warping and twisting, almost any theory can be "proven" from the Bible. One need only glance at the literature of almost any "ism" or modern cult to realize the truth of this statement.

Rev. Morrill

ADHERENTS TO THE MOVEMENT

Strange to say, there seems to be little hint, in most books dealing with the cult, as to the origin and founder of British-Israelism. While as a cult it has had few prophets or great leaders, nevertheless there are at least 2,000,000 people who endorse its claims today. Among them are many distinguished people, mostly British or Anglo-Saxon in origin, including members of royalty, members of Parliament, and leading clergymen in the Church of England.

One thing which makes it rather difficult to deal with as a system of error is that a great many people who firmly believe in its teaching are staunch believers in the Lord Jesus Christ, and would, no doubt, die for Him if need be. As a matter of fact, British-Israelism claims to cast its lot with the pre-millenial coming of Christ. How it does so in the light of its comprehensive teaching is, indeed, a bit difficult to see. This brings us to an important characteristic of the cult; that is, that British-Israelism deals almost exclusively with the prophetic element in the Bible, and neither denies nor affirms the great doctrines about the atonement or person of Christ. In all fairness we should admit that the essential truth and inspiration of the Scriptures are assumed, if not stated, by most of their writers. Yet it must be recognized that these elements of orthodoxy make it the more difficult to deal with as a false system of teaching.

The purpose of this paper is not to hold up the adherents of this system to ridicule nor rob the British people of any of their rightful place or glory, but to attempt to show that the system of Biblical interpretation is contrary to the plain teaching of Scripture and therefore not worthy of our acceptance.

THE TENETS OF BRITISH-ISRAELISM

The scope of this paper is much too limited to attempt to present each claim of British-Israelism and to attempt to refute each claim. Instead, a bird's-eye view will be given, together with a few of the really crucial claims and the Scriptural refutation. In brief summary the tenets of British-Israelism are as follows:

(1) They claim that: The Scriptures clearly distinguish between Israel and the Jews.

(2) The Ten Tribes of Israel inherited all the promises of Abraham while the Jews received all the curses.

(3) The Ten Tribes were lost through the captivity and never returned to the land of Palestine.

(4) These "lost" tribes were promised that they would be a great nation, possess the islands of the sea, hold the gates of their enemies.

(5) When nine of these tribes were lost, they wandered through central Europe and finally into the British Isles.

(6) The tribe of Benjamin later left the Jews and went northward also, and appeared as the Norman conquerors, and thus were reunited with their fellow countrymen.

(7) A daughter of Zedekiah, the last of the kings of Judah, accompanied the prophet Jeremiah to Egypt and later by ship to Ireland. In Ireland this daughter, Tea Tephi by name, met the contemporary Irish prince Heremon. Now Heremon was a direct descendent of Judah, the patriarch, through Zarah the twin brother of Pharez. The two were married, of course, and reunited the different lines from Judah.

(8) This dynasty was later transferred to England, and the long line of British rulers is the continuation of the throne of David.

(9) When Jeremiah and Tea Tephi came from Egypt to Ireland they brought with them the stone on which Jacob slept at Bethel. This is called the "coronation stone;" in fact it is the same stone which Moses struck in the wilderness in order to obtain water. Today this stone rests under the coronation chair in Westminister Abbey.
